

Alan Watt - Mystery

Tribute To A Unique Voice In The Wilderness

test.seleniteplus.com Printed on October 10, 2025

Categories: CTTM Debacle, Jackie & Alan

Tags: Alan Watt, discussion, Jackie Patru, Mystery Religion, Soul searching for Spirit, Spirit, The Broad Way, The Great Work, The Narrow Path

YOU ARE THE MIRACLE

RELIGIOUS ORIGINS AND SECRET SOCIETIES

PART 1 (1998)

The first twelve episodes of talks on religious origins and secret societies first aired on worldwide shortwave Sweet Liberty Radio in 1998 with Jackie Patru and Alan Watt

Introduction Part

(1) December 7, 1998

(2) December 8, 1998

(3) December 9, 1998

(4) December 10, 1998

(5) December 14, 1998

(6) December 15, 1998

(7) December 16, 1998

(8) December 17, 1998

(9) December 21, 1998

(10) December 22, 1998

(11) December 23, 1998

(12) December 24, 1998

Part 2

120 (1) December 28, 1998

129 (2) December 29, 1998

138 (3) # December 30, 1998

148 (4) December 31, 1998

158 (5) January 4, 1999

168 (6) January 5, 1999

177 (7) January 6, 1999

185 (8). January 7, 1999

193 (9) January 15, 1999

203 (10) January 16, 1999

212 (11) July 6, 2000

221 (12) Conversation with a Caller

INTRODUCTION

Hello, this is Alan Watt, and the upcoming broadcasts were done back in 1998: a series of them on the Sweet Liberty Broadcast, on the shortwave station. These programs were an introduction into the origins of religion in ancient times and the histories of the peoples who brought forth these religions and also to show you a system (not of all things) that appeared many thousands of years ago. I undoubtedly have understood the science of the creation of what they call civilization, which is priesthood, money, merchandising, and bureaucratic systems comprised of different tiers of priests who overran and overruled these systems, beginning with Sumer and even touching on what we know of civilizations even further back. These programs were also done as a form of deprogramming, very gradual deprogramming, to an audience who swallowed reality as it had been presented to them from childhood and then was further augmented by the psychic-driving systems of school and media. I knew when I went into it initially that I was going into a primarily Christian-oriented audience who had that augmented by their country's system, which is not theirs. Of course, there is a system alright, but it's not run by the people; it's just that the people didn't know that. They really believed that their lives were evolving, and so were those of the politicians. Things just happened coincidentally, and politicians blundered their way through things as men tend to do. Nothing really is further from the truth.

So, on these programs you will hear much about Christianity, and you will also hear the gradual exposé of how Christianity itself was a fundamental tool for bringing in a couple of thousand years of someone else's agenda. In high Freemasonry, they talk about the willing fool who is always used to further an agenda, of which he has no real comprehension. He is given one story, but he is never given the real story or the real reason behind it. So we have nations like this, where we're all, in a sense, willing fools when we go along with the system, even though we suspect there's something else going on behind the scenes, or we suspect there are other reasons for vast changes in society. We tend to take the superficial spiel that's given to the public to keep us quiet, happy, dumb, and stupid. So, those who implement the system and upgrade that system can actually get away with it without too much trouble.

You'll hear an occasional caller coming in, and you might see an interesting journey through these discourses because you'll hear the callers calling in with their fundamental beliefs, their naturally shortsighted understanding of things, at the time they are at.

The series was originally done on cassette tape (and is now available on CD), and some of the various elements (the music and so forth) have been cut out. so it's not too repetitive. But you'll hear the callers' understanding changing gradually as we go through this course in history and reality.

After this course, there will be another set from 1999, and that will take you further on a journey into the vastness of the techniques of control, down through many thousands of years, and these are just the ones of which we have records. Man did not begin at Sumer; at least civilization did not begin at Sumer. They would love to have us believe so, but Sumer emerged on the scene thousands of years BC as a fully-fledged system, meaning that the techniques of that system had to have been worked out in a previous civilization. If we go into the writings of Plato, who learned from Solon (his ancestor who visited Egypt,) the Egyptians talked about many previous high cultures and civilizations that had reached incredible peaks of science, industry, and power and fell apart or were destroyed for various and sometimes unknown reasons. That many civilizations have come and gone in the distant past. I am sure the records of them were never lost by a small elite. who knew the science of dominating societies and creating new societies. These are sciences. All of the things we take for granted today are actual sciences.

Even language itself is a science. In ancient times, they understood this very, very well. If you were to take a problem to a computer programmer who knows the language of the computer and the logic of that computer, then he will know what answer that computer must arrive at with that problem. That's exactly the same with human beings. We're given languages that are upgraded down through time. You'll notice how they keep upgrading languages—a massive shift in the language of all the European countries around the 1500s. We have computer languages, and we have a form of logic. The logic is instilled at birth from your parents and then reinforced through school. So with the logic and the language, our little brain, our little computer, will come to the conclusions of problems that are given to us. We are coming to prearranged conclusions by the hidden masters who really run the world.

These people are not the front men you see. No control technique or power would ever put its best out in front of public view because there are so few of them. They could never allow anything adverse to happen to them. So we get their front men who come from dynastic families, specially bred, really. Interbred, for the lack of what we would call humanity. They don't have natural empathy for other people, at least not for all people. They may have a little bit for their own, and even that I don't think they have too much of. They have more in common with the psychopathic personalities. You will find in Plato's discourses that he talked about this method of breeding people for specific purposes. Of course, if you wanted people who would be ruthless when required (with no compassion), you could not have someone with real emotion, so you can interbreed people who lack those qualities to some extent or another and actually breed the rest of it out of them, just as we can breed in certain qualities by selective breeding.

These CDs take us on a journey to what's behind all of this. The manifestation of the cultures they gave the public, how they fed on the public, how they led them to wars, and how all their religions, which are based on stellar, solar, and lunar cults, are used to separate people and to keep them warring with each other. If people are warring with each other, they are generally afraid, so they need a form of government, a strong man to stand up and say, "I'll protect you. Here's the deal: you'll give most of what you own to me, and I'll make sure you live." Then that guarantees that his family and his offspring are kept in luxury forever after. War is essential to the system, which is still in place in the present day.

You see the end conclusion coming today, where the standardization process is coming to a head, where the last few countries that are not on the World Bank System of the United Nations, who are not on the democratic path as they call it, are being standardized and basically blitzed and bulldozed into submission until they do join. Then the world will be standardized. The standardization process began thousands of years ago with the first wandering priesthoods who were sent out, long before the days of Jesus Christ. They softened up the minds of the public that they went into, and then came the invading armies along with the merchants and the merchant classes, who brought in the gold standard. Actually, it was the silver standard initially. The gold came later, and then the debt system came in the form of using money. With the money you get a standing army. You can't keep a standing army without money because the people would wander off. They would go home. There's no reward in it for them.

There's only so much booty you can carry with you back home after a battle. So we're looking at the tremendous journey down through time. These talks are spontaneous; nothing was prearranged, and nothing was written down in preparation for this.

Everything that happens today is very important for those who are able to cut through into the minds and the hearts of people, so spontaneity must come from the heart. We live in an artificial system where everything is produced and rehearsed and edited, et cetera, et cetera, until we have this Kraft cheese sterile presentation, and that's the reason we're all fooled or led in circles by the fake gurus given out by the elites themselves, who take us like pied pipers through mysteries and confusion and make us more confused than ever before, and never give us any answers to this. That's their job. MI5 and MI6 (the secret service from London) have been sending out these people (fake gurus) since before the days of Aleister Crowley. They sent Crowley out to introduce a form of Masonry, a mystic Masonry. It had already been done in France long before that by the same world rulers (I call them world rulers because they've been in charge of the world for thousands of years.) We're going into the culmination of The Great Work, their plan.

In these talks I try not to offend too many people because, after all, you don't help people by coming down on their belief with a hard fist. You help people by getting inside and listening and in showing them other ways of looking at things. This is a much better technique than going to war with them. That's the traditional technique where people just battle each other and shout at each other across a room or a hall or a street. It's no different from little boys in a school washroom saying, "My god is bigger than yours." It's the same farce. Because the truth is supposed to lie within a person, and if the truth truly does set you free, then know thyself is the answer; you must know yourself. The ready-made answer is out there; it's been traditional for thousands of years. It's like walking into a men's shop for a suit, and a whole bunch of guys in different sizes walk in, and sure enough there's a ready-made suit for each one; you just walk into it. That's cultural religion. You walk into your cultural religion, and it's the same no matter where you're born in the world. You've got ready-made suits to walk into called religion. These religions have been masterfully crafted so that the person will identify with very obvious truths contained within, but there's always a twist from within it because these religions primarily were sent out into the world to dominate the minds of the people for a hierarchy on earth to control and to keep a hierarchy in power and actually to help keep the system of economics in power. Because religion, the economic system, the elite hierarchy, and the dominant minority (as Huxley called them) are all one. They are the only thing really on this planet, which is one.

The people are left to squabble and fight amongst themselves, since everyone has a different experience going through life, hopefully. I hope they do. Perhaps they should look at themselves, listen to themselves, and think for themselves, because ready-made suits tend to get us in trouble. They don't give us answers, and people live terrible lives, unhappy lives, constantly in a fit of desperation looking for ultimate truths. Buying, thinking they can buy it here, buying it there: following gurus, being led in circles. But never ever stopping long enough to let the quiet voice within themselves rationalize it for them on an individual basis. In my own life. I've gone through many experiences, many of the type of experiences that people have who join groups. IJFO groups are a good example, or pro-alien groups, for instance. You see, many people crave these experiences. Yet. I've had some of them that are just an experience, and I don't put it down to "This is what it was. or that is what it was" because books say so. I just have the experiences, and I note them. I've had the experiences of the paranormal; I note them too. 1. Don't run off to join a group and say, Please explain this to me, and then end up chanting and waving incense and being dominated by someone who knows these techniques of control. Experiences are just that.

It's like the Matrix movie, in the third one. (And the Matrix movie series was not sent out there to give you hope; it was actually a double message—one of esoteric lore for the elite and another one for the rest of the people who cheered on Neo, never knowing the real story.) When the new son of man, Neo Anderson, meets the grand architect (and that's the Masonic Grand Architect of the Universe, of course,) he's asked questions by the grand architect. There are a hundred odd TV screens around the room, and they show you all the possible reactions and answers Neo could give to each question before they happen (in other words, predictability) before Neo answers. Meaning the grand architect already knew all by knowing Neo. He knew all of the possible answers Neo would give to any question, and they were flashed simultaneously up on the screen.

For the person who wants to break through all of this, you have to know yourself. You must know yourself so that you can find the answers (which the big boys cannot predict) from you. This is the beginning of a journey. Listen to the techniques involved. Listen to the gradual deprogramming, knowing that the audience could have been very hostile but was not. Because when they heard the truth, they knew it was the truth. It made sense to them. It made sense to them. Because of that, you can bring them from where they are and crash them through the limited reality they were living within. After this series comes another series, which goes further, and much deeper things are explained. I hope this will be of use to you.

All the best, listen well, Alan. Thank you.

PART I INTERVIEW 1

Jackie: What we're going to do is start from where we are and work back in our search for reality.

Alan: Yes. This idea, a search for reality,* comes when you've read so much history that you realize that most people down through the ages have lived and died, and they've actually been given from birth what seems to be their reality, a reality that is shaped by other people, and every generation right down to the present day, it's the same.

Jackie: Living and dying and never having really seen the light?

Alan: Yes. I've really begun to think that the purpose for life is to come to full consciousness, and the enemy, of course, is trying to stop us from achieving that goal.

Jackie: How would you define full consciousness?

Alan: The truth; knowing the truth. The truth is the hardest thing to define. The truth is out there, but it's locked up in archives for a select few to get hold of. But the public is given history, and it's a story we're given. Somebody's story, whereas the true archives hold the secrets of the ages: time history. That's what I mean. Occasionally, you'll find an author who comes out with some stunning piece of information on some regular topic in history, and you wonder where on earth they got it, and then you find out that they belong to the CFR (the Council on Foreign Relations.) In other words, they're part of the Establishment at the top; they're given access to archival information. Then you'll find another author on the same topic coming out with another piece of startling information, and then you begin to realize they're still only giving you pieces of the information. They obviously have had access to all of it, but information is scattered throughout many, many books rather than giving us the whole story in one book on any particular topic.

Jackie: It's like we've all been born into a lie. That's not far off track, is it?

Alan: No, no. In fact, it's right. I think you had a series on the Delphi Technique, didn't you? Basically the idea of that is if you train somebody in a certain method, they will then train others, who don't realize they're being trained, to carry on the same technique, and their parents and their parents before them were basically taught a similar method. They think they're giving you their view of reality and history, which has already been given to them. They've never questioned it, or at least they've never had access to full information about things that have happened in their own lifetime. The media—there's never been a free press. I've heard so many Americans complaining about the press being controlled and becoming more so. There's never been a free press in the history of the world.

Jackie: That's a pretty finite statement you just made.

Alan: It's a fact. If you read the old philosophers from Greece and the methods that they used then for controlling the peoples of Greece (and at that time Greece was the center of the world power or at least shared it with Egypt; they all studied in Egypt, of course,) they sent the troops of what we would call town criers all around the rural areas and into the cities and towns, and they would give the people the Establishment's news. Just like today, most of it was in the form of control by using war or threats of war, which kept the people in check. When you're threatened with war or you have a real war, the people will work more. They'll give up more of their money in taxes or their labor in taxes, and they're more willing to be governed by a small elite who live at the top of the heap. This has always been used.

Jackie: The very first time that you ever called me was after a program (the first time I had Steven Jacobson on), and you and I had a very intense conversation. Actually you talked, I listened, and then, if you recall, I asked. "Why are we having this conversation?" You said. 'I've been listening to you, and I told my wife tonight that 'she has almost got it, but there's just a little bit missing.'" You told me I had to find it out myself because it was too awful, and basically what it comes down to is that what's happening in the world today, by the people who are in control, all has to do with bloodlines. Now, is this a good place to start?

You and I have had several hours of conversation, and everything that you've ever talked about and shared with me is so important, so where do we go from here?

Alan: Well, we can really start by simply looking at the nobility of Europe, what I would also call the nobility of the U.S. and Canada. There's a British newspaper that comes out every week called the Daily Express (I have a version here called The European Express), and each time there's an election in the United States, they give a family tree, or family lineage, of presidents coming into power. The first time Bill Clinton came into power, they connected him to the British Royal Family. The article went on to say that the previous presidents before him were also related to the British Royal Family—George Bush, Roosevelt, and so on—and it named them all. At the time, I only sort of glanced through it; I realize now it's so important, and I wish I'd kept the article. I didn't keep it, but I did notice that when Bush came in, they did the same thing with him. and they had gone through past presidents (even to George Washington,) who had been related to the British Royalty.

Jackie: I saw a newspaper article about family trees that said Bob Dole actually had more right to the presidency because he had more royal blood.

Alan: Yes, that's right. This European Express article actually also had a blurb on Schwarzkopf's right-hand propaganda man during the Gulf War, Colin Powell. The blurb on him mentioned that he was related to the Royal Family because his great-great-grandmother had a child in Jamaica sired by the Governor-General from Britain, and the power lineage came from there. So. You can almost see who they're lining up for presidents through the lineage, and it definitely said to look out for this man. He's probably going to be a president of the U.S. in the future. You can trace them right down through the centuries, right down through thousands of years, right down to almost fifteen hundred years ago to the Merovingian line: the Merovingian lineage. It was a lineage named after a fellow called Merovech, who was the first king of France, around 600 AD, and he was backed by the Roman Papacy to bring in the Catholic Church throughout the whole of Europe, and according to most books on royalty, all the lineages passed right back to this lineage. When you study the history books, you find that although they were called the Merovingians and they created feudalism all throughout Europe, the Merovingians were really controlled by their advisers, and their advisers were called the Carolingians. The name Carolingian is a version of Charal or Chari; it's another dialect that basically means Charles or the lineage of Charles. They were the advisers, and the first one was Pepin; they called him Pepin the Short. 1. He was the adviser to the Merovingian King, and he kept the king in check so that the king would be sort of a front man.

Eventually, when the Merovingians had crossed the Pope on some matters of power, the Merovingian lineage was assassinated, and then the Carolingian, or Charles, Dynasty came into power, and ever since then this whole lineage of feudalism throughout Europe, of a nobility and a lesser blood lineage, going right down to the lesser nobility, has run Europe and the banks and so on. There are two distinct types of them. One is dark-haired and white-skinned, and the other one is very blonde, very white-skinned, and blue-eyed. So, it's almost two races of people that you can trace right back into the land of Sumer eventually.

Jackie: Sumer? That's a long way back.

Alan: It's basically as far back as our known history of this age goes. But there are records of them coming together. One controlled the financial interests of the empires they ruled. In other words, they were like the workers, the civil service, governments, advisers, priesthoods, and the other one was the warrior class that kept everybody else in line and dominated the populations they invaded. You can actually find them coming together in a period of Egypt's history when two peoples came together (once again, it was the dark-haired, fair-skinned, and the People from the Sea, as they were called, who were blonde, tall, and white-skinned) and swept the whole of the Middle East from Mesopotamia right through to Egypt. They ran Egypt for 200 years; they were called the Hyksos, which means shepherd king.

Jackie: Were those the pharaohs?

Alan: They made themselves pharaohs. They took over. There already were pharaohs before that, but these people were foreigners, and even today in the Arabic-speaking peoples of the Middle East, the term shepherd king is completely hated because they're an evil people. They respected nobody else's religions. They were uncouth. They slaughtered for the fun of it; they really enjoyed it. They were completely hated. Eventually they were overthrown by southern Egypt (Egypt was two countries, really), and another Semitic dynasty was restored to the land of Egypt. But then these Hyksos and these other people, the Amalekites, sort of disappeared into time, and then we have the same thing reappearing hundreds of years later in France under the Merovingian and Carolingian dynasties, and we still see that basically today. Most of the European nobility, even the ones who live in Britain and are dominating an Anglo-Celtic culture, are brown-eyed and dark-haired, which is the opposite of the Celtic and the Anglo-Saxon people.

Jackie: Are we still talking about the people in charge today, the elite?

Alan: The elite. You see. Every country in Europe has a royal family; they're all interrelated. For hundreds and thousands of years, in fact, they've only married into their own families, their own lineage, yet they're at the top of the nations that they control. In other words, they have a foreign people controlling a different population. They wrap themselves in the flag of that country, whether it's France, Norway, or Denmark. Holland, wherever.

Jackie: Catherine of Russia came from Germany.

Alan: Yes. They wrap themselves in the flag of the country, and they send you off to war, yet in reality, these people are a foreign people. They are not one of you. We give them our homage; we call them the kings or the father or mother of our country, yet in reality they are total strangers to us.

Jackie: According to Joan Veon's book, Prince Charles (The Sustainable Prince), she says that his genealogist traces their bloodline lineage all the way back to Babylon.

Alan: Yes. It wouldn't surprise me. In the mystery religions, you have the external meaning and you have the internal or esoteric meaning, and all their gods and the names of the gods basically end up being one god in the end. It's all a facet of power and control and technique of government. That is what it all boils down to, in reality. When you look at Babylon and the first great king they had there, one of his titles is The One Who Created Government. Nimrod.

Jackie: You know. I looked up Lucifer in the Concordance, and the first definition for Lucifer was a title given to the King of Babylon.

Alan: Yes. But he also was given another title, which was The Encompasser, because he was the first one to build fortified walls, and the towers, of course: the Tower of Babylon. 1. He was also given the title as the first one who created war on his neighbors (and that one is very important) and the first one to create the priesthood, which is a big part of controlling populations through fear and superstition and so on. So you already have war, and you already have the priesthoods, which are controlling the people through either being at war or being threatened with it.

Jackie: So all of these eons these people have continued to intermarry to keep their bloodline? You and I were talking about the elite, specifically Charles Darwin, and I had told you I had recently read the biography of Charles Darwin; they mention in the book how they were constantly marrying cousins. Like you said, they married into the Wedgwood family.

Alan: Well, you must understand that Charles Darwin was created. Nobody in history comes out of history; I've learned this. Nobody comes out by his own genius and simply makes a statement or gives out a theory without the permission of the ruling elite. So in other words, the ones who do come out through history are from the ruling elite. Charles Darwin's great-grandfather was called Erasmus after the Rosicrucian teacher (who was a Catholic priest, by the way) who taught Luther and created Protestantism. That was a great favorite of theirs because they really believed that they set up a religion for us, and when the religion has done its work, they then knock that system down and replace it with another. That's why they're called The Architects, you see.

Charles Darwin's great-grandfather only married into one other family called the Wedgwoods, and then the grandfather married a Wedgwood; the Wedgwood families still make the pottery today, which is blue with the white Grecian backgrounds on it.

Charles Darwin's dad married a Wedgwood. Charles Darwin and his brother each married Wedgwoods, and Charles Darwin's first wife gave birth to ten children: each one died, except two who ended up in lunatic asylums and only lived to the age of about nine years old. His second wife was his mother's sister, his aunt, who was also Wedgwood. Basically they were very much interbred long before he came out with his theory of selective breeding, which is very important. Charles Darwin, in some of his other publications, called the masses of people commoners, and that's what the nobility call us basically, and we're called commoners because we use natural selection. We marry who we like, whereas royalty and nobility all have arranged marriages, and they're arranged for their family bloodline and for their intellect and their wealth.

Jackie: Like Charles and Diane?

Alan: Yes, exactly. Of course, we always hear about the throwbacks and the terrible things that happen with what they call consanguinity, which is a term used for interbreeding into one's own family. What happens is you have sets of genes, which are called recessive genes, such as Huntington's chorea and so on. And if you match up with somebody who has a similar set of genes, then the offspring will have whatever disease it is, whether it's mongolism, a genetic deformity, or something else. But what is never mentioned is the fact that if you have two parents who are geniuses, perhaps say in mathematics, they certainly might have massive physical problems, but their offspring will also be better at math than the parents. So there is a plus side to this massive interbreeding. When you look at the Rothschild family, who even today only marry their nieces, and you see the IQs they supposedly have, like Victor Rothschild had an IQ of one hundred and eighty-six, apparently.

Jackie: What is an average IQ?

Alan: I, on average, can go anywhere up to about a hundred forty. Subnormal is ninety and below. So you do find these people have a massive capacity. In some respects, they're the ones who manage to survive or are shown to the public. I'm sure there are many who either died very early on or were perhaps helped on the way if they're defective. What we're looking at* is a very selective breeding program, which you can trace right back to even Plato's days because Plato tells you all about this in his book The Republic, where he sketches out the perfect society run by an elite, where the elite will interbreed and the commoners will carry on as usual and choose their mates for other reasons, and that by interbreeding the superior would become even more superior.

Jackie: They have some plans for the common man. Don't they?

Alan: Yes. When you consider that this is an age. An age is from when your first written history shows up to the end of an age, and one of the titles, for instance, of Nimrod was The Keeper of the Secrets of the Ages, plural.

Jackie: What do you think that means?

Alan: It means that there were definitely ages prior to ours where society had risen to great heights. In fact, if you read the philosophies of the Arabic nations today (which people should, such as the Persians and so on, and the Hindus,) they have records of many previous ages to ours where man had reached scientific heights.

Jackie: Then they destroyed themselves?

Alan: They did not so much destroy themselves, but it certainly seems this is an ongoing game where we're set up to reach a certain level, and then we're destroyed on purpose.

Jackie: But the elite never suffer through the changes, the chaos?

Alan: It doesn't really seem so. No. It seems that there are survivors. You can read the history of the Hood on Xaragon's walls in Babylon. They have one that they unearthed, and it's written into the wall—their version of the Hood. That was long before there was even a Hebrew people, and their version is that the gods (plural) were human beings in their day. That's what they called the kings. They were gods. The gods looked down on the masses and the multitude of men who were creating such a noise because of their multitude, and the gods decided to destroy them by creating a flood. That same legend is repeated in China and even in Central America.

Jackie: But it wouldn't have happened at the same time as you're saying.

Alan: Well, we don't know that. We do know by archaeology and by digging through the layers of earth that there have been floods in the Middle East at different times. But we also know, by the way, that the people in ancient times could divert rivers, which they often did: that's how Egypt was created. It's well accepted by archaeologists and by historians that the son of Ham was the man who was called the Great Limber. And he literally diverted the Nile, or what became the Nile, from the runoff from the foot of the mountains in southern Egypt and created the Nile River, a massive task by today's standards, but they actually did that. They created huge banks and created a river out of what was once a massive, massive swamp covering hundreds and hundreds of square miles.

Jackie: There's a gentleman who has written a book called The Secret Archaeology—

Alan: Oh, I've read his books; I think his name is Michael Cremo. He tells you at the beginning of his book that he belongs to one of the Indian religions from the Middle East, so at least he's honest about it, but he does say that it was the ancient legends that made him look into archaeology. There's nothing mentioning religion in it at all; it's pure archaeology. He documents his findings, and he seems to be pretty straightforward, and he has found what many others have found. In Canada, a scientist named Ian Taylor wrote a book called In the Minds of Men: Darwin and the New World Order. He goes right through archaeology and what they've found (the various so-called "ape men"), and he gives you what other scientists and also the medical staff who validate the skeletons have said, which is that there's nothing prehistoric in the makeup. The skeletons are exactly the same as modern man.

We're being lied to on a big, big scale. They have determined that one group of scientists who believe in a theory (and everything must fit that theory) say that we have found one or two ape men from the past. You see, the theory is that evolution must be created as a fact rather than a simple theory. It is a religion, evolution. It's got all the hallmarks of any religion. People are schooled in it and trained in it, and when they dig up things or facts that don't agree with their theories, those facts are simply discarded or hidden. Jewelry, for instance, was found in the middle of coal. Now coal takes many, many thousands, if not millions, of years to form, and we've actually found, both in Britain and in the U.S., coal that contained jewelry right in the middle of it. gold chains, et cetera, and different artifacts.

Jackie: So is this eliminating the missing link?

Alan: Well, what it's telling you is that millions of years ago, there were human beings, who certainly weren't ape-like, who were making jewelry very much like today's jewelry. They knew sciences and where the theory of the different ages comes from. We do know in archaeology that there have been many types of apes. We know that there have been many types of mollusks and fish and so on, but what we're left with today are the survivors, not an evolution from, but simply the survivors of a particular type.

Jackie: What about the Popes, the Catholic Popes?

Alan: 1 The Catholic Popes were created to create a new era for world conquest. Over the space of about forty to fifty years, they began to stamp out paganism under the guise of a new religion, but in reality the new religion was nothing more than the same paganism. There was the exact same paganism, in fact, long before there was a Catholic Church. From the terms they used for the Virgin Mary, who was the Queen of Heaven, you can see it any night you want if you look up at the stars and see the constellation Virgo. That's where it comes from, Virgo the Virgin. They called it the Heavenly Train in ancient Egypt when they saw the constellations and the sequence in which they conic. That's what they call the Divine Plan of the Ages, the sequence that it arises from, the Virgin with her son behind her. At one time he was called Hercules, and after that, the one that killed Hercules the destroyer. In Egypt, he was called death; that's what they call the Heavenly Plan. George Bush Sr. referred to it as the Divine Heavenly Plan. Sometime in the past, a group of the survivors who have created this age decided what this age was going to be, from its beginning to its end. and they basically drew up the constellations. No child could go out today and just simply draw all these constellations, because you can draw any constellation you want from the stars. Somebody at one time picked out these designs and decided what they're representing, and the meaning behind the representation tells you the plan of your age. They do know that when you study the Middle East and their myths in previous ages, they have had different constellation plans with different meanings.

Jackie: What about the Dead Sea Scrolls?

Alan: The Dead Sea Scrolls, as far as we know, for all that's been leaked out, which isn't very much, push the various cults that existed within Israel around 100 B.C. right to the end of about 1870 or 1876, and they always focus on the one group, which was the Essene group.

Jackie: I've read that Jesus was an Essene.

Alan: They would like you to think that. They would certainly like you to think that. He had various things in common with them, but when you look at the whole of Israel and their belief system (their real belief system), he shared a lot of the views of most people of Israel of his day. So you can't really pin him down to the Essenes. He also had long hair, and he was from Nazareth. He was a Nazarite, and they were a sect that kept themselves apart from the average Jew of the day. and they were sworn to a duty prior to their birth by their mother. That was the sect of the Nazarenes. and throughout their whole life when they were under this duty that they'd been sworn and brought up to do. They couldn't cut their hair, and we know that the Essenes have short hair.

Jackie: So the Dead Sea Scrolls supposedly came from the Essenes? Why do you think they've kept the Dead Sea Scrolls so secret?

Alan: I think because it would expose, and there are many people who wouldn't like the exposure. The Catholic Church wouldn't like it to be exposed, because it would show you that many of the terms they used and have applied to Christianity were applied to the various pagan sects that existed long before Christianity. The modern leaders of world Jewry wouldn't like you to know either that Israel itself worshiped many gods, not just one. It's always sort of battened down or stamped into the earth out of view or swept under the rug. But they have unearthed temples to Astarte, or Ishtar, or basically Esther, where the name comes from.

Jackie: Then we celebrate Easter?

Alan: Yes. They found the temples to Venus, which is just another name for the same thing. Apollo and so on.

Jackie: You had found a really old book you were reading from, and it said that we who have created Protestantism will destroy Catholicism?

Alan: That was Benjamin Franklin.

Jackie: We who created Protestantism will destroy Catholicism, and then we will destroy Protestantism, and Christianity will be dead. But how could Benjamin Franklin say “we who created Protestantism?”

Alan: Benjamin Franklin had a very interesting history, and a lot of it he gives you himself. You have to read the various books and various letters and so on to bring it together. But he was brought up from birth to fulfill a role. (The same way Armand Hammer was brought up for his function in the world, or the Bronfman family was brought up for theirs.) On the one hand, it gives you a story of belonging to a very poor family of dissenters, meaning they dissented against the Anglican Church, and yet his brother was no sooner old enough to print up type in a printing press than he was attacking Christianity in general. It makes no sense. His family wasn't anti-Christian (we're told they had nothing against the Christians), so why would both brothers, Benjamin included, be no sooner weaned and out of their nappies than they were out printing anti-Christian propaganda?

Jackie: How could Benjamin Franklin say we who created Protestantism?

Alan: Because he belonged to a family (I've no doubt on this) that was created to be revolutionary. Most of his adult life he spent in France, and he gave the French, long prior to the American Revolution (and this is documented in many history books,) the same constitution that he eventually presented to the U.S. He was the Grand Master of the Grand Orient Lodge of France for years; they still have statues to him yet. The greatest enemy of all Christianity at the period was Voltaire, the philosopher, who again had been brought up from birth for his role in life. Benjamin Franklin talks about initiating Voltaire into the Grand Orient Lodge, and later on, when Voltaire died, Franklin was the one who presided over the Masonic funeral. That's in Franklin's own writings.

Jackie: There's knowledge now today that George Washington was a Freemason.

Alan: The dilemma comes when you ask, Why did these men fight for what appeared to be freedom?, And yet, could they possibly in reality have known there was another function they were fulfilling, unknown to themselves?

Jackie: There's a letter attributed to George Washington, warning his lodge brothers of the infiltration of the Illuminati into the lodge. I've read that the Knights Templar first formed to preserve teachings of Jesus that had been suppressed by the church and that this is where the secret mystery schools originally began, and then they just divided off and divided off until there were so many of them. Tell me what you know about this.

Alan: When you look at the mystery schools, they didn't begin with the Knights Templar. Perhaps they consolidated in the days of the Knights Templar, but the mysteries have been going on in the Middle East for thousands of years. The Knights Templar eventually learned it from a people, an Egyptian priesthood really, called the Sassani. One of the derivations of the same name is Sassoon, like Vidal Sassoon. It's basically the same family tree. These people were the grand masters of a sort of form of Christianity, and they had been prior to even the Catholic Church being created; the Sassani's ran the whole of the Middle East. They created the advisers to all nations, and these advisers in reality run the nation. They also were given the name of assassin because anybody who didn't go along with their wishes was eventually assassinated. So you find it in the ancient Middle East, then, perhaps right up to the present day. People like the presidents and prime ministers we know are frontmen. But there are advisers behind them with the real power. This is well documented in general history books.

Jackie; When we talk about the mystery schools, what does that mean exactly, the mysteries?

Alan: The mysteries arc, mysteries of the ages, is really what they're called. As I say, it's basically the technique of government. The technique of government and all the forms and necessary agencies you need, from the military to the priesthoods to the civil service, et cetera.

Jackie: In other words, controlling the people by fear and guilt? Alan: Fear is the prime one.

Jackie: Do you think this was part of what Jesus was doing?

Alan: Jesus was definitely exposing it. He was taking the mysteries straight to the people, but he was only feeding them enough of what they could take at the time, knowing full well that they had been brought up just like we are today, with a given reality. You come along and tell them, "You're not really quite sane. You think you are, but you're not. because your reality isn't truth at all." If you only feed them small doses, that's why he said they had the eyes to see. meaning the ones who had the ability to see that something was wrong, and the ones who had ears to hear, meaning those who could understand what he was saying. The people after the vast meetings he had would come to him, and then he would fill them in on what he really meant. In the Gospel of John, you do get a glimpse of that when he said to the people that he spoke in parables, but amongst his followers in private, he told them many secrets.

Jackie: As they could bear. Because he made a statement at one point. "There is much more that I have to tell you, but you could not bear it now."

Alan: That's correct. He was literally giving the secrets. People worship what they're given, even if it's fire. They don't realize that fire basically means knowledge, so the people and the peasantry, with the help of the priesthood, literally worshiped fire at one of the temples, or you're worshipping air, Yuma, or spirit. It's all the same thing, and the spirit means primordial knowing, pre-existent knowing, and those who are ultra-elite and very bright and who had come to most of the answers by themselves therefore had primordial knowing, and they would then be brought into the mystery schools and given more of the inner secrets.

Jackie: Is that what Freemasonry and all the mystery schools are about today?

Alan: Yes, in much higher levels, of course. But the average Freemason today hasn't got a clue about what they're even involved in.

Jackie: I'm not talking about the average ones. I'm talking about 33rd degree and up.

Alan: Up from there for sure. Yes. Then, of course, they're brought into it. They're given access to parchments that are hundreds and even some of them thousands of years old. One of the books I read was by the man who called himself the Beast. Aleister Crowley. (He's misnamed the Father of Black Magic.) He actually mentioned that he was approached at Masonic meetings by a man who showed him scrolls. Original scrolls from the philosophers, which were over 2,500 years old.

Jackie: Jesus said that he was the light and the bright morning shining star, and he said. "You are the light of the world," and yet when you read about the Freemasons (we've got some books here), it says part of their ritual is they ask. "What do you want?" The response is, "I want light. I want more light."

Alan: That's right. You see, in the lower orders they never get the truth. Jackie: Why do they call it light?

Alan: Light basically means knowledge to them, and of course they never really get it. There's a Masonry, you see, within Freemasonry. In other words, if you're a useful tool, if you're a film producer or into politics, you will be approached and given a parallel but more in-depth meaning of the truth, whereas the average Freemason will never get that. He's just a tool to spread international brotherhood.

Jackie: You mentioned Armand Hammer, and I'd like for you to talk about this tomorrow night. Because you told me some very interesting facts about him and the family, and you said that these people are literally born and bred for what they're doing. We talked about this on the program because it dawned on me when Jesus told us to love our enemies, and that's hard.

Alan: That's the hardest part.

Jackie: Then when you can stop and think, I used David Rockefeller as an example, but he had his mind stolen from him in infancy, and he and these people absolutely believe in what they're doing.

Alan: Oh yes, they do.

Jackie: And if we don't pray for them, who is going to?

Alan: I think, though, even at that, they still reach a stage in life where they do make a choice. 19

Waiting for the Miracle. Part I Interview 2

Jackie: Thank you for joining us again, because what you have to talk about is important. Have you read the book 'The Occult Technology of Power'? The beginning of the book is a talk that is being given by a father to a son who is going to take over the realm. He says, 'To my son: in this same volume you will find the transcript of your initiation into the secrets of my empire. Read them again, not for the arcane knowledge, which is now second nature to you. But in order to re-experience the shock and awe felt twenty years ago when, at age thirty, the fabulous scope of my power was revealed to you. by my trusted and now mostly-departed advisors. Remember the surprise, to the point of disbelief, with which you beheld the delicate but invincible chain of deceit, confusion, and coercion with which we capitalists enslave this chaotic world. Remember the feat of will and strategy that has been required to retain our position, and then inspect your retinue carefully. Your heir must be equal to and eager for the task, much as you were. Choose him carefully. As I lie here, waiting for the end, I can afford to relish the thought of our empire lasting forever, as I never dared to while in charge. Rational power calculation, the least, is easily disrupted by the thrills of power, which is now in your hands.' What do you think about that?

Alan: That says it all. Who's the author?

Jackie: There is no author; there are no names given here. It isn't factual writing, but all of the information is factual. When he came into power, the different advisors of his father were giving him an overview, for instance. Professor Q gives him a talk on occult knowledge of the key to power. The next talk was done by a Professor M. on the economics of central banking. Then we have the Function of the Central Bank in the Mature Finance Capitalist System and the Role of Public Education, Prestigious Associations of Secret Societies, and Covert Operations and Intelligence. This book is only about 60 pages long, and it's a mouthful.

Alan: Did you get it from a bookstore?

Jackie: There is an address in here. It's called the Occult Technology of Power. For information write: Alpine Enterprises, P.O. 766, Dearborn, Michigan, 48121. Remember you were telling us that this started way back? Professor Q., in the chapter 'An Occult Knowledge is the Key to Power,' says, 'Throughout history, the pure ruling elite arise through secret or occult knowledge, which they carefully guard and withhold from outsiders. The power of such elites or cults diminishes as their occult knowledge is transformed into scientific knowledge, and it vanishes as soon as it becomes common sense.' But then he told of how they began first having the power. They needed people (you know, when man stopped wandering) to begin to till the soil. They needed to predict the seasons, but the knowledge that they required they didn't have, and there were certain people who began to watch the patterns and knew when the seasons were going to change. Then they would make the people believe that they had the power to change the seasons. That was how the mysteries began.

Alan: It happened in previous ages, as I said last night, because even to gain that type of knowledge of man takes thousands of years alone, to predict the patterns of the sky.

Jackie: You also mentioned astrology. I le says, 'The occult priesthood, who were the astronomers and mathematicians, such as the designers of Stonehenge, convinced their subjects that they alone had contact with the gods, and they alone could assure the return of planting seasons and weather favorable to bountiful harvests.' Then he said that if the seasons were off, they blamed it on the people and said the gods were punishing them. This is how they gained such control over the minds of the people.

Alan: Also the wealth, because people had to give them vast quantities of the produce of their labor in order for the priests to go through their ceremonies, and they accumulated wealth that way. But it's interesting that the earliest civilization that archaeologists have found was also the most advanced civilization, and that was Sumer in the area of Babylon.

They seemed to have appeared on the scene with all of the knowledge. They had the circumference of the earth worked out to within a couple of miles of its present accurate size. They had the complete astronomical charts made out. They had a school system where children were taught geography and mathematics. They even found the clay tablets that they practiced on.

Jackie: I understand they also knew all of the planetary positions and the movement of the planets. Is it the Pleiades, which is the constellation of the seven planets? One of them is actually hidden behind another, so that from where we are, we can only see six. But the Sumerians knew that there were seven of them.

Alan: Not only with that constellation. They actually had planets, which we didn't realize had moons until the beginning of this century. Some of them already had names for them. They were far, far advanced for their time. Hey, they gave us the sixty-minute hour, in fact. They had the time worked out to minutes.

Jackie: Have you ever read Zachariah Sitchin's work? He claims that he actually quotes from the old Sumerian cuneiform and that there was a 12th planet in our solar system (I think it's called Nibiru,) which makes an elliptical pattern around the earth, taking 3600 years for it to make one path. There were beings on the planet, and when its rotation was close to the earth, these beings came to the earth. He claims that they were the ones who did all the rearranging of the topography of the Middle East, digging out the rivers and things like that. They brought this information here, and that's why the early Sumerians knew all this, because it was in their ancient writings. It's an interesting concept.

Alan: The concept, though, has been pushed by the Establishment. It's amazing how many publications have come out with the same thing: that mankind originated from the stars. What's interesting too is that that's exactly what Charles Darwin said, that the final death knell for Christianity would be if we could prove that mankind came from the stars.

Jackie: Why? Why would that be a death knell? It doesn't take away from the fact that our creator created all of the universes and everything.

Alan: Darwin's spin basically was that there was nothing in the Bible to verify that God made anyone else outside us. If we all came from outside, from space, then it would help them get their theory across that man was only another animal and not a sacred human being apart from the animal. The whole theory of Darwinism was to put man in amongst the animals for social control by the elite.

Jackie: Malthus was one of Darwin's buddies.

Alan: Yes. Malthus died in 1834: he was the chief economist for the British East India Company, and he was the man who first formulated statistics. All over the British Colonies, he had population numbers and figures per square acre of workers, compared to the land they were working on for their company. 1. He had it worked down to how many rations per day they would need to survive. I had it worked down into such a system that they could have enough to survive and complete their work but not have enough to become strong and try and overthrow the oppressor, their overseer.

Jackie: Malthus is the one who came up with the concept of overpopulation and the need to depopulate.

Alan: Oh, VCS. He literally said that the human race must basically give itself over to an intellectual scientific elite and put itself in their hands. They must reduce the population of the "useless eaters," the excess population, by putting them into more and more wars, which he admitted that they themselves should also prosper from. They should put the poor into housing near swamps, where they would get diseases like malaria that would also bring down the population.

Jackie: Do you have any background on Malthus?

Alan: Once again, you find most of these characters like Darwin. Malthus and so on were all clergy or the sons of clergy. They were sons of the British nobility. I don't think people realize that right up until this century the clergy of the Anglican Church also belonged to the British nobility. So, if you were in the British nobility, you would either be an Anglican priest or you would be in the army; basically, that's how it worked. Of course, that is exactly the system that Plato advised two and a half thousand years prior to that, that you would have the nobility underneath the royalty. The nobility would run the army and be the army and also the priesthood. That's exactly what the Anglican Church was right up until this century. Now they've let more people into it. They've diversified the new Christian churches, but basically it's the same system, because you have the World Council of Churches with the Rockefellers at the top. Every creed of which you're a member. Pentecostal or Baptist, all the series of changes they bring through the churches were first put out by the World Council and taken back by the heads to the local churches, and they get publications from their heads every week. They advise on what topics to speak about in church and which ones they must stop speaking about. So, gradually change is brought about in whichever direction it's planned.

Jackie: The charismatic movement? That came from Britain, according to an article I recently read.

Alan: Some of it did; the charismatic movement (you had Wesley and so on.) When Cecil Rhodes and his group came to power with Lord Milner, they set up a secret society, which was to make a World Federation, or Commonwealth of Nations. Cecil Rhodes himself was inspired by a man called John Ruskin, or Dean Ruskin. He was the dean at Oxford University, and his only training was in religion, but he began this preaching that the white man must go out and tame the rest of the world and destroy the cultures in order to create one world culture. It couldn't be done unless they were under one system, which was to be the British system. We call it multiculturalism; we call it the World Federation of Nations.

Jackie: Multiculturalism; they're teaching it in the schools. I have a document here from 1943, from the Pennsylvanian Teachers Union. The title of this was "Educating for One World; "they talked about forced multiculturalism back then.

Alan: That's interesting because a couple of days ago here in Canada, in the Toronto Sun, they had a large article about school kids from every school across Canada who had been picked to go to the United Nations meeting in San Francisco, which was held today. These children each put in an essay that had to say why the United Nations was so good and why they were glad to take part in the new constitution, which has been drawn up.

Jackie: The world constitution?

Alan: Yes. Here are kids taking part. Now, kids know nothing. I am sorry to say it, but kids have experienced nothing. Mere arc children are making rules, or apparently helping to make rules, which are going to affect all of us. These kids are ten years old. What do they know of life? I mean, they believe everything that has been drummed into their heads at school.

Jackie: Their parents, who are either uninformed or too lackadaisical or too uncaring to do anything about it, are letting it happen. This pamphlet that I was referring to says what they are going to discuss during this meeting. This actually was 1947. two years after the United Nations Charter was ratified here. They said the problems for discussion were "The importance of school support for programs of labor. Preparing youth for the needs of business industry. The challenges of science in education for one world." Then they talk about "administration responsibility for forced citywide intercultural programs" and then, for the teachers, "a curriculum for world citizenship." That was 1947. I don't want to get us off the track on this education thing, but this is what it's all about today. Because they know there are some of us who will never ever, ever give up, and we'll never forget. So they know their future is in our children.

Alan: It's interesting, though; if you really wanted to find out the beginning and end of it all, the book to read is by Bertrand Russell; it's called Education and the Good Life.

Jackie: Bertrand Russell? Would you like to hear a quote by him? He's a humanist philosopher and a UNESCO advisor. He said, 'It may be hoped that in time anybody will be able to persuade anybody of anything if you catch the patient young and are provided by the state with money and equipment. When the technique has been perfected, every government that has been in control of education for a generation will be able to control its subjects securely without the need of armies or policemen.'

Alan: It's called Education and the Good Life by Bertrand Russell. You can get it at your library, or they can order it for you. or from a bookstore; they have a Bertrand Russell Foundation. Some of his books you can get for about fifty dollars, but some of his other books, which they don't want you to get, are over five hundred dollars.

Jackie: You mean you can actually buy this book today. Education and the Good Life, by Bertrand Russell? Miss Effie, one of our listeners and a friend of mine, just found a book by B.F. Skinner in a used bookstore: they're using B.F. Skinner's operant conditioning methods in the schools today as we speak to program our children. You know that the name of his book is Beyond Freedom and Dignity. The title of that book says everything.

Alan: I would say so. You know, Bertrand Russell actually had an experimental school set up in the 1930s. He brought in a group of orphans, and he also brought in a group of children who would go back to their parents after class. He finds out if it was totally necessary (you see, the initial idea was to take all the children from their parents completely, and that, according to Plato, who was the hero of Bertrand Russell, was to have two different classes). He found out eventually that with the proper indoctrination and bringing the psychologist in to write the programs for the children, after eight hours of school, and if they got the children about the age of two years old in kindergarten, there was no real need to remove them completely from the parents, because the parents wouldn't be able to overcome the social indoctrination given to them during the day.

Jackie: That's why they want all of the children in preschool today. They know that the values and what these children are taught at those very early stages are very difficult to un-teach. They want them early. Ira Levin wrote This Perfect Day. In this perfect world here on this planet, the people were no longer born of the mothers; they were decanting them. They were creating a caste system. So that the people who were going to have jobs where they had to be able to use their brain, their gray matter, were given the oxygen necessary during their development as an embryo so that they could. But nobody was ever allowed to be too intelligent. Then the people who were being hatched, who were going to do the very menial jobs, had the oxygen withheld so that their brains didn't develop. They were retarded people who had enough intelligence to be able to follow instructions. You told me they did it in Sparta; I subsequently read this in Plato's The Republic. They were doing this in a sense.

Alan: Of course we're doing it; it's never been any different. Philosophy has always taught the same basic theories of a perfect society and a golden age of the past. Their ideal golden age of the past meant it was a mythical time, where laborers toiled the land without being angry or fed up and miserable with their lot. They did it contentedly, in other words, while the ruling classes benefited from their labors. It never really existed. But this is where they talk about the golden age of the past and the creation of the future. So what they came to conclude was that man is just too unhappy because of his consciousness. His consciousness gives him the ability to think, and if he thinks, then he's therefore going to be unhappy when he realizes that most of his labor is taken from him. Based on the methods the Spartans used two and a half thousand years ago. The Spartans were a ruling race of people, and underneath them they had a different race, which they lived off of as a slave population.

Jackie: Now, when you say a race, are you saying a different race of people or a different caste?

Alan: You could probably say caste, really, although the Spartans would maintain that they were a separate, unique race. But really in that one area, they all came from the same race, I'm sure. The Spartans lived off the slave caste population, and the Spartans themselves were taken from their mothers at birth, and so they grew up never knowing who their mothers were. They were trained in nurseries, and once they were five years old, they literally were put into a junior army cadet corps, where they were taught the rudiments of warfare and obedience to their superiors. They became a military nation: a Spartan nation who could live rough, survive with very little, travel vast distances, win battles, and come back again. But they lived off the backs of other people. When they became older, and they were no use for fighting, they would become overseers within the groups who were the slave population. Whenever they found anyone who had a child within the slave group who was bright and intelligent, every week or every month they would schedule a work detail, gather up

These people, send them off to the work detail, and they would never come back again; they were killed because they did not want anybody who was bright to start asking questions. People who were bright could also have the ability to communicate to the rest of them to become stirred up against their masters. So that's how they never had any rebellion. They literally drew out and caught the intelligent youngsters very quickly and killed them off.

Jackie: These people would not have really known that they were slaves because that's exactly how they were indoctrinated from their birth. I remember you mentioned that when they reached the age of twenty, they were allowed to marry, but they were not allowed to live with their wives. Then when they reached the age of thirty, they could live with their wives, but they always had to have their meals with the military camp. Have you heard the saying “The perfect slave believes he’s free”?

Alan: Oh, absolutely. You know, when you look in the ancient past or even in the feudal system of the Middle Ages, they never called the people of Europe slaves. The nobility called them serfs, supposedly because of the Christian world. But in reality a serf is a slave. Serfdom continued in Britain up until the 1500s and in Russia right up until this century. We’re hung up on words and terms. If we don’t call it what it really is, we allow it to happen and continue.

Jackie: Like today in America, we say we’re free because we live in America, when, in fact, we are slaves.

Alan: Oh, absolutely. In the feudal system, the serf was allowed to keep thirty percent of the crops he produced; over two-thirds were taken from him by each lord. Now, in those days, there was no mass farming and intensive chemical farming or anything. So whatever they produced was of vital importance. With a bad crop, you could die of starvation. They were left with thirty percent to feed themselves and their family, then barter with the rest for the clothing they would need for the rest of the year. When the figure comes out here in Canada, which tells us how much money we are left with at the end of the year, we have over two-thirds going to the government already. That reminds me of Carroll Quigley in Tragedy and Hope, where he said the system that is to come, which we’re basically coming into, will be a more sophisticated form of slavery. They simply won’t call it slavery. You don’t have armed guards pushing you into huts at night after your work’s done. You do that by yourself.

Jackie: Like Bertrand Russell said, “When the technique has been perfected, every government that has been in control of education for a generation will be able to control its subjects securely without the need of armies or policemen.” So that these people, and people today (and we are all doing it), are shuffling along, and the reason people believe they are free is that they don’t see those handcuffs. They think that until they’ve got literal physical shackles around their ankles and handcuffs or they’re behind bars, they’re free. The players today. Please give us some background; you mentioned Armand Hammer last night.

Alan: Armand Hammer had four books published or authorized by other publishers, but he basically authorized the books. Nobody during his lifetime could write a book about him and live. So, in other words, the only other material we had up until his death was what he allowed to be published. Now his story 'about his family background was a complete fairy tale of very poor Jews coming out of Russia in the late 1800s, hitting the U.S., and just simply making good through hard work and diligence. But when you look at the reality after his death and the publications that have come out,

25

You see a family dynasty of power. My grandfather was one of the communist agitators in Russia in the middle of the 1800s; they started in 1860 agitating in Russia. Then in the 1870s, there was a massive outflowing of these revolutionaries, and most of them came to New York. Armand's grandfather was one of these guys who ended up in New York. I's father ended up making drugs in the States and was involved in the liquor trade during prohibition. That's where they got most of their money. They were selling it through the pharmaceutical companies as medicine. It was hard liquor they were selling. They were involved in corruption of all kinds, and they got away with it. That's what really amazes me.

Jackie: I have had a very strong tie to the Soviet Union.

Alan: Armand Hammer's father knew Lenin very well, and Lenin used to call Armand his favorite capitalist because Russia was importing Ford motors and medicine and so on into the country, and Hammer had the monopoly on the trade between the two countries, the US and Russia. He was the coordinator for all incoming goods into Russia.

Jackie: Under the auspices, and probably with the blessings, of the people in our government here in America.

Alan: Living in the 1950s and 60s, he had politicians coming to his office; he owned apartments in the Watergate building. Nixon was a frequent visitor; he came for advice, and many others did too. Kissinger was another one. It's incredible that the man could literally be dancing with the Communists and dancing with the so-called Capitalists, which leads me to think that they're both one and the same thing. I think George Orwell said it right: "It's not a war between countries; it's a war of the governments of the countries on the minds of their own people.” I really think that’s what we’ve always had. So you had the Hammers and the Bronfmans doing what they did in Canada and the U.S., and then you had the Rothschilds doing exactly the same thing in Britain. They weren’t poor Jews who simply made good. These guys came in with an organization and big money guys behind them; there’s no doubt. Doors opened left, right, and center for them. Armand Hammer was a multimillionaire before he left university.

Jackie: I have a belief that they’ve done such a wonderful job down through the ages, and we’ve all been duped, and many of us are waking up today. One of the things that I think they have overlooked is the spirit in man. Because they see us as animals, that we’re all evolved from the lowest amoeba. Their bloodlines go all the way back to the beginnings of the biblical kings; they have the divine right to rule. But I believe that they have underestimated the spirit of man, the spirit within us.

Alan: I’m not so optimistic about people waking up. I think Jesus said that a few would be chosen.

Jackie: Well, many will be called, but few will be chosen. I wonder if what he really said, if we got back into the concordance and looked at the root of his words, was that many are called, but few will answer. Because many are called. I don’t think that God is going to pick and choose who is going to light the battle. He allows us to be his warriors. But we have to want it: we have to be willing to do it.

Alan: He gave us the techniques to do it. I believe that he knew it could never be done on Liarth. I think that’s why he said his kingdom was not of the earth. You see, he told us how to live, and it wasn’t in communes, as the communists would have it. It wasn’t the way the first Christians did it; Paul told them to live together in communes. Jesus said for everybody to make their own decision and to help each other: not to give your power to a government or an agency or a committee of wise men. But for the individual to say, “If somebody needs something, I’ll give it to them” as an individual choice. That’s the bottom line; it was a choice you had. You could if you wanted to; you didn’t need it. If everyone did that idealistically, you couldn’t have power; you wouldn’t even need a government because people would help each other out, but human nature being as it is. greedy and so on: people don’t want to help each other out. He also said to take no oaths. K, everything in every country on the planet that has ever existed takes oaths all the time. When you take an oath to do something or obey this or obey that, and then the laws get changed, but you’re still taking an oath to obey your government, you end up being a tyrant. So you take no oaths. You just give your word:

Yes, I will or No, I won't. All these secret societies take off; you go into a courtroom, you put up your hand, you put your left hand out on the Bible, and you've just created the square of the Masons; you take an oath. We break his commandments all the time, and we don't know we're doing it.

Jackie: His main commandment to us. If you recall, it is to love your God with all your heart and love your neighbor as yourself. That's what the Ten Commandments are all about. He said, Love one another even as I have loved you. He told us to do to others as we would have them do to us. His message was so simple.

Alan: It was simple, it was idealistic, and as I say, he knew, of course, that mankind on this earth could never follow it. Jackie: How do you know he knew that? Why would he have even tried if he knew that?

Alan: I think he showed us the way it could be done, at the same time knowing that it wasn't scheduled that way. It wasn't scheduled that way. We've had ministers and priests who've ruled us for two thousand years, since he died, yet his dying for us, for our sins, should have cancelled any further priesthoods.

Jackie: Well, we look in the concordance and find out that sin means error. When we say Jesus died for our sins, and now his blood has been shed for our sins, and now our sins are covered, they're washed away, and we're as white as snow. I believe that has been fed to us by our churches.

I believe what really happened was that Jesus showed us by giving his physical life and coming back that there is no death. When we say he died for our sins, maybe his death was a message in our error of thinking, in our insane belief system.

Alan: Up until that time, people were literally offering sacrifices to atone for their sins. He said, What bigger sacrifice can you get than this? That was the ultimate sacrifice.

Jackie: This message was a message of life, not death.

Alan: Oh, absolutely. I came to open people's eyes, for the ones who could have them opened.

Jackie: When we realize what they're doing to our children, and we're doing nothing, that is an abomination against God as far as I am concerned. If they can steal our minds, and we can't think, if we don't have the ability to reason, if our children cannot reason, then their souls can be...

Alan: At the same time, though, you have each generation having less to < do with their children. Parents are both working now; that was one of the prime or the first planks of the Manifesto. You have both out working; the parents come home, and the TV goes on. The children are out mixing with gangs, playing at the video arcades. The only instruction they're getting is from their teachers and from their gang leaders. Each generation gets worse and worse for us and better for those in control of this whole thing.

Jackie: If I have a reason for being on this broadcast, because I don't know why I am. I mean, this wasn't something that I sought out to do. I had my own experience in 1991. when George Bush was talking about the New World Order.

Alan: The Thousand Points of Light, which is also in the book Trotsky's book. My Life.

Jackie: I was awakened by a thought that went through my mind: "If everybody is like me. We are going to lose our country, our freedom, and our liberty." I owned a business, and I did what everybody else was doing, what I used to call normal, you know, playing Trivial Pursuit on Friday nights, et cetera. There was a calling from my heart, a cry that I had to do something, but I didn't know what to do. I simply said. "Father, please, if there is something that you would have me do. See to it that I do it, and I don't care what that is."

MIRACLE PART I INTERVIEW 3

Jackie: Alan has been connecting the dots. We've been talking about the mysteries, and we've been talking about the lies that all of us have been given since the very day we took our first breath on this earth. It's been happening since time immemorial. What we discovered is that the mysteries are nothing more than truth that has been hidden from us. that has been held in secret by the controllers (by the controllers of governments and controllers of religion) so that they could control us. through fear, through guilt, through ignorance. Alan has been shedding the light on all of this darkness.

I hope you have appreciated his being with us as much as I have. What are we going to talk about tonight?

Alan: We're going to talk about a couple of things that we didn't quite finish yesterday to do with the pyramids and Egypt. The ancient priests, as I've said before, used to take the pharaohs and various other members of high officialdom, and they would go through the initiation and lie in the sarcophagus in the king's chamber. What that symbolized was that when they arose from that sarcophagus, they were reborn (the term they used.)

Jackie: Would you say the priests of that time in ancient Egypt were actually more in control than the pharaohs were?

Alan: They were completely in control. In fact, it's just like today; the average person in Egypt would work most of his life and have very little at the end of it. But even then, he couldn't rest in peace when he was dead, because they had them in fear of their mortal soul afterwards. So they actually drew up legal contracts because the priesthood was also the lawyer association; they've found many of these documents. In order to get to heaven, you had to go through different stages of purgatory, and the Catholics copied that right from the Egyptians. There were various levels of purgatory. In order to get through purgatory, either your relatives who remained alive had to keep giving money to the priesthood or else you left most of your estate to the priesthood (or both, in fact.) At the very end of Egypt, the Egyptian priesthood owned almost ninety percent of all the land there. What they would do in return for this land was promise on these documents of clay to do so many prayers for you per day for your soul. You would eventually get to the land of the kings, or the land of the dead, as they called it, but only through their prayers, you see.

Jackie: You know, this really is amazing, because when I had Steven Ames Jr. one day, he was reading from a document from the Roman Catholic Church, and it was one of those kinds of contracts you're talking about from ancient Egypt. I've heard people had to will their property to the church when they died, and if they didn't, they were threatened with hell, that they would burn forever in that fire.

Alan: The ancient Egyptians also had another ceremony in the early days of Egypt where the deceased was carried to the banks of the Nile. The high priesthood formed a half circle around the coffin, and they did the judging of the dead. Those people in the congregation who had any money due to them by the deceased, or anything against the deceased, were asked to speak up against the deceased. Then the high priest would then make his decision as to whether the body would get ferried across the water by the silent ferrymen. Usually nobody spoke up because if the judge proved you wrong in your accusation, then you had to forfeit your life as well. But that's what happened before you could actually even get the person into a tomb. You had to go through a trial; the living judged the dead. Later they changed that into a symbolic gesture when they developed more levels of high priesthoods. They said that the highest or the most spiritual person metaphorically traveled across the sky with Horus and his bark (which is a ship) through the prayers of the priesthood, and that's when the idea that they could literally soak you and your relatives forever and ever came about, you see. before you could join Horus and the bark.

Jackie: For our listeners who may not have heard this before, the word horizon comes from 1 Horus rising.

Alan: Of course, you also get the word set from the setting. Set was Horus brother, and he brought on the darkness.

Jackie: December 25th was the celebration of the Winter Solstice, when Horus began his ascent once again. So for all of us who have been celebrating December 25th as the birth of Jesus Christ, well, once again, it looks like we've been duped, folks. Many people who are finding this out are having a real problem with this. I don't know if we know the date of Jesus' birth; I know that our intent is what is important. This is something that I have been struggling with; every day should be a celebration of his birth, really, and his living his life. Yet, it's very, very difficult when you have family and children and grandchildren to say. "Okay, we're not going to do this anymore. But if we are going to continue to celebrate Christmas, then we need to keep our minds and our intent on what this celebration is, and it is his birth into the physical here on earth, regardless of what the date was.

Alan: It's true; it's the intent you have rather than the knowledge that "No. 1 am going to be worshipping something else here." You know what you're worshipping; that's the main thing.

Jackie: You know. Jesus didn't ask us to worship him, at least not that I've ever seen anywhere in the Bible. Alan: No, he told us who to worship.

Jackie: The lie told is that our awe and our love and our worship go to God. Once in the Scriptures somebody said to him. "Good Master, how can I have eternal life?" and he said. "Why do you call me good? Because there is none good but God' I think that's something that we should remember too: to love and to cherish Jesus for the gift that he gave us—the gift of truth and light and life. But remember how he taught us to pray and not to turn what his message was into some kind of, what do you call it, Alan?

Alan: Basically, his whole message has been turned into the ancient religions; it's back to good deeds and humanism, creating a heaven on earth through good deeds, through good works, which is the Masonic Rule, basically. Again too, having intercessors for us; we shouldn't need any intercessor.

Jackie: Like the saints, or like Mary.

Alan: The Egyptians had the same thing. They had Isis, who was the intercessor between the people and Osiris. So they had to pray to her in order to get their messages heard by Osiris; it's exactly the same priesthood. This priesthood was an international priesthood, which also ran the priesthoods in Rome and Greece, right through the list, in fact, to Babylon. It was an international priesthood, and the priests could speak five or six different languages, and they didn't tell the people of each nation that they were all worshipping the same gods with different names. They didn't tell them, you see. So each country compartmentalized, if you like. Often they were sent to war with each other, thinking they were completely alien to each other. Of course, when they were fighting their neighbors, they were thinking, Well, these people have these strange gods. But in fact, they were the same gods with different names. The priests kept everyone fighting with everyone else. They actually found bases of the priests on the island of Cyprus in the Aegean Sea. It was a base, a fort really; it was a center of commerce or records (they kept records there) and a house of scribes. These were high priests from Egypt, and they had records there in Egyptian; they had letters in Canaanite. They had letters in Hebrew. Hebrew actually was developed from the Canaanite language. They were coordinating the different religions at one point from that base. It's incredible. They found thousands and thousands of clay tablets with all these different instructions to priests, an international priesthood four and a half thousand years ago.

Jackie: I guess if one were listening to this program right now. and hadn't talked with you as many hours as you and I have from time to time. I would wonder, how do you know all of this, and how would we know that the information you have is accurate?

Alan: Well, one of the best sources of information about the priesthood was Ages in Chaos by Immanuel Velikovsky. He was a fantastic scholar; he's accepted by all the other scholars as being one of the top men who really went into the archeology. He knew Wilkinson and all the other top archeologists. He studied all these findings and these records, and most of that information about Cyprus and so on is contained in his book. It's in the library; it's a very well-known publication. If not, you would get it from the university. He also wrote another one, a follow-up to it, called The Peoples of the Sea, which also has an awful lot of this documentation in it.

Jackie: How do we know (they've changed history so much)? How do we know that Immanuel Velikovsky's works were accurate?

Alan: Basically he doesn't come out with any claims; he simply shows you the evidence that's been found. So he isn't bringing up any theories, except the obvious ones. He himself is Jewish, and he was astounded to find that the Hebrew language was actually taken from the Canaanites. The Canaanites had the same written language long, long before there was a nation of Hebrews. So he was rather flabbergasted when he found this out.

Jackie: What is Hebrew?

Alan: Hebrew, literally, as I say, is an adaptation of Canaanite. It's almost like a people who assumed an identity (the Hebrews.) Jackie: What about the Khazars?

Alan: The Khazars were a people who were found to be living just around and to the north of the Black Sea. They lived amongst the mountains; they were a highland people. The land of the Khazars was about the size of modern Spain. So it was a large population. This is well documented by various historians. They were discovered there about 700 A.D., and at that time, the Khazars. (which simply means tzar, like Caesar or Kaiser; it means the kings.) They were threatened on one side by an invasion of the Moors. They were threatened on the other side by Christians from Constantinople, which was their base at that time. They were being forced between one religion and the other. The king, who was called a Kagan, had this title given to him as a Kagan, an overseer (which is a strange name because that same name was given to an overseer in ancient Sumeria thousands of years previously.) This is documented by Maimonides, who was a Jewish historian in the Middle Ages. Maimonides is a hero to the Jews because he vocalized the Hebrew religion and gave it vowels and so on, which it didn't have before. He was a high priest to the Jewish people. His work about the Khazars can be found in Will Durant's series from the universities, the main volume being The Age of Faith by Will Durant. You'll see Maimonides' writing about these people who eventually adopted the Jewish faith wholesale (a whole population,) even though they had no genetic roots to the ancient Hebrews.

Jackie: The Hebrews were the Jews?

Alan: They were only called Jews (the survivors who came back from Babylon and settled in Judea.) They then took the name of Jews, and even that's very controversial because when they came back from Judea, about 400 B.C., they'd all intermarried with the Babylonian women. You can read that in the Book of Ezra in the Bible.

Jackie: The Jews had intermarried? I saw a video; I don't know how much truth there was in it. But this is exactly what they had explained, that the actual Jews had intermarried so much that they no longer existed as a race or a nationality. I don't know if it's true, but according to this video, the Jews as we know them today are really Khazarian, or the Khazars.

Alan: It would make more sense. I have maps here from Oxford University in England. These maps go right back to about 400 B.C., right up to the present date. They have in this book the land of the Khazars (A.D. 700), and it literally is about the size of modern-day Spain. It's interesting too, because the Khazars were really the inner tribe or the rulers. They had a slave race around about them, and this slave race acted as an army and also as a sort of tax or duty collectors in all the different caravan routes that went through the land to trade with China and back. But the inner core of Khazars was a strange people.

But I'll tell you one thing that nobody has put together on this thing, and it has to do with ancient Egypt, and it has to do with the Khazars. Even though they seem to be separated by thousands of years, there is a connection between ancient Egypt and the Khazars. The history of the Great Pyramid of Khufu, or Cheops (Cheops is just the Greek name for Khufu, which is deliberately put in there to confuse us). I'm sure). Khufu—that's what the Aramaic languages call it. The legend of Khufu was that he was never put into any tomb. Instead, the legend said that he was buried in the ground after the water of the Nile had been diverted from the tomb they buried in the ground. Once it was buried, they re-diverted the water back over where he lay. Now, it's interesting when you read Maimonides, the ancient Jewish historian; if you think of Mammon, because that's where it comes from, it means wealth, money. Maimonides, whose writing is recorded in Will Durant's book, The Age of Faith, tells you about how they first found these Khazars and how they converted them to Jewry. He said that the interesting legend of the first king of the Khazars (they are separated by thousands of miles from Egypt) and they have the same legend of their first king being buried in the ground after the water had been diverted from them and then the water re-diverted over the grave. The exact same story, and nobody's ever put that together. I found that just simply by looking through different books, and I'm lucky that I can remember most things. I said, "My God. These Khazars have the same story' which seems to be the same story as Khufu."

32

Jackie: So would we say today that it's possible that the Jewish people are actually from the Khazarians?

Alan: Yeah, in fact, there's a Jewish professor in Israel, in Tel Aviv, who is quoted in the book The Thirteenth Tribe as saying that most modern Jewry today comes from the Khazars, so even the Jewish professors in Israel admit that.

Jackie: Does this have anything to do with the genetics, the bloodlines of the elite today?

Alan: I have a feeling that the nobility of the ancient times and the nobility of today are all one and the same people, really. They believe they are for sure, including the nobility in China. All one from the very beginning. Even the names in China, the Kahn, and the Great Kahn were taken from Cain. The Chinese had basically the same story as Cain being cast out from his people, and they adopted the name. According to the Chinese, Cain was a great maker of metal, and he was a great scientist of his day, which is exactly the same story as you find in the Bible if you look up what happened to Cain afterwards. He was reputed to have created a people who were good metallurgists (they made good metal and weapons), and they were basically evolved in the sciences. It's the same story. There were different Kahns; the Aga Khan and Genghis Khan was the great Mongol. It's almost as if you're finding a connection across even the ancient world of elite who ruled over others and yet used similar names and similar stories of their origin. I think an awful lot has been hidden. What's interesting, even with China, is that when the emperor who had built the Great Wall of China had completed that, he also had his men go across the land (they had public libraries in China in ancient times), and he ordered all the books to be gathered together and burned and kept away from the people. Nimrod was the first builder, and he had built a walled kingdom. There are too many connections all over the ancient world.

Jackie: What about Rothschild? Rockefeller, some of these real biggies today? What about their names?

Alan: The Rothschild dynasty, they claim their descent from an area in Turkey. It's interesting that the Khazars at the north of the Black Sea, according to Maimonides, were of Turkish-Mongolian stock. So there's a connection there, perhaps. But the Rothschild's original name was Bauer or Bayer (you can pronounce it either way), and they still own the Bayer Drug Company in Switzerland.

Jackie: When did their name change to Rothschild?

Alan: It changed in the 1700s. The Rothschild is from the German, which means red shield. In Germany it's pronounced Rot-schild. But it's the red shield. It's a very symbolic name, obviously, because red is the color of revolution.

Jackie: Also of Communism.

Alan: In fact, there's a book out in Britain and here now, talking about Victor Rothschild. \ The Fifth Man by Roland Perry 1 There's all the documentation from the Kremlin and from the British.

MI5 sources, which now admit that Rothschild was in touch with Russia all during the 'Cold War and was giving them secrets from Britain.

Jackie: What about the Rockefellers? Is there any blood connection that you know of between the Rockefellers and the Rothschilds?

Alan: Apparently there is. But there's a double blind here, a deliberate blind. In ancient times, in the Sumerian-Egyptian bloodlines, the bloodline wasn't through the father; it was through the mother.

Jackie: So the names could be different because the woman takes the husband's name.

Alan: Now even the ancient Hebrews, as you'll notice in your Bibles, always start off with the bloodline of the father. But after these people came back from Babylon (and they admit that many that came out with them were actually Babylonians,) after that, around the year 400 B.C., they changed the system and began to take the mother's bloodline. So they adopted the same system as the Egyptians, as the Sumerians, and so on. It's very difficult to trace the bloodlines because there's so much camouflage in there.

Jackie: What about the Rockefellers? What is their lineage? Alan: Their original name was Davies.

Jackie: That's certainly not Jewish.

Alan: They claim to be, I forget what it is, Baptist, but you can claim to be anything, of course. What I really have come to think is that when you look at how the Khazars run their country (now all the people underneath them basically were slaves; they were a different people), after a time the people regarded their kings as one and the same as them. I think that we're in the same boat, regardless of the country you live in. If you're in Britain, you look at your kings and queens and think, well, they are British. Well, they're not British; they're a separate race; they've never mixed with the blood of the ordinary British people. They've only mixed with the blood of the other nobility of Europe. I think it's the same at the top of the Jewish people. Their leaders, the Jews, revere Rothschild as being a Messiah. In fact, they actually called him that at one point, and he leads them wherever he wants them to go.

Jackie: Not your everyday normal people Jews, but the higher-ups?

Alan: Yes. Well, as I say. I think they're one and the same people, in reality. Going back to the pyramids, the Egyptian name for the pyramid was Mir., sometimes written Mir. or Meir. It's interesting that they've got that one up in space called the Mir Space Ship.

Meir also means mother, and so when you were reborn and came out of the pyramid from the sarcophagus, that was your second birth coming out of your mother. That's from the Egyptian language.

Caller: Do you think the pyramids were built by the Hebrew slaves? Do you think the ultimate Tower of Babel is like the satellite or the space station that they are building right now?

Alan: No. I don't think they were built by the Hebrews. There's actually no record of who built them. Even the later pharaohs would add plaques to the pyramids in honor, on a pharaoh's birthday or whatever, but it doesn't mean they actually built them. Nobody knows who built them, in fact.

Jackie: What about the space stations today? Do you see any connection or symbolic connection?

Alan: There's a symbolic connection, in a sense. This sort of is offbeat from it. and it's a whole story about Nostradamus, who is credited for a lot of nonsense, in fact.

Jackie: We have a call coming. Let's take the call and then answer the other question too.

Caller: This is John from Illinois. You talked about bloodlines with the presidents; who among the politically elite has bloodlines going back into England that may become the next president, such as Gingrich or possibly Gore? Who would have bloodline connections there?

Alan: The next one, the British papers said, would be Colin Powell. His great-great-great-grandmother had a child by the lieutenant governor. (Gen. Sir Lyre Coote, who was a cousin of the queen way back in Jamaica. So they actually think that he will be the next one.

Jackie: Is there anybody else of the politically elite who would have a royal bloodline that could be in line for it besides Colin Powell?

Alan: I don't see anyone on the horizon.

Jackie: We have another call here.

Caller: Are you familiar with a Masonic order that says they trace their hereditary lines back to Constantine the Great and/or his bodyguard or knights? I was at a military show, and there were some Masonic doohickies on display (I forgot to write all the stuff down), and they said their lines went back to Constantine.

Alan: That Masonic Order was actually founded by the Scots Guards in France. They traced their roots right back to there. Jackie: The Scots Guards—is that a Masonic Order?

Alan: It was originally founded as a Masonic Order. Jackie: Would that be the Scottish Rite?

Alan: They brought the Scottish Rite into Scotland from France. The head of that is Lord Lothian. Jackie: We have another call. Alan.

Caller: This is Joe in Arkansas. One thing I disagree with a lot of Christian Conservatives on is that they think it's so important for the United States to support Israel. Now I have nothing against Jews; I come from a Jewish background. My father was Jewish, and I went to Jewish

Sunday School, and we celebrated the Jewish holidays and things like that when I was a kid. But anyway, I consider myself an American, as I understand it. George Washington said that we should steer clear of any permanent entangling alliances with any foreign countries. It seems like the United States has this permanent entangling alliance with Israel. I don't think it's so important to support them. It seems like we keep supporting them by a combination of religious superstition (that there's something specially important to God about the Jews), and it seems like they keep bringing up the Holocaust over and over to make us feel guilty about what Hitler did to the Jews, so we should keep supporting Israel. I would like to get your comments on that.

Alan: I've got a very, very rare book, written by the lieutenant governor from Britain from the years 1920-1939 for Palestine (when the first Jews were coming in.) He tells you in his book that all of them who were coming in were Russian Jews. None of whom spoke any of the Arabic languages: the only language they knew was Russian. There were lights going on with ancient Jewish settlers called Sephardic Jews, who were original natives of the area, who would not accept these Russian Jews as being Jewish at all. So, what happened was, and he tells you in this book. (Lord 'ur/on, who was Lieutenant Governor,) that they brought in a Hebrew specialist to recreate an ancient and dead language called Hebrewism. They put that into school right away to get one generation speaking Hebrew. But, no, the native language of all the incomers was Russian, and they were communists.

Jackie: We have a map here that was commissioned in 1943 by the Carnegie Foundation. It's a world map, and it shows how they were going to divide up the world after the Second World War. And there is a country on this map called Hebrew Land right where Israel is today. This was two or three years before the war was over, and they already knew how they were going to do it. They had it all planned and laid out. with the world divided up into regions. Now, if we have time, our first caller has asked about the spacecraft.

Alan: It's interesting, and it's a coincidence because Nostradamus in the 1500s predicted that there would be an end of the world, where the masses would be killed off, except for the chosen ones, the elite, who would be looking down from a home in the sky.

Now what they're building up there is the huge space platform, they call it. Most of the material is being taken to it by this Mir spaceship, this mother, as they call it.

Jackie: Is this our joint effort with Russia? We're paying for the whole thing, by the way.

Alan: It's one of them. I don't believe that Nostradamus could predict anything unless it was a plan. Nostradamus was Jewish; his mother was burned for practicing witchcraft in France. He adopted Christianity.

Jackie: The thing that's amazing is to think how old the plan was. that back then they would know that technology would be able to put space stations up there.

Alan: As I've said before, most of the great thinkers who have come up with so-called scientific discoveries will often report that they were approached, and then they always give you that somebody showed them some ancient document and so on. Then they become famous. I think we're not discovering things; they're being reintroduced.

Jackie: So in other words, this technology had existed in times before?

Alan: They actually have (found a battery in Egypt, and it's on display at the Cairo museum). It's made of pottery, but inside it has lead and copper plates in it, and it's got two terminals, and they connected it up to a light bulb, and they put in sulfuric acid, and it lights up. Now that's on display, but because it doesn't fit the theories, all the guys don't want to talk about it. So it's just stuck there on the shelf, but anybody can see it when they go in.

Jackie: We're almost out of time here, and there is so much more. 37

Waiting for the Miracle Part I Interview 4

Alan: What I was going to say was that the last quotation you gave basically is the type of quotation that the elite are given, because they really truly believe that they are the chosen people.

Jackie: That is true, because do you know who is credited with saying this? Nelson Mandela. It is true. He didn't say here, "We are God," but 'We are children of God,' and that's the truth.

Alan: But then he has a scriptwriter, too.

Jackie: Oh sure. I know. Well, it's beautiful. I thought that was beautiful. You say that's the script that they're given, too.

Alan: I think more so than the average person. You see. I was brought up in Scotland, and in Scotland you have definite classes of people. They're fixed classes, and each class doesn't overlap the next: you can't get into the upper classes. So you are born into a class, and that's basically where you stay until you die. If you're from the lower class, then you know as soon as you can understand anything that you are going to be an employee all of your life. It never enters your head to be an employer. That's just the way it is. And your parents will never suggest to you that you should be an employer either. People sort of accept their station that's been drummed into them since school. Whereas, when the elite go to their schools, they are taught the opposite: that they are a chosen people and they will be the rulers. Margaret Thatcher, when she was in office, was the first prime minister to give public funding (taxpayer's money, in other words) to the top elite schools. She said they need the money, and these are the future leaders of the country, which meant, obviously, that the rest of you peasants will not be the leaders of your country. That's how blatant it is over in Europe.

Jackie: Well, you see. I've always had this feeling, since I've been learning about all this, that these people do have the truth; they know the truth, but they take it and turn it upside down, inside out, and backwards.

Alan: This happened at the very beginning of time, I think, when they realized if they created a priesthood that said it has a communication to God and that you cannot get to God except through them. They have used that tactic ever since. The Egyptians used it. The Catholic Church uses it, and the Protestant Church still uses it to a certain extent. In reality you have a direct line to God. Each person does, and Jesus said that himself.

Jackie: Yes, he did. He said the way to the Father is through me. He didn't say, Worship me. He truly was trying to let us know what all these people know already, that we are children of God, that we are powerful beyond measure. Jesus told us that; in so many ways he told us that.

Alan: That's basically why they killed him, because he was destroying their power.

Jackie: Then all his truths and messages that he was bringing were twisted and warped. People had to go on believing, once again, that we are nothing but terrible sinners and we're all going to go to hell or purgatory or someplace else instead of, as Jesus told us, "Ye are the light of the world."

Jesus was not here just for a particular race of people.

Alan: The thing is, when he was with his disciples and speaking to a crowd, we're told that his mother and his brothers came to see him. and everybody expected him to drop everything there and then and allow them into the front row. He said, "Who are my brothers and sisters? Whoever follows me are my brother and my sister." Whoever. So that clears it up for me.

Jackie: This is the whole point. As we've said, we were all born into a lie, and that brainwashing has been going on since birth, and it isn't okay to question. I had a friend one time who said, "Jackie, we are not supposed to delve into this stuff. If God wanted us to know it, we would know it."

I said, "If God didn't want us to know it. He wouldn't have given us the brain, the mind, to ask the questions." Jesus said, "Ask and ye shall receive, and search and ye shall find, and knock and it shall be opened unto you." So this is what we have to remember and not feel powerless because these people really have forsaken God. (Haven't they, Alan?) the leaders, the controllers.

Alan: The controllers have a different version of God, and this is where Freemasonry at the very, very pinnacle comes into play. It's very interesting, and I will start on this point. The British paper comes out every week, the European Express; I just got today's copy. It has this great dome they're building in Britain, in London, for the year 2000 celebration. There's a photograph of it in here. It's an enclosed dome, with twelve huge towers coming right through the roof and hundreds of feet right up into the air. The twelve towers symbolize the number of perfect governments, and that's right out of the Talmud, you see. The perfect number of government is twelve; that's why there are supposedly twelve tribes (which I pretty well dispute actually; I think there were twelve ruling families over the people even back then.) In the middle of this great dome, there are two nine hundred-foot statues of two people making love. The Queen has refused to be present to open this thing.

Jackie: You mean she can't stop it?

Alan: In other words, she'll just passively disapprove, and somebody else will do the opening ceremony. It was created by two homosexuals from the present prime minister's government, two best pals. I think. We don't know yet if they're two males embracing or a male and a female. But symbolic to me are the twelve towers, because they burst through the roof. That's like bursting through the sky. In ancient times, they said the sky was covered and there was a veil of water around the whole earth. When the demons or whatever were cast down from above, they fought back at God and said they would become gods themselves by their own willpower, their own powers of reason, their own intellect, ambition, and abilities, which is really at the root of Freemasonry. They built their first tower, which is called Babylon, and the tower is a phallic symbol that points up to heaven, and it literally is a symbol or a gesture against God, you see. Here are the twelve symbols, all in this one big circle in London, England, that are the twelve towers of government (the perfect number of government according to the Babylonian Talmud, which is used today amongst modern Jewry.)

There's so much happening all over the world for this year's 2000 celebration that you could literally do a show every night until it happens. They're building structures all over the planet to Deal with this. Of course, George Bush and all the rest at the top of what we call the Illuminati are going to be present at the capstone being put into place on the Great Pyramid of Cheops.

Jackie: There's no capstone on that?

Alan: No, that one was left vacant for the crowning ceremony, which is coming up. This is to be the end of this age, you see. according to them, when they have succeeded in bringing around world government. This plan is so ancient it's incredible, until you go into it. You know the man who was given credit for designing the European Union. Francis Mitterrand of France said it must be done in such a manner that the public in every country must be kept in an unconscious state while it's happening. Francis Mitterrand died about four years ago, and every prime minister and the U.S. president went over to his funeral, and on his coffin they put a single red rose, and in the papers they said this is the emblem of international socialism. I've got the paper here, and they said that "the man worked so hard to bring this about; he's a hero to his own people." Now, I don't know who they meant by his own people. But they said, "Only one month prior to his death, he went back to his favorite spot on the planet, which was the great pyramid of Cheops, or Khufu (as the Arabs call it.) He went into the sarcophagus, as was his custom, in the king's chamber, and lay in the sarcophagus' Now. If you go into your history books, you'll find that Alexander the Great (who became a dictator of the whole Middle East) also lay down in the great pyramid inside the sarcophagus. That's a part of the ceremony going back for cons. Not only Alexander the Great, but Napoleon did it as well, and all the great dictators and earth movers (as they call them) did the same ceremony. Earth movers are the ones who change society. Francois Mitterrand was another one. Interestingly. Art Bell was another one, and he talked about it on his show once, in fact.

Jackie: Well, he must be somebody.

Alan: Oh, I'm sure he is. I'm certain he is; he's pushing the UFO invasion nonsense to the limit, you know. They must make mankind think that there was never a previous age to this one, and there most certainly were previous ages. There's a debate going on right now amongst archeologists who think the three pyramids are put in reverse order because up to the present they've always said that the pyramid of Cheops was the first to be made and there was no capstone put on it. But the other two, which are in bad repair, were later ones.

I would contest that, because the other pyramids are actually older, and they represent the crowning achievements of previous ages.

Jackie: Maybe they were built without capstones. The capstones were put on during those crowning times. You mentioned somebody else that we know well, who has been over there lying in that sarcophagus. Rush Limbaugh. Do you know anything about that?

Alan: No. Rush Limbaugh. It wouldn't surprise me because most of the establishment have gone through the top ceremonies. George Bush is in the brotherhood of the Skull and Bones Society. In Britain we have the same thing. In fact, I wouldn't be surprised if Margaret Thatcher did the same thing.

Jackie: How about Clinton?

Alan: No, I don't know. I don't know. But once again, as I say. I'm sure they've all gone through similar ceremonies because they don't have to go there to do it. They also have similar ceremonies within certain lodges of Freemasonry, you see. Even in the 5th century A.D., when they were trying to stamp out the pagan ceremonies to Mithra, and they called it Mithraism. They discovered skulls underneath the sarcophagus, and the sarcophagus was being used as part of the initiation ceremony. Because once you are inside the sarcophagus, you see. Initially you were supposed to stay there for three days. They don't do that anymore.

Jackie: Like Jesus?

Alan: On the third day you rise, and you've been born again. Often in ancient times, they would hear voices while in the sarcophagus. Anybody who looks through the plan of the pyramid sees two air chambers going off at angles (at forty-five-degree angles) to the outside. In ancient times you could shine a light down those passageways, and you could talk down it, and it would literally sound as if it was coming out in stereo, and the voice would boom and be very awesome, so it's part of the trickery.

Jackie: Like the Wizard of Oz. Behind that curtain there was a little, scrawny guy with a great big megaphone.

Alan: That's exactly it. That's right. Basically the pharaohs and the people who were always presented at the top were puppets of the priesthood.' The priesthood had the power.

Jackie: So the mysteries, when we go all the way back to that, are knowledge that they have held and that they have kept from people all the way down through the ages. The greatest and most important of that is that we are all children of God. And as Jesus told us, "Unto us, nothing shall be impossible." He meant that literally; I know he did. He told us. You know, with your faith even the size of a little mustard seed, you could say to this mountain, Get beyond here, and it would move. I was saying that to all of us. When he comes back, will we know him?

Alan: Well, that's the big one. Or will we simply crucify him again? We don't know; we really don't know. Jackie: You said that you thought that when he comes back, possibly they'll do it again?

Alan: Yes, because this is a definite contest that's been going on ever since the world began between a people who believe that Satan was the good guy. They believe that Cain, one of their heroes, was an offspring of love from the serpent. The serpent is a symbol of knowledge or wisdom. So in other words, they're trying to say that Eve was the mother of wisdom. In their language they change her into Semiramis, Nimrod's wife. It's all done symbolically, in symbolic terminology. They themselves (they called it their own genius) will be able to bring around the perfect word, which was created incomplete and imperfect.

Jackie: The Illuminati use the phrase "order out of chaos." Well, that makes perfect sense. I have a book here that gives the roots of a lot of words. The original root meaning of the word chaos meant "before God created." So these guys are saying, Well, they are creating the chaos, of course, and then they are going to bring order out of the chaos like God did when he created.

Alan: I mean, what's fascinating is when you go into all the different versions of the history of the Middle East; you take in the Egyptian history, you take in the Persian histories, and Libyan, and you get all these different versions of the same event with different causes and different answers to them.

and so on. What you find is that Egypt was the longest-lasting dominant commonwealth on this planet that ever existed. They basically controlled the land from Egypt right to the west, right past Mesopotamia. They had trade routes even into China five thousand years ago. What we're told by anthropologists, of course, who want to believe in evolution, is that man was very primitive back then with a small brain and all this nonsense, but in reality we've never been any different. People are now saying that Egypt could be much older. They knew mathematics and astronomy; they had the sciences worked out. They had a priesthood for each science: one for geometry, one for algebra, one for chemistry' and so on. So each mystery, in other words, was a science, in reality. They had another priesthood, which dealt with the control of the people's minds, and they used fire and various mirrors and so on and gimmicks to impress the people. They would burn chemicals and cause various clouds of smoke to appear. ' people didn't give enough of their tithes and their offerings, then the wrong color of smoke would appear, and so on.

Easily explained today, but in those days the people were kept in a very primitive state and completely illiterate, of course.

Jackie: Even using, as an example, the eclipses. These people knew when there would be an eclipse, and they made the people believe that they made the eclipse happen by going through all their rituals and everything.

Alan: You see, the term they used for these people was the Magi. They were the Lords of Illusion, and their ability was to create illusion and fool everybody.

Jackie: That reminds me of the three wise men who came to visit when Jesus was born. Were they them?

Alan: Well, we don't know because two Gospels talk about that event; the other two Gospels completely omit it. So you've got to say to yourself, if this was a momentous event, why would the two others omit it, or was it added in there? I don't know. It could have been added; the Bible has been tampered with since its beginning. There's no doubt about that. I mean, there were hundreds of other books, which were completely discarded. There were hundreds of other sects that existed, which were basically exterminated after the Council of Nicaea in 325 A.D. One of the main contestants was the Arian group, and they believed that each man had a direct path to God.

Jackie: They believed that Jesus was the son of God, and so do all of us. 1. I do have a book on the First Council of Nicaea. This is amazing because the speech by Constantine to these attendants at the First Council of Nicaea—I'm telling you, if you've read it, Alan, you'll recognize that it could sound like a speech that one of our politicians made yesterday. He dialogued with these guys to consensus. They even used the word; he used the word in there.

Alan: There must be a consensus. It wasn't a one-day meeting either.

Jackie: Oh no. He was having a great celebration because of his 20th anniversary of rule. He set this council to happen at the time of that celebration. According to even his historian, he winned and dined them. I gave them money, and he gave them gifts.

Alan: He bought them off.

Jackie: They said that if there was anyone speaking that he didn't agree with, then he encouraged everybody to speak, but then he would lead them to the way that he wanted them to think. Arius came. He presented his information, and it was burned. That's why I guess there's not much record of his tenets. Then he was excommunicated, and Constantine put out an edict that anybody who was caught with Arius' work, his writings (after he said that they were all to be burned), would be put to death.

Alan: That's right. He made an exception for one of his sons who followed him. Jackie: He killed a couple of his sons.

Alan: I had two sons; the other one was a homosexual, and even though he was a homosexual, he put an edict out in his area that he was given to rule that all homosexuals caught in the act were to be put to death. So there's no love amongst them either, you see.

But his other son was a follower of the Arian methodology. They basically tried to get to God through meditation.

Jackie: That's what Jesus told us to do.

Alan: But you wouldn't need a priesthood for that.

Jackie: When Steven Jacobson suggested that the only way to undo the damage that has been done to our minds and to really find the truth, he mentioned going into a meditative state and getting in touch with that part of ourselves where God dwells, where the spirit of God dwells. A friend of mine said, "I just love him. but he's going New Age on us." I said, "Why?" "Well, because he's talking about meditation, and that's New Age." I went into the concordance, and I found eighteen or nineteen references in the Bible to meditation. But they've done a lot of twisting, and they bring some of the truth into it so that the people who aren't really informed about meditation say, "Oh, that's New Age." So the truth is being hidden in plain sight because it's all wrapped up with all the New Age nonsense.

Alan: That's right. You see, there's no secret to meditation; you don't just sit like a Buddha. You don't have to do any weird things with your hands; it is simply a matter of taking a thought and pondering on it in quiet and solitude. That's basically what it means.

Jackie: Focus your attention maybe on listening for God because when we pray, we are speaking to God.

Alan: There are so many distractions, purposeful distractions, the way we are bombarded with information and crises all the time (most of it is fictional and never happened.) If you were to really believe the newscasts every day, especially in the United Kingdom or Europe, it would put you in a state of paralysis, and that's what they want, you see. Psychologists are very aware that if you bombard people with bad news all of the time, they become, first of all, scared and paranoid, and then they withdraw, paralyzed, completely. That's the state where you can go ahead, if you're one of the controllers, and implement whatever you wish without opposition.

Jackie: That's because people feel there's nothing we can do. Besides that, we know that in the end we win. because it's in the book. Isn't that a wonderful way to make people sit back and wait for it all to happen?

Alan: The elite really think that their perfect world will be a world where people will toil at laborious tasks and will be bred to the job. and will basically have no consciousness. The ancient sign for the perfect society comes from the sign for Omega, which is the beehive. The beehive was a sacred object in Egypt. You couldn't sell a beehive; you could only give it as a present to royalty and nobody else. yhe reason was. It was looked upon as being the perfect society; every bee knew his job. It was born to its job; it did nothing else. It wasn't unhappy, and they all serviced the bees above them, right up to the queen. Thai became the symbol of Napoleon when he was trying to create a world government. He was a top Freemason himself; he used that on his (lag., the symbol of the beehive). In fact, Napoleon created his own downfall by going to Egypt. He took seventy archeologists with him, and the Rosetta Stone (which eventually deciphered the Egyptian writing) was found by one of his men. People never figured it out, and the history books never tell you why on earth this guy, who wanted to conquer the world, went right to Egypt, right to the pyramids. That was the reason. He spent months there, excavating different tombs and so on. A lot of the stuff that came out of Egypt has disappeared, and I think a lot of these guys went in to make that information, which was inscribed, which would tell you about the previous ages, and was purposely removed. Man has been at different pinnacles of scientific discovery in previous ages; there's no doubt about that.

As I say, the first people to arrive on the scene—it's like a camera switching on—you see people working at blacksmithing and astrology and astronomy, and all this stuff was in Sumeria in four and a half thousand B.C. They had that knowledge there and then. Well, where did they get it from? It didn't come from outer space; it came from previous civilizations. Everybody in the Middle East, even China, even the Mayan Indians, has a story about floods and catastrophes, so there have been previous ages. If you go into the Hindu writings, you find out that they do indeed have records of many previous ages, and that has been kept from us.

Now there have been previous ages where man reached a zenith of production and then was wiped out for one reason or another; that would destroy the whole theory of evolution. I believe that's why this theory was pushed to keep us from catching on: that there have been previous ages, there have been survivors who had the power and the technology and know-how, and they used it on the other survivors of the planet. How does that grab you?

Jackie: It just amazes me. Alan. You know, I am getting used to you. For our listeners. I've told you he has called me, and he would start talking, and I ask a jillion questions. I would find myself listening with every cell in my body to the information because it all connects together. We have to accept the fact that we have been lied to mightily.

Alan: I'll tell you, one of the other things that put me onto this was reading the life histories and stories of scientists down through the ages, people who are credited with discoveries and so on. Isaac Newton, who was the guy credited with giving the theory of gravity and many other inventions, said there is nothing I have discovered that hasn't been written about in the Talmud and inscribed on the walls of Egypt. I've read the same thing from other scientists down through the ages. Then I found out that Isaac Newton belonged to the Royal Institute of England; it was the first chartered Masonic lodge for England, the Grand Lodge of England. Then I went back to the Western discoverer of gunpowder, and that was it. I think. Thomas Moore, who was a priest, is credited with alchemy in the 14th century. I read his diaries, and he said he was approached by Talmudic Jews. This is what he said now, in Oxford, England, at Oxford University. He said they showed him the secret of the ages and of numerology and so on. The next thing you know, he's producing gunpowder and different things like this. I think literally these inventors don't come out of the blue; they're chosen, and they're given knowledge, which has existed before; that's the impression I get. Yes, but once you start reading the stories, you see the same story coming up all down through the ages, right through Bertrand Russell, who says the same thing. Talmudic Jews approached him. Now. I don't know if that's a symbolic term, the Mason Jews, or what for these wise masters, as they call them, lie. Mason mentions that that's when his career took off; he said doors opened all over the world for his theories on population control, et cetera. Nothing stood in his path; everybody was suddenly asking to have his publications. This is the same story I find with so many of the so-called great inventors.

Jackie: What about the Kabala? What do you know about the Kabala?

Alan: The Kabala is part of the Talmud. We're told that there are over twenty-four books in the Talmud, and I believe there are probably hundreds more. The Kabala is not encoded as such; what it really is are meanings behind veiled meanings. You have to sit and ponder to figure out what it really, really means, and it's never the first impression you'll get: it's a meaning behind. It takes years and years of study to catch on.

Jackie: In other words, the esoteric and exoteric.

Alan: The exoteric is meant for what they call the profane, or the uninitiated, the unenlightened. Once you're initiated into the mythology of looking at what the real meanings are, then you begin to catch on. When you look at Nimrod, for instance, he was given the credit as the first one to create walled cities. So he was a builder; he knew archaeology, geometry, and so on. They knew mathematics; he was credited with that. Right after he did that, we're told, he was the first one to create war on his neighbors, and that's very important because that was one of the first methods of creating chaos and then offering yourself as the solution. He was also credited with making armaments: bows, arrows, swords, metallurgy, and so on. As was Cain, by the way, in the Bible, because if you read in the concordance and find out what happened to Cain, he eventually went off to create his own little empire. The Canaanites were credited with being masters of metal and the sciences.

So there's more to the story until you understand the meaning behind the story, even in the Bible. It's the same story as Nimrod. You see, even the very fact that Cain was supposed to be a planter—now everybody in the Middle East knows you have to know the stars and the movements, the rising of Sirius (which would bring the floods annually)—to know exactly where to plant. So it didn't mean you just grew crops; he was a scientist. The mysteries credit him with being a scientist, the first scientist.

Jackie: Are you going to come back with us tomorrow night? We're out of time, but we'll be back tomorrow night.

PART I INTERVIEW 5

Jackie: We've been going back in history, and Alan has been filling in some pieces. It's more like a mosaic coming together than pieces of a puzzle. My belief is that we've all been born into a lie, and by that I mean that the truth has been kept from us. We were talking about Art Bell; I had a call from one of our listeners encouraging us to get on Art Bell's website, saying that he's had some great guests on his program. When somebody is syndicated on four hundred AM and FM stations, it makes you wonder what information they are putting out that the elite wants to be put out. Use your mind and start connecting the dots for yourself. Alan shared some information with me that I want you to hear: statements made by Art Bell in a book that he wrote.

Alan: I think in the last book that he wrote or had ghostwritten or whatever, he mentioned the terrible state the world is in with crime (I don't know if he mentioned population) and all this kind of thing and wars. But he ends with a statement, 'If it takes a benign dictator, then so be it, to put the world in order.'

Jackie: Is he talking about a world dictator?

Alan: In the Masonic terminology, which is ancient, really pre-Masonic, the world would be ruled by twelve wise men with a hidden one at the head (thirteen.) The hidden one is all through the religion. In ancient days the hidden one was Saturn, and he therefore was worshipped on Saturn-day, or Saturday, and those who worshipped on Saturday worshipped the hidden God. But all through the writing, eventually twelve wise men with this hidden one (thirteen) would rule the world; that's in Benjamin Franklin's writings too. In his diary and letters, he said the same thing.

Jackie: With the experience that people in all nations, all countries have had with rulers, with monarchies.

Alan: Then you find what the term ruler means. The term means cane. The first cane was also a ruler or a measuring stick. Even the Egyptians called it a cane, and it was marked off in units of measurement. Then when they changed it to the Masonic one, which is a square, they still called it cane. From the word that symbolizes those with intelligence, the prime source, the first ones with the gene, out of that you have Cain; he was basically banished. He was given the credit in the Bible for creating a race of metalworkers and scientists, as you would call them today. You have the same story with the Greeks; they called him Pluto. He was cast down in fire and created images and metal works, and that's how he became a learner of the stars and sciences; the same story all through. We have Chan. Canc. We have the word Cohen. Cohen was actually the high priest in Hebrew. Cona was the high priesthood, and they were lost after they went into Babylon.

Jackie: How about the word kahuna?

Alan: It's probably similar, but the word is Caan (or in Chaldea, in Babylonian). Caan was also a high priest, so you have Caan in Chaldea and Cohen in the Hebrew. From the same root come the words king, and cam, and ruler. There are two meanings: a ruler is a ruler who rules you, and a ruler also measures. So they always have these double meanings in their terminology.

Jackie: I only listened to a few of Art Bell's programs, but back in 1995, we were lighting the Conference of the States, which was an all-out effort as a backdoor attempt.

Alan: Margaret Thatcher was over here at the time; she was going to go down to it. She gave a lecture in Massey Hall in Toronto, and it was a closed lecture to the CFR. But this young reporter put a blurb in the paper. I guess her boss didn't catch her in time, and it said that her lecture was on the New World Order; that was the title of her lecture. That was at the same time that Bush was talking about his New World Order. She ended the discussion by saying that she was now going down to Philadelphia for a very important conference.

Jackie: That was in 1995?

Alan: Yes. It was in the Toronto Sun.

Jackie: I remember you telling me that. That's how sure they were that they were going to get their Conference of States. The fact that it was stopped shows me that when we are calling on God and asking for guidance and working together, miracles do happen.

Alan: And working together.

Jackie: One of our friends in Colorado had a statewide fax network, and I would fax to her, and then she would fax it around Colorado; that's how we got the information all over the country. She was faxing a two-page alert that we had done on the Conference of States, and in the middle of her fax (she was faxing over to Art Bell), it stopped. She got a fax back that said, "If you don't stop faxing me this garbage, I am going to sue you." I said. "That tells us all we need to know about Art Bell, doesn't it?"

Alan: Liven, given what he did in Egypt, was a way to put his own people through initiation by telling them that he lay in the sarcophagus and so on. Then again, you see one of the names of their heroes in the past, Nimrod, was also called the Great Confuser. What they have you see, especially in these days, which are, according to them, the last days of the age. They have to create as much confusion for the intelligent to find so that the intelligent will be running around chasing their tails forever. Their spin, even in their books, always ends up that we came from out in space somewhere and so on. Whereas in reality mankind, and especially the priesthoods (which were the keepers of the knowledge,) have been here for many thousands of years. There is proof of it, too; there is a lot of proof of it.

Jackie: We talked before about the fact that the ancient cuneiforms of the Sumerians proved that they had a tremendous knowledge of the heavens, of all of the heavenly bodies, and of where they were.

Alan: They had the star patterns, the routes, and the times they would reappear. You must realize they knew the ages. And the equinoxes, we have the monthly ones; you know you're a Capricorn and so on, but you also have the cosmic ones, which give you the age you live in. The age we are living in now is Pisces. That's why for the last two thousand years we have had the sign of the fish. It was even written into the Bible, "You will be fishermen of men." Wherever they went, the first symbol the Christians used was the fish. You find it in Britain in the museums where they carve it into rocks on the shores. Now, the sign coming up is to be the Age of Aquarius, which starts about the year 2030 or so. That means these high priests have done a round circle of all the equinoxes at least once, so that they know when they come, which means at the very beginning, from the present Aquarius coming up to the one before, you're talking twenty, thirty thousand years. So they've studied this for many thousands of years. The reason anthropologists have been pushing so much on people is because they want you to believe we've had a steady progression from scraping our knuckles on the ground from ten thousand years ago. But the reality is the high priesthoods were always in existence, long before that. They'd studied for thousands of years.

Jackie: I had read Zechariah Sachin's work, and it seemed to make a lot of sense. So that it would be something that could be plausible. Of course I thought about it, and it still doesn't take away from the fact that God created everything, all of the planets, the universe, everything. So it wouldn't take away from that, and it makes much more sense to believe that possibility, and you say that there is absolute proof that there were civilizations before us who had reached the point where we are.

today.

Alan: Absolutely. It's like a movie, where the film starts and you see people scurrying around doing their everyday business. The history we are given for our age here begins with a movie just like that; we see people harvesting, planting, priesthoods, and so on. It didn't start as a gradual progression, but people know that sometime in the past it must have started as a gradual progression. But our present era, which began about four and a half thousand years ago, begins with the knowledge already there: the knowledge of the seasons according to the stars and the rise of Sirius. In the Middle East that's what they used to know when the floods were coming from the Nile. So these priests have done hundreds, if not thousands, of years of study to get to that stage of knowledge. There's no doubt about it.

Jackie: "Religious illiteracy is rampant, but to promote it is terrible. Christ said the truth shall set you free, but you are not free to deny the other things he said.

11c also said, I am the way, the truth, and the light." 'I have repeated that on my program. What is the truth? (The letter continues.) "Christ claimed he was God." He never claimed he was God. He never claimed he was God. It came from the Catholic Church. It came from the Nicene Council in 325 A.D. That was the big split; that was the big controversy at that time. Jesus never said he was God.

Alan: He told us to pray to God.

Jackie: Do you know much about the Nicaea Council?

Alan: I know a lot about the word Nicaea. It is a Latinized version of another word; whenever they had councils, they generally gave it that name. You'll find also that under Jehovah Nicaca in the Old Testament, Nicaca (nasi) is very important to the whole conversation here, because when the Jews came out of captivity in Babylon, they had lost their high priest (the Cohen, the family of Aaron, the hereditary priests.) But out with them from Babylon came a new aristocracy, and they formed the Sanhedrin.

The Sanhedrin is actually the Greek word we are given for it. But the Sanhedrin sat in a half-moon council, and that was why they were given that term, Sanhedrin. In the middle of the Sanhedrin was the Grand Master, and they called it the Grand Sanhedrin. The term they used for the Grand Master (sitting right in the middle) was Nasa; you'll find that in your Bible dictionary. Now it could be Nasa or Nasi; it doesn't matter because they interchange the vowels. There are no vowel points in ancient Aramaic. Egyptian or Chaldean for that matter. They put the points where the vowels should be. This term you'll find popping up all down through history' wherever this particular elite has settled. Therefore, when they had their first council, they called it the Council of Nicaea (or Nasa; it's the same word.) In Jehovah Nasa, that's where we're told Moses pulled his banner, which had the serpent around it that he made, the brazen serpent. Now the brazen serpent was a symbol of Isis from Egypt. On either side they had a sort of half- moon shape, and that was the same as the Sanhedrin. It's the same shape you'll see as they sit around in the Great Council of the United Nations; they sit in a half circle, and they are our new high priests. When they moved from Nicaea, they had another one a couple of hundred years later for the papacy in Nice, France, another slight variation in dialect. When they moved from there, and they created the Carolingian Dynasty and the Merovingian Dynasty, these hereditary 'lineages, which became the nobility of the whole of Europe, they created the first mint in France in Nice. They created another one when they moved up into Switzerland, and they called that Nasa, a slight difference again in the word. When they moved up from France into Norway and became Vikings, and then later called themselves simply Normans, and came into Britain, where they landed in Scotland, they called it Nasa, or Ncsa; that's where Inverness is now, in fact (and the locals still call it Nasa.) When the Vikings moved from there and hammered Ireland for three hundred years to get into Ireland, the first place they called it when they got there was Naas, and that's thirty miles south of Dublin.

Jackie: So they are big on symbology. Aren't they?

Alan: You better believe it. Nasa not only means the head, it also means the seat, because we are talking about a genetic strain here of intense selective breeding all down through the ages. Nasa also means new beginnings, and they created a Nasa eventually, another one in Switzerland, and others in places where they had capitals: so Nasa, Nice. Nicaea and the Straits of Nesoyundet (historically Nasse or Nasa) in Norway. Nasa in Scotland and another Naas in Ireland, where they had their bases.

It's a very important symbolic name because it literally meant the head. When you look at the Sanhedrin that sits in this council, in the middle you have the headman, the Nasa, as you call it in Hebrew. If you check your dictionaries, you'll see that mine is an old Bible dictionary. What you'll find down through the millennium if you study the Hebrew and your Old Testament (it's the one thing that makes children yawn at Sunday school, and that's genealogies) is genealogies, genealogies, genealogies. If you change from there and you jump over into the Aegean Sea, near Circecc, you'll find they had the high priesthood running the cult of Tammuz. Every woman on Crete had to become a prostitute of the temple for two weeks out of every year.

Jackie: What do you mean, a prostitute of the temple?

Alan: She had to give herself as a prostitute in the temple of Tammuz. Jackie: To the priest?

Alan: This is the whole thing; you see, the high priesthoods all down through the millennium were the ones who were doing selective breeding. Selective breeding is very important in all religions. Again, you'll see they called it Nazi in Germany because the name was there before Adolph Hitler came along, so was the party. There is no way you can give Nazi to the German Socialist Workers Party. It doesn't work out. No one has ever explained where Nazi comes from or why it was there. But we knew it had to do with race and a purity of race.

Jackie: *It is almost unbelievable that you would get on the air and deny Christ, who is God and the second person of the blessed Trinity. Your friend Alan may know a lot, but for him to assert this falsehood..."

Alan: Well, he basically told us that very few would get it, would get the point. When he came along (and people should understand it). should check their own Bible Dictionary) everybody spoke Aramaic; it tells you the language that Jesus spoke in his own day was Aramaic. The reason they give for it is that the Jews had lost their original Hebrew while in captivity, so they must have been in captivity for an awful long time. When they came out with this brand-new aristocracy, in other words, they had nobility over them who only interbred amongst themselves but made all the laws for the rest of the people, just like they did in Britain and Europe. The version that they were given of the Old Testament, which wasn't pulled together until 280 B.C., was the Septuagint (and you'll find that in your Bible dictionary.) That was the standard version that in Jesus' day was used in the temple, which meant that Jesus must have read Greek because that is what he read from. They did not have a 1 Hebrew version of it. They had never had a complete Hebrew version prior to the Greek version; they only had the Books of Moses or the Scrolls of Moses (the five books.)

So here you have a people coming out of captivity (they were called 1 Hebrew going in, and they were called Jews coming out), and they were ruled by an elite nobility who gave them their laws, with people underneath them who were scribes and Pharisees (a priestly sect), and they told them all their history and everything else they had to do. The only thing that they could read from (and the people being the peasants couldn't read; only the priests, the learned ones, could read) was in Greek. There was a final compilation of the Old Testament, and it wasn't done until after Christ, and once again it was done in Greek, and they tell us that it was written by priests who lived in Egypt. You try and figure that out until you get to the ruins of the temple of Thoth in Egypt. The temple of Thoth had the religions of all the peoples that they ruled: these people were creating their histories for them. It's an amazing thing, but they have dug all this stuff up. They are still digging up more stuff; for example, at Tel al-Almarna in Egypt, they have got a whole city of records, which shines a lot of light on Moses and where the original Hebrews came from. This is in Ages in Chaos by Immanuel Velikovsky, who is Jewish himself, and you will also find it in a fantastic book, The Moses Mystery, by Gary Greenberg, who is president of the Biblical Archaeological Society in New York. It fills in the blanks of these people.

Jackie: What I would love to have are the blanks filled in about where Jesus was. what he was doing during those years, from the time he was Bar Mitzvah until he began his ministry. To me it is insane that all of those years have been left blank for us.

Alan: I think they are left blank for a reason because the sun rose at the 30th degree east and it sets at the 33rd degree, and so that's why we're given these ages. Prior to that, they managed to fit in a story that he was taken to Egypt; in other words, he learned the mysteries is what they are trying to write in there. He certainly did learn the mysteries. But he also was exposing them; he broke every rule that they gave him. He said even to the high priests who came to him and tried to trip him up on theology and his beliefs, "You who call yourselves Jews and are not," because when they came out of Babylon, they had an awful lot of people with them who were Babylonians. These were the people who were the nobility and who again only interbred amongst themselves and who were partners with the Romans. They didn't want any trouble; they were getting their cut, and the Romans were getting their cut. Jesus basically was trying to get the burdens off of the people because they had so many rituals to go through during the course of the day they couldn't get on with their lives.

Jackie: I made a statement, 'I did not come to change the law, but to fulfill it.' Jesus was talking about God's real laws, the laws of creation, and not the laws that had been handed down to these people that were keeping them totally under control.

Alan: If you look at the Old Testament, and if you are able to take away the paranormal language (it's like a bush; you have to cut off all the branches to see what you are really looking at), you're left with a form of extremely selective reproduction from the very beginning of the Old Testament right through it. and all the curses that were to be put on the people according to the high priest that would happen if they went other ways, if they broke the tradition because it was a highly selective breeding process. No one could get married without going to the high priest, and the high priest would give the female a physical examination to see if she was truly a virgin. He would go through her genealogy to make sure she was who she was; he was making sure that she wasn't pregnant already by someone else because they kept strict records of all genetic lines. With the Aegeans, the women were told by the high priests there to prostitute themselves for two weeks out of the year. The whole columns left in the temples of Tammuz are nothing but genealogical lines of those women and their offspring and who they later interbred them with. You get the picture of what was happening there; it was happening in Iraq, Syria, and what we used to call Persia. The same thing was happening all over, and in Egypt too. So what you are left with is an international priesthood that uses the same gods under different names to confuse the people. Nimrod being the Great Confuser. People in one country would never identify the people in the next as having the same religion, and if they did (as the Bible put it) go chasing after "other gods," the big, big taboo, they would be breaking the genealogical lines of this fantastic experiment. That's what it was. You see. Look at The Golden Bough by Frazer.

Jackie: I have the book. I haven't gotten through Plato's The Republic yet, Alan.

Alan: Hurry up because time is running out; we've got about thirty years left. You find that in the genealogical lines in the Aegean Islands they also had the killing of the firstborn. Basically what they did was if the offspring wasn't up to scratch, as Plato would say (and he talked about this too; he believed in the Spartan way), then they would kill off the firstborn. So they lined up all the women who had those inferior offspring, and they would literally have ceremonies every year where they would throw them over the gorge. They were getting rid of what they would call the imperfect ones.

Jackie: That doesn't coincide specifically with the fact that I would be the firstborn.

Alan: I don't know what they did with the women afterwards or where they went from there, but they made it into a sort of ceremony. They did, by the way; if you think that phrenology is a new thing or that it came up prior to Hitler, you have to go back into the past because they took skull measurements and everything back then.

Jackie: To see how large the brain would be?

Alan: All these things. They tested children to see if they responded to movement, to sounds, and so on.

Jackie: Today the gifted children are put into special education classes to dumb them down, using the operant conditioning methods of B. F. Skinner.

Jackie: We will talk about Armand Hammer tomorrow night.

Alan: In the meantime, people can try to get ahold of Armand Hammer: The Untold Story by Steve Weinberg. It is an excellent exposé.

Jackie: Go ahead and talk about Armand Hammer.

Alan: Armand Hammer came in the last century in a wave, an influx from Russia. Along with him came many others; you know the Bronfmans. You know the Bronfmans? I've come in at the same line, and they basically created the illicit booze trade. The Bronfmans came up here to Canada and managed to bribe enough politicians to get prohibition put into the U.S. So once that was done, he started smuggling in booze, and he made his millions out of it. He was supplying other ones who had come in from Russia (they had a whole network in there), including Armand Hammer's father, who had set up pharmaceutical companies, and he was selling booze under the guise of it being medicinal; he called it Ginger Water, and it was about 10 proof. Once they had made their millions off of this whole trade, they simply reversed the flow. They got them to pass prohibition in Canada; it was gone in the states, and they just reversed the flow back up here again. But they made their millions of dollars out of that.

Jackie: So all of these movies we've seen about the bootleggers, they weren't the ones making all of the money?

Alan: Oh no. There were the big boys, there were the Russians, and they were the Jews, mainly the Khazarian Jews (atheistic Jews.) In fact, Armand Hammer went to Columbia University; he was in Pi Sigma Delta, which was the Jewish Masonic group there. He was a millionaire before he left university. So they had legitimate drugs, illicit drugs, real booze, and illicit booze. His father was a good pal of Lenin, and Lenin called him his favorite capitalist. In the 1920s, the Hammer family basically had contracts for importing and exporting from the U.S. to Russia, and they had contracts with Ford and various other multinational companies. All throughout the Soviet era they had that sole right, and they had all the money that came from that import/export business into Russia. Most of the drugs and various medications that were sent to help the Bolsheviks were supplied by the Armand Hammer Company. In that book that I mentioned. Armand Hammer: The Untold Story, his father actually named him Armand because it sounds like arm and hammer, which of course is what you see in the Soviet flag. It was done on purpose.

Jackie: We have a phone call coming in; we'll take the call.

Caller: Hi Jackie. Doug from Illinois. Alan has been very interesting, and I really appreciate you having him on. I was just wondering if you could possibly make available some of the books where he has gotten a lot of this information. He is on a path that I have been on for quite some time, although some of this information is new to me. A lot of it backs up what I have already learned. Also with Armand Hammer, it is kind of interesting that Armand Hammer was actually very good friends with Al Gore Sr.

Alan: Nixon too.

INTERVIEW 6

Jackie: Thanks again for coming, Alan. You have piqued the interest of a lot of our listeners.

Alan: It's a pleasure. I think it's time that shortwave started to look for the answers rather than have people spinning their wheels and chasing their tails. I think there are too many programs deliberately doing that on various shortwave stations now. Everybody has their favorites; they tune in and get a little blurb on the Masons, and everybody says "ooh" and "aah," and they've got a little thrill, but they don't have any answers. You have to get to the root causes of what things really mean. It's not that hard, really.

Jackie: I had a caller last night who asked about NASA. We have to remind our listeners of the connection with these words. Would you do that, Alan?

Alan: Well, sure. It's an odd thing, but one day I was flipping through the Bible dictionary to find out what Sanhedrin meant, because we're told it was a Jewish aristocracy that emerged after they came out of Babylon. The Sanhedrin were the elders and the judges, and they were an elite class. They sat in a shape like the eclipse that you would see on the sun when the moon was going over it, so you have a very pronounced banana shape to it if you like. That is the same shape that they have at the United Nations, where all the high priests are sitting there. When you take the word Sanhedrin, it's the head of the sun. The funny thing is that all the high priests look towards the middle, where the high judge, the Grand Master, sits. The title he's got is the Naasi, but you'll find when you translate words you must go by how they sound because you are taking from various Aramaic and Arabic words, and they are written into English.

This is part of the confusion because if we can understand what tilings means in other languages, we're halfway home because they have confused us all with various meanings and translations. The root cause of all that is supposedly Nimrod, who was the Great Confuser or Divider. Nasa or Naasi (Naasi is how it is pronounced in English.) Where else in the world does the word Naasi pop up? You find that when the Vikings moved into Norway, they created a place called Naasi in the south of Norway and invaded Britain. You also find that when the same Vikings invaded Ireland, they created a Naasi, or a high priest if you like, south of Dublin. It's very funny because when you look at how they got into Dublin and even see the routes they took to create this place or town called Naas. They sailed down a river (I'm looking at this old ancient map of mine here.) They sailed down from the Dublin Bay, and they came down the river they called Lucan, which is Lucias, which is light. Then they named the same river further down the Lysses, which is life, and then the first turn they made they called Salius, or soul, or the sun. Further down they created a place they called the Naas or the Naasi, which was their base. You find the same name in Prussia in two places and one in Germany. Then you find that the Catholic Church created the first royal dynasties to take over Europe, the Carolingian and the Merovingian, and the first place they named their site was again Naasi.

Jackie: What about Nicaea?

Alan: Nicaea is another one. They had the other council later with the royalty and the pope in France in Nice or Nisa. I tried to find the name of NASA, as in a place called Nassau, and they say Now that means new beginnings. So it's almost as if you have a new beginning everywhere with the head of a priesthood if you were to look at it in that way. Another word is Cana or Can because Can is the high priest in Chaldean or Babylonian, and it is Cohen or Cohn in Hebrew. And you find the same names all over Scotland. Can and Cohen both come from the word Cain, as in Cain and Abel.

Jackie: Did you connect that also with Khan, like Genghis Khan?

Alan: Yes, all of these come from the same root source. Even when they found the people who adopted Judaism in the 8th century, the Khazars, when you look at the actual language of the area and the different translations they give you all for one sentence, for example, it could be Ca and then Can or Cain, but because it's a harsh Arabic word, they change it and give it a G: Kagan. But really it's all the same word: Ca is a prefix to the Can or Cain or Gan. That's where our word king comes from too. It's all from the same source.

Jackie: Last night you pointed out the ruler.

Alan: A ruler was basically a cane; the first rulers they used for measurement were also canes. So you have a person who ruled who was a high priest, who also had his measuring stick, which was called a cane. They were also the masters of music and the muses in Egypt; they could enthrall the people through song and so on. All the words for music come from the same root too. Can and even into the Latin eventually, like Cantico or Cana, so all these abilities of rulership of the people, even including music and entertainment, come from the same source.

Jackie: And NASA?

Alan: Well, this is ill because now you are into NASA. Suppose we take the word Naasi, meaning the high priest of the Sanhedrin (the high priest of the high priest.) Where would they be today? Well, the high priests were the keepers of knowledge; they were the scientists of their day, in all ages. Including Germany during the Second World War: the Nazi party was there before Hitler came along, and it was the German Socialist Workers Party (which you can't translate by taking any letters from it to create the word Nazi.) So I have never found out who created the term Nazi for the Germans, but it was there before Hitler. Then, of course, they turned around, and they wiped out the Jews and the Gypsies.

Jackie: What about the Ashkenazi?

Alan: These were a Jewish people who claimed descent from the final dispersion in the Holy Land, as opposed to the Khazarians, who adopted it in the Black Sea area and the Caucasus Mountains.

Jackie: So the Ashkenazi Jews are different from the Khazars?

Alan: Probably genetically along hereditary lines, but the same religion basically. Jackie: But is it possible that the word Nazi came from Ashkenazi?

Alan: I don't know. I really don't know. What is weird is when you look at the people in the U.K. who supported Hitler, and in America, many of them were so-called pillars of the community and the Jewish communities. So what we'll find is an elite who hide amongst the people, claiming to be part of the people, but in reality they are an elite who mix with the elite of every other nation (they're a nobility.)

Jackie: What we've discovered is that the high priests in all ages have used religion and so-called religious law. to keep the people under control, to rule them, to keep them ignorant.

Alan: Absolutely. Literally, when you look at the ancient history, you have to come to the conclusion that the priesthoods in every country were literally an international priesthood, and their function was to keep the peoples apart. Every ancient people had severe laws about mixing with other peoples round about them. 1. They were the worst laws and punishment if you were to follow other gods. You find out that they all had the same procreative exercises at certain times of the year, under the supervision of the priests. If your tribe, for instance, were to mix with the next tribe's ceremony on the same day (right across the Middle East they had the same ceremonies on the same days), then it would mix up the genetic line and they could lose track. They kept terrific records of genealogy for everybody.

Jackie: Now NASA, you mentioned something about Cape Canaveral?

Alan: Take the word cana, and in Chaldean can is priest and cana is the priesthood. If you take the word vcro, as in canavero, it comes from the same Latin root as veritas, which means truth, but vcro means the truth or the true, so you have the true priesthood, and that's what really got me.

Jackie: Last night you mentioned a book from the CFR. Tell our listeners some of what you were telling me that is in that book from 1937.

Alan: It was the international conference of the Royal Institute for International Affairs, which is the parent body of the CFR , and members of the CFR, who are the non-British members.

Jackie: By the way, John Coleman is allegedly a former person from the RIIA What do you know about John Coleman? Alan: Only what he said about himself.

Jackie: I heard him on an audiotape, and he said that they sent him out of England with only the clothes on his back, and he came here to America; now he's exposing a whole lot of stuff. I find that very hard to believe. Isn't the RIIA similar to the CIA?

Alan: It's bigger. It's a chartered thing, which means that it has a royal privilege to exist; it has a charter from the royalty. It's the elite of the elite of what in Britain is called the establishment, and everyone in Britain knows the establishment exists regardless of which Parliament is in power.

Jackie: We've got a call.

Caller: I'm John down here in Lampa. Thank him for taking all the wonderful time and doing the research that you provide your audience. I would like for him to cover the actual dimensions and inner dimensions and parallels of the high priests that he has been talking about for the last week or So how does that tie in with the occult technology (I'm not saying the pyramid is occult technology, but it's on the level of a pyramid,) and what other things besides the pyramids in occult technology have these different nobility families had in their possession over the years that have allowed them to brainwash the masses so easily, where people are so dumbed down, not just by school but by everything in our society? The second question is how does he see the new money system coming about on the world government stage because of the power and influence that these families have?

Alan: I will take the last one first because that's the easier of the two. Money has been a complete con job since before I was born, really. So the amalgamation of the money system is going to make little difference, except we will be a lot poorer because they'll devalue what the supposed value of it is right now. which is rubber. In Britain, for instance, they'll have the Kuro instead of the pound by the year 2001. They will have this Luro all over Europe, and yet people forget already that a pound literally is one pound of copper or two hundred forty pence or twenty shillings of silver; that is already out the window, and it was out the window before this century began, before the First World War. I have a book from the Bank of London. The Whispering Gallery was written by Lord Grey, one of Cecil Rhodes's guys. I was present at an emergency meeting in 1913 before the First War to see if they could cover the expenses of the war. He said, "How much gold do we have in the Bank of England?" Lord Rothschild said. "Well, we don't have any; we never had." It has always been paper money that they have been giving to people for about a hundred and fifty years.

Jackie: So they had all the gold?

Alan: It's away somewhere, but the pretense that they had the gold in the bank in the first place is nothing more than that.

Jackie: I have the charter of the International Monetary Fund and according to their charter whenever the IMF loans money to any country, the share that the United States pays is about twenty-five percent, and of that they demanded a certain percentage of our payment in gold, in return for their nothing.

Alan: Oh yeah, they do ask for gold in return, for sure. Where it goes we don't know. But it's probably in some mine shall well underground.

Jackie: What good is it doing them if it's all tucked away?

Alan: Because they will always keep a gold value along side paper. They simply won't disburse it amongst the people but they will have it or they might use it in another way. Or they might use it in an age to come. When the Rothschilds lived in Germany, we're given a sad story of a father and five poor sons just selling rags. But at the same time this poor rag merchant pulls out a gold coin and shows it to the King of Prussia and the gold coin is a thousand years old and it's in mint condition. They let you know later on in the book, they just slip it in, that they had a bank underneath their cellar; it took six chariots to take the gold away. So these people have been collecting gold for thousands of years, and they're not Jews and they're not Christians, they're everybody at the top (it's the nobility.) They use certain people and hide amongst them and the rest of the people always take the fallout. In fact, I think the people who came out from the Middle East and were called Ashkenazi Jews, were a created culture. I think they were simply shell-shocked people who were released into the area and given an identity by an educated elite called the Sanhedrin. They were a scapegoat and that is why that was written into the Bible after the dispersion and not before. The Old Testament in its entirety did not exist until long after Jesus.

Jackie: Did you get the first part of John's question? I wrote down dimensions, inner dimensions, and nobility. One of the things that amaze me is the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls and then they got their hands on them and that was the end of it.

Alan: Of course Vatican is in on it with them and in fact the Vatican was the only other people to be given a display at one point and nobody else has been allowed to have them.

Jackie: I had read that seven people in the entire world were able to view and study the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Alan: I will tell you what professors today say about the Hebrew language. The Hebrew language was taken from existing languages in the Middle East; those languages being Canaanite, Theonician and also they took it from another place in Babylonian where a Semitic people lived and they simply called it Acadian and they also took it from the original Chaldean. So it literally was a created language from existing languages and they've found the 'root languages in various archeological finds (so it's definitely been created.) You must remember that when the people came out of Babylon after a captivity of only fifty years, we're told they lost their religion, their language, and everything and they spoke Aramaic. They were supposed to have gone into captivity by Nebuchadnezzar in Babylon and then they emerged fifty years later, not as Hebrews but as the people called Jews.

Instead of speaking the Hebrew tongue, only fifty years later they are all speaking Aramaic right into the day of Jesus' time: and that's in every Bible that they spoke Aramaic. They didn't speak Hebrew.

Jackie: So who taught them?

Alan: The Hebrew was taught to them and created later, long after the dispersion. Maimonides, who also was in the touch with the Khazars, was one of the most educated men of his period in the 8th century A.D.. he was the one who put the Hebrew language together. It's a hybrid taken out of about four existing languages. The first written laws of Moses that they had right up into the days of Jesus was in Greek, if you read your Bible dictionaries and so on you'll find that it was in Greek: that was the language of the elite of that day. The only elite who wrote in all languages, especially Greek, didn't live in Greece at that time, they lived in the temples of Egypt. Egypt seemed to be a center for creating religion; they've found many of the stories in Egypt, which were later put into the Old Testament. They've also found many of the same stories from Canaanites, a pre-existing people, and they found them on the island of Cyprus.

Jackie: You have mentioned once that hundreds of books have been left out of the Bible? How do you know' this?

Alan: Yes. This is the most important part. There is a book, The Moses Mystery by Gary Greenberg and that's published in 1996, by Carol Publishing Group. The ISBN number is 1-55972-371-8.

Jackie: So this book was written in 1996. but how do you know it's true?

Alan: Baccus all the older books I've actually read. Gary Greenberg is also the president of the Archeological Society of Biblical Studies in New York City. What I found out when I read a book that was actually much older, w hich was Ages in chaos by Immanuel Velikovsky, was that much of the same material but in more detail is in Velikovsky's book and that was written in | 1952.)

Jackie: We talked a couple of weeks ago and you had just gotten your hands on a very old book and you quoted Ben Franklin, who said. "Those of us who created Protestantism will destroy Catholicism and then we will destroy Protestantism and Christianity will be dead."

Alan: Anybody can get their hands on that: it was from the diaries of Benjamin Franklin.

Jackie: What was the book you were talking about?

Alan: It was written by a group in England called the Manchester Group and they were members of the liberal society in Britain. They included in their membership the Darwin family, they included all the socialists of the day. they had Karl Marx; all these people were members of it. Their whole function was to create the population solely to exist for work or manufacture and they would keep the population just to a certain level and no more. I've got a great book, and everyone should get this one. it's called In the Minds of Men: Darwin and the New World Order by Ian Taylor and that book was published in Toronto, actually. The ISBN number is 9691788-0-8 and it was published in 1984. That goes through the whole history of the Socialist movement, it tells you about Ben Franklin belonging to the British Lunar Society they called it. where the top industrialists all met in secrecy and planned the next century and it gives you all the names of the people involved. But that exposes too the whole nonsense about evolution, intelligence quotients and so on. It also goes completely through what you need to know about Malthus. I was a front man really because when you look at Charles Darwin, his grandfather and great grandfather, Erasmus, already were practicing inbreeding with one another family right down to Darwin's day: and he inbred with this one family, the Wedgewood family. So they were practicing what they preached, if you like. They believed in the passing on of intellect and environmental factors never occurred to them.

Jackie: I read a biography of Darwin and in it he was depicted as a very sickly man. He was plagued with illness throughout his lifetime. You had said that eight of the ten children they had wound up in mental institutions.

Alan: Eight of them died within the first couple of years; they were all malformed. Jackie: From the inbreeding?

Alan: Yes. but even when when his wife died after the tenth one. he then married his mother's sister, which was the Wedgewood family again. Here's a quote from Malthus for anybody who wants to know what he was proposing and what even as late as Winston Churchill and the civil society were all preaching all over Europe. Malthus concluded his recommendation for positive checks amongst the poor. And he said. "We are bound in justice and honor formally to disclaim the right of the poor to support. To this end, I should propose a regulation to be made, declaring that no child born should ever be entitled parish assistance/" (In other words, welfare.) 'The illegitimate infant is. comparatively speaking, of little value to society, as others will immediately supply its place.'" In other words they will always make up the numbers. "All children beyond what would be required to keep up the population to this desired level must necessarily perish, unless room is made for them by the deaths of grown persons/' Thai was Malthus, 1878. You'd be surprised that all the British nobility, the European nobility, the Rothschilds and so on. they were all members of this elite society.

Jackie: How old is this book?

Alan: This is In the Minds of Men: Darwin and the New World Order, which I think was published in 1986. Jackie: No. I mean the one about the Manchester Group.

Alan: That is actually mentioned in In the Minds of Men: Darwin and the New World Order, but you'll also find it in a book called The Legacy of Malthus. and quite a few others. I've got the original one around here somewhere.

Jackie: What about the CFR book from 1937?

Alan: They had their meeting that year in Sydney. Australia. It lists all the members present in the back of the book and it has the president of Canada, and members from the U.S.A., Australia. New Zealand. India, all of the various countries. One of the speeches made in the book, at the beginning of the session, was from a professor in Canada, who said if there is an upcoming war involving Germany in Europe, we propose to support the Bolsheviks. Russia, and Russia must be saved at all costs. Now many people in Britain at the time thought the best thing to do was to let Germany and Russia go at it together because they were both totalitarian. But when you find out that Russia was created by the big businesses in Britain and in the U.S.. which you can read about in Wall Street and the Bolshevik Revolution. It's a thorough expose of all the corporations involved in the setting up of Russia. But the same companies also set up Germany for the Second World War.

Winston Churchill was accused many times (and this is exposed by his personal assistant in his memoirs called The Fringes of Power) because he belonged to the Milner Group, which was the descendants of the Cecil Rhodes Society. The Milner Group took it over and Churchill was one of their boys. Churchill was accused of helping to finance, via the banking community in Switzerland and in Britain and Sweden (the neutral countries) Hitler for the war. That was a big accusation and commonly known prior to the Second World War, because Hitler came to power in 1933 and Germany had been bankrupt since the First World War. Yet within a few years, they could take on the world. That money was all transmitted through Switzerland, and New York and London banks were trading with them all through the war.

Jackie: It's a rich man's war and a poor man's battle, and it's always been that way.

Alan: It's always been the same way. I was watching the news tonight, and Canada has got its troops off in Bosnia and all over the place, too, and the troops here are taking collections of food and money to send to the troops because the troops are so poorly paid and so poorly fed over in Bosnia. The basic salary was sixteen thousand a year. The collections have been taken up here to send food over there because they are so short in supply. Nobody ever asks the question, how come in Bosnia the people can fight for all these years, and yet they are growing nothing at home, who is feeding these people who are doing the fighting? Who is supplying them ammunition and the guns on all sides? I mean they are completely non-supportive as far as feeding themselves goes. They are earning nothing, all they are doing is expending stuff, yet they are never short of food, they are never short of bullets, they are never short of bombs, whether it's the Muslims, the Bosnian or the Serb side; they've all got what they need to keep it going, and nobody asks how come.

59

Jackie: When we were talking last night about Hell and you brought up the Jesuits and Dante's The Divine (comedy. Alan: Basically up until the Middle Ages, about 1000 A.D. the whole idea of a hell was foreign to most of Europe.

Jackie: Most of Europe or most of the world?

Alan: Well most of the world where they controlled it. It wasn't until Dante wrote a play in a book form and it was called The Divine Comedy, and sometimes it's referred to as Dante's Inferno.

Jackie: The word hell appears in the Bible many, many, many times. So what are you saying?

Alan: Well, the thing is hell was literally from the word Gehenna in Aramaic and Gehenna was an area just outside of Israel, it was the rubbish dump of the town. Prior to being the rubbish dump it had been part of the old Nimrod ceremonies where they put their children through the fire.

Jackie: That's right, it was a constantly burning tire where people burned their trash and then they would throw bodies in there if they were travelers, and then the Church began to threaten people that they were supposed to will all their property to the church when they were about to die and have the last rites.

Alan: That's what the Egyptians did as well.

Jackie: This came from the Catholic Church where they were scaring people by saying that if you don't do this you will burn forever in hell and hell was actually the rubbish dump!

Alan: Of course it was. But even then in ancient Israel people followed their gods and they'd also use that same area for putting their children through the fire as they called it. Hell as we know it. the word comes from the word hella comes from a Norwegian or German source and it literally meant going into the ground, hella was the ground.

Jackie: What do we say to help people understand that parts of the Bible are missing?

Alan: We are conditioned since childhood to believe. The Bible is a book and Bible comes from Byblos, which means book. Because it has holy printed on it. doesn't mean it is holy. There is nothing magical about it: there is no magic around that piece of paper.

Jackie: What about Jehovah's Witnesses?

Alan: I think its time we told them what Jehovah means, Jehovah simply means Jove, which is Jupiter, and every person who studies Greek and Latin knows that.

Jackie: fell them where they can find this and research it for their self.

Alan: There is a book taught Montgomery freemasonry so it was a plan that way. These guys could literally hit a plum with a lance. They practiced every day with these things.

Jackie: In other words, he predicted it, and then they planned for his prediction to come about.

Alan: Yes, they would plan it first and then write it into the prediction and then release the book. Two months later, they had Montgomery challenge the king to a friendly joust and he killed him.

62

Then Nostradamus was immediately elevated into the chief advisor of the queen, for that part of France, you see, and that's how it was done.

Jackie: What about Rasputin in Tsarist Russia?

Alan: It's very similar, isn't it? Once again, he wielded tremendous power right at a crucial phase in history when the Bolshevik revolution was going on. He helped disrupt the whole chain of command from the king right down to the...

Jackie: Now, they called him a monk, right? For our listeners who may not know the history, Tsar Nicholas and Alexandra's son Nicholas was a hemophiliac and Rasputin was able to come in and talk to the boy and after a while, just in his presence the boy would stop bleeding. So, he gained tremendous control over Alexandra. He had her ear and then he would tell Alexandra what Nicholas should be doing with the troops and with all the governmental processes and that was the way that it all fell down. Is that correct?

Alan: Yes. basically. He was also a master chemist, so he was taught the sciences. He was well versed in the sciences, s he certainly knew the healing arts as well.

Jackie: But I think he had a hypnotic effect over the boy and we know that the mind is truly the builder as well as the mind is the destroyer. When the boy believed in him all he had to do was walk in the room and the boy would quit bleeding. In the Old Testament, it says. 'If the people shall call on me by my name that I will heal their land. I will hear them and heal their land" and I know that many people believe that we must call our father-creator Yahweh because it's in the Old Testament. Now, are you saying that, from your research that this was written in there?

Alan: Yes. and I'll tell you why. In all of the countries of the Middle East in the ancient times, (and it still persists today in some parts of the world) people believed that if you had the name of the deity then you had power over the deity. The first thing Moses asked the voice at the burning bush was. "What is your name?" God said, "I AM THAT I AM" because, in other words, "You know you're not pulling that one on me!" says God. That's what that really means.

They've found and dug up temples to Apollo, to Jupiter, in Israel. If tourists get off the beaten track and don't go along with the guides they'll come across these temples. I'm amazed at how many Christians can go through Israel and only go on the guided tour and so they come away seeing what they expected to see. But outside of these guided, approved tours there are many pagan temples they don't want you to see, (in fact it's hard to get access because the military keeps you out.) They're told to follow alongside all tourists and anybody who goes missing or starts wandering off is immediately herded back in. I heard a fellow explaining it once: he was an Israeli soldier, and his explanation was that some Christians gel mesmerized by being there and simply wander off. That's how he put it. But in reality there are many different temples from preceding empires of Greece and Rome and they've also dug up lots of artifacts from Egypt as well.

Jackie: We were having a conversation with our engineer and he asked if you would have a little more discussion on the hebrew language. Would you state what his comment or question was and then address it?

Alan: Yes. Basically. I think what he was trying to say was that he does believe that the Hebrew language was there first. Everybody who has studied archeology and linguistics, etymology and all the rest of it has gone through the languages from the very beginning in Sumer. They can trace how language develops and as it spreads along and even to which path it spreads by the changing of the language. It's similar to English spoken in the U.S.A. going back to England and the different accents, dialects, and so on. Then into Scotland there's even more different accents and dialects.

You can trace how a language develops. They can trace it from Sumer right through Mesopotamia into Persia and all of Abyssinia, right through to Egypt. Many of the words there are the same. The ancient Phoenicians were known to have existed before there was a Hebrew nation and the Hebrew nation is supposed to have come into existence around the year 1200 to 1000 B.C. The Phoenicians existed long before that, and the Minoans and Crete and Greece. They know that there were different peoples there and the languages they spoke. You can go to the temples at Cronos in Crete, for instance, and they have dated artifacts that go back thirty-five hundred years. They know which languages came first and which ones eventually developed out of those collective languages and Hebrew is basically a hybrid or the latter product of Phoenician, Egyptian, and a couple of other ones of that particular area, and Chaldean of course, which is Babylonian. Abraham himself came out of Ur of Chaldea.

Jackie: You mentioned a book, The Two Babylons. and you also mentioned The Thirteenth Tribe. So that those of you who want to do your research can do it.

Alan: Yes. The Two Babylons by Alexander Hislop; my copy was first published in 1916. I would like to see if the later editions are the same, because that was an expert book, on all the languages of the area. Many of the languages, or the words, he will tell you what they mean in Chaldean, Babylonian, Hebrew, Phoenician, right through to Britain. So, it's a worthwhile book to get. Arthur Koestler wrote The Thirteenth Tribe, that's K-O-E-S-T-L-E-R. That's written by a fellow who's got no bones to grind because he's a historian and he's Jewish himself so he goes through the origins of the Khazars, which interestingly the initiation ceremony for a new Kagan, which was their king, was to have a silken cord placed around his neck in a noose. The priests below him would make him swear that he would not overstay his rulership by forty years. One of the old initiations of Freemasonry that the Knights Templar used was the same. After they met what they called the Wise Man of the Mountain, (which I think again is the Khazars) they had to hold a silken cord around their neck and swear allegiance. That developed into the necktie, which was only worn by nobility at that time, and we all wear them today and we don't know what it means. That's why they put the knot in front of the Adam and it's called the Adam's apple, you see. Isn't that something?

Jackie: Oh, it's crazy. 'Their symbology!

Alan: Oh yes. because that's what controls you. That was in front of your throat as a sign that you'd taken the oath and of course if you broke that oath you would be killed. So the symbol was right in front, underneath your mouth, basically under your chin; the Adam's apple. Adam is very important in their whole story.

Jackie: What I've gotten out of all of this is that the mysteries are nothing but truth that has been hidden from the people, from all of us.

Alan: What they've done actually is they've given us a lot of truth, but unless you understand the method of reading it. and that's Talmudic, in other words, it's emblematic because we're given the external, even in the Bible, we're given the external things to see. Preachers have lectured on the external for hundreds and hundreds of years, but there literally is a meaning once you understand the language of it. behind the marriage feast and all the rest of it.

Jackie: Well, when we were on the program you mentioned something. It was when Mitterrand died and you said that there was a rose: a single red rose on his coffin. They had a newspaper article that said that that a single red rose was the symbol of International Socialism.

Alan: Which he'd worked all of his life to achieve.

Jackie: Remember when they had the bombing over there in the Middle East at the embassy? Well, there was a woman missing and they were all looking for her but they didn't know what her name was, so they were calling her Rose and they didn't know why they were calling her Rose. Then the next day (we've got the newspaper article about this) on the news we heard that they found the missing woman and her name turned out to be Rose. As far as I was concerned that was their message to each other of what they had done.

Alan: Oh yes, exactly. In fact, there's a book called The Other Side of Deception by an ex-Mossad agent from Canada whose name is Ovstrosky. He's in hiding here right now, but he put the book out since he was recruited in Canada, because the Mossad recruits from communities all over the world. He said that the Israelis knew well in advance that this attack was going to come but had failed to warn the embassy until the very last minute.

Jackie: Remember when TWA 800 went down? There was a whole group of children from a school here in Pennsylvania that was on that plane and they had a memorial service for them. Listen to the arrogance (I don't even know what to call it) of what they did. Each of the family members at this memorial service was given a single red rose. Do you remember that? Then CNN did a special (I've got this on tape also; I forget what it was called but it was about the downing of the TWA 800) and at the very end of the program, they showed a woman standing in the water, about up to her shins with a little boy, holding the little boy's hand and she had a red rose in her hand. The camera panned across the flaming plane as it was going down and then showed a close up of the red rose. At the end of the program that single red rose covered the whole screen.

Alan: It's completely blatant if you understand it. There's no shame in them. No shame at all. In fact, you're being mocked all the time.

Jackie: Mocked. That's exactly what they were doing. They were mocking the families of these children who were killed and then CNN did their big special. You notice, if you watch CNN, or if you watch ('-SPAN when they're having some type of a big shin-dig, with lots of the world leaders, sometimes you'll notice Clinton (or one of the other world leaders will) be standing there with a red rose in his hand. "We wrestle not against flesh and blood but against principalities, against powers against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

Demetrius: I was listening to Alan speak on different historical aspects, secret societies and all that. I enjoy hearing this and also the way he says it, and you mentioned that some people called in, and they were disturbed and they thought that what you were speaking about was heretical.

Jackie: No, because I've made the statement on the air that I am a heretic according to the definition in the dictionary that a heretic is one who questions, especially church dogma, or religious dogma. It is because I question and I do believe we're supposed to question.

Demetrius: Did you say that the Hebrew language came about during the 6th century A.D. or was it B.C.? Alan: We're into the A.D. Maimonides has been given credit for finalizing the language.

Demetrius: A.D. Well, I'm looking in my Bible dictionary and according to this, the Hebrew language was all the way back in the original Genesis time period and that the Aramaic language that the Jews were using in the 6th century B.C. when they...I forgot the particular empire, I haven't got the book right with me now. I try to learn all I can because we are dealing with, just like he you, "Rulers of the darkness of this world," and they're trying to keep us from finding out the deeper secrets, all those things they try to keep hidden from us, so they can retain power and control.

Man: Yes. read The Age of Faith by [Will] Durant, and the section on Maimonides. and read his references (and there's a pile of them there,) they all say the same thing, that Maimonides was given credit (and at the same time actually that they met the Khazars in the 8th century,) for finalizing and completing the Hebrew language; he was the one who put in the J's and put in the vowels where none were there before.

Evelyn: Your series of programs is just tremendous with Alan. Does he have a book?

Alan: No. but I will try and get something out. [Alan now has three books out and is currently editing many more.] Jackie: What do you mean you'll try to get something out?

Alan: Well, what I'm telling you is only the scratching of the surface because I can go right from the beginning and give you another version which is in front of your face when you read the Bible .and that's why the Masons can say to you that they use the Bible.

Evelyn: I wondered if you two would be able to take the final step and agree that Christianity was invented by Constantine and his cohorts and it became the Catholic Church and all of the Protestant churches are based upon that doctrine, they only differ as to the pope and so on. Constantine amalgamated Greek philosophy with the Jewish scriptures and came up with a new religion and they called it Christianity and I think that Christians are not able to make the final step.

Jackie: Okay, well we did quite a bit on this in November. I actually read and quoted from Mystery Babylon Religion and Wall Street and the Bolshevik Revolution. He showed us the way: he told you that they can't have any power over you if people would love one another and give to each other what they don't need. That way government can't start setting up agencies and start controlling you, and don't loan things out: give them away. We've lost all that because of the materialistic culture that they've foisted on us, the Hollywood American dream that everybody's chasing, and it's an elastic dream like the money that just keeps stretching: you never get to where you think you're supposed to go. It is like the movie that is out right now, Hollywoodism. Three-quarters of the way through, the producer said, "We created the American culture, we created the American dream, and it's amazing that the vast majority of the people are imitating what the shadow created." Those were his words.

Jackie: Think about styles that designers decided what we are going to wear.

Alan: Yes, you have a designer life. Plato in The Republic went through every method they used around 450 B.C. and how they controlled the population (and everybody should get it.) Plato is Greek for "pulled out of"; Moses means the same thing. Often today it is translated as "chosen," but literally it means "pulled out of." Plato was one of the nobility in Athens and all the nobility there (hundreds of years prior to him and afterwards). Herodotus and all the philosophers studied with the priests in Egypt. They all mention this, and even Pythagoras, who gave us the Pythagorean theory, was initiated into the mysteries there, and he mentions that in his own writings. But Plato is telling his own people how they run things, and it is more like a book of amusement amongst themselves, to me, because he says at the top you have us, the nobility, and the pure breed. Next to us you have relatives, who are the clergy, the ministerial group who control the people with population. On the other side of us we have the brothers of the clergy who are in charge of the military and government. Then we have the muses and the traveling players who go around the country, and they want people to be good and obedient, so they give them good music.

In the book, he calls on one of the musicians, and he even asks what type of meter is the best to bring out a good soothing mentality for young people, which meant they also knew which type to use if they wanted to get young people to rebel. He goes through this whole scenario, even how to use the fashion industry. He said, "If you want to bring a country down, then you send in the musicians who are trained to attract the children; they will be disobedient to their parents through the words of the music." He said, "We shall write the lyrics." That is exactly how it has always been. When Rome was in its heyday, the corporations had taken over the farmland, and all the peasants came into the city, and they had nothing to eat, so rather than have a rebellion, they created what was called the dole (they created the term the dole, and in Britain they still call unemployment insurance the dole). What they did was they literally threw out bread and wine and gave them street carnivals and circuses. When Margaret Thatcher (the Iron Lady) was in. She came on and said, "You know there is a whole generation of children growing up now who will never see work in their lifetime. Get used to it."

Jackie: What does that mean? In other words, they will be on the dole?

Alan: Yes, and that is exactly what they have done. They were transferring the British industry out of Britain in the 1950s, and it continued right through, and I grew up in that, wondering why on earth, after so-called winning the war, all the industry was leaving the country; they were building up in other countries even then. That was part of the agreement with the United Nations that Britain would de-industrialize, and then Canada and America. That's exactly what they've done. Margaret Thatcher also was on the Man Alive Program (I don't know if you get the series in the U.S., but it's something like 60 Minutes), but they caught her with a boom microphone talking to the Minister of Education. She didn't know that she was being listened to as they were walking along; she said to the Minister of Education, "You know the worst thing we ever gave the poor in this country was education." Now she sits in the House of Lords; she's a Dame, which is the same as a Lord, and she has her ermine coat on with little spots on the fur. (which Nimrod had, by the way; it goes all the way back to Nimrod.) She sits on a pension for life, whether she attends or not, and she's had her knighthood; she's one of the top ones now. These are the people that we are taught to respect and look up to.

Jackie: You were telling me about someplace where they found an ancient battlefield and they were finding bones (I don't remember where it was), and there were people giving blood so that they could find out if any of their ancestors were buried in that ancient battlefield.

Alan: That wasn't me. The story is vaguely familiar, but I don't think that was me. I know they have been doing that with various Middle Eastern gravesites and so on. But these people don't have to do that because they've got their family history going back for hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of years. That is what the tree of life is; that is what they call it. The tree of life is your family tree.

Jackie: Here is something in the Bible, in the Old Testament, that I have always wondered about: when God found that Adam and Eve had eaten of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, he said. "We have to get them out of the garden before they eat of the tree of life, or surely they shall become as us." What do you think that meant?

Alan: I think that the ones that wrote it were the nobility of the day. And they meant what they said, because eating of the fruit means intermixing. Fruit is your offspring, and throughout the Bible they often use that term for it. They have kept their own race (as far as they think, anyway) as pure as can be, and in Charles Gallon Darwin's book from 1952. In The Next Million Years (he was the great-grandson of Darwin, and he had the same cause or duty that they all had), he talks quite specifically about the bloodlines in it. I have the book right here, in fact, and he says, "The inferior species and races of man will have to perish so that the dominant minority may survive." Ticy all use this term 'dominant minority.' That means them, you see.

Jackie: I have never understood this section from the Old Testament: "The sons of God looked down upon the daughters of man, saw that they were fair, and took them to wife, and there were giants in the Earth at that time." Nobody has ever been able to explain that to me.

Alan: It's quite simple because the earliest priesthood lived in caves around Mt. Ararat (there were hundreds of them.) And the first ones who were put there, according to the legends of the people of the area, were in fact degenerates; they didn't work with the people, they would steal, and they were criminals. They were put up in the caves, and the population fed them, and after a period of time because they didn't do any work, but they did a lot of studying; they were the first ones to notice things. I looked down and watched, you see.

They looked down on the people. When you see what a giant means in esoteric language, it simply means a giant among men. a wise man, an intellectual.

Jackie: Those are the ones you told us that used to sit and watch the stars at night. They were the ones who became the priests because they knew the patterns of the seasons.

Alan: Yes, they knew the constellations, the rising of Sirius in the East, and the star of the East on the 19th of July of every year, when we are told that a flood is coming from way down in Africa and traveling upwards, and they could tell the people that within three or four days the floods will come. After the floods the water soaks into the earth, and then you plant. They were given special privileges; IHCV were knowledgeable, but they never shared the knowledge with the people. Mason is the term that was used because they were homosexuals from the beginning, and they took in the widow's son, and in return for the son, the widow was given food et cetera or gold, which they even tunneled out of the mines up there. They were the first ones to get gold, which is why it was made the currency of the whole world eventually. But Mason means that, the son of the mother, the widow's son.

Jackie: They took them up there to teach them to become homosexuals?

Alan: To become part of the brotherhood or the priesthood, they recruited the widow's son. Even when the Templars met the wise man of the mountain, the old man told the knights that most of these people, and he had hundreds, were all adopted by him. He sent them all over as assassins and as advisors. In the Masonic brotherhood, you give up your family, you give up the people of your own country, and you belong to a new family. That's how you can turn around and exterminate your own people if you are told to do it. Each part of the degree system is compartmentalized from the last one, so you are given a new sign and password for every degree you go up to. If the guy above you gives this order, you must obey and put your own judgment aside and obey automatically. But with the giants and the scenes in the pharaoh's tombs, the pharaoh is always portrayed as being about ten times larger than all the other people around him because he was a giant amongst men. He was God. You see, that's what they meant when they said they were giants among men.

Jackie: We have with us Alan from Canada, who will give us a twelve-hour series on the search for reality. Thank you for being here.

Alan: Yes. That's okay. I'm glad to be here.

Jackie: We were talking about sin. What is sin? We've all been led to believe that we're such sinners: that somehow we're not worthy.

Alan: I think a good way to start there is to buy a pretty cheap paperback called History Begins at Sumer by Samuel Noah Kramer (K-R-A-M-E-R, you've got a spin on everything,) published by Doubleday. Anchor Books. This is about the archaeology of the various cities they found in Sumer. We're talking about sin, and it's a good place to start because we find Sumer already under way and very advanced, and yet it's supposed to be one of the earliest places that mankind emerged, and emerged is the word to use in this respect. But they had a few cities, and they had a deity for each city. The deities always lived in the mountains. There are famous hymns in the books; you will see them praying to the divinity and the priesthood of the divinity that comes down from the mountains. These are the first hymns that are recorded in language in our age. Put it that way. You find that they gave these priests such fantastic praise for giving them architecture and for giving them the science to build holdings for sheep, which we'll get into in sin because that's all part of it. The terminology that we use to do with sin comes from as far back as Sumer and probably from a previous age.

Jackie: A previous civilization. Alan: There's no doubt.

Jackie: Because you have said on several occasions that, according to archaeological finds, there have been at least two civilizations before ours that had reached the technology, et cetera, that we have today.

Alan: Yes. The symbology that's used in each age has been a pyramid. That's why you have three pyramids. The ones they say came later and aren't as well made—that's nonsense. The reason they're not so well made is because they're older, and they've been through catastrophes before. The pyramids used to be covered with limestone, and they were very smooth, and according to the Egyptian records, there was a cap put on each pyramid when they were completed, and this would catch the rays of the morning sun. They used the same term you're hearing today with the New Age crystal because in Aramaic and Hebrew, crystal is the same as frost. It means it's like ice: it's the same word as ice and snow. So when the sun hit the sides of the pyramid, it would be gold, and then at the very top it would be brilliant silver, a color from the crystal or frost, and it was silver.

Jackie: You had said that these pyramids were capped at the apex of the civilization, like they plan on doing with the pyramid at Cheops at the millennium, at the turn of the century.

Alan: That's right, it's the same thing. Pyramid in all of the languages of the Middle East is Mcr, which is where we get the word Mary from.

Jackie: Is that M-A-R or M-E-R?

Alan: You can do M-E-I-R. M-E-R, in fact you even have the same word in the language of Sumer. It's always the same word. Mer, Mary, and Mira are mothers.

Jackie: It means mother?

Alan: Even the Talmud means the same thing; the Talmud is built on previous words. Now they use the word Tel, like in Tel Aviv. That means you build on a previous site, and this is Talmud. The Talmud is the previous mother, built on the previous mother. Mut is Arabic for mother; in modern Aramaic.

Jackie: The pyramids mean mother?

Alan: Yeah. What they were based on is that the originals were actually the mountains where the high priests lived. That's why, even in Sumer, they call the place or the home of the high priests the mother. They came out of the womb of the mother, meaning the exit; they had entrances and exits in the mountains, and they lived there; they lived high up in the mountains. In every civilization right through the Middle East, right to Greece. Crete, Cyprus, even into Britain, it's the same story; you get down through legends, based and mixed with history and so on. There are exactly the same stories of priests coming down and mixing with the people.

Jackie: You mentioned that in the Old Testament that one of the puzzling phrases was that the sons of God looked down upon the daughters of man, and they took them to wed, and there were giants in the earth at that time. You said that basically the word giant was symbolic of a giant of a man.

Alan: Yes, even today they'll talk about Einstein being a giant among men. That's how they were pictured. When we found the mummies of different pharaohs, they were just normal-sized people, but on their steles (stele comes from stars). That's why they call the drawings on the walls steles, because the pharaohs and so on are in the stars; they're up there with God. They drew 'the pharaohs as being giants next to the people around and about them.

Jackie: So you don't think they were giants of stature.

Alan: No, but it's the same thing, basically. They were well fed for sure, because they have the best food you can get at all times through the ages, and that's why the nobility of every country, even of Europe, tend to be a bit taller, but they're certainly not giants. But they called these priests giants because of their vastness of knowledge. But when they go into the origin of sin in Egyptian records such as you'll find in Ages in Chaos, Temples, Tombs and Hieroglyphs, and a few other books, you'll find that they talk about a mountain that was to the east of Egypt, and it was called the Mountain of Sin. The Mountain of Sin was also in a wilderness of Sin, which you'll even find in the Bible, of course, because they copied a lot of it from it. When people went into the wilderness of Sin or the desert of Sin, they came to the foot of the mountain, and Sin, again, being a mountain, was literally a female goddess. The people had to commit as a penance (and penance is an important word, which we'll get to later, too); they would have to give their first-born child. The priests would take them in as atonement for their sin. The word today for the same mountain is Sinai, Mount Sinai. You find the same stories in the land of Sumer because the term they gave to one of the god's abilities was The Great Netter. the person who does the netting, who could catch with a net. They've actually got steles from Sumer with the picture of the god netting fish, and the people basically were regarded as you would regard fish. It's all symbolic language, you see. I have heard them called fishermen of men because they would take the brightest out of the waters of life and raise them up into the priesthood, basically. These priests were definitely homosexual, and they picked the young boys. As the young boys grew up, the priests became their mother and their father: that's where you often get the statues of Nimrod, who looks like a female in some and a male in others, but it's supposed to be male in both. He was true to his order that he was now in.

Jackie: We have a call coming in. Shall we take this call? Alan: As long as it's not a theological debate.

Jackie: Yes. because I don't want to interrupt our flow. I'll take your call.

John: Has your guest ever read anything on what is called the trans-tube tunnel system under the pyramids, and is there any type of higher technology that has not at this time come forward dealing with a type of tunnel system that was built a long time ago under this planet that connected the pyramids or any other types of cultures that they traveled in? Dealing with the pyramids, has he come across any archives or any information dealing with the recognition of what is called a Hall of Records buried beneath the Great Pyramid in Egypt?

Jackie: We were talking about sin. You were talking about fishers of men.

Alan: Yes? There is technology. They definitely have tunnels going right through Mount Ararat into the mountain ranges there. They have the same thing in Shin Mu. They also had the mother goddess of Sin, whom they called Shin, in China, and they had the same tunnel system. They're ancient, you know.

Jackie: Do people know about them?

Alan: Yes, they're recorded. The problem is now you can't get in because of the armies. Even Turkey is guarding so much of the mountains around Ararat.

Jackie: But the elite can get in?

Alan: I don't know if you ever saw the machine that dug, or chewed its way through, or melted its way under the English Channel to France three or four years ago. I think it looks like a giant mole; it looks like something from science fiction because it literally shoots laser beams in front, which can melt the rock, which is vitrified and solidified around it. It creates the very Masonic word vault just by passing right through it. It creates an arc.

Jackie: The Masonic word what?

Alan: Again, you have to listen to these things and even go back on them because each one's a subject. Vault, arc, ark, vessel— yes, it's all the same thing, you know. This machine! went through in a very short time: it can go miles in a day. Three years ago in The European there was a full page on this particular tunnel they're going to build (they've actually started it) that will link the west coast of Canada from Bathurst Island right across, past Alaska and into Russia.

Jackie: So the possibility or probability is that this technology existed back then?

Alan: I'm not saying it existed back then to this degree. I think each age has brought them further on. But all of the terminology that we use to do with sailing comes from architecture, which in turn comes from mining; mining is the key. All of the words in architecture come from mining. Your pillars hold up the roof. The roof is in a vault, and a vault is almost an egg shape, and the word cam comes from that in Latin, cam. So you have the Cambrian Mountains in Wales and in England, and it goes on and on and on, this particular word. The arch is the top; the arc holds up all the pile of weight on top of the tunnel, and arch also means secret. It means secret in Latin, through the Greek. So all the terminology we use literally comes from there. When a ship comes into a port, a port is also a door, which is a gate. You have the same thing in a tunnel. You have a gangplank where the crew used to be called a gang. It's the same word that they use in mining. You have a gang of miners, and when the ships came into (I'm talking about thousands of years ago), when the so-called Phoenicians hit the new country, they would put down the gangplank, the gang would come out on the quay, and the quay is also the middle stone of an arc. If you look at a dictionary, it will show you how an arch is formed with different stones, but right in the middle you have the keystone, which is also the nasi, which is also the head.

Jackie: The keystone, which is nasi, and here we are today in Pennsylvania, in the Keystone State.

Alan: Yes. That's right. Also, what they used to do was to meet the people of that country, and they'd introduce coins. Coin is a substitute for barter. It's a third element introduced between two people or parties, and even the word coin is from caina, canha, cohcn, and cana; it all means priest. Wherever you find that word, you'll find it literally is from the high priesthood. The original coin in its form is a coeno. C-O-E-N-O in Greek. It also meant a wedge, so it was a wedge between two parties because they actually cut the coin. Instead of being round, they cut it with a chisel, you see. It would be a wedge shape, so the coeno or coenonia was a wedge between two parties. So these people who came from the sea into a port, a door, a gale, into a country, and down the gangplank would learn how the people functioned; they set up what we still call today customs. You find out the customs of the people. The customs was actually shaped in a five-pointed, five-sided pen, like the pentagon, the middle part of the pentangle. Pen comes from there, as well as sin. You do penance for sin. So the people would be in there. They'd introduce their coenania as their money, and then they would literally net the people and bring them into docks. I selected ones that were brought into dock. Now, a dock is the same word as a pen, actually, and when they go up to a court, into a court system. You go on the witness stand, and that witness stand is, in reality, in legal terms, called a dock. So you are put in the dock.

Jackie: In the pen.

Alan: So those were the ones who were pulled out of. I like, say, a Moses figure or a Plato. It means the same thing, to be pulled out of.

Jackie: What exactly does that mean when you say pulled out of? Alan: Selected.

Jackie: What about this Hall of Records?

Alan: The Hall of Records, again, you're talking Masonic symbology, because the hall is also a vault. Most halls are vaulted. There are arched ceilings on them. A vault also means an arc. It's an arc, and that comes from the way the sun comes up into an arc and then goes down again, like a bow. So a vault, bow, and arc all have the same symbology. It means secret.

Alan: An ark is also a vessel.

Jackie: Is there any such thing as a Hall of Records? (This was John's question.)

Alan: There've been many halls of records. In ancient Egypt they had them at Alexandria. There was one there that was renamed Alexandria; it was already in existence for over eight hundred years before he (Alexander) came along. He had over seven hundred thousand scrolls reported by the different stories from Greece, which you can still read today.

Jackie: Do they still exist?

Alan: They were supposedly, supposedly, burned down in an attack, which is absolute nonsense because everybody who attacked literally belonged to the same priesthood at the top. Alexander, who eventually became the master of Egypt, had his name, for instance, Alexander, pronounced as Halyhandro. Haly is holy, you see. So their word halo comes from the same thing, the halo from the sun, Helios in Greek. So he was a priest, in other words. Alejandro is also Alex or Alejandro, you see. the way it should really be pronounced.

Jackie: There's that word calm again.

Alan: So you have the holy con, and you find that with Constantine.

Jackie: We were talking about sin and about the Mount of Sin, which was Mount Sinai, and you said that they portrayed these priests with nets, and they were fishers of men.

Alan: Yes, and you can actually see that in the steles in that book. History Begins at Sumer. You'll see steles on the walls with the god with the net holding the fish, and you'll see the prayers given to them. The man who pulls out his worthy people, and worthy means worshipful, basically worthy. Worshipful comes from worthy: worthy-ful masters.

Jackie: So, were they pulled out because of their bloodline, because of their lineage? Alan: Eventually they were, eventually.

Jackie: But what did they do with them when they pulled them out?

Alan: They kept the priesthood going in this manner; it was a brotherhood. They could go from generation to generation, and literally what they were doing was inbreeding different (you can't really say races) castes of humanity, or breeding specialized castes, in other words. The word comes up in many forms; we're given stories in mythology about the colors they were looking for and the type they were looking for. like Jason and the Argonauts and chasing the Golden Fleece. These are all symbolic of the tan; the fleece is the tan, and that word comes up all through history: tartan in Scotland. You find tartan in the Bible as well, if you look.

Jackie: Tan? Is that a color?

Alan: Tan means shade: shade of skin. You'll find that word all through history. tan. You are a puritan. I had the pure tan. the pure color that came out on the Mayflower, May being the same ancient, ancient worshipful month of all ancient religions, including Britain. You have the maypole, and when the tribe of the Danoi came in there, it's not what you think. It's not what you would think of as a Hebrew tribe, as the British Israelites would make it out to be . It's a more sinister story: they worshiped the maypole, and that was one of the first things they erected in Britain.

Jackie: Would that have anything to do with the Washington Monument? Alan: Well, that's an obelisk, which is a force.

Jackie: Does the maypole have anything to do with that?

Alan: It's similar, yes. It's a phallic symbol, which means regeneration. It means regeneration, and it's a symbol that by your own will you will make it. by your will.

Jackie: I read in Mystery Babylon that the obelisk is a symbol of an erect phallus. It's sort of like "In your face, God," sort of like giving God the finger.

Alan: Oh, absolutely! I think I've said that, in fact. Yes, it literally is an erect and of course this is all symbology because the people themselves believe that they are God. They created the religions. We're fooled left, right, and center by following what they gave us. You'll see, I'll do as I say. If you read the ancient Sumerian hymns and prayers, you'll see that they're almost identical to the ones that have been used right down through the ages, including in Mohammadism. Buddhism, or any of the -isms or Confucianism in China. That word 'can' comes up everywhere.

Jackie: Did the Old Testament in our Bible have anything to do with it? the psalms and prayers?

Alan: Well, again, you'll find a lot of it; the psalms and prayers are copied right out of Egypt. There's one famous Egyptian prayer where they said that the great god fashioned man out of clay on the potter's wheel, and I remember that's also in Jeremiah 18. I think, and he says to go to the potter's house where the great potter creates on the wheel.

Jackie: You've mentioned this, and I know that in the Catholic religion. I've seen that the pope's hat is like an open fish's mouth. They call it the fisherman's ring, the pope's ring.

Alan: Yes, with the pope also you see in the temple of Jupiter, and in fact most of the temples in ancient Rome, the lowest servant of the temple was actually called poppa. Now that's a term the pope used for centuries; it was poppa, or papa, but the poppa wasn't the top guy. You see. That's the giveaway. He was actually the temple servant. Now when they use pontiffs, and you have pontifex rex, and a pons also means a bridge, he's a bridge to the past, to the ancient archaic past.

82

Jackie: Then in the New Testament Jesus said. "I will make you fishers of men." Now did he say that?

Alan: Well, let's put it this way: I can't answer you, because I mean, I wasn't there. What we do know is that this is a continued theme all through all religions, that terminology of catching fish, training the fish. We even use the phrase today that they used back in Sumer when one of the young boys would run away; that was given as an offering, the one that got away. That's where it literally comes from, the one that got away.

Jackie: You mean they escaped because they were going to be sacrificed?

Alan: They weren't sacrificed; they were taken into the brotherhood and trained. They were trained from an early age.

Jackie: Well, last night, when I mentioned this to you, you gave a quick response; you said Jesus couldn't have said that. Now I know that you don't know. None of us really know. But that was your first, maybe intuitive, response that they are putting words into his mouth.

Alan: Yes. Well, you see, the same thing happened with the pharaoh who was called Akhenaten in Egypt. He turned Egypt upside down in his own day, and he adopted the name Aton; that wasn't his family name. The pharaohs would adopt the names, the family name, and the pharaoh or Cain or king name, and he adopted the name Akhcnaton, which means that all is well with Aton (A-T-O-N or A-D-O-N-E), and he his symbol one god. All gods were one, and his symbol was the sun because everybody recognized the sun bringing life to people. His symbol in the steles in Egypt are all of the streamers coming down, streamers of light, rays. Ahmen-rah means Ahmcn-ray, so you'd have the ray coming down, and each one was ended at the bottom of the streamer holding an ankh, which was the old cross, the symbol of life, whereas all the hundreds of other priesthoods had kept everything secret.

Jackie: But he wasn't worshiping the sun. 1. He was using the sun as...

Alan: A symbol. Everybody understood the symbol, and his symbol was that the streamers coming down with the ankh at the end were available to everyone. He was the only pharaoh who refused to go to war, and he's the only one who's pictured in family scenes with his wife and his children. Eventually, because of that, there was a massive rebellion by the other priesthoods (and this episode is well-documented,) and they also got another group to invade them from the east.

Jackie: But to continue, you said that he told the historians to depict him as he truly looked and not to give him this godly-looking stature.

Alan: That's right. Yes, the rest of them were always portrayed as giants, as you said earlier, with flat stomachs, broad shoulders, and noble—noble is the word. Whereas he told them to picture him as he looked, and he had a potbelly and spindly legs, sort of largish hips, but he was a family man, and you see him playing with the children, playing with the wife. He refused to go to war. He refused to send his armies out to exact tributes from all the commonwealths that they ran at that time.

Jackie: So he was living as a godly person?

Alan: Yes, exactly, but after he was gone the priesthods tried to eradicate his memory, but unfortunately they couldn't do it quite completely, and you had the cult of Aton, which stayed on, and what the priesthods then did was to change the old story of the dying Osiris or Horus and graft it right on, right on, the complete story, onto the new cult of Aton. Even in Hebrew today, Adonai is the word for lord and god.

Jackie: You mean the same word as Aton?

Alan: Yes. That's where it comes from, but it doesn't mean the same thing anymore. So yes, they have definitely used real people down through history who have had followings, but they'll just graft the same dying martyr, who's then resurrected, onto the story. So, when you see that the words that they put into the words of Jesus are also typical of the type of words that they (even the Greek historians were told how to characterize these events) to the leaders of nations that were going out to conquer, would give them great speeches and so on. but then literally put the same words in their mouths, and that still happened up until pretty recently, in fact.

Jackie: You mentioned that the pharaohs in their tombs always had a rod and a staff, and you were going to talk about the use of the words sheep, and pen, and repent, and penance. Would you do that?

Alan: That's right because repent means re, to do again, and pent (and any dictionary will tell you) comes from pen, to pen up. low buildup. or to put in. or shut up, you see. When you had to repent, you were going through a formula where you ended up shutting up. In fact, the lower orders in the ancient priesthoods, when they would be too loose with their mouths, also had to repent to shut up again, because they'd been too loose with their words, but on the other side there literally was a pen where people were put into. They were penned in, and wherever the ancients traveled all over the world to take gold and silver and so on. They would create this pen or dock (it's the same word) next to where they'd landed.

-

Jackie: To pen people up?

Alan: To pen people up. Literally, your customs was a dock, and if you look at a dictionary, dock also means to pen in or enclose, so they did enclose people. Also, they would separate what we call the sheep from the goats; they would pick out the most intelligent and probably the most physically desirable to these guys, and they were drawn out. They were drawn out of the pen, you see. They were the pulled-out ones: they were the fish that were pulled out, and they were initiated into the brotherhoods at a very early age.

Jackie: What about the rod and the staff that the pharaohs had?

Alan: The rod was basically to beat the sheep (meaning the people) when they were not following the rules. The rule again is cane, rules, the ruler. The staff was used to pull them into land. You'd pull them, or pull them out of the rest of the sheep: you'd pull out the ones you'd picked with your staff, the hook on the end of your staff. That word in Egyptian is solocam; it's amazing how many words you get from cam.

Jackie: Well, you said they called the sheep the followers, and today we even call ourselves that.

Alan: We do. You'll even see in the prayers at Sumer that the people call themselves sheep, too. the sheep of the god of the mountain; they also even say it. They couldn't help build pens themselves. The gods or the priesthood built the pens for them and gave them tools. Now that's the same story, of course, they put into Cain, that Cain himself was a rebel; he went off. supposedly creating a tribe. It's all symbology, but he was also the master of metals, as you'll find in your Bible concordances or dictionaries: master of metal.

Jackie: Once again in the New Testament Jesus calls himself our shepherd, and so we are his sheep, so to speak.

Alan: Yes. A sheep, as you know, doesn't stampede; when they're in a corner, they simply quiver and shake, and it's hard to get them to go in the right direction. But they're easily led, and they follow.' The priesthood (you'll see the statues in Sumer, for instance): the priests are naked to the waist, and from the waist down they wear the sheepskin, the same as the Masons wear on the front of them today; they use actual sheepskin as a short kilt.

Jackie: Just a thought. Is it possible that Jesus was using their own words with different meanings?

I feel like I am trying to hold on to something that may not be true, and those questions just come into my mind.

Alan: Yes. But it's obvious to me that the words have been...the same thing happened to him as happened to Akhenaten. Once he was out on the road, they grafted the same story of Adonis. Through the cult of Adonis we're given the story that Adonis was gored in his side by a boar; his mother, his mare, wept for him, and all the women cried, and then he was resurrected again on the third day.

Jackie: Aton or Ahken?

Alan: Akhenaten. Ahken is simply a prefix meaning in Egyptian, all is well. All is well with Atone.

Jackie: Akhenaten. He's the one you're talking about, that they wove the same story around him. So, hopefully Jesus' message to us would not be lost to the people at that time and hopefully carried through the ages that God is within all of us. We are all children of God. Some of the things he said, I think, were his own words; it feels like they've left some truth in there.

Alan: They have because, you see, you must put truth in to tell a big lie.

Alan: Akhenaton, as I say, had the image of the sun with the streamers coming down with the ankh, or the cross, at the end of each one, and it was available for anyone to take, you see. That's the difference because all the other priesthoods that existed just prior to him kept everything secret, and therefore it was only for the elite.

Jackie: Only for the elite, and we're discovering that the mysteries are nothing; I mean, they are everything because it's ancient knowledge that has been kept from the people—the truth. So it is everything, but really, to me, it is such a relief to know that that's all that the mysteries are because that knowledge is there for all of us.

Alan: It's there for all of us.

Jackie: But we have to have an eye to see. We have to have an ear to hear, and we have to have the desire to know the truth within our hearts.

Alan: I think you said it: it's a desire to know, the desire. It's a strong desire, and if you turn off the TV and sit and think about it, then you will start finding reality. I mean, we're being conned right up to this minute; conned.

Jackie: I think Demetrius is calling.

Demetrius: I've got so much to say, and the more you talk and the more I listen to more of this, the more questions I have. When I was listening to him talking about the different esoteric lessons or things that the Egyptians have in a philosophy. I can see more of what the Bible says—that Christ and the promises about him in the Old Testament were shadows of things to come, which was him—but I wanted to ask if you’ve ever heard of this book by Elisabeth Clare Prophet, The Forbidden Mysteries of Enoch: Fallen Angels and the Origins of Evil? ‘

Alan: Enoch is basically the same story as you’ll find in one of the Egyptian stories. Look up Imhotep. Imhotep was the wise man who supposedly gave them the ability to build in Egypt. It’s the same story as Enoch.

PART I INTERVIEW 10

Jackie: I love we are going through all of these traditions and rituals, the Celebration of Lights.

I love putting lights up all over the house at Christmas time; I just love decorating the house and wrapping presents and listening to Christmas carols. Some of the carols are so beautiful. Maybe it’s a very appropriate time of the year that we’re doing this series. What were you saying about the celebration of lights?

Alan: Yes, in Northern Egypt there was a place called Suis. Often it’s spelled S-U-I-S, and that was the name of the winter festival for Osiris: the people used to come on a pilgrimage to the north, and the festival was led by monks or priests; it was called the festival of lights. You had different processions going around the temple, so the whole place was lit up, and they had their own hymns that they sang to Osiris, basically a mid-winter sort of festival; it was at about this time The name Suis was even stuck into the movie Highlander II. They even had the people being cast down from the planet Zeiss to the fore, where they had superhuman powers and had to finish this eternal battle.

So basically, they tell us the same story of Satan and Cain and Apollion; it’s all the same story of being cast down, and they’ve even used the terminology for Suis (and of course Suis, when the nobility lived in Greece and came to Egypt for instruction for hundreds of years, they transferred the name Suis to Greece, and it became Zeus, so it’s the same name transferred down and down and down to the present day.) We watch these things as fiction, and yet the natures of these movies are also steeped with the ancient, not history, but the reality of the past because we're given stories. They have history and archives; these places where history is stored are called archives. In an arc (ark), they're stored in a secret spot.

Jackie: How do you know so much?

Alan: [Laughs] I think basically that everything I've been told since I was a kid fell into place, but in a different perspective. When I'd go to school, you were a very good boy if you repeated after the teacher A-B-C-D, and if you learned your history from your teacher, who has learned it in the same model, who is no wiser than you. Everybody down through the ages keeps repeating the same things, and if you're a good little boy, you get a gold star on the report card, and if you've got a B*, you get a silver star, and all this kind of thing. But basically it's because we don't know the meanings of words. We purposely haven't been told them, and languages have been purposely changed (even English has had four major changes in a thousand years) to camouflage, because if you knew the old languages, even of your own tongue, you would start to connect different things, and of course they'd have none of that. Oxford, which has been the center for all language change for the English-speaking people, has been doing this for a thousand years, and they literally create whatever language for English is appropriate to the period.

Jackie: What about the Oxford Press?

Alan: The Oxford Press takes their orders primarily from All Souls College within Oxford. Oxford is basically a whole town of colleges, different colleges, and in the center is All Souls College, where Cecil Rhodes went; that's where Milner and many of his crew went, and even Lawrence of Arabia, when they created the Young Turks to start the first World War in the Middle East, and they created the Young Italians, and that was led by Mazzini. Lawrence of Arabia was from All Souls; he mentioned it in his book called The Seven Pillars of Wisdom. It's very Masonic, very occult, and hidden, but if you understand the language, you'll see. He was a homosexual, tall, blond, blue-eyed: he fitted in very well with the Thai crew; he even talks about it himself in his book. But his job was to go out and foment revolutions all over the Middle East, and at the same time Britain would be fighting those countries eventually, as happened in the First World War. They went to war with Turkey: he had his own young Turks creating chaos within Turkey itself, or the Ottoman Empire, as they called it then.

So, All Souls College is the key to it. And it isn't simply a place where you graduate from. You keep going back and back and back all through your life. It's the core of everything that's happened in the last thousand years in the world, and you can actually trace it from its founding. It was founded by a Scottish princess about 1000 A.D., and they even called it Oxford because that was the sign of the sun going over the River Thames in that area. The ox was fording; it was arcing. A ford is also another crossing. It's a Masonic term. They actually still call it today, and you can find this in most books if you look up Oxford: that the river Thames (which runs through Oxford), right there where it runs through the town, is actually called the Isis. So you have Osiris going over Isis, in reality. Yet when it was founded, it was staffed by the top Catholic priests in Europe, and they were in collusion with all the other universities that they founded at the same time in Paris and Germany and all over. These priests, these professors who were also priests, traveled from one university to the other and did courses.

Jackie: You mentioned that Scotland was very much in the forefront. You mentioned Highlander. the movies, not the series, but the movies: you were giving some of the symbology.

Alan: Yes. You see, in about the 1700s, they made another shift, another paradigm shift; they love these paradigm shifts. Paradigm literally means that you turn everything over. So you had the Middle Ages...

Jackie: A new paradigm—they talk about that today with our education.

Alan: Sure, and you had The Third Wave and all this kind of stuff, which is all understood by the people at the top. Scotland has many place names from the Middle East, and as far back as I've ever gone, you have the same ancient names. Now some of them are from Egypt, some of them came down from Phoenicia, and some of them are from what's now called the Holy Land. But it's a vast array from that whole region. They have a range of mountains called the Ochil Hills, and in the middle the highest mountain is called Dumyat. Now in Egypt, you have in the north, near Sais in fact, the same mountain range, called the Oclcs Mountains, and the highest one is called Dumyat. Now this is impossible to be a coincidence, and yet as far back in history as I can go. I can't find whoever named it or when; it always was called that. So whenever the people who are now called Scots moved in. They took this knowledge with them, and they named places after it. You have the Island of Lewis, which is just Levi, you see. You have the Hebrides, which is the Inner Hebrides, and you have Kintyre (Mull of Kintyre,) where Paul McCartney now lives.

Now up until the beginning of this century, Kintyre was called Cain and Lyre, Tyre from Phoenicia, and the name Cain was spelled as C-A-I-N. Now they've changed it to K-A-I-N and L-Y-R-E to confuse it, and that was only done this century.

Jackie: When you mentioned Paul McCartney, according to The Committee of Three Unmired, by John Coleman, the Beatles were brought over here to begin the fast change.

Alan: Yes. They were one of them. They actually were designed to get more of the middle-class kids, especially. Jackie: Yes. Did they know it?

Alan: Oh, yes, absolutely. They never wrote one song of their own. Jackie: That's what John Coleman said in his book.

Alan: Paul McCartney still admits that he can't write a note of music, and none of them could, and if you listen to the songs, you have these kids writing songs like Yesterday and so on. Now these are songs that a middle-aged guy would write. Of course, that's exactly who did it. He was a friend of the Queen; he was a classical orchestra composer. He held the rights, by the way. The Beatles never held the rights to the songs; the composer held them right up until Michael Jackson bought them a few years back.

Jackie: Remember the song Imagine? One world—imagine there are no borders, no countries.

Alan: Yes. That was Lennon. Of course. Paul McCartney got his knighthood; he's now Sir Paul McCartney. Sir, after the star Sirius. And you know he's only one of many because the whole 60s was purpose-made for the paradigm shift.

Jackie: You mentioned the tape that you wanted me to get from Leonard...?

Alan: Cohen. Leonard Cohen, the priest of the lion. The album is called The Future. It's full of imagery of...and it's mocking too, because they love to mock us. And we always pay to get mocked; that's what amazes me.

Jackie: You said that when we light up our houses at Christmas time, they laugh at us.

Alan: Oh yes, even for entertainment we go pay to get scared, thrilled, or whatever, and they profit off it, and they laugh all the way to the bank. They're laughing because you don't get what they're really telling you.

Jackie: Well, tell us briefly about Leonard Cohen.

Alan: Leonard Cohen. He was born in Canada, and Cohen again is, of course, a common enough name, but Coen is the Jewish name for priest. Leonard is just the lion. From the lion, he sang a whole range of songs in the late 1960s and into the 70s: Suzanne and others are full of ancient mystery themes and religious themes all through them.

Jackie: Does he write his own songs?

Alan: I think from the accolades he gets, he must have, because I've seen talk show hosts generally not scared of anybody literally almost groveling when they get this high priest on their show, and when he doesn't want to answer a question, he just says, 'I'm not going to answer,' and they blush and turn colors, and they are very sorry and grovel, grovel. So. I'm sure he does write his own songs. He's well steeped in the meanings of what has been and what's to come.

Jackie: So you told me that there were songs in this album, The Future, and that probably we'll be able to recognize some of the symbology since you've been clueing us in here. Then you mentioned Mickey Mouse; I know I'm jumping all over the place...

Alan: Yes. Mickey Mouse literally was a little mouse, a little character in the beginning that developed into the little magician with his little wise man's hat on. with the signs of the moon and the stars.

Jackie: Yes, and his wand.

Alan: He has the wand from holly wood, and holly wood is the traditional wood that the so-called Caliphs used in Britain. They had the staff initially of the Hollywood, which literally means the holy wood.

Jackie: In other words, they used wood of the holly tree?

Alan: Yes. It was the holy wood. Holly is the Old English name, before Middle English, which. Middle English is King James' type of language. In the old language, holly was holy: that was how they pronounced holy back then, and they gave the name to the holly tree when they came in because it still bloomed from the sun even in the mid-winter. It was an evergreen. They created the staff out of the holly wood, and eventually it's shortened until they have a short version. We even see sergeants earning them under their arms by tradition. That's where that came from, the little wand, a rod, too. It's a rod that you hit people with, like the pharaohs did.

Jackie: I found it interesting that one of the symbols of Christmas, or this period of time, is the holly leaf and the berries, the holly wreath.

Alan: Yes. One of the songs they always sing in Britain and in Canada is The Holly and the Ivy, because the ivy again was a magical symbol of vining round a tree, and you have the two symbols in your congress, a pillar on each side of the speaker. Then you have the half moon, or the nasi, going around towards the speaker where all the listeners sit. They've got two pillars on each side of the speaker with the vine going around it. It's the same symbology because a tree, when they came into Britain, they literally affiliated with a column or a post or a pillar. It's all architectural terminology, and the Romans gave the name to these priests, and dryad literally means trees, from dryad, from the ancient Anglo-Saxon. So they called them the people of the dryads, the trees.

Jackie: You mentioned the Beast 666 and Aleister Crowley.

Alan: Oh yes. Aleister Crowley was a top Freemason in the Scottish Rite and the Grand Order of England, and he was also a top Freemason within the French version of the same thing, the Grand Orient de France.

Jackie: When we were talking about Christmas and the holly berry, did you quote something he had said, because I wrote down Beast 666: is that a book he wrote?

Alan: He wrote a book. He called himself the Beast 666. He had 666 tattooed on his forehead, on his bald head. 1. He himself mocked it because they don't believe in the beast as such, you see.

Jackie: In the Bible, in Revelations, it says that it shall be the number of man.

Alan: I have the number of his name. In Chaldean and in Hebrew, for every letter in the alphabet, you have a number. So, if you simply use that and then comes along, if you want to play games, you can just go through, 'Could it be so-and-so?' You look down the alphabet and pick the number. In fact, the Chaldeans were used by all the nations around about them as decipherers because they would write letters and numbers, each number representing a letter, and they'd have another Chaldean where they were going who would decipher it. So if it falls into enemy hands, they couldn't read it. It was in numbers. So that came into the Hebrew language through the Talmud, and that's that.

Jackie: What did 666 mean?

Alan: I haven't looked it up; I haven't the key to it.

Jackie: I took you off the conversation about The Highlander

Alan: Oh, yes. The Highlander was interesting because the first movie begins on the west coast of Scotland, where you have an inlet from the sea and supposedly the first castle built just off the mainland by a few hundred yards, and you've got a bridge going across to the mainland. It's a stone bridge, and it's a kept-up place; it's called Hilean Dorian Castle.

Jackie: Is that a real place?

Alan: Oh yes. That's where the Lord of the Isles, as they called him, came into Scotland. The movie starts off there, and then through various means he finds out that he's immortal; he can't be killed. It's symbology, really. He can't be killed; in reality the line simply lives on through your offspring. But in the movie they did take the heads their opponent, another immortal (by taking the head.) The Gaels, when they came all the way through Europe and then into Britain, had what they called the Cult of the Head and the Skull: they would have the flesh taken off the skull, then they would have alcoves cut out of stone pillars, and they would put these skulls in them, so they revered the skulls of their ancestors.

But, if you can jump from there, we can go back into Sumer, because the Sumerians did the same thing. They actually have dug up lots of skulls where they actually even put on clay over the face of the skull to reshape how the relative had looked. So they had this fascination, which when you know the whole story you see the reason (was that) it wasn't so much a worship of just the skulls: people were literally bred from the beginning, and they were very proud of the features they were given through inbreeding. In fact, one of the Sumerians's prayers, in a place they called Enlil (they're called the people of Enlil), was in this little town in Sumeria, they said. "Thank you for making us the dark-haired people." or the black-headed people, meaning the dark hair, to differentiate them from other people round about them, by giving them white skin: that's part of the prayer.

So when we jump from there to yesterday's talk, where we actually talk about how these people moved out in ships and used the same techniques, creating a pen wherever they went, as they're docking at the quay and tying up to the capstone, these are all Masonic terminologies again.

They would bring the people into the customs, and they would be penned in, and from there they were actually selected, or pulled out. So, people definitely have been bred for their features, which were very, very important, even to the Sumerians.

Jackie: Well, they don't look very nice, for example, Queen Elizabeth. I don't mean to be derogatory, but she looks kind of like a horse.

Alan: Her daughter's worse.

Jackie: Well, that's what I'm saying, for their features. I don't find many of them very attractive at all.

Alan: Well, you know. I've heard the saying that a master tends to look like his pet. I think Princess Anne, because she is horse- crazy, begins to look like one when she smiles, you know. They've been so inbred that their features are...

Jackie: They're losing it big time. They're going to have to get some new blood, aren't they? The blood of the peasants? Alan: That's also called new life. Life is in the blood.

Jackie: Anyway, getting back to the movie, you went into the second movie. Highlander II.

Alan: Yeah, well, that's when they changed, or they give you more of the beginning of the story to find out how they were immortal in the first place. They use the expression; at least they used the excuse that they had been cast down from a planet called Zeiss because they had been rebels, and of course when you watch the movie you don't understand this. You enjoy the movie, and you think these are really good guys, but then you see it from another point of view. They're cast down to Earth to carry on their eternal battle here towards the Great Work, which is the finale until there's only one main branch of these people left, one line.

Jackie: That's their plan, right?

Alan: Basically. You see their plan in many, many movies. I'll give you an example of how we have the wool pulled over our eyes, right? Here's a very good example. People love to be fascinated, and after they've been fascinated, they'll actually die for what they believe, and yet you can educate somebody, and once you've educated them, they won't go and die for it. But they will go and die for what they believe. So there's knowledge—knowledge versus belief.

Jackie: The truth will set you free.

Alan: Yes. We find this all through history, and this crew, who survived two previous catastrophes, are well aware of man and his psychology. They have every anthropology book written today, and there are thousands of them studying man, and I'm sure they have many more from the past. But anyway, here's an example with Art Bell; he's everybody's favorite, he's mysterious, he gets everybody's hackles up, and they can go "ooh" and "aah." I've listened to about two or three of his shows, and people phone in and take his lead, and I'm sure if he said there's a UFO landing right now. People would literally be jumping outside to see if they can see it. That's how he can literally hypnotize them into that stage.

Jackie: We talked about this before, not Art Bell specifically, but anybody today, with the controlled media, who is syndicated on 400 or better AM and FM programs...

Alan: ...and the internet and all the rest of them...

Jackie: We had better know that they're not saying anything that the rulers don't want them to say. I hope I don't get sued for that. I didn't mention any names.

Alan: You can't be sued.

Jackie: I mean, look at James Dobson.

Alan: Oh, I know, I know. He's teaching humanism. Jackie: So, go back to where you were.

Alan: The usual techniques that are used. It's like Roswell. Out of nowhere come reporters saying something crashed at Roswell, and the government is investigating. The government has a spokesman that makes a few comments. They affirm it, and then they deny it. Now this is a typical technique because once they've admitted something, they've got you. You're hooked. You're even more hooked; it's the final tug on the fishing line when they go and deny it. They must be hiding something, right? That's the technique that's used. There was a space telescope going around Mars a few months ago. If you listen carefully, you'll see the technique, and you'll see how everybody is made a fool of. The thing is going around Mars, and out come these photographs (suddenly they've got pictures of the moon before and the pyramids and all this nonsense). The face—there's a man in the moon —and then you have the same thing on Mars, again, out of nowhere, right? Then you have the usual thing. NASA won't confirm it or deny it. Then out comes the famous spokesman, with the experts coming on, and every one of these UFO experts are ufologists, and they're sort of government approved, and they've all got big letters behind their names, and they sound very important, and they speak a lot of gobbledygook. They get all these callers from all over the world hooked on them and phoning in, and they've done it over nothing. Here's the story now. Here is the story. I'll tell you the story, and I'll tell you one that is thousands of years old. The thing is going around Mars; the pictures came out, and the site on Mars where it came out was Cydonia, and Art Bell said,

Why don't they go in for a better look? Now they had this nonsense all over the tabloids.

Jackie: Hey, they even had a press conference in Washington, DC.

Alan: Well here, listen to this now. because nobody has pointed this out. So, at the same time that this happened. Art Bell was saying, 'Is there anybody from Phoenix?' He says, "Anybody from Phoenix, phone in because I hear there are UFOs all over Phoenix." Now, listen to this: in Phoenicia, where the word Phoenix comes from, the capitals—they had two capitals—one was called Tyre, and the other one was called Sidon, as in Cydonia. So, they had this thousands of years ago. And he ties it in, and he gets UFOs all over Phoenix from this place on Mars that's called Cydonia. I mean, it's a big, big joke. He knew it was a joke because he must know; sure, he's all over the Middle East. He must know that one of the capitals of Phoenicia was Cydonia, or Sidon. So, there's the whole world.

being fooled, literally, because they don't know; they don't know that that was one of the main places in Phoenicia. Jackie: Well, the thing is that people want to know, Alan.

Alan: They want to believe, not to know.

Jackie: Well, they want to believe more than know. Remember when they had the press conference about the Mars rock?

Alan: Oh yes. Well, read the book, which really exposes all of the Mars rocks (they've had them going back 150 years, by the way). with the same story.) This probably shows that life originated on Mars. In the book called In the Minds of Men: Darwin and the New World Order, by I'm Taylor. He documents all this stuff going back a hundred and fifty years, and they're all hoaxes, by the way.

Jackie: Well. I have a videotape of the guy that was doing the press conference. At least he was involved in this thing with Art Bell. I have a videotape of him speaking* before the United Nations.

Alan: Yes, yes, yes. Oh yes. I mean, I think it was Goebbels who said when you're going to tell a lie. Tell a big one. That's what they've always done and the more experts they pull out in front of the people, (it's the people who have to be convinced) the more experts they pull out, who talk nonsense to them, you don't understand what they're talking about.

Jackie: I've noticed this with the United Nations. I've got a lot of their documents and books, right from them. They talk about their groups of experts. They call them experts, and we believe they're experts.

Alan: Yeah, that's what Bertrand Russell says. "We shall create a world run by experts until a mother won't even know how to change her child's diaper without an expert."

Jackie: That's right. When we were talking about The Highlander the other night, you happened to mention Star Trek. Well, I was a Trekkie; it was all make-believe, but I was really loving making believe with Captain James T. Kirk. I remember making a statement when I saw the movie Alien. I sat there criticizing the captain of this ship because the people kept leaving and getting picked off, and I said, "Captain Kirk would never let them do that!" and I always said that if I ever went on a spaceship, he'd have to be the captain.

Alan: Yes. Spock is the perfect man, which they're altering. Vulcan was the name of a god. Again, who was Casi down? (That's another version of Satan or Cain, actually, who has become a master and taught all of the people on Llarth the sciences of metalworking and medicine, et cetera.) And the planet, or the god, was called the Vulcan. Therefore, they gave this perfect man who was like the scientists because the perfect man had little or no emotion.

Jackie: Right, he wasn't quite perfect because he wasn't full Vulcan, and that was his appeal, because every now and then he'd smile and he showed some emotion, but you mentioned James T. Kirk. J. T. K...

Alan: It's Knights of the Temple of Jerusalem.

Jackie: If you say it backwards, JTK. James T. Kirk, knights of the Temple of Jerusalem. So what was Star I about, just more symbology?

Alan: No, no. The first series was to get kids hooked on it and also to get us to accept what eventually will come down the road, which of course will be people going into space, but again, like in every religion, it's only the chosen or the pulled-out ones who will go. The rest, in reality, like every religion again, will perish. That's been the plan. You can read H.G. Wells, who was another member of the club of Madame Blavatsky, which is Theosophy. He wrote over twenty books of non-fiction (only a few were fiction,) and he wrote out fiction to try and get the points across to people that in the end they'll drive humanity so fast to produce, but to produce special things, which eventually will be a craft that would enable them to go into space to search out new homes.

In ancient times in Sumeria. Babylon and Egypt knew by thousands of years of observation that eventually, you see, stars do eventually blink out. A star is a sun. We go around the sun. And one day this sun simply won't be shining anymore.

Jackie: So it's a given that their whole realm of consciousness is based on the physical. Alan: Only theirs, too.

Jackie: So, we talk about the mysteries, the knowledge that has been kept from the people. I don't get it that these people really know.

Alan: Oh, they know.

Jackie: But how? They don't know! Or else they would know that physical existence is illusionary.

Alan: Yes, but it's also important, or it wouldn't be happening. All religions have tended to make you think, "I'm saved," which is a big lie because you won't be. You'll be left behind.

Jackie: Well, no. Saved, that means we get to go to heaven when we die.

Alan: I'm the origin of heaven; if you take Holland, you've got Heuven; if you take Germany, you've got Hafen; if you take Gaelic, you've got Hafen again. Heaven is a haven; that's the old term for haven, and a sailor looks for a safe haven. When these gods, these priests, these special people went up to their mountains, where they lived in tunnels, you see, portals, or gates, they went up into heaven "and many will come but few will be chosen." In the ancient times, when they wanted to cull the population, they simply didn't tell them they knew the Hood was going to occur, and the next morning the people down below were simply gone.

It'll happen again but in a different fashion.

Jackie: But. It isn't important. I hear what you're saying—it's important, or it wouldn't be happening, but...

Alan: The physical wouldn't be happening if it wasn't important.

Jackie: Well, I understand that. But given that we are spiritual beings inhabiting physical bodies, if they knew the truth, they would know that, and Steve Jacobson said this: that the mind is the gateway to the soul, and so if they can keep people in the dark and keep people believing that everything that's important—that the only existence is this physical existence—then they can get control of your mind, where you can't think, and you can't reason. You can lose your way.

Alan: You can lose perhaps your existence in a way. The mind can become self-destructive. You can destroy your own spirit. Jackie: That's what I was wondering. Is that possible?

Alan: It's very possible.

Jackie: That our spirits could actually be destroyed. My belief is that what God creates is eternal, and if God created us as spiritual beings, and we are spiritual beings, then that spirit could never be extinct or destroyed.

Alan: Again, all we can take is what we do know, and what we do know is that we do exist. We do know that every person owes it all to their ancestors from way back, and perhaps you're letting everybody who went before you down by not using your life to expose this, and for the ones to come.

Jackie: Expose it for what?

Alan: Because there has to be a reason for being here in the first place, apart from simply working your butt off to get an elastic dollar. There has to be a reason. I think the reason is, at least, at the very least, to gain consciousness. It's like coming out from under the road. It's what they do. It's like coming through a manhole cover and into the light. They are keeping that from everybody else, you see.

Jackie: They're keeping Jesus' message from everybody.

Alan: Well, they use it. They use it. What they want you to believe is that you're saved; that's fine. Pacify the people. They can sit back, and they'll think they're saved, and when you read the Bible from their point of view, because that's why they still have a Bible in all Masonic groups and meetings and all that, you see a different story. You see a different story. You see, they're the ones, and of course, even down through Freemasonry, they themselves are on a need-to-know basis, so even most of them are going to get the chop eventually as well, you know.

Jackie: There's a movie out called The Devil's Advocate. Alan: The Devil's Advocate.

Jackie: Al Pacino and Keanu Reeves. It's a story about someone who goes to work as a lawyer and finds out that he's working for the devil. At the end of the movie, he says that the devil makes a pitch about why you should follow him, and he goes on to talk about how mean God is and that he sits up there and he points his finger and you get dead or you get blind. You know that he's here to help us to get everything we want; there are many people who question God because God seems so cruel; that's how they've made God out to be: a monster who would tell Abraham, who waited a hundred years to have his first child, to take him up there on the mountain and kill him, and then Abraham goes up to kill his son, and then God says, You don't have to do it. I just wanted to see if you would. If I believed that story, I would not want anything to do with that god. But I knew that wasn't true. When I read it, I was fifteen years old. I said, No, because that is putting human features and nature, human characteristics.

Alan: It's an Oriental tyrant you're seeing.

Jackie: I'm going to watch that movie, and I thought you might be interested in seeing it. We have got to get off this merry-go-round and...

Alan: Awake. You know, because we're caught in a spin.

Jackie: It is; it's a spin, it's a merry-go-round, and you mentioned that Jesus' message was so simple: to love, to forgive, to get along with each other, and then in his time he was the rebel because he was exposing all of their lies.

Alan: Yes. Jesus never ever said, Make a particular church out of me. He was speaking to the individual, and if the individual gave things away when somebody needed it without a thought, without any kind of thought in doing it, then he could never be used by those who create order, you know, the ones who said that they even created order in the first place, in order to use us.

Jackie: Well, like you said, they took all of those old ancient stories, myths, and the pagan goddess worship, and they pasted it onto Jesus, and today in our churches, the Catholics are taught that they can't even get to Jesus without going to Mary first.

Alan: You have to have a priest when you're dying.

Jackie: Oh yes, so that you can will all of your property to the church. Alan: Or you'll go to purgatory.

Jackie: Yes. If you're rich enough, you get out of purgatory fast because the more you pay, the more they pray.

Alan: That's exactly what the Egyptian priests did too for the people, exactly the same thing. The technique has never changed. We're more afraid of the life to come than the one that we're living in; we're more afraid of what's going to happen afterwards.

Jackie: Because there are so many people who believe that we are not spiritual beings and that there are these certain spiritual beings, these fallen angels who came down here to earth to give us hell. I believe that there are many people, Christians, who really are afraid of death, because they don't know where "the hell they're going."

Alan: Exactly.

Alan: Yes, that was taken from Gandhi after he was sent out from Oxford. It's been used before. People are dying off more now in Africa than they ever did before of AIDS. just admitted on the news today that five hundred white settlers have been killed by some of the mobs that are being sent out, and he said that he might look into it. according to the CBC here. So, you know, words are one thing, but you have to use your eyes and your logic to see the other side of what's really happening.

Jackie: What do you want to talk about tomorrow?

Alan: I'll talk about one word, and I'll give you two stories out of it.

PART I INTERVIEW 11

Jackie: All this you didn't know forever, all your life, did you? Alan: I suspected it.

Jackie: Where did you come from, Alan? Did you come from Mars?

Alan: Oh, from where everybody else did. 1. I just realized when I was very young that even in school certain questions would rankle the teachers, and if they weren't able to answer you, they got angry with you. rather than simply tell you they didn't know. I learned pretty quickly just to parrot what was given to get good marks.

Jackie: Well. I can say that that was not the way it was for me. I got good grades in school, but I was not a genius, so I think maybe this seems to you that it would be second nature to a child, and I would say that the majority of us have taken a long time coming to this.

Alan: I think I'd respond to that by saying that most people have the capacity; it's just that literally the method of teaching with the conditioning process there are the few that squeak through. I can remember even when the moon landing was going on; at the time I was in what you'd call the junior grade school: I was twelve years of age. I remember asking the teacher the next day, because she was having a conversation about it, and everybody was into the sci-fi of it and so on. I asked, "Well, why did the flag wave in the wind? Because there's no wind on the moon." She sort of glared at me. "What do you mean?" I said, "Well, I saw that hag fluttering in the breeze, you know? There's no wind on the moon." She got rather angry and upset. There was a scene in some movies where a robot would go into a sort of stuck motion where it goes back and forth in the same spot. Well, humans do the same thing when you've just pointed out a fact that they've seen themselves, but they haven't consciously acknowledged because it goes against what they've been getting as reality.

Jackie: to this information and say, 'I know it's true. I know it's true.' They have all kinds of reasons why we have the same story with the birth, death, and resurrection of Jesus and all kinds of reasons why we know this was real even though those in the past were phony and that the King James' version of the Bible is the true version. This is from people who are very intelligent and very much wanting the truth. What is that God will not let us tamper with his word, so therefore the Bible cannot be tampered with, and I've pointed out that we have at least thirty versions of the Bible out there right now, but they say it's the King James version that's true. So everything that we've been talking about that they've been hearing, there's been this little hole that doesn't hear.

Alan: The King James Version came out in response to the Geneva version, which had been put out by the dissenters who left Scotland and England and Europe and went to Switzerland, and the Geneva version is more accurate according to the decipherment of the various Latin scriptures and Greek scriptures.

Jackie: Do you have a copy of the Geneva Bible? I have a copy of it. if it's a true copy, and I've just checked verses at random. I have not found that much of a difference except the way they do their l''s and their S's that make you crazy. But it was the notes along the side; well, I can't say that I read them word for word and compared them, but I wonder if the notes along the side had any bearing.

Alan: They did because, you see, this takes a little bit to explain, but it's very important for people to understand. Humanity goes through an era where whatever they were given at the beginning of their era is a creation; it's an architectural creation. It's a church, if you like. It's built...

Jackie: Are you talking about all of the civilizations as they are annihilated and begin again?

Alan: Yes. As long as we have our history going back six thousand, ten thousand years, basically, and this is according to Freemasonry. This gives you a clue as to how it works, and it's also in the Talmud. Freemasonry: In masonry itself, stone masonry, they would build the temple; regardless of what country or religion, they would build the temple, and that temple would exist as a form of art that would reflect the period that it was designed to produce, not past or present, but to produce (the period) for that generation to come. It's creating an era in advance. When the move, that vast shift, had been achieved, the same masons, or the descendants of them, would then go in, and they would remove the church, or the building, stone by stone. So that's what they built up. and once it had achieved its purpose, they then took it down.

Jackie: You mean they were built architecturally and symbolically.

Alan: In both ways, actually. For each period, we've had different styles in churches as well, and each one was to reflect the next move, and actually it's a move towards total communism, really. It goes from one country to the next and so on. They add more countries to it by the next era they're creating, the next paradigm shift, until they're all the same eventually, and once they've all done their purpose, then they'll all be removed symbolically and .

Jackie: Wouldn't the word socialism be more appropriate than total communism?

Alan: It doesn't really matter because they're both one and the same. You see, this is how it works. Socialism is a fuzzy word because we're taught social, social values, et cetera; it's something you can relate to. even on a personal level. So you add the ism to it, and you don't realize it really means something else. Socialism is a rule by a ruling elite, an intellectual and scientific elite. So this is how they did the eras. In the Middle Ages, you have the creation of Dante's Inferno and Hell because they could then put fear into the people, and they created big Gothic churches. They did it on purpose. They built them, and they put gargoyles, these monster faces, and griffins; griffins actually go right back to Babylon, and they were the sign of the ruling class at one point. They put them up on the sides of the church, and people would come up in awe of the building, and there were no streetlights or anything, so you were walking through woods and the forest, and you were getting terrified: you'd already heard the stories of demons in hell and so on. You come up to this building, and you see the light at the door with the arch on top, and you look above, and you see all these monsters outside the building, and then you would rush inside where you had peace and security and you had music and little choir boys singing and so on. You were completely conditioned; you were already set up from your journey from your home into the church, you see; you were psychologically set up to get more conditioning.

100

Once a hundred or two hundred years had passed, they looked those churches down and gave a new style because they had changed humanity and the culture of humanity, and they created slender churches with very high spires and slender features, and then they created art with a very effeminate Jesus who was rather starved. That was to symbolize that they were going to create a better society, more humane in a way. Yet, every stage of it is going to lead to the very beginning, where the serpent eats its tail, because in reality, the end of what we're going through (the humanization of humanity) is almost a robotic, a perfect man, the Soviet man, or Nazi man whose emotion is completely subservient to pure logic: logic will be supreme. That's the ultimate goal in all of the writings. The Geneva version was one stage of building a church, to knock down what they'd already used, which was the Roman Catholic Church. We must remember that Martin Luther was a Rosicrucian: you'll see that on almost all of the pictures in the Louvre in Paris.

Jackie: Martin Luther was one of their guys?

Alan: Oh yes, he's got the rose and the cross on his ring finger. He was taught by Erasmus, another mystic old priest-monk tutor of the same time who went round all the universities of Europe. So what you do is you create out of your own body your opposite, and that's what came out of the Catholic Church: its opposite. This is your thesis again and your antithesis.

Jackie: You said a phrase, or a couple of words, the humanization of humanity, and what I heard when you said that, what I thought of, is the loss of...

Alan: Yes. Once you lose your... you see. Emotion is part of humanity. Without emotion you leave a child starved in the street or even in your arms. literally. Emotion is a vital part of human nature. It makes us truly human, not the communist humanist human.

Jackie: Or truly spiritual.

Alan: Yes. It's all a combination, you see. But their version of humanism and humanitarianism is a completely different thing.

Jackie: Oh yes, it is. Do you remember Auguste Comte? He used the term Great Being, but Humanity, with a capital H: Humanity is the Great Being, capital G, capital B, folks. I hope you're hearing this, and I hope you're getting it because of what Alan said to me. the humanization of humanity—this is exactly what they're trying to do.

Alan: They've been quite clear about it. Their spokesmen have been very clear about it going right back into the middle 1800s at least, and at that time, mind you, they were writing to their own and to their workers, who were an upper middle class who could read and write. Other people couldn't read and write all over Europe at that time.

Jackie: Well. I took us off our original question about people who listen and hear and see that what you're saying is true. Many of our listeners are doing the research already, and nobody has refuted you, but even though it's all accepted and acknowledged, there's that hole that everything is as it was; in other words, we are living in a big lie. What frightens me is that so many of our Christian friends believe that we are not spiritual beings. The spiritual beings are Jesus and Lucifer and all those bad guys who were cast down, but we're not spiritual beings. If that understanding and realization isn't there first, where do you go?

Alan: Where you'll go is exactly where you're led, and that'll be over a cliff. |Laughs| I should really give you a comparison to where we are today and what the elite think of us today. It doesn't matter the country you live in. It's the same elite, and they're well connected. Well connected, they always have been. The earliest archeological find of a city they found in Sumer, one of the oldest civilizations, we're told that they've known about, is called Catal, that's their cattle, and the symbol of the city is the cow's head, or the bull's head, the same symbol that was pushed through Crete and various other countries when this elite spread out their nobility, which eventually ruled each country. Now it's called Çatalhöyük on any map, and hoyuk is actually the Turkish name for tel, which means it was built upon a previous civilization. There were no pens for cattle found there, in this whole city. This was an administrative city. It was the Washington, D.C., of the Mesopotamian area. They have frescos on the walls where you see hunting scenes where they go out hunting for birds and so on, just for spoil. But they called the people who they were administrating over ,cattle, and that's why the capital where this administration lived was called Catal.

Nothing has changed from that beginning to today, and I must stress this: people fall for beautiful speeches all the time. I have to say that Americans are more prone, through the conditioning that they've had, to beautiful speeches than probably pretty well any other country because every other country has a long history, and they're sick of nice speeches and the opposite happening, you see. What we don't get is that the technique of leaders getting up and making beautiful speeches has been used for as far back as you can go. Tacitus, who was a historian for the Roman army when they went into Britain in 200 BC, gave a typical speech, coming from his opponent, the tribal leader who was called Calcagus, supposedly. He put words into Calcagus' mouth: a beautiful speech, and the speech that he gave was typical of what any of the empires would use when they were taking over a people's country. It's the same speech that was put into Chief Seattle in the States: the exact same speech, word for word.

Jackie: Oh, in other words, they didn't really do the same speech, but the same speech is attributed to them?

Alan: They always try to portray...you see. There was no speech. It's what conquering armies have always done when they're creating an empire (and it's the same people who have moved right through history creating and collapsing the empires, even when it means setting another country against their own; they've already moved, you see.) There's no glory in telling the truth, and the truth is that they're a bunch of peasants, poorly armed, probably with agricultural implements, and you're about to slaughter them, leading a well-trained, disciplined, well-armed army. All through history, the Roman army, for instance, the Grecian army, and the British army always put into they might like to call the noble savage a beautiful speech, because then it was a real fight between real men, equally matched and all the rest of it, when in reality nothing was there to match what they had .

Jackie: Like what happened here with the American Indians.

Alan: Well, that's the same speech that they put into the words of Seattle. I mean word for word; it's a straight copy. It never happened, you see. The reality is they just went in there and took and massacred anybody who was in their way. That's the reality, but going through your average school textbook, which is really meant for little children, or the minds of children, and the simplistic way we're given it, they talk about nobility and great battles and bringing civilization as a Big buzzword, livery empire has used the same catchphrases, and every battle was a glorious battle because they were equally matched fighting these noble savages, not a bunch of skinny, underfed peasants just hanging on, which was always the reality of it. But you can go back and see the same speeches, and that was from the tradition that they originally used in the Roman Empire: they always gave their opponents these beautiful speeches before a battle.

Jackie: Are you getting to a response to my question? Is the hole that people are staying in just the way it's going to be for most people?

Alan: Most people will find it impossible to come out of conditioning and daily life because it's conditioned for you. keeps you in that conditioning. You have to strive just to get by.

Jackie: I seem to have come into this world as a question. From my earliest memories of lying in bed and talking to God, I was always asking him stuff. You know, he never answered me. Well, yes, he has. I didn't hear a voice, but I have desired and thirsted for the truth, and I know there was instinctive knowing in me. For people who haven't even questioned, it must feel like I fell.

Alan: Yes. The ones who haven't even questioned probably will never question; you see, there's comfort in a comforter, like a baby's comforter.

Jackie: They call it blissful ignorance.

Alan: Yes. There's comfort in that. Whenever terrible catastrophes have happened to people, you'll always see the ones spiritually and physically closing down before the other ones, you see. This is the way it happens with people; it's like the teacher where you ask a question, and she literally goes into this backwards-forwards mode as her gears get stuck. You're telling them something you intuitively do know. You're questioning the rationality, or actually pointing out they do have some rationality, and if they listen, they'll see what I'm talking about. But at the same time they're conditioned to ignore their own sensibilities, their own senses, which happens beginning when you're born. Your parents pass it on because they've been conditioned.

Jackie: If you're conditioned to believe that it's sinful to question, do you think that there's any part (the Holy Spirit is within all of us) somewhere within them that if they pray and they ask. No matter how much it feels hurtful, 'Please, Father, I want to know the truth, and I want to understand'—that "could be broken through, couldn't it?

Alan: It could be; there's got to be a desire.

Jackie: Yeah, of course. That's what I mean, pray and ask. And really listen, and the tiniest little flicker of recognition could open that door, couldn't it?

Alan: It could. It could. Again, you have to have the capacity to stop right where you are, in your own time. Through your life, things weren't always this way. Each generation has been separated from the previous generation, so there's no point in unity of life going back, you see. That's been done deliberately in this century, the splitting of the family. Yet, it's only by the ability to go back that you can bring yourself not just to where you really are now, but to where you truly are. but the ability to go into the future and see where you're all heading.

Jackie: Well, as an example of how tough I know it is, we'll use George Washington. I wanted to hang onto the thought that George Washington was good in his heart and was doing good for his sake and for the sake of the people. But then I found out that he was a Freemason, and then I , But he didn't attend the lodge meetings.

Alan: Oh, he did. He did.

Jackie: Well. I had read that he didn't, and then I saw the letter that he supposedly wrote that warned his lodge brothers about the infiltration of the Illuminati, and so I said, "Sec, they weren't part of the whole thing." Now it appears that they were all a part of it.

Alan: The whole part of it, although again, it's a compartmentalized process. It's the same as out of the Catholic Church comes its opposite because the Catholic Church had performed its goal.

Jackie: Ah! Controlled opposition! We've talked about that a lot on this program.

Alan: Yes, sure. If you look at a pyramid and you look from the top down, you've got four sides. Now if you see it from down on the ground, the most you can see at any one time are two. Often you'll only have the symbol of the one side. You're told that you are a member of the Scottish Rite, and you're fighting for this and for a better society. Across the other side of the pyramid, you see. You have this other bunch, and they're called the Catholics or Jesuits and so on. and Knights of Columbus and Malta. Well, each side can only guess that there are enemies over on the other side, but in reality, there are four sides to a pyramid; at the top is the controller. They're all tools in creating a societal change, a paradigm shift as they call it. Only by conflict can you bring around this necessary change. Conflict is a method that has been used since the beginning of time to change society. So you must have at least two sides for any one conflict, and preferably more.

Jackie: Sort of the way they built the atom bomb. I heard they had people working on certain parts of it, and these people did what they were doing (now I don't know if this is true, but it sounds believable): a whole bunch of people were working on different parts, and there were very few people that actually knew that when those parts went together, it was going to be an atom bomb.

Alan: Yes, that's basically the technique. That's how it works. Though what you miss is another basic factor: a pyramid doesn't have four sides.

Jackie: Did you just say that to throw us off, or what?

Alan: No, I'm pointing out the obvious. It's got live. It's got one beneath. You see? If you look down from the top, you've got the four sides, but you've also got a base on it. It's the fifth side, and that's what they've always termed the four main gods and the unseen god. That was the unseen god put in a symbolic form; the base, you see.

Jackie: They're doing everything. They're trying to emulate creation in every single way, aren't they?

Alan: Well yeah, they believe—in fact, they truly believe, and in many ways are not far wrong—that they have created society from the beginning. They have created it in their fashion. It's all been done by stealth techniques, societies, and secret societies. Most of the guys who went to Geneva, which was a center base, by the way, or one of the centers (they always have three at one time in the world), which was set up long before the Knights Templar came along. That eventually became their world bank after they were not really disbanded but made illegal; they went underground. So, they had a base in Scotland and one in Switzerland, and right up till today that's always been a main place for United Nations meetings and for the World Zionist meetings. 1. The World Zionist meeting was held last February, I think, in Basel, Switzerland. Most of the Zionists aren't Jews.

Jackie: Are they Khazars?

Alan: You'll get that mixture of them, but you also have nobility from all over the planet because Zionism, as I say, is ultimately the same thing as world communism or world socialism. Socialism and communism didn't come out of Russia: they were invented in London, which was the ruler of the wealth and the mercantile wealth of the world at that time. It was a big banking institution, so communism was invented by the capitalists. Capital, the word capitalism, was invented by Karl Marx. There was no capitalism before him. There was a thing called free enterprise, and the big difference is that capitalism does not want free enterprise. When Rockefeller (Nelson Rockefeller) made his famous quote that competition was a sin, he wasn't being facetious; he was telling you what he really believed, that competition to them is a sin. Free enterprise has basically been done away with, and corporations will be the new type of feudal system that will rule the planet. Carroll Quigley wrote about that in Tragedy and Hope pretty well from their own records.

Jackie: You mentioned the five sides to the pyramid, and you just mentioned the number five that they use: the five-pointed star. I thought that the five-pointed star with a point down was their symbol.

Alan: It doesn't really matter. It originated when Osiris rose on the 19th of July every year. (That signaled that the rainwaters had come down from the mountain in Uganda, where modern Uganda is.) Then it traveled northward to Egypt, and when Sirius rose on the 19th, it had actually been rising for a couple of days before. It rises in the morning: the morning star. It's competing with the sun, so you don't see it the brightness of the sun until about the third day or so, and then you can just see it; the sun is higher, so you can see the star. So. It has always been symbolized as it rose, with its point going upwards; that's when it symbolized the white star, and then when it was descending, it had the glow against the horizon, so it was a reddish color, and it had the point going downwards symbolically, and that was the sign of revolution. That was Satan being cast down. That's where all these stories come from. This was the coming down to earth to create revolution, which is the necessary technique for world change, which is the ultimate plan for what they call the Great Work. You saw that in the so-called conflicts with Russia and the U.S. You had the whites down to feudalize the one and the reds down to feudalize the other. Russia was financed by London and the U.S. from the very beginning.

Jackie: You also mentioned that our Pentagon here in the United States is the core of the five-sided star. Alan: Yes. You see, Masonry and armies are both one and the same thing.

Jackie: What about the six-sided star?

Alan: That's an added element. The other ones can be accounted for, but the sixth one is basically the gods, those who rule. Jackie: Don't they call that the Star of David?

Alan: It was called names long before David. If you take the six-pointed star, it represents the one above and the one below, as they call it. You rule on the official level at the top; you rule by its opposite, which is what we call the underworld below. It is one pyramid facing up, and it is one pyramid facing down. That symbol shows that you control both sides—well, basically the people are in the middle, you see. So you follow all the rules, and you follow all the guys with the suits and ties, and the underground, the illegal, is also run by the same crew, the elite controllers on the other side of the law. It's a conflict too.

Jackie: Is it a possibility that the symbology could be interpreted in another way too? You were just saying the top star, you know, and the bottom star. Well, it could literally symbolize bringing the spiritual into the physical. You know what I mean, and that's an interpretation.

Alan: Yes. You read the writings, and you understand the symbology of what they say. In other words, you see another language altogether.

Jackie: Yes. Well, it's like they use the number thirteen, and it dawned on me one day that Jesus, according to scriptures, had twelve disciples, and he and his twelve would number thirteen. We've been born into making the sign of the cross at the number thirteen. Maybe it means nothing. You know what I'm saying? We put our own thoughts and our own fears into something as simple as a symbol that really means nothing. It only means something to them.

Alan: Oh yeah. But also, mankind is a symbolic type of personality, and because of our normalcy, if you like, knowing this type of thing, the ones who understand humanity have always used what might be called failings on their part, but it's normal for us.

Symbology and ritual we see every day. Even simply meeting someone who is given some sort of title, most people won't look them in the eyes naturally: they won't meet their eyes. It was forbidden to look into the royalty's eyes, even in Britain, right up until the 1900s.

Jackie: Okay, but we have a tendency, I mean even with elected officials, to think that they're somebody much higher than us. I can remember the first time that I met my state senator in Illinois. I was almost tongue-tied, and he was arrogant as hell and rude and looking around as we were talking. It didn't take me very long to get real clear that elected officials, like you said, were all the same. You know, they all use the bathroom.

Alan: Yes. That's right, if you just picture someone naked in front of you with a potbelly, you know, and all the rest of it. You start to have a giggle to yourself, and you can meet them at least on equal terms.

Jackie: Well, as a person, as another person. All we have to do is get the senator or the honorable out of the way. You know what I found out that works real well? I start using their first name right away. Just call them John or Joe or Doug. It just immediately gets rid of all that formality and that stiffness, and I'm getting us off the point here. I had a call today from a gentleman who asked me if you are Gnostic, atheist, agnostic, or whatever.

Alan: I'm in no category at all. Why should I be in any category that somebody has created for me?

Jackie: I said you believe in God, but I asked why the question was asked, and he said it was because of your definition of heaven last night. I pointed out that it wasn't your definition. You were just showing where the word came from.

Alan: Well, it depends on what language you're speaking because in English heaven comes from haven, haven meaning a safe place. When you're in trouble, you seek a safe haven: if you're at sea and it's stormy, you'd try to get to port for a safe haven. The terminology from sailing into a safe haven is also used to describe where the high priests lived, in Crete and all of the mountains in the Middle East; they've always lived in the mountains. That was the haven, and when they went up to the hole in the mountain, the port, the gale, and the arc with the top, they would go up to haven, and over centuries it got changed to heaven, just to confuse us, and so that we wouldn't associate or begin to wonder or work things out.

Jackie: So heaven is some place up there?

Alan: Well, that's actually why people always thought heaven was "up there," because it started with priests who would come down and mesmerize the people with simple tricks; they would reflect the sunlight, and they would have collars behind, actually bowls or hat pieces of copper behind their heads, and the sunlight would reflect on their heads, and that became the first halo. That word halo and hallelujah and so on and Helios all mean the same thing; it's a reflection of the sun. Their face would turn the gold color. The pharaohs eventually used this with the gold cobra headdress that came down past their ears. That also reflected the sun and turned the skin yellow, and they were called the son of God. With simple tricks for people who had no science at all (this crew that lived in the mountains and survived the previous cataclysm had the science from the previous ages), these simple tricks were used all down the eons to put a spell on people. They actually put a spell on people because ignorance sets you up for those with a bit of science. So heaven simply was a haven, some place that was safe, and up in the mountain during the flood it certainly was safe.

Again, the changers of language, primarily Oxford for the English language, have made three major changes there that have almost lost the meanings, and it isn't until you think out a word, you go back, and you see what it used to be and what it was before that that eventually it dawns on you that we're being fooled not just with one word, but with so much of it. You know, so much of it. They've done it too in German and even Latin. There's old Latin and there's a more modern Latin, the same in Greek. The same techniques have been used for thousands of years by those who could read and write, who were the priests and who kept all the knowledge to themselves. Now the language is changed simply through TV; the kids emulate the phraseology. We're going towards linguistic minimalism, which means that words are taken from the language, and words are basically symbols.

Jackie: The fewer words you have, the less you can think, because we think with our words.

Alan: Yes. It becomes vague too; even to the person who is speaking, they can't get it across, and to the person who's listening, they can't understand either. It's not clear enough.

Jackie: Well, it reminds me, of course, of George Orwell's 1984. They kept updating. What they kept doing was, like you said, eliminating words from the vocabulary.

Alan: Until it got thinner and thinner.

Jackie: Oh, and thinner and thinner. They had good, double good... Alan: ...and plus good.

Jackie: They had ungood too. There was no word bad. So they took probably fifty words that we can use to describe good and bad, and they turned it into one word.

Alan: Yeah. Because, you know, even with Bell telephones they have specials on long-distance phone calls to Canada, and now they have good plus. Hey, they used to have good; now they've got plus good. It's mocking, because I'm sure they knew where it came from. But it is happening, and a kid today can hardly say a sentence without "like" being in between every word. Culture comes out of Hollywood, and people just emulate it. The Nazis learned by mimicry, the mimic, and that's the great tool, through fantasy on TV.

Jackie: Yes. I want to remind our listeners that there is no power greater than the power of God, our creator of all there is. I do not, in any way. shape or form, I think that I have a handle on it or am able to define it, but I do know that that power is we have got to know that truth, and we have got to ask.

Alan: Oh yes. Religion can only be a personal thing; when somebody declares their religion, they've just created a dogma if they get anybody to follow it.

Jackie: It's like when people ask if you're a Christian. I have to respond, well, it depends upon what you mean by being Christian, and I always wonder why people go around asking that.

Alan: It's because we're conditioned to believe that you have to belong to some group or other. You have to fall into a category. Everything is standardized. If you don't fall into a category, then you're an oddball. Again, it's through conditioning from our very birth, really, and they don't like somebody who asks the questions that make people guilty for not asking themselves what they need to ask themselves.

PART I INTERVIEW 12

Caller: First let me say again how much I enjoy and appreciate the ongoing interview with Alan from Canada. He is a priceless fount of knowledge. Ancient mystery religion was very blatantly sexual, as in the worship of the genitalia and the gods and goddesses of fertility, and on and on it goes. Actually scatology was part of it, too.

Alan: It's a science of excrement; you can diagnose different diseases of animals through their feces.

Jackie: Roger said, "Ask Alan if he'd like to expound on the sexual nature of the ancient mystery religion. For instance, the fir tree is the phallic symbol, and the Christmas tree in particular, decorated with ornaments, is the ancient tree of the Saturnalia and Brumalia festivals of earlier days, a phallic symbol festooned with ovaries and eggs. The entire winter festival was basically a sex orgy, as was the spring festival Ishtar or Caster. You touched on obelisks as phallic systems. How about the church spires? How about the church windows and especially the entrances with their rounded tops as emblematic of the vaginal entrance? The worshipers entered the mother church for comfort and succor. How about the connection between this and Nimrod copulating with his wife/mother, Semiramis? (Nimrod and Semiramis supposedly being the very founders of this system, sex orgies in the guise of religion guaranteed popularity, right?) How about further explaining the system of temple prostitution? Each woman was required to serve for a period as a prostitute in the temple. Was this only in Diana worship, or was it in other variations, too?

Guaranteed to get the men in to do their duty to the gods, don't you know? I his way. For a fee, for an offering, eventually every man could have a fully approved opportunity to have sex with any woman in the community. Do you think that word didn't get around last time when someone's particularly beautiful wife was on duty? While she was serving, it was her duty to put out for whoever paid the price. I'm sure Alan could expand much, much more on the ancient system if he would care to."

Alan: Okay.

Jackie: Let's just talk about the Christmas tree.

Alan: Well, the tree, number one, has to be an evergreen tree: that's really how that came about. That also came from a ruling elite in the Middle East who also controlled the whole of the Mediterranean and the Aegean Sea. One of the main importers, even then, into the Middle East and into Egypt was from Cyprus, and that's where you get the Cyprus fir from. The fertility rite around the tree, and a green tree at that, meant eternal fertility. From the very beginning of what we can tell, there was a definite and planned and organized account (with records kept) of human breeding; nothing was by chance. The women who went into the temples in Athens and on Crete (a big player at one time) had to do it every year for a couple of weeks. If they didn't do it, the priests would shave their heads, which basically was a mocking gesture of saying you're like a man because the male priests used to shave their heads even from the earliest times in Sumer. So it was a form of mocking the woman by shaving her head. It wasn't a matter of going in just to get paid; it was a duty. The culture had been brought up in such a way that there was no stigma attached to it.

We'll

Never know for how long this was going on: it was definitely there in 3000 B.C. in the region of Crete in the Mediterranean. The interesting thing in Crete especially was they still have the columns, or pillars, which is another symbol of the tree, and we can go into that later. Pillars and columns all have a Masonic meaning, or Babylonian if you like, which is even older than that. They all have the same function; they were a beam that held up something, they were a support, and they were used in the earliest of mines where all these special people lived.

So. What you have is an intense breeding program with records being kept. Even in modern Hollywood horror movies when they have witchcraft gatherings and so on. The woman is usually laid on an altar of some kind, and you'll see a man being the head priest, wearing a mask, and they did wear masks in Crete so that the woman could legitimately say that her offspring was a son of the gods, because he wore the mask, so he was like a deity.

Jackie: Now. All the men in the community got to go there?

Alan: It wasn't quite that at all. No. Because what they've found on the records of the pillars is that comparatively few of the men indulged. In other words, they had the male stock, which they'd obviously selected from previous breeding, and now they were keeping a record and matching up the offspring from the two-week prostitution that the woman had.

(They had a very similar program going on in ancient Britain. I can go into that at the end. if you remind me because that really is the legend of the true Robin Hood story, which was banned in Britain in the 1800s.)

What we can definitely see on the pillars, the columns, and the arch are the names of the people who were prostituted for two weeks, how their birth was recorded, and how their offspring's health was, and as I mentioned, they weighed them and everything and kept track of their life as they grew up. They, in turn, in their generation, would get inbred again, often with someone who could really be called their sister, down the line. That's the same way the pharaohs did it. You see an intense breeding program to almost produce hybrids, and really that's what all humanity happened to be. If you take common stock of the wolf, for instance, scientists agree that every dog species you see today was derived from that one animal. Mankind had to have been all of the same at one time, and only through selective breeding, choosing the brightest in color and so on from the stock, and then inbreeding it again with its own sister, and the fairest one at that, until you end up with either a white lab or a yellow lab or a white person, you see, in human terms.

Jackie: Are you saying that the earliest man was Black or dark-skinned?

Alan: He'd be a mix, really. I'd imagine. They definitely were mixed but basically had similar features and intellect and everything else.

Jackie: So if everybody was the same, how did everything get so different?

Alan: Because we don't know how long the last catastrophe lasted on this planet. We know there have been a few catastrophes in the past, and there has been flooding—many floods. They can tell that by the different layers, you know, of the sea urchins and so on. and what grows on dry land, the trees and tree stumps, and then back to floods again. They've also had the possible massive fires going across the globe at one point, which burned things down. So, people were in a safe place (and inbreeding, of course, as they would be) living in. For instance, the eaves, a haven, a safe haven. By the way, a portal when it's first dug into a mountain or any mine is overheaped: it is egg-shaped, and then you square it. First by making it more round, and then you square it.

The masons call this squaring the circle. In its original shape it does look like a woman's vulva, and it also looks like an egg. On the towers of Isis it says, "I am Isis. I come from a wondrous and beautiful egg." An egg in Egyptian was cham/ham. J We get our word cam from it; it's the shape of an egg.

Jackie: That's why we have the Easter eggs at the celebration of Ishtar.

Alan: You see a cham is also a part of an arc. The word chamber comes from cham. You have an oval office, which is also called the egg by some people. In Britain, in the House of Commons and the House of Lords, they have their chambers where secret meetings are held, and they also have a shell on the back of it, which was like the gas station shell (Shell Gas). You'll see that above the windows in the Oval Office in movies. The shell, that type of shell, is also called a clam. C-I-I-A-M (pronounced ham). They dropped off the H and cam, but it is cham. It has definite sexual connotations, and in the Hindu representations of females, you still see that exact shape; it's the shape of the female. So this was all over the planet at one time, this intense breeding. All of our ancient legends and myths originate from there. The Sumerians thank the gods for making them, and especially for making them different from the others by giving them the light skin and black hair.

Jackie: You've talked about Sumeria as the earliest time ; however, you've mentioned the Armenians who went into Sumeria.

Alan: Yes, because the earliest records of organization weren't there at all because it actually was around what we call the Caucasus Mountains, around the Black Sea; that's where white people get their name, Caucasian. Their legends (the survivors), because the Turks almost wiped them out in the 20th century for very good reason...

Jackie: What very good reason?

Alan: What we find through history is that when elites move, they only move when they've created a new people and a new nation to go to, and they end up doubling back with their new army and wiping out the previous, the previous having the information, the myths, the legends, and the old stories, and this has happened all down through history when you follow it. The elite always move out. In their newfound land they've already had time to establish an army before they moved into it. They use the new army as a way...the word army comes from Armenia, you see.

Jackie: So are you saying they were the earliest?

Alan: They were the first ones to be used as an army, and even in the records at Sumer they mention that without these gods nothing was made. There were no sheep pens, and there were no tools or iron or metal or copper tools, nor bronze or iron. They , and then they take them down.

Jackie: You mentioned the Greeks having their Christmas sometime in January.

Alan: I went out about seven o'clock tonight, and I was in the garden, and I looked up, and there was the half moon, and right away I thought about the Sanhedrin. I see the Sanhedrin being the body around, almost a crescent shape, and of course it's the bowl, and the bottom of the bowl is towards the earth.

Jackie: It's the way the United Nations meets, also.

Alan: Yes. All of the body of the United Nations meets in that same form or shape. Like a crescent basically, a tight crescent. Now that's one of the most ancient of signs; you'll see the same sign above the mosques in the Middle East—on the top of them they have that same crescent moon. In Hebrew, they call the body of rulers the Sanhedrin, the new elite that came out of or was created from Babylon. Now, we mentioned before about the mountain of Sin, which is now Mount Sinai.

Jackie: Sin was the moon goddess.

Alan: That's correct. So, I really have come to the conclusion that Sin-hedrin must be the moon because it's the only shape that fits. The Druids in Britain had a collar from almost one ear going down under their chin to the other (the same shape, you see) made of brass or copper, and it's the shape of the sickle moon. The head of the Sanhedrin, who sits at the indentation of the bowl, the head man, is called the Nasi. So, nasi means head; it also means the meridian, the middle. These are the same terms that you use in astronomy; you have the meridian, and you also use the same term in mapping out coastlines and in sailing. In Freemasonry, the nasi is also called the keystone; it's the center stone in the curve. It's the strong stone that holds them all together as the pressure comes in.

Well. I was out back, and I saw, of course, the moon, and about a hand's breadth above it, I saw Venus, you see, definitely aligned with the center of the bowl, and so I thought, Now where would that take... Then I remembered, with the Druids, the man's face is showing above the center of the bowl, so the nasi is the forehead, it's the mind, it's the head. A point on a coast like the southwest coast of Norway is called the nasi, and it's also a point; it's at the head or the point. I drew an imaginary line straight from the center of the moon up through Venus, which was in the center, and it took me towards (at that time) Orion; they happened to line up at the time. Orion again is the hunter. Then I thought to myself, "Now wait a minute, this is Christmas Eve; I better go and have a look through a dictionary," and I found that Orion comes from orient, the word orient. They call the Middle East the Orient. The French call it the Orient. It's the East where the sun rises in the morning, and it rises from below the horizon. It's also very, very bright. I followed it through, and once it got towards 11:30 PM, the moon was beginning to sink below the horizon. I could still trace the line to where it went. The line went right through the belt of Orion, and the belt of Orion contains the three bright stars. It's got Rigel, and it also has Betelgeuse.

Jackie: Or Beetle, as the nice movie was called.

Alan: That's correct, but it also was Betel, you see. Betelgeuse. Betel, of course, is the original for the house of God, Bethel; you add an H to it, but it also is...

Jackie: Oh, does this have to do with the Star of Bethlehem?

Alan: Obviously, yes. So what happens at midnight? That line from the bottom of the bowl of the moon right through Venus, representing the head, the nasi. Since we also use the same meaning on a coast as a point, Venus is now pointing. You put a straight line through Venus, you go through Orion, you go through Rigel, and you hit Betelgeuse at midnight. You hit Betelgeuse. Then it continues on to the constellation Canis Major, the dog constellation, and the dog constellation has a fixed star.

Jackie: What does a fixed star mean?

Alan: When the world is revolving at a certain time, you also have the planets already moving around the sun, all in relation to each other. Not in a straight line like a row of beads because there are different spacings between them. But what happens is that the betel is an interesting word because it passes through there into the dog constellation, and it hits the Dog Star. Another name for the Dog Star is Sirius. We know that Sirius is the one that rises July 19th in Egypt and heralds the coming of the floodwater from the south, which eventually fertilizes the land; it floods all over. I hate tics right into what Albert Pike talked about when he said that it's a strange thing to call the star of the morning Satan, because it's one and the same thing, different in spring and in the summer. So only at this time of the year could you put a straight line from the moon through Venus through Orion and hit Betel.

Betelgeuse, and then go into the thin nebula that hits Sirius. I mean, it's the perfect alignment.

Jackie: What does this all mean, Alan?

Alan: Well, if you were to see it tonight and they saw it in the Middle East the day that Bill Clinton stopped bombing. According to where you are on the planet, it has to be of the same alignment, and it will all happen a couple of days before in one country. Even the Greek Orthodox Church Pope Julius changed their calendar in 1920 to get the same alignment; however, now their holy night is January the 6th. so that's when they were able to see what I saw tonight. Each religion Ramadan too.

Jackie: So Ramadan started when these were aligned like this there?

Alan: Yes. just a few days ago. You see the constellation moves like an imaginary band, appearing to move around us. but it doesn't in reality. But that's how it goes; it spins. They move at eight degrees of the ecliptic on either side, so depending on where you are on the planet, a different day has to be set for them all to be the same, so we're celebrating three main religions around the same time period, but adjusted to fit each one. They see it in the Middle East before us, and we see it a few days after them and another part where the Greek Orthodox is. And especially in northern Russia, they'll see it on January 6th; they'll see the same thing.

114

Jackie: Russian Orthodox—is that the same as Greek Orthodox, the same beliefs? I remember also that at Easter time you were talking about the egg. They dyed their Easter eggs red. What was the symbology of that?

Alan: The symbology is kind of complicated.

Jackie: We watched The Manchurian 'Candidate today. I'd never seen it before. There was a woman whose name was Eugenie Rose, and Chuck said, "Eugenie?" I remembered that you said that the rose was their symbol of the perfect man, through eugenics. Now that wasn't a coincidence.

Alan: No, it's not. The symbology is through all of their movies. I mean, Beetlejuice is the same as Betelgeuse, and you have the movie Beetlejuice about a man who is half-demon, and he's got a good part or side to him too—the two in one. Actually, the two- in-one is really important. To go back to astronomy. I wondered what it meant, even back then. The fertility rites they had in Britain —they also used, of course, the tree, and that was brought in by the Hanoi tribe, who had been through the Middle East and were known to have gone through the Middle East, and they weren't what you would think in the British Israelite mentality as being Jews. They were a nation of warriors; the Hanoi worshiped the goddess Dana, and they worshiped the maypole, and they danced around it. They had a very primitive religion, which actually was the same fundamentally as the religion that the Khazars were found to have one and a half thousand years later.

Jackie: I thought the Khazars adopted the Jewish religion. Alan: Hey, they did eventually in about A.D. 740.

Jackie: Oh, you mean they just kept changing their religion?

Alan: Up until then it had been basically atheistic, almost shamanism (shamanism is really called asceticism.) But when the first voyagers went into the land of the Khazars, one of them wrote down that he asked one of the men what he was carving, and he was carving a penis. asked why he was carving that, and the man replied, "Because it's where I came from." That shows you there was nothing elaborate about any of the structure. This tribe had been used before in about 1200 B.C. to go through the Middle East. They had red hair, and they had white skin. They were joined by a relative from the sea who had horns on their heads and had round shields and short kilts on. They were called the Sea People, and they went right into Egypt.

Jackie: I can understand why we've come to where we are today, because we've all believed in so many things that were not true, and one of the things that I know is that we are not just a physical body with a bloodline. If we don't get it, that we are not merely a physical being but a spiritual being, a child of God, much beyond just this physical—we're in trouble.

Alan: Well, we are, but again, because of the establishment with all of its leaders, including the churches, we go along with it, and stage by stage they're knocking it down, you see, until...

Jackie: They're stripping the spirit.

Alan: Yeah. They're stripping us of all we've believed we were. Decency, goodness, honesty—all of that is going out, and they're turning us into barbarians.

Jackie: Ycali is an animal, because see, what I've observed is that if you take away the spirit of man, that part of us which is all of these things you've said, the physical being, the human being is nothing but an animal.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: That's what people act like when they have no realization or idea or understanding that we are so much more than that.

Alan: Carroll Quigley mentioned that he'd lectured to departments of the U.S. Secretary of State, the guys who were getting sent off abroad. These were the guys who were tying up all the loose ends to bring world government, and he told them and wrote in Tragedy and Hope, Here is how previous civilizations were brought down: you had play-acting in the streets by paid performers from the governments, including ancient Greece and Rome, who would deliberately have plays worked out for children and kids where they promoted sexual promiscuity. They even had foreplay, with sexual actors acting out the sexual act in the streets.

Jackie: Now they do it on television and in the movies.

Alan: That's right, and (Quigley said) another sign of it is the New Age and occultism springing up. It happened at the end of each civilization. They have gods for everything. He said another symptom was national lotteries: in Rome they had national lotteries.

Jackie: Well, of course. In Orwell's 1984, which was written in 1948, they had dialogue in there where the proles were talking about how to win the lottery.

Alan: Yeah.

Jackie: I read that, and I said. "Oh my god, they had that plan so long ago." Now you're telling us they did it back then.

Alan: Yeah, and they also established national casinos across the country; we have about fifty of them in Canada put up in the last five or six years.

Jackie: We were going to talk about deprogramming tonight. Can we do it in six minutes? |
Laughs. |

Alan: Oh boy. I don't think so; I don't think we'd get that far. We didn't even get to start on an original topic and go through the history of why there is worship of the phallic symbol. The root of it is not male, and it's not female. It's a form of androgyny, where it's almost half male, half female; it's two in one, a hermaphrodite. The symbols you'll see of ancient Greece, where you have the female warrior, you're not quite sure if she's a guy or a gal.

Jackie: Well, look at some of our female athletes today. Same thing.

Alan: The Colossus of Rhodes was the same as the Statue of Liberty—very well built, wide-shouldered, and strong. When I first saw a photograph, I said. "Is it a male or a female?" Because ultimately the goal of the perfecting of man will be neither; it will be done by genetics.

Jackie: 1. How is reproduction going to be done then?

Alan: Through science, through pure cloning. I've got hooks going back to the beginning of the century Rutherford from the University of Cambridge (who helped design the atom bomb.) And one of his prime goals was to work out with mathematics how to find the double helix system, which was eventually discovered. That's the root of life. They are nearing their goal of the perfecting of man through genetics. The ultimate male/female is a compilation of both. Obviously at the very beginning, there was somebody amongst us who needed humanity in order to get to this goal where we've been brought to today. We know that mankind definitely was used as a form of cattle for someone else's purposes, someone who couldn't do it themselves, just by themselves. We know the ancient priests took lines of their lineages of the temple prostitutes, and then people were so conditioned that when the woman went back to her family, it was no big deal; it was a part of their life.

Jackie: I feel like this conversation could go on forever. It feels like if we quit now, there's so much more. You and I talked the other night about how this could be stopped. You see. Folks, I don't know how you feel, but as I listen to Alan. I think, "Well, they've done this before and before and before, and they're doing it again, and it sounds awfully futile," Alan said. "But it isn't. We've got to stop it."

RELIGIOUS ORIGINS AND SECRET SOCIETIES PART 2 (1998-2001)

The second twelve-episode set of talks on religious origins and secret societies first aired on worldwide shortwave Sweet Liberty Radio in 1998 with Jackie Patru and Alan Watt.

Part II Interview 1

Jackie: We have Alan on with us again, and we're going to talk about deprogramming. Thanks again for being with us. It's been a real experience for all of us.

Alan: Yes. It's been a cram session.

Jackie: I have just one thing before we get started with our talk about deprogramming. In the Old Testament, where it says, "The sons of God looked down on the daughters of man and saw that they were fair and took them to wife, and they were the giants in the earth." You explained to us that the sons of God were actually these priests who lived up in the mountains and who began to selectively breed with the people in the mainstream. You said they weren't giants; they were tall of stature, but they were referred to as giants because of their stature among the people. There are some archaeologists who say they have proof that there literally were twelve- and fourteen-foot-tall men called giants in those days. I wanted you to address that if you would.

Alan: Well, most of the archaeology, if you dig into it. Or most of the ones who claim that there were fourteen-foot men, if you check their facts, there's no basis in it. Usually it's the UFO-type books, almost a novel type, in fact.

Jackie: There were a couple of names mentioned. One was Dr. Kent Hovind, and he said that he has archaeological proof of giants and called them Nephilim.

Alan: Again, that's going off on the same track. They have found the occasional one here or there. You still find them today. It's called acromegaly. Basically it's a malfunction of the anterior lobe of the pituitary gland, which regulates your growth hormone, and when it malfunctions, you literally can grow to quite a height, and the earlier it starts and the later it stops, the taller you will be. Do you remember the actor who played Jaws in that James Bond movie? He had those false gold teeth. Well, he had acromegaly; he was classed as a giant (also called gigantism, but it's acromegaly.) If you'll notice that when his long bones stopped growing, when they ossified in the middle, in other words, they stopped growing. The appendages of each end are fused right through the center core of the bone, the long bone. It still puts on calcium deposits, and what happens then is it starts growing around their jaws; it grows up over their eyebrows, so they have protruding eyebrows, and their hands get thick and long, so they become out of proportion. The end effect of acromegaly is occasionally it can kill people; they all come down with arthritis because the human body isn't meant to take that. It wears out the hyaline cartilage between the long bones, the knees, ankles, and so on, and that basically is gigantism. They found one too. In the ruins of Pompeii when they were excavating the bodies from the volcano that exploded there, they found one near the gate of the city, on his way out. But he was the only one amongst the whole lot who you would class as having gigantism, and when you do an analysis on the bone structure, you'll find the overhang of the eyebrow because of the continuation of calcium laid down on the bone after the long bones have stopped growing. So they can tell it was, in fact, acromegaly.

Jackie: This listener did say that these two gentlemen have been interviewed on the Art Bell show. 121

Alan: I am really surprised! If you look at Art Bell, you have two words. Art. And if you take the definition of art (and anyone can go and check.) It comes from the old French, the Latin. It's ars artcm, which actually means to fit. It means a skill, or a human skill or workmanship, as opposed to nature. In other words, it's a body of rules that are designed for perfecting, and basically the definition is a craft. Bell, of course, is simply the later version of Baal; in Scotland it's the same.

Jackie: But. Is it a possibility that that is a name that his parents gave him?

Alan: It's a possibility, but judging from what he's been coming out with, he's lying in the sarcophagus as Alexander the Great did, as Napoleon did, and as many others before them did. With Phoenix, Arizona, was having UFOs all over it at the same time there was a Sidon in Mars, and he said that NASA wasn't letting them see all these structures in Cydonia. Of course Cydonia was one of the main cities of ancient Phoenix. So he lied about the whole lot from ancient times to something that supposedly is happening now. That's pure mystery. If anybody didn't understand what he was doing, he said on the same night that he was getting reports from all over Phoenix of these UFOs, and then he tied it right in. I said that NASA won't let us get a close look at Cydonia, this place on Mars. Well, there you have Cydonia, or Sidon, in Phoenix; in ancient times, the Phoenicians.

Jackie: So are those little word games?

Alan: It's simply chasing your tails out of your own ignorance, really. They know that they're manipulating people's ignorance. Most people don't realize that the original Sidon was in Phoenix, ancient Phoenix. So, I don't know if he does his own scriptwriting or somebody else does it for him, but they certainly know the ancient stories, which they dig up and retell in a modern structure. If you can remember. H.G. Wells' War of the Worlds was broadcast in the 1930s or 1940s.

Jackie: Yes. and people jumped off roofs.

Alan: They were shooting down water towers because they thought that these were giant things that were coming down with these long legs. That was actually financed by the Rockefeller Foundation and beamed down out of the Rockefeller building, the RCA building. That was actually given government approval because it was part of the test in psychological warfare, and it worked very well.

Jackie: Oh yes, they do lest the waters every now and then, quite frequently, in fact.

Alan: Yes. Most of the media we have, literally that's their function. Media means the middle. It's the middle; that's what media means.

Jackie: Do you ever read anything without your mind doing that , so Miz, Mizriam, amaze. And you see the water below the pyramid. You see an inverted pyramid because it's a reflection going down a way on the other side of the water. You have a diamond, in other words, with a shimmering brightness in the center of it, so you have the fire in the middle. Now the ones who were in the know are called the flames. Chris de Burgh, who sings your intro song, has on that same tape, in fact, "Fire on the Water," and that was one of the symbols of the Theosophists. meaning the ones who were above the water. Below the water you had fish; above the water you had the flame.

Jackie: Who is the person who does the theme song?

Alan: Chris de Burgh. Chris de Baal, Chris of the mountain; that's precisely what it would mean. Most music is full of it, but his music, when you understand it, is full of symbology on that one tape. In fact, he has one about standing in a circle of stones waiting for his Messiah to come on the mountaintop.

Jackie: Who would his Messiah be?

Alan: I think Messiah is the end product of where they want to take themselves, not us. which is a form of immortality in this body, or the body to come in the next generation. That is theirs—their Messiah. That was the pharaoh's too: immortality. They didn't have a religion as an afterlife. They had a religion heavily symbolic of a life of continuation.

Jackie: Did these people really think that they were going to become immortal physically?

Alan: I'll give you something that I heard last night on the shortwave on the BBC. They have a little blurb every Sunday night called New Horizons; it's their science blurb. Right away they gave a blurb about genetic engineering. Do you remember when Dolly the cloned sheep came out? The main center is in Rosslyn, in Edinburgh. Scotland, which is no coincidence. I could give you a whole show on Rosslyn; it's the Line of the Rose. The Masons were heavily involved there for hundreds of years; they even built a castle for themselves. But anyway, this blurb last night said that it interviewed this guy named Campbell, which is Cam or Ham, another version of Uamball (ham/cham/cam meaning egg in Egyptian and Bell meaning Baal), and he's a top scientist there, and he said, "We've got this new breakthrough cracking the gene code concerned with aging, and we have the one ready to do with human cloning." Now the same blurb; the same bit about Dolly. Of course, every government goes by the rules, and they must go by the rules. They must go by the rules. If they remove one rule from the foundation where the first rule was laid to make it level, the whole lot crumbles, so they go by the rules, and what they must do is present to the public the scenario of what they want. They'll always say, as they said with Dolly, the reason they are giving this out to the public is that it's a big decision as to whether mankind should eventually end up being cloned. So, the public is left with this question that it's up to them. The government in every country then creates a department; everyone created a department on genetic ethics, they call it. Of course the public has no input at all, and the public has so much bombardment about the next crisis, it's out of their hands. It's a legal move. In other words, nobody contests it; they let it go and carry on. So now they've admitted that they've gotten to the stage where they're ready to duplicate human beings.

Jackie: I have a feeling they're doing it already. Alan: I wouldn't be surprised.

Jackie: Usually they release this information after they've already done it. I know this, because at least ten years ago I had a magazine called In Health, and on the cover of this magazine there was a picture of two cows and inside the article said that these two cows were clones. I was astounded; I saved the magazine but ultimately lost it. You know what really blew me away was that they told us how they did it, how they took the nucleus out of the ovum and placed the cell in there, and then they cloned these cows. Do you remember seeing the movie The Boys from Brazil? This was a black and white film done years ago. Well. I saw the movie after I got this magazine article, and the guy who was doing the research on this movie talked to the scientist who did the cloning, and in this movie he explained the very same process. You know, with their partial-birth abortions that they're doing with the almost full-term and sometimes full-term babies, they're using brain material.

Alan: They call it fetal harvesting.

Jackie: Well, as soon as I heard about that, I had this thought that they're using it in longevity processes and probably for cloning.

Alan: Yes, no doubt about it. When Rosslyn Castle was established by the Freemasons back in the 1500s, the whole structure was dedicated to Freemasonry. Eventually the people, through political pressure, evacuated the place. I heard the whole area is strewn with underground tunnels that go to Edinburgh Castle, which is the castle of Eden, of course, on a mountain, right along the Linlithgow area and underneath Rosslyn. This is where the institute, which has led genetics, is based right now. Rosslyn is the line, literally meaning the lineage.

Jackie: Isn't there a Roswell, New Mexico, where there's a lot of UFO activity?

Alan: UFO only means unidentified. Sure, they've had UFOs for many, many years. In the October 1948 edition of Popular Mechanics, they did a 4-page spread on the testing of flying saucers down in the Nevada desert in the US. At the time, they were putting into them atomic energy, which was superheated hydrogen, literally blasted out of a jet, and it would create fantastic velocities. Most of them at the time had crashed. They were strewn all over the area where this reporter from Popular Mechanics was. Of course they were highly radioactive, but they certainly could move at one tremendous speed. They also tested them up here in Canada; one of them crashed not far from by the rules, and they must go by the rules. They must go by the rules. If they remove one rule from the foundation where the first rule was laid to make it level, the whole lot crumbles, so they go by the rules, and what they must do is present to the public the scenario of what they want. They'll always say, as they said with Dolly, the reason they are giving this out to the public is that it's a big decision as to whether mankind should eventually end up being cloned. So, the public is left with this question that it's up to them. The government in every country then creates a department; everyone created a department on genetic ethics, they call it. Of course the public has no input at all. and the public has so much bombardment about the next crisis, it's out of their hands. It's a legal move. In other words, nobody contests it. They let it go and carry on. So now they've admitted that they've gotten to the stage where they're ready to duplicate human beings.

Jackie: I have a feeling they're doing it already. Alan: I wouldn't be surprised.

Jackie: Usually they release this information after they've already done it. I know this because at least ten years ago I had a magazine called In Health, and on the cover of this magazine there was a picture of two cows, and inside the article it said that these two cows were* clones. I was astounded: I saved the magazine but ultimately lost it. You know what really blew me away was that they told us how they did it. how they took the nucleus out of the ovum, and they placed the cell in there, and then they cloned these cows. Do you remember seeing the movie The Boys from Brazil? This was a black and white film done years ago.

Well. I saw the movie after I got this magazine article, and the guy who was doing the research on this movie talked to the scientist who did the cloning, and in this movie he explained the very same process. You know, with their partial-birth abortions that they're doing with the almost full-term and sometimes full-term babies, they're using brain material.

Alan: They call it fetal harvesting.

Jackie: Well, as soon as I heard about that. I had this thought that they're using it in longevity processes and probably for cloning.

Alan: Yes, no doubt about it. When Rosslyn Castle was established by the Freemasons back in the 1500s, the whole structure was dedicated to Freemasonry. Eventually the people, through political pressure, evacuated the place. The whole area is strewn with underground tunnels that go to Edinburgh Castle, which is the castle of Eden, of course, on a mountain, right along the Linlithgow area and underneath Rosslyn. This is where the institute, which has led genetics, is based right now. Rosslyn is the line, literally meaning the lineage.

Jackie: Isn't there a Roswell, New Mexico, where there's a lot of UFO activity?

Alan: UFO only means unidentified. Sure, they've had UFOs for many, many years. In the October 1948 edition of Popular Mechanics, they did a 4-page spread on the testing of flying saucers down in the Nevada desert in the US. At the time, they were putting into them atomic energy, which was superheated hydrogen literally blasted out of a jet, and it would create fantastic velocities. Most of them at the time had crashed. They were strewn all over the area where this reporter from Popular Mechanics was. Of course they were highly radioactive, but they certainly could move at one tremendous speed. They also tested them up here in Canada; one of them crashed not far from where I am; the crater is still there from where it landed. That was made at the time by the same firm, Avro, which did the Avro Arrow (the jet that was eventually scuttled.) But, yes, it was a man (I've actually got it on tape) in this flying saucer. But when these flying saucers appeared back in the 1900s, even in Britain they always had a circle where they landed. The first thing they said then was that the area was highly radioactive; well, that would go with atomic pilot testing.

Jackie: They did the thing on television about all these strange shapes in the fields.

Alan: Don't forget the media started that (the fire in the middle); it's meant to confuse you.

Jackie: Pyramid means mirage?

Alan: Mirage comes from the same root.

Jackie: You said pyramid meant mirror.

Alan: That's another part of it; mir means mother. Don't forget there are the veils of Isis, as they call it; you peel one back at a time. It's just like taking a curtain away, and there's another one there under it and another message, and you find that all of the meanings go back to the one eventually. So Mother, the mother of wisdom, Mother meaning home, the fire of wisdom is the basic point of it. and a mirage coming from the same part of it. mir. mirage. People can check this for themselves, and they'll find that I'm right on with it. That's what they use as a symbol in Theosophy: the upright pyramid, then the one going down below, and the fire basically in the middle. Then they had a whole lot of symbols going down from the bottom one. meaning stages of progression or digression or whatever.

Jackie: What about pyramid power?

Alan: Oh, no, no, no. The only power you have is understanding what it's about. There's no point in going up and down passageways counting every inch that you pass. That's a complete cover. It's funny that Tom Valentine was the first guy to put this out here publicly. He put it out in his book Man's Monument to Man. and a whole bunch of writings, and at the time Tom Valentine belonged to the Stella group. Stella, of course, is on the temple of Isis; the writing there is of the so-called secrets. He's sold the whole lot to a Dr. Gene Scott, who preaches out of his own church in

I don't know if Valentine patented it or what, but Scott bought all the rights. Jackie: About pyramid power and stuff?

Alan: It's all diversions; it's a complete diversion in many senses. It's very elitist, which is what the whole system ends up being. It's very, very, very elitist.

Jackie: You know, if these guys have been the keepers of knowledge or the hidiers of knowledge, of truth, is there a possibility that somewhere in all of this mishmash, some of the truth is hidden or that there is truth in some of this?

Alan: What I'm telling you, and I've tried in some ways to explain it, is to realize that, first of all, everything that you have believed in, including history, has been created especially for you. Now, in Where I am, the crater is still there from where it landed. That was made at the time by the same firm, Avro, which did the Avro Arrow (the jet that was eventually scuttled.) But, yes, it was a man (I've actually got it on tape) in this flying saucer. But when these living saucers appeared back in the 1960s, even in Britain they always had a circle where they landed. The first thing they said then was that the area was highly radioactive; well, that would go with atomic pilot testing.

Jackie: They did the thing on television about all these strange shapes in the fields.

Alan: Don't forget the media started that (the fire in the middle); it's meant to confuse you.

Jackie: Pyramid means mirage?

Alan: Mirage comes from the same root. Jackie: You said pyramid meant mirror.

Alan: That's another part of it; mir means mother. Don't forget there are the veils of Isis, as they call it; you peel one back at a time. It's just like taking a curtain away, and there's another one there under it and another message, and you find that all of the meanings go back to the one eventually. So Mother, the mother of wisdom, Mother meaning home, the fire of wisdom is the basic point of it. and a mirage coming from the same part of it. mir. mirage. People can check this for themselves, and they'll find that I'm right on with it. That's what they use as a symbol in Theosophy: the upright pyramid, then the one going down below, and the fire basically in the middle. Then they had a whole lot of symbols going down from the bottom one, meaning stages of progression or digression or whatever.

Jackie: What about pyramid power?

Alan: Oh. No, no, no. The only power you have is understanding what it's about. There's no point in going up and down passageways counting every inch that you pass. That's a complete decoy. It's funny that Tom Valentine was the first guy to put this out here publicly; he put it out in his book Man's Monument to Man. and a whole bunch of writings, and at the time Tom Valentine belonged to the Stella group. Stella, of course, is on the temple of Isis; the writing there is of the so-called secrets. He's sold the whole lot to a Dr. Oene Scott, who preaches out of his own church in

I don't know if Valentine patented it or what, but Scott bought all the rights. Jackie: About pyramid power and stuff?

Alan: It's all diversions; it's a complete diversion in many senses. It's very elitist, which is what the whole system ends up being. It's very, very, very elitist.

Jackie: You know, if these guys have been the keepers of knowledge or the hiders of knowledge, of truth, is there a possibility that somewhere in all of this mishmash, some of the truth is hidden or that there is truth in some of this?

Alan: What I'm telling you, and I've tried in some ways to explain it, is to realize that, first of all, everything that you have believed in, including history, has been created especially for you. Now, in a legal sense, it's correct. In a legal sense it's correct because it's understood that most people will take it at face value and accept it. But if you look at the same material from another side and see it from the writer's point of view, you get a different meaning to the same words, the other side of the mirror. It's like the same thing; that man is God, and God is man.

Jackie: Like a mirror image, upside down, inside out, and backwards.

Alan: That's correct. It's like Mandela's speech; if you stop seeing that he's not addressing the people, he's addressing his own. Jackie: Yes. But he's telling them they're children of God. I'm not saying they're God.

Alan: Yes. But is he? Is he? Is he also telling his own elite what they are? That's how it works. Jackie: In other words, the children of the elite, the elite being God.

Alan: Them being God; they believe they are. They call themselves gods, don't they? If you look at it from another perspective, they have us turned upside down, because in reality, we are made in the image of God. They basically do, if you look at them all. And I'm talking about everybody who leads, who is supposed to be a servant, including Mandela. Now they're the servants, and yet they're mastering us. They have us convinced that we should be groveling with shame on our knees, and yet we are made in the image of God. As Jesus says, "Don't you know you are gods?" He was giving the whole thing away.

Jackie: Well. Jesus didn't actually say that. What he said was, "It has been said that, 'Know you not that you are gods?'" Lie was quoting from one of the prophets of the Old Testament, but he did, of course, tell us over and over that who he was is our potential. In other words, all of these things that you see, you can do this.

Alan: Yet we've had many theocracies since, who have had us on our knees groveling in the mud asking for forgiveness. We'll never be good; we're too stupid to be good. Everybody's done that. It starts right off at school.

Jackie: It starts out with our parents, who believed the way we believe, and everybody down through the ages has believed. This is the whole thing. I really believe that he meant what he said, and when we really know 'it, we will be able to do...

Alan: That's the thing: it's breaking that mirror, and then you can really see what's on the other side.

Jackie: That was the truth that he was bringing us; the truth was setting us free. He told us that the truth shall set you free. What I believe is that it sets us free from the lies of this world.

Alan: Yes, from the constant groveling and the conditioning to lower your eyes and respect a suit and a tie talking. There was a book out years ago called Straight and Crooked Thinking. It was put out in Britain, and this man explained that you can go into Hyde Park in London, where you get people gathering there to speak; they make speeches; it's tradition. They're called soapbox speakers; they stand on a soapbox. You get guys with holes in their sleeves and old coats on.tattered. They're going up there, and they speak about whatever, and people will crowd round about them and generally boo them or mock them. This author explained that this man could be telling you information that no one else will ever tell you again in your life, and you'll mock him, but you get that same man. You dress him up. You put him in a suit and a tie. You build him up in the media, and you present him in the London Palladium; you have the audience listening to really good classical music before he comes on, and then a speech before he comes on that builds him up even further. When the man comes out and says the same thing again, everyone will sit with rapt attention because they've been conditioned to now listen in a different way.

Jackie: Yes, a good example of that is that a friend is now putting aside food because of Y2K: the talking heads on television are telling people about Y2K. And now people are getting hysterical.

Alan: You have to go, not out of fear, mind you, because fear is the technique that they use to move a herd or a flock of sheep; they use fear—they always have. In ancient times, when they went in to make slaves in a population, they would literally drive the people into a pen, and that was because they had live groups moving altogether to a nucleus until they had the people in the middle so that they could capture them all. (Our name for a peninsula comes from pen. A peninsula is an outcrop of land from the mainland; it's still joined, but it's joined at a small head called the isthmus. What they used to do is come in ships, usually five ships. One would take the isthmus where the land joins the mainland, and they would create four other points round the coast and then move inland, and they would take nets with them. This is where the fables of Poseidon and Neptune come from, and that's why it symbolizes a sea king; it comes from the sea with nets. Of course as they went in. They made a fearsome noise; they had horns on their heads and all the rest from their helmets. and they banged their shields. People who were basically Stone Age. Not apes certainly, but Stone Age people—people who were left from the last holocaust of the planet. They were easily terrified; they were herded into this pen in the middle, and then they were literally collared. The word collar comes from that: they collared the people into a pen. That's exactly the technique that is done by people today, only it's psychological; they use the media. The media (in fact, if you were to check up in any of the modern dictionaries or a university dictionary or maybe the one in the library, which you can't take out) the muses were used as techniques of control for thousands of years. They had nine muses; that's why the lodge of Benjamin Franklin was the lodge of the Nine Sisters in France. But now they've added a 10th one, and the 10th one is called the media. That's official.

Jackie: Interesting. You told us about the crook and the staff and the sheep and the pharaohs. This goes all the way back to the pharaohs and how they used the crook to pull them out. Then in the New Testament, Jesus says that he is our shepherd and we are his sheep, and you said that he could not have said that, because in a sense he's calling us stupid and he's just going right along with their game. Is it a possibility that because these people were so used to that symbology and that language that Jesus was using the same...

Alan: No, no, no. I really could never see it happening. No, sheep will always be sheep, you see. You can't make anything out of sheep. A sheep will always be a sheep. You can't make it into anything other than what it is.

Jackie: So you think that they pasted it in here.

Alan: Oh yes, the whole New Testament is full, completely full of what we call the mysteries or Masonic symbology. Don't forget that it said in the beginning it's Babylon of the ages: it's Mystery Babylon. You even have Jesus going into an upper room to make the last supper. Well, the upper room is the upper chamber in the House of Commons in Britain or here in Parliament in Canada. You have your own oval office; it's where you meet in secret. Chambers comes from ham, which is egg, which is oval, so in upper chambers. So it's all being adjusted to suit their terminology for themselves; the whole Bible is full of it.

Jackie: There is truth in there, too.

Alan: The truth is in the little parts, and again too. The fact is they must give you truth as well. Jackie: Why must they?

Alan: Because you're dealing with a mind like a robot. All of our structure and institution of government and rule is called order, given the term primordial, the knowledge of before the order was created, the first set. The first rule of an order is that you lay down your foundation. You lay it down; that's what they call laying down a foundation. A pyramid is laid down in a foundation, and every stone from there on up can only be as true as the foundation. If anything's out in that pyramid, and I'm also talking as a computer is programmed, anything at all. and the whole system collapses. They will not break the rules; they'll bend them certainly. They'll give it to you, but you don't understand what it means; you take the external, but they laugh their heads off: they know the internal. They say that ignorance is no excuse for breaking the law.

Jackie: Well, we do know that the truth is in our heart. The truth is within us.

Alan: But isn't that the one thing that we're told to disregard? You know that kids instinctively know it. On my first day at school, when I was five, I was taken there by my mom so then I'd know where to go. I heard this clapping sound before I got in (and I can still see it now), and I went inside, and there's the teacher with all these kids sitting and clapping their hands in unison, and that was the first thing that hit me: they are all acting like one person. They're getting taught to act as a group right off the bat. That's the first thing you're taught. I can still see it in my mind today. She said, "Sit down and clap your hands." I didn't want to. She said. "Don't you want to join the rest?" That was the first part of school; the first day of school was to teach you a uniform way of behavior and thinking and doing. Literally everything from then on is exactly that. Now it's even worse; they have them sitting in circles or half circles like the Delphi technique. It's all about how you feel, not what you know. That's the technique that's used.

Jackie: When were your school years?

Alan: Oh, they were back in the late 1950s. I remember many, many days going right from there, day by day, and the various things that were shown. Everybody repeat after me. Well, it was just like sheep, you know. She would say something, and we'd all reply automatically. Conditioned responses, you get taught right away. That molds your way of thinking from the very beginning. You see. The mind is composed of the analysis of the input through your five senses. School mainly is done by seeing and hearing; the only touching you get, or used to get, was when you got the strap. You see, that was the only thing you could actually touch.

So, if memory of previous inputs exists for a similar experience, then your recognition comes into play. Subsequent Action is either a replay of a previous action or a variation of it, or it's a completely new response, should there be no memory available at all.

People who want to control recognize the pattern of stimuli and response in others. They did this a long time ago; that's why the eye is the symbol. By the interference of stimuli the perceiver is tricked into a response, which is false for the situation.

We've literally been conditioned from the day we went to school, and previously by TV (now it's the babysitter) and what your parents believed. It is stimulus and response, and it's taught immediately at school. Why do you think they call it a school? It's a school of fish. You're in the net. It's the only one where they use a school of fish. That's where you take children. So, in the 1950s a word was created that was never used before, kid; a kid is a goat. It's not a child anymore; it's now a baby goat. Yet they have us conditioned so well that if you were sitting in front of your fire, you've got a nice fire going in the home, you're relaxed, and a couple of you are there, you'd be very relaxed. A car or two fly up to the door, scream on the brakes, and somebody jumps out and says, "Fire, fire, get out. Fire." Now, you will jump up and get out; you will do it. You will do it because it's never happened to you before. You've been taught to respond and to act when you hear certain alarm sounds, such as fire. You will deny your own senses even though you are sitting in front of your own fire and run outside. You see? These are conditioned responses. Now the media uses that all the time. They pick words out of thin air. They speak it, the spoken word, and they get two letters and a number and put it together: Y2K. Now it's repeated a thousand times; it's not abstract anymore. 11 becomes very solid in your hearing. The more those guys with the suits and ties on say it. (They call them newscasters, who just read what's in front of them.) The more believable it seems.

PART II INTERVIEW 2

Jackie: We're going to be finishing out the year with Alan from Canada, a wonderful, informed, and informing guest. It's the longest that I've ever stayed on a subject, but of course, for those of you who have been listening, we've been in the same church, but we've been in lots of different pews over the past four weeks. We actually intended to talk about how from the moment we took our first breath coming into his world, down through the ages, our parents, and their parents, it's been cons back; we've been lied to: not just outright lies, but also because the truth has been withheld. What Alan has been doing is helping to uncover and shed light on some of these lies, because darkness is really an absence of light. Jesus told us, "Ye shall know the truth, and it will set you free," and that's what we want. Alan will have to be the one that helps with this. How do we let go when it hurts so much to find out that these things that are so important (the very core of the most important part of the whole world) are things that we've been lied to about? So that's what we're going to do tonight. I don't know where we begin; we were heading in this direction last night, but I must ask you one thing. You made a comment last night, and I wrote it down because I did not want to interrupt your flow of thought. You said history has been rewritten for us: it has been created for us. I've asked this before, but how do we know that the books, the information that you've been sharing with us, are true if history has been created for us? Where does this information come from that we can trust?

Alan: What I've found is that most information that's been changed happened in this century, because in the last century most people couldn't read or write, and so information was always kept with a select few from our beginnings from Sumer right up to the twentieth century. My own great-grandfather couldn't read or write; that was very, very common. He never went to school. The whole generation was illiterate, except for the people who ruled, who were always Freemasons in every country that ruled.

Generally they were members of the clergy or the upper business establishment.

Jackie: When you say Freemasons, do you use that as a generic term for the secret societies, because there are lots of them, aren't there?

Alan: They're all really the same thing. They supposedly have different functions, and occasionally they've been used against each other, but it's always to bring the herd, the cattle, us, into a certain direction, all down through the ages. What they did even in the days of Sumer was to pick out certain ones who were brighter than the rest of the people, and they would train them from an early age. They even have the school children's records from the classrooms in Sumer; they've unearthed many of them. They went to school from sunup to sundown every day, and they got caned by the cahn, the teachers, ' they were out of line (again, a Masonic term; everything is Masonic). They took their lunches to school, just like they do this century. They learned how to be administrators; they administered all the surrounding land and the majority of people who we would call the laboring class. What you find in all of government government can't exist unless everyone overproduces because they must take that overproduction and then use it for themselves, and then from that portion they take, they then create the armies and feed them, which is the first right arm of government; on the other side is the religious side. That's what they did in Sumer (and we're talking three and a half thousand B.C., at least); they gave the children in Sumer the same types of lessons we do today. They were trained in a certain course, and we even use the same language and terminology because it's astronomical terminology. There were people who trained, students who trained in a course, as you would make a course in the sky, an arc, by a hierarchy (higher key.) So they were confined like a planet is confined in its course (it can't go to the left or the right or look for itself); they only trained them in one direction. In other words, they were given only enough information that would allow them to fulfill their particular task as an administrator. That's how it's always been, right up until this century. In fact, it's the same going through university today. In ancient times, they were actually called degrees as well when they were studying because they would use notches on an arc to determine the orbit, or the actual arc that a planet, or the sun, or the moon, would use going through the sky: they called them a degree. They had the same word in all of the Aramaic, the Chaldean, the Hebrew, the Canaanite, and all the rest of them; they had the same word for stair, for degree, for step, and for the rung of a ladder, as in Jacob's Ladder. It's all the same word; it's basically a degree. When they were being taught for the priesthood, they would go up the ziggurat or mastaba (a type of pyramid), and depending on the level that you attained each time, you would actually come up a step, or a degree, towards the top of the pyramid, and when you got to the top, you had the view of the whole heaven. The way they trained them was from one side at a time, from the bottom up.

So we find today in the scholastic system we have teachers who have been taught in their course, and only enough to teach the ones below them. Those teachers themselves, because they're conditioned into that course, haven't thought to the left or the right or above or below of the course. It's like a tunnel you're put into, and that becomes your complete reality to you. That's exactly how I was then and how it is today. When you look through history, you find the great inventors or discoverers that they give you.

And you analyze the names; they're like fairy stories. The people's names literally become fairy stories. They're occultic names; they're hidden names, like Christopher Columbus (Cristobal Columbi.) They changed it for the English-speaking peoples to Christopher Columbus. In reality, I suppose it means the same; a column is a column. It's a column of troops, it's a column of people, and it's actually a colony. That's why we were given him as a so-called discoverer. Cristal Baal was a clear light. So we find that it's like Lancelot and Percival in King Arthur. Lancelot is given his name because literally he likes to lance a lot. Percival is the wise man who perceives all. So when you start looking at people's names and you figure out what they mean, you're literally being given another snow job.

Jackie: What about our names, our common names, like Jacqueline and Alan?

Alan: Again, there's so much meaning in a name because it's used legally, and it's an identification; you come forward and you identify yourself. But most people today have taken names from leaders they had at one time, either of a tribe or a clan, or whatever, and just like in the old days, even in Scotland, the clan chief, or the clan lord, really, (there was a nobility there,) the nobility never married within the people that they ruled, and the people eventually (including the ones who would wander into the tribe) would take the name of that leader. But those who have the actual noble titles, even today, are a different people altogether from the people they rule over.

Jackie: They literally pretty much created their own bloodline, didn't they?

Alan: They always did. They always intermarried cousins. The bloodline was always primarily through the female line to throw us off. because the world consists of many, many fronts. Everything you see is a front for something else.

Jackie: I'm talking about what you said about the early priests, who were really devious and homosexual, and they did selective breeding, and the selective breeding began way back there, even before Sumer, which is supposed to be our most ancient...

Alan: Even all the modern experts today agree that there's no way they just suddenly invented writing; it had to have been kept a secret long before that, so much so that pictured with a spotted coat, and the spotted coat, or Dalmatian, is the symbolism of them breeding into a darker race to achieve a disguise. We're talking about very white people, almost albino, who did this long, long ago. It's well documented, especially in the Middle Eastern legends. If you go to the Middle East today, it's not just your money that they're after, the baksheesh; they also want to look at your eyes, and the bluer your eyes are... Once you stop and talk to them, you'll find out why they're so fascinated, because they have these ancient legends of people coming from the mountains; the Hamitics were one of them, they followed the god Ilam, and they were hated all over the Middle East. Ham has two variations in the English language; one is Cam, as in Campbell, Lord Campbell, of Great Britain, and you have Hams all over England, Buckingham Palace, for example. Those people were hated all over the Middle East. They were cutthroats; in 1200 B.C. they called them robbers and cutthroats and murderers because they had no real god as such; they were almost shamanistic; they were the same.

people as the Khazars, who were found much later, and they had the same titles as the Khazars. In fact, as they swept through the Middle East, They teamed up with another two of the outer tribes, called the Dannites, as recorded in Ages in Chaos , for instance. They also drove all their cattle with them, so they were the cattle kings, whom they call the Hyksos. The shepherd kings is a misnomer; it should probably be called the cattle kings. When they found them once again, in the eighth century A.D., they were called the Khazars, or cattle kings.

Jackie: Has it got anything to do with the tribes we just talked about.

Alan: It has, because all this tribe nonsense that has been fed to people is a complete sidetrack, which is being used once again to create dissension amongst people. We're talking about people who have literally dominated each part of the planet, often getting the rest of the people to fight one another towards the Great Work, because it's caused through conflict. Sometimes they will kill each other off at the top; that's why they used to decapitate nobility when they took over, because that is symbolic of the head of that tree. So, the Hamitics, the Mohammedans, and Mohammed are basically relations to the same one as the one in Britain. Everywhere you go in Britain, you have a hamlet, and hundreds of the names of the places in Britain were named after Ham. Now, these people don't claim to be Jewish, and they aren't; they certainly gave other people the name of being Jews because they created cultures for other people. The ones who were swept into Wales and England, for instance (don't forget, I'm not blaming a people, because most people really don't know their roots; they were followers), the people in Wales call themselves Cymru, and they live next to the Cambrian Mountains. If you change it into the Latin and give it its proper name as it was used also when they went into Jutland, which is Denmark, the Romans recorded this; their name was Simerian, so you literally have the descendants of Sumer. You just change one letter, from a u to an i, which is quite legitimate, because in Sumerian you can take any vowel you want (in most languages in the Middle East you can), and you can interchange i with o with e. The people in Wales now are dark-haired and light-skinned, and that's exactly what the Sumerians were.

Jackie: Miss Effie has been doing some outrageous research based on what you've been telling us. And she's been going to the library and getting books; she has many of her own, and where she couldn't find things, she's been going back into her encyclopedias (she has 1950s or 1960s Britannicas,) and she couldn't find anything about the priests who lived in the caves in there, so she went back to the Stone Age, and they were describing these people as dark-haired and light-skinned.

Alan: That's right. In the book on Sumer that I've mentioned a few times, you will find that they said that the great gods lived in the caves high on the mountains, and they only came out when it was getting dark because they couldn't take the light because they were albino.

Jackie: You said before that you couldn't see their eyes, so they painted an eye on their forehead.

Alan: That's right. Even in Greece, they took over the whole Mediterranean and the Aegean Sea, and that's where you get the legends of the Cyclops, and these legends on fact. They usually portrayed them as having their eyes closed or blind but having a big eye on their forehead; and, of course, that's also what they painted on initiates into the mysteries in Egypt.

Jackie: That's where the single eye comes from?

Alan: Yeah. It symbolizes too. wisdom, knowledge. These priests for thousands of years could observe people coolly and calmly, from the very beginning they definitely have had a scientist's ability to put emotion to the side, or else they've never had it in the first place, I'm not quite sure which. I'm more inclined to the latter. But they observe man as an animal.

Part of their function has always been to tell man that he's an animal, and yet by the same token, they have rules. If you think along the same lines as a computer would think, for instance, you would have to go by your own logic, which is a set of rules. Whenever they want, man, like today, to start thinking about euthanasia, and so on, they always want your cooperation in whatever they push forward. If they can't get it, they then create a problem, which brings about the talk and the consensus about what they wanted in the first place, like abortion. So. You had a tribe going into Wales, and you had the original Hebrews, who were not a religious people at all. and had nothing to do with the Old Testament; they were called the Haberew, and the Haberew were one of the tribes of the Hyksos that are well described in any book pertaining to the Middle East. They drove right through from the Caucasus Mountains, where the Khazars were found later, right through into Egypt, and they slaughtered everybody in their path. Along with the Hammites, they were also known to take all of the women (all the good-looking women and the younger ones), and they would kill all the men who were able-bodied. The men, actually (for the feminists out there,) never had it that good; they were always guaranteed to get the chop. What they did then was to cut the back of the tendon of the leg for the old and the infirm and the very young, or what they termed rejects, and that is where the term comes from that still exists today, being hamstrung; they were known all over the Middle East for that. They were the Hammites, and they settled in England eventually, and prior to that they were the Merovingians and then the Carolingians.

Jackie: This is the tribe that's supposed to be the chosen?

Alan: They're one of them. There are three, and they control a good part of Europe through royal lineage and bloodlines. They always make their home in a place called something-or-another-Ham, or else Ham is in their name; in Scotland they still call it Cam. Cam and ham both come from ham, which is an egg shape, or it means white at the same time; both cam and ham are the same words, they're just more refined in English from the original ham. These stories are well known; they're factual history in the Middle East.

Jackie: Does this help a person who wants to believe this to be able to look at these Biblical stories and do this historical research and say. "There is a chosen tribe, and they are us?" The white Anglo-Saxon.

Alan: You should define Anglo-Saxon, and anybody can go and do it. Jackie: I'm saying Anglo-Saxon, and I'm not sure they are Alan: Anglo-Saxon is a builder's term. It's literally an angle. A right angle or a true angle. You can call the Hammities Anglos, if you want, and the majority of the English think they are themselves, but The royalty, the inbred ones, who have titles of nobility, claim to have heredity going right back; they're the ones who are really the true Angle, to put it in a Masonic term.

Jackie: So the rest of the people are just left out in the cold.

Alan: Yes, and they don't know it. We've all been given an identity because we've always been followers; we've always been used, especially illiterate people. It's so easy to get them together, and one or two generations is all it takes to give them an identity through priesthoods who have the knowledge and through schooling.

Jackie: The history is there for people to check out. The Bible has been so tampered with, and yet there is truth in it. Many people have done their own research and have known some of it, and you've presented pieces of it to us. When we get to the Bible, and especially the King James version, it's like pieces of the black hole. That is the foundation of the belief that many people have today, that we are not the children of God.

Alan: We've been fed bucketfuls of lies. You have to leave people to their own finding, because most people will wander in a wilderness until they die. Even in the terms of ancient times, wandering in a wilderness meant wandering amongst your own kind who didn't understand. It didn't mean a desert. People will argue until they die, and the next generation will do the same. standing up. In Wales, you have the dragon, the red dragon of Wales. In Ireland, you have the eyrie , and that's what they call Ireland, Hire, and you have the harp; they say it's the harp of David, but it's also called evric. And an eyrie is the nest of the eagle. That's all in Britain. The people in Britain are generally ignorant of the fact themselves, but those in society at the very top are very, very aware of them, because even though they rule over the people and the people are kept in ignorance and they'll go off and fight and die for them as they have done for hundreds of years, the nobility know they are a separate race altogether. They still call all the people cattle, of course, at the top.

Jackie: In defense of the world order, we will have to kill and die. I would like to ask you if you have any thoughts that you would like to share with our listeners who are steadfast with the King James Bible is the Word of God, is the truth, and God would not let anyone tamper with His Word.

Alan: Since histories have always been written by the ones who rule, and that includes all Bibles, and I mean every religion's Bible, too, they have been written by them.

Jackie: Is it because it's called the Holy Bible?

Alan: They can call it whatever they want, but the fact is that every religion has been written by an international elite right from the very beginning, with the definite purpose in mind to create conflict, to make people go off and die for whichever god they've been taught to believe in. The first thing that every child is taught is what stays in their head forever; that's why people stay Christian and Mohammedan. That's just the way it is; every psychologist knows that. So we've got to realize that people will always return to a concept or a security zone. I think I mentioned earlier today about Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who gave a brilliant example of the comfort zone, which is no comfort at all when you get down to it. Alexander said that when he was a young boy (he was one of the elite ruling class of the new Russia), he and his brother went to look down upon a road, which led from a mine to a prison camp, and they watched the same gang being herded by two guards back to the prison camp every evening, and one month they saw one of the prisoners knocking down a guard and taking his rifle, and another prisoner did the same with the guard at the rear.

Then the two started shouting at everybody else, saying, "Let's escape; let's escape now!" And after about three minutes, the rest of them stood and looked dumbly at the ground, and the two guys took off by themselves. Alexander and his brother watched for about five minutes while the guys shuffled about, murmuring and looking down: their spirits were broken, of course; they'd been under a massive food deprivation and everything else, and in unison they eventually started shuffling off back to the prison camp on their own. where, no doubt, they were tortured and probably killed because they would get blamed for taking part and killing two guards.

They went back to the security, which is no security at all: they went back to their pen. That is how most people, even when they're faced with truth, will react. Their conditioning will make them do so. Because to become unconditioned, to become deconditioned, to become awake or alive, can be a scary thing for a lot of people, because the crutches have gone, and you're now on your own for the first time in your life.

Jackie: But you're not alone.

Alan: But you think you are, you see. All this time you believed there's something taking care of you because you're too weak, stupid, dumb, helpless, rotten, and bad to do it yourself. Suddenly you realize, 'I'm not a mass murderer, I don't go around beating up people, I don't steal from people, and I can start speaking for myself now and talking back to these people on their own terms and looking them straight in the eye.' 7 When you think how much wealth has been dug out of the planet for thousands of years by the masses of people and how few hands it has ended up in. And this is the twentieth century. Now, even in socialism, they've taken all the benefits that they've gained, the so-called free health care (which wasn't free at all; it was all funded from our pockets,) and they've taken it away bit by bit, as they are in Canada, for instance. So, what you have to remember is that what the master gives, the master always takes away. It's part of the game. But until we realize that the media and all the politicians (I don't even bother to check if they're CFR anymore) I just take it for granted that they are. They have been through the system;

they wouldn't be in IL unless they were accepted. That's a simple fact. The Zionist Protocols said that 'Whenever a hero rises amongst the people, regardless of the side, he will be one of ours'; that's just the way it is, because that's the technique they've used all along.

Jackie: What about Rush Limbaugh?

Alan: Rush Limbaugh did the usual thing; he started off by getting what was called the right-wing to follow him by saying all the things that they're conditioned to accept. He became a hero because he was sitting there with scriptwriters and all these facts, and when it came to NAFTA, he did the usual thing: he was the bull, and the cattle followed him. A right angle he goes, and everybody goes for NA1TA. That's how you do it. The left-wingers are the same.

Jackie: So who's behind him?

Alan: Lies are part of the media control. The media is a tool of the elite; they always have been and they always will be. They're in the middle, but their job is to control the people. You can't watch a news show today without knowing that everything that's coming out is either terror or fear—fear to come, possible fear: you're going to get poorer for sure. Then they dazzle it up with sports and all these things in between to try and trivialize reality, what we're given as reality. So your reactions to the input won't be correct. You end up being very confused, and when you're confused, you're very easily led. Nothing is by accident. The media is definitely the big, big tool today; in fact, it's taken over from the priesthoods.

137

Jackie: I have a friend who said that he was really concerned about me; he said that he loves me and that he's afraid I'm going to hell because I didn't believe exactly the way he did.

Alan: Well, those ones that are stuck in that will be in it forever. Jackie: He said he thought I was getting into mysticism.

Alan: Don't forget that a mystery is only something that you don't understand yet. Once you understand it. It's no mystery. Jackie: But the word mysticism was used.

Alan: It's the same thing. It basically means things you don't understand or a technique you don't understand! A mystery is only something you don't understand yet. Once you do understand it, the mystery is gone. That's what they call the mysteries; they are no longer mysteries to the person who came out knowing the answers. But that's why they were wrapped in so many different veils and puzzles for the initiates.

PART II INTERVIEW 3

Jackie: Let's get started talking about deprogramming. Folks, if a whole lot of people do a little bit...

Alan: Yes. I really think it does come down to that because so much of shortwave, like any other medium or media, has big backing, and you'll always hear what they want you to hear where you have the big backing. That's why there are very few avenues for people to get the message out and not be controlled or not be part of the management movement. This is one of the few shows that exist where it's voluntary contribution that keeps the whole thing going, there's no party line being spouted, and there's no control mechanism in play as far as what's being said here. It's just the opposite, in fact, and so they would be very, very happy if you went off the air. I'm sure. What I'd like to say too. Is you sec? Once I'm off the air (I know this for a fact, because I've watched it happen to others in the past, more in the remote past than now,) they come in, they start off with the usual on the last track that I would just leave, and they'll lead you right back into the corral, right back into it.

Jackie: They'll try to.

Alan: It works. They know the psychology; they have banks of psychologists working at all levels of the government, at the top; every country does. They have just as many psychologists as they do lawyers, and so does the military at the top. It's a well- established fact that the old Cyclops that I talked about last night is still well in operation today, and it's called FSYOFS today, and it's the same technique. What has always worked on man will always work on man. In other words, they give you the stimulus, they know how you will react to it according to previous experience, and then they simply lead you to where they want you to go, which is right back into the pen. It's a well-proven technique; the techniques never fail; they've used it all, down through thousands of years, from the earliest of times. Nothing, in fact, is really new, and maybe that's a good place to start this off.

I don't take notes or write up a program or think of what I'm going to say. It just comes right out of me, which is the best way to communicate to anybody. That's the only way we can get real truth out of people; it's what's inside of them. It's a good way to start out, because I was going to talk about the media and mainly about movies and the film industry, which is only a new medium of putting across the ancient techniques. They can go way beyond Plato to the earliest of times, which wise men certainly did when they picked out the cream of the crop of the fish, so to speak, and schooled them. They also schooled people in what they called the arts. The arts are part of entertainment, and when you speak of entertainment, you are entering the tin. and it comes from tain, T-A-I-N, and you're entering a skin or a cover or a shell. Tinseltown. Thai's existed since time immemorial, where people are tempted in, usually through something that is amazing on the outside.

In ancient times, they would have a dwarf or something, which was very unusual, to attract people in. Once you were inside, they would then proceed to amaze you, but it wasn't simply for your amusement but because people have always and always will and do today copy and mimic what they see when their guard is down. When you're entertained, that part of your brain that is your sensor comes into play; it goes out, actually, it's locked out: you're unaware now, literally unaware. Whatever you see, whether it's a fashion that's being portrayed to you or a way of behavior.

especially directed at females or males. They've never changed the technique. You can go into the ancient Egyptian dances, the Dances of the Seven Veils, as they called it, and they knew exactly how much flesh to show and what parts of the flesh to show on a female to make the guys aggressive for sex, and that's always used. Exactly the same stories of people being stranded and put together, and this turns on the woman being in confinement with the hero: the female will always identify with the heroine, regardless of who you are. how old you are. how much you weigh or anything else, and vice versa for the male, through watching the stranded-type movie, the thrown-together-type movie. They just did another one recently with Harrison Ford; it's out now, in fact. Same old story: marooned on an island, she hates him, she loves him. She hates him; she loves him. And of course, in the end I'm sure they'll end up in bed together, even though now they've added the part that she's married, but so what? So, we follow and we mimic, as they say, what is shown to us because the sensor part of our brain is then down, and the stories have never ever, ever, ever changed; they're just simply given a new fashion for the time you live in. an outward appearance. Psychology has always been used to entertain the people who enter in. Tain comes from tin; it's the same word really, tin,. meaning a shell, or to cover.

Jackie: That's why they call it Tinseltown?

Alan: Tinseltown is a facade; it's a western facade. It's just a front like everything else, and it looks real, but in reality there's nothing behind the street, but it's what you see that seems real because it all comes from amazement. The word amazement comes from Mizraim, which is the old name for Egypt; you went to be amazed in Egypt.

Jackie: That's why. In the New World Order, the entertainers and the athletes will be so highly paid.

Alan: Oh. Yes, because acting is like Plato said, and this is what we must understand. The people who moved into Hollywood, the holy wood (and there are no hollies there, by the way; it's literally the holly wood, the magic wand), were not poor refugees fleeing Europe.

They were extremely wealthy people who came there from New York, and then six of them, of course, for the six points of their star, moved into San Francisco and Los Angeles. California. California, of course, is just a new caliph, which means a ruler from India; that's what they called them, caliph.

Jackie: In California so many names are from the Spanish.

Alan: It doesn't make any difference because it was set up hundreds of years in advance. We're talking about people who plan history in advance. This isn't just happenstance. They'd like you to think that history is a gradual evolution of just one random occurrence after another. It was very well plotted because the ancient world was known long, long before Columbus came along. You can go into Cronos's palace in Crete, and you look there for a King Minos who sat on his throne, and wrapped round the walls you have the griffin on the wall. The griffin is a very important name, because it's a half-lion with the head of a bird with a particular crest or a plume, which is also called a sign or a comb on top of its head. They also have pictures around there, and on the island of Terra in the Aegean, this particular elite lived at that time and ran the whole commerce and trade of the world at that period; they had peacock feathers sticking out of their hair. The peacock is only native to two countries, and really it was native only in one and taken to the other, and that was in South America. Latin America, because they built pyramids there in a previous age, and you'll also find the peacock in Australia, and yet we're taught that it didn't move out of the Aegean and Mediterranean Seas, past the Pillars of Hercules, which is simply the Straits of Gibraltar, until thousands of years later within our time period, but Minos existed in 2500-3000 B.C. So they had the world well mapped long, long before. Nothing is by chance. It's pure logic, and it's by using your own eyes and senses, not by what somebody else has told you, that you come to decisions. A peacock cannot be in Minos in 3000 B.C. if you were to take their graduation of history.

If we go into entertainment once more, and since I hit on Minos, I'll give you that as an example. You probably know 'of the movie Si argute. It's the one where they find this big circle in Egypt, they wonder what it's for, and they hook it up to some hydro plant inside a mountain, which is very symbolic; they've been there before. They go through this port, or gate, and they end up on another planet, and of course the military goes in first, and they find a similar pyramid on this other planet. On this particular planet, they find the old pharaoh, who is Ra, the sun god, living in this pyramid, which is some kind of ship or something. The pharaoh sends out these guys who have heads like birds, and they have these spears that can shoot rays at people. They have a native population on this planet that is mining for them: they are mining all this stuff that the pharaoh would need. I'll tell you where the story came from. It came from Minos, 3000 B.C. It's a five thousand-year-old story, because Minos was the first king who was appointed over the peasants of that land, and the peasants were terrified of a person who had a bull's head and the body of a man.

Jackie: Who appointed Minos?

Alan: Well, the high priest did. I'm telling you the story of Minos. Minos was the guy who took on this god-bull. This bull-man. a man with the head of a bull; in other words, it was like a mask. This mask chased all the people around and terrified them. It was painted with blood and horns on it; it had a golden face painted with black streaks on it. So, the story of Minos (and anyone can read it in Greek mythology): this brave young fellow chases the bull-man to a cave (because they lived in tunnels and always did), and he comes out with the head of the bull, the mask, in other words. He waves it above the crowd, and the crowd says. "My god. He must be a god because only a god can kill a god." The priests, who are all part of the plan, then come out of the cave.

They kneel before Minos. Minos is now the king. A well-staged rehearsal. I'm sure they did it a few times before the real event. Minos then started to create an army and got the people to work overtime, overproducing, and he fed his army with the overproduction. He then created a fleet of ships and then set off to conquer the surrounding islands, and he became very, very wealthy, and there are palaces yet on Cronos to him, and the whole island is riddled with tunnels. So, that is the exact same thing because his symbol is the same as the one in Stargate, where these guys were sent out with the bird heads, because Minos' symbol, apart from the bull's head, is all around the inside of the throne room in Cronos. Anybody can go and get pictures of it out of the library. You'll see the griffin, the lion's body, which is a sign of royalty, and on top it has the head of the bird on each one of them. They call this the Minoan Era, or Age, the Minoan. The Minoans were simply the Phoenicians and also the Egyptians; they were all of the different peoples who have always run the planet, and they always had the trade, they always had the gold, and they still do today, of course; nothing has ever, ever changed.

Nothing is new that you even see in entertainment. They're giving you messages; they're mocking you because you don't know history, and they know it, you see. Through all their messages, primarily the ones for teenagers, they're taking teens back into very animalistic behavior through sex. sex, sex that they started in the 1940s during the war. At Christmas, I watched one of Hollywood's "applauding movies" (they applaud themselves all the time), and they were showing you. In their own words, here are the teeny- bopper movies that we churned out during the war, and there's nothing but female dancers with very little on, and these movies were giving messages and also degrading females, of course, and guys would think of nothing but sex and stop thinking of them as being females. Just to give you an idea of where they're at in Hollywood, they used to call those dancers in the chorus line, the ones with all the legs right across the stage, hoofers. They came from all over America, looking for fame, falling into the trap, because vanity is a good little carrot, and it's been well used for thousands of years. Off they went to work their way, as they called it, through Hollywood. Everybody knows what working their way literally means; ask Hugh Hefner, he's one of the kings of that method. When they line them all up , they call it a cattle call. You're standing in line for a cattle call.

Jackie: Do they actually call it that?

Alan: That's what it's called. It has never changed. You're cattle. What's even more amazing is they have you addicted to movies, and every movie is programming you. because your sensors are down. You think you're literally watching something completely innocent, but there's no such thing. In their movie/Lollywoodism (where they boasted quite openly that they created American culture, which is quite correct; they did), they said that people, when they went to see a movie on the big screen, saw figures that were larger than life, and once again you're back to the giants. Those giants impress the values onto the little people that watch. So nothing is new under the sun. The same techniques are in play, and unfortunately, entertainment is very addictive. Everybody loves a good movie. But there isn't a part of that movie that isn't specifically designed for you as a woman or me as a guy. or the kid sitting next to you, the child. It's all specifically designed to create a behavior mode. There isn't a movie today you could watch that hasn't got a sex scene in it. Ten years ago it was called soft porn; now they've got a whole world watching soft porn, and of course, it's getting harder and harder all the time, and the goal will be pure sex. I have no doubt whatsoever about that. They know it too. Nobody will object, because all the censors belong to them. Every company has a censor department.

Jackie: We wind up in an animal state.

Alan: More than just that, it's well known that sexual abuse (and every psychologist and psychiatrist knows this) causes people who suffer from sexual abuse from a very early age to have a retarded growth of the frontal lobes of the brain, near the frontal cortex. On either side of the cortex, you have what you call the parietal lobes, and that's called the silent area. That silent area is the biggest part of your brain, but at the frontal lobes there is a slowing down, a retardation of growth in people who are involved heavily in sexual abuse when they're children. Sexual abuse does not have to be physical, either; there is much more psychological sexual abuse thrown out there. We watch it every day. And we call that entertainment.

Jackie: The sick thing is that the children are watching this.

Alan: Yes, and it's very deliberate: there is nothing by chance about it. I've known in the past when people have complained to entertainment, to Hollywood, or to the censors in Britain, complaining about the violence and the sex, and of course looking around them and seeing it happening in real life everywhere, the first thing you hear is "freedom of speech" and "we can't have censorship," and yet in Hollywoodism. , they boast quite plainly and openly about creating the culture, quite openly. They can't help it because they are very pompous and arrogant.

142

Jackie: Where was Hollywoodism produced?

Alan: It was done in Canada, sponsored by Canadian taxpayers' money; it was the CBC. It should be out in the U.S.; I've got a copy of it here, in fact. The associate producer and director is Jacobovici. Hollywoodism: Jews, Movies, and the American Dream, in association with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (that's Canadian taxpayers' money if anybody even bothers or cares about it.) It was on A&E (Arts and Entertainment Network, Channel 4) and ZOF Art with the participation of Canadian Television and Cable Production Fund taxpayers' money and the government of Canada. That's nice to know that we just gave them a big pat on the back for brainwashing most of the world into a state of degeneration. Now even in the movie, when they bring on these professional speakers to tell you how sad it was for them all coming here penniless, all of the absolute lying and giving you guilt and unreality at the same time because when you build these big studios, it costs millions of dollars. They brought in the sons and daughters and the sons and daughters and the sons and daughters of actors going back hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of years, because as Plato said, "An actor and an actress must produce the same." Just like what you saw with John Wilkes Booth, who shot Lincoln, his father was also an actor before him, a Shakespearean actor, too. If anybody knows American history, the father of John Wilkes Booth was given a Masonic funeral. At the funeral rabbis turned up because he came into the synagogue and spoke fluent Hebrew, the Catholic Church, the bishop turned up, and the Protestant minister turned up because he'd gone to them all. This is your typical type who goes right through history, and he's one of everybody; they're very well schooled and very well educated, but the one thing they all agree on is that Booth's father was given a Masonic burial, and he was a Shakespearean actor who'd played all over Europe to royalty.

. So. we saw an influx coming into the U.S. of professional players. They're taught from childhood every single movement that you see on a screen, right down to something that will appear as a slight hash to you, or you won't take it consciously in. And they can go through a whole sequence of events, which could not happen in reality, in one hour and a half, all by using unspoken language, because language is primarily non-verbal. Bette Davis ran a school in London; in fact, she was part of the Shakespearean actor's team. You saw them on BBC many years ago. going through every little movement that you wouldn't even think of, in slow motion, over and over again. It was either a sexual movement or an aggressive movement, and so on. They're so well skilled; it's a terrific skill, and they've been brought up since childhood. You'll see the children's programs today; they all have their sons and daughters starting off about five years old who are already trained in the art of acting, which is the art of illusion.

During the 1900s in Britain, when they were concluding what they were going to do about creating a world culture, they actually were saying, "Well, whose culture will it be? Should the BBC promote it, or should Hollywood?" They said in the newspapers back then it will be a universal culture, created by Hollywood.

Jackie: Universal Studios.

Alan: Yes, that's right; Paramount, it means]over the mountain. There is hardly a movie that doesn't open in your face with a pyramid or a mountain or some symbol of the same thing.

Jackie: No, they're having a big game with all of their symbols today.

Alan: Yes, and we are conditioned to think nothing of it, not even to ask why. What does it even mean? But, they know what they're doing. Plato said almost half a millennium B.C., If you want to create a culture that will be the dominant culture, we must make sure that our writers, our Players, playwrights, and those who perform in front of the public must do it in a suitable fashion where there's no sex, etc. He also said that if you wanted to conquer a nation or conquer a world, we can put our players in who will use every technique to take it down.

Jackie: Am I going to read that in Plato's Republic?

Alan: You will if your eyes are open. You should read it over and over. Sometimes, I'll come to a line, and I'll take it at face value until I go over it again, and I think, My god, take the whole thing in sequence; what he's just said literally—he's telling you the technique.

Jackie: Well, you know, that would really mean nothing. Alan, if it weren't for what is happening today. That's what is so...when was Plato here?

Alan: He died in about 470 B.C., right about then, about twenty-five hundred years ago.

Jackie: Everything that he's talking about is what is happening today.

Alan: He also said that they would license doctors in his perfect new utopia. They're talking about their utopia, you understand? They would license the doctors to kill off the weak at birth. So doctors would be licensed to kill off the weak at birth and eventually, of course, the elderly, those who were simply the useless animals. The state would also decide who would breed and who would breed for what junction, which is exactly what H.G. Wells talks about in his writings, too, wherein this great new utopia of theirs they will actually create human beings for specific tasks, who will do monotonous jobs because that part of the brain that has consciousness in it shall simply not exist. They'll remove it genetically. This is also found in the writings in Cambridge; the Cambridge Circle and the Oxford Group, the so-called Communists, were quite open about it. [F.mcs] Rutherford was one of the prime mathematicians who gave his theories, of course, on the creation of the atomic bomb. He belonged to the Cambridge group. He was well-connected; in fact, the guy who eventually brought the bomb out, Igor Kurchatov (the bomb in Russia, that is), studied with him at Cambridge. He talked openly about how, through mathematics and through genetics, they would definitely create their new man. their new slave; they make no bones about this. These people are in control and always have been in control. They know precisely what they're doing. There was no violence until they started shoving it in your face. We now sit and watch everybody in a combat stance whenever you turn a TV on, in some so-called entertainment, movie, or serial, or whatever it's called. We're so used to it, and yet in their own words they say. "Monkey see. monkey do."

Jackie: I was watching my grandson play with his friend with their little toys, and they got into a fight. I broke it up and asked them to shake hands and be friends.

Alan: I'll just give you a little bit on what you've talked about. I'll tell you how it works. When the Battle of Gettysburg was finished, in the age of Malthus and his followers (Jefferson read Malthus, by the way; he writes about it in his book.) and it was the age of statistics.

Jackie: Did he agree with Malthus? Alan: He did actually, yes.

Jackie: Malthus was the man, back in the days of Darwin, who came up with the theory that we're going to be so overpopulated that we've got to start depopulation.

Alan: Yes, which was a big lie from the start.

Jackie: Yes, and it is today, given that the entire population of the earth can fit in Texas, with room to move.

Alan: I can remember since I was small, the big thing in Britain was when they started filling it with immigrants from India, which was decided before the Second World War. In fact, I've got it in the book that the CFR put out that at the meeting in Sydney, Australia, they'd flood Britain with immigrants from India. The reason it was given right through to Margaret Thatcher's time is that she made the same statement. "Well, the white population is dropping in numbers, and we need extra people to pay off the national debt." In other words, there are not enough of you whites to pay off all the money that we owe or you owe. It's the same today. Canada gives out two different versions. They give out the one that the white race is dropping in population, so we have to bring in immigrants, and yet, by their own reasoning and all of their own philosophers that they've studied, they know darn well that if you bring in different cultures, you're going to have conflict, which is exactly what they do want because once you have conflict, you must have compromise.

Jackie: Most of them wind up on welfare anyway.

Alan: Yes. We have towers in Toronto full of Somalis brought in over the war, including the gang leader from Somalia. Ilis's wife was here (she may still be here); she was living in Canada, living on welfare for four or five years before they declared it to the public, and yet this is the same guy that the U.S. troops were over so-called fighting, the drug dealer over there, and half of his cousins, which they call lieutenants, in other words, his strongmen and gang members, and they were also living over here on welfare in Canada. So the whole thing is a farce.

Jackie: Did we get off our track? You were talking about violence.

Alan: Well, the track is at Gettysburg. They took statistics at the end of the battle on both sides, and they found out that only fifteen percent of the dead on the battlefield when they picked up and examined their rifles had actually fired them. (This shows you how cool they were. These are scientists going in and actually predetermining things that played before the battle. How many guys had actually discharged their muskets? In the Second World War, we find that Marshall had a survey taken in Europe of American troops, and they were given complete freedom to speak, no punishment, and he asked them how many of them actually killed the enemy, and again, it came out that about fifteen percent actually could admit to killing an enemy, which told them that this was very, very inefficient. It is abnormal for a human being to kill another human being. It always was.

Jackie: Does that mean that fifteen percent of them did all the killing?

Alan: That's correct. Now, it also meant that it was very inefficient. Up to that time they used bull's-eyes, round targets for target fire; now they use human figures. They found out that by repetition, which is conditioning, which is the same as program planning, which they use for the military and the police, that eventually when you see a real target, you're already conditioned for a human form, very important is the human form, you will fire when it comes to it. They found out later that, in the Korean War and Vietnam, they certainly did improve the figures. It went up from fifteen percent to sixty-five percent through conditioning. We find that this was done, again, through simulation. They did many experiments on the troops using visual simulation, including what they do today, machines. That's why they eventually filled the arcades for little children with machines, where the sole purpose is to go from A to B and kill as many of these little human figures as you can see, and they know perfectly well that they are going to cause the violence, which they do want, by the way.

I he kids, from a very early age, are hooked on this; they don't see it as a little person, they see it as just a little human-shaped thing, and they just pop this little lever and press a little button, and the little thing just blows up and disappears, and then you go on immediately to the next one, and they're perfectly, perfectly aware of the impact this has on the conditioning of children. This did not exist years ago. You did not have babysitters being blown away by the little children who they're babysitting because they wouldn't turn the channel; we do now.

So we better be very aware that what we're addicted to, and it is an addiction, is programming us. Every part of our relationships, which generally today, of course, break down, because in every movie there's always an extremely attractive woman who is never going to be your wife because it's an image that doesn't exist, and vice versa. The man is going to come home from work with a pair of overalls on, and he certainly is no Harrison Lord, so it creates dissatisfaction. The sexual scenes are well portrayed; they're very sensual. That doesn't happen when you're tired at night and the kids have been screaming all day and so on and so on, and affairs happen, and it's in most of the movies today, so we are mimicking what is given to us, and they know it because they've always known it. going back prior to Plato. Now, that's what I really wanted to say tonight.

Jackie: When we were talking about deprogramming, in other words, the information. Do you think that it helps for people to know and to understand? That it can begin to make a difference or get it out of their heads? mentioned that we had talked about the Masons, and then he told me that he has wonderful family and friends who are Masons, and I said, "But they're not 33rd degree." My dad was a Mason, and he was a wonderful person, but he was first level, and I know he took that oath. I know he had to. and it's difficult for me to believe that he did. But anyway , "They're not bad. Look at the Shiner's Hospital; look at all the good things'

Alan: Yes. They always point to that.

Jackie: I know it, and I said, But they have to do that; it's a cover; it's a front.

Alan: They should also tell them that they're also charging now at these hospitals, and the Methodist Church has more hospitals all over the world than they do. So does the Roman Catholic Church, and many others. They can't tell you where the money really goes and ends up.

Jackie: We were going to talk about deprogramming. What is deprogramming, and how does deprogramming happen? Alan: Programming starts from an early age, so you must be aware...

Jackie: De-programming.

Alan: Yes, but you must understand what programming is. Programming basically consists of techniques that generally cause the stimulation of what we'd call egosyntonic feelings. People are basically egosyntonic, meaning that we'd rather do something pleasurable than something that causes work or labor or whatever. This is well understood by the ancient psychologists, and you better believe that it existed back then because it certainly did; just read their books. The way programming works, it's a form of gratification. They give you something that makes you feel good.

Jackie: Much of our lives have been shaped by them, without our being aware of it. We've talked about mind control on the program: we've had Steven Jacobson on several times, and we've talked about it. For example, what they're doing with the children in the schools. Skinnerian operant conditioning: the man who did his research with pigeons and rats and dogs, and they are now using his methods on our children.

Alan: Yeah, but they had done that thousands of years ago. They knew exactly what to do. They used experiments on animals and primarily on humans thousands of years ago.

Jackie: I've spent a lot of time documenting the information on this, and I have said this to our listeners, and I am going to say it again: if, when you hear this information, like about our children, it doesn't pull you up out of your easy chair and away from your television with anger and indignation, then you're one of their subjects, their victims, and I don't think they're going to be setting up deprogramming clinics around the country or any country. My only hope is that we rid our minds of all of the stuff that doesn't belong there and that we get back our dignity and are helped to know and understand who we really are.

Alan: It'll only actually work on a few people. Most people will stay in the conditioning because they are conditioned already; they enjoy it. They're wallowing in the mud, as they would say at the top. and they can't get out of it because they enjoy it too much.

Jackie: Well, how 'they would stay in it is to say, "I don't believe this." I mean, how else would you want to stay in something like this?

Alan: Because, again, these people are addicted to it. It's like any addiction. There's a withdrawal if you want to get off of it, and the human capacity for entertainment is limitless, and it's always been known that it's limitless, and there's an unlimited amount of entertainment out there. Fake your simple comedy; you're getting more messages given to you in simple comedies; they're half-hour hashes basically, and you even laugh when they prompt you to laugh. They prompt you to laugh. They have canned laughter, and that's called a prompt. Knowing that the human being will follow suit, being a herd animal, as they call us, as we are, you see. There is nothing you see on the air that is not psychologically devised in some way or another. There are more messages going through sitcoms because you're completely disarmed with a sitcom: completely.

Jackie: I don't watch the television a lot, and when I stop to watch some of these sitcoms that are on and hear all the laughter, I am in awe that anybody can find anything amusing in what people are laughing about. Maybe staying away from the television is the best thing we can do.

Alan: It is. I think it was in the news in Delhi. I think about two or three years ago the people were really rankled about the televisions that were getting imported—tens of thousands of secondhand refurbished TVs from America and selling them in India; that's what they did in Scotland, by the way, in the 1950s because the miners couldn't afford them, and they were basically throwing them at them. They were complaining about all this American filth that was coming out of TV, and they had a national day where they threw all of their televisions out into the street.

Jackie: It used to be they promised a chicken in every pot, and now it's a television in every room. Alan: Yes. And literally, as Orwell said, it's right there. You're paying for your own programming.

Jackie: We talked maybe about opening the phone lines, and you said you think not, and you would say why.

Alan: I know who is out there, and I know they will try to waste a whole hour's programming on something completely off-angle. Jackie: We've had some good calls with good questions.

Alan: But I think now you're starting to be approached by the ones who will probably try and divert.

Jackie: Well, we'll talk about this, and maybe we'll just play it by ear, but I know that we have some good listeners out there who are very serious and who are already doing their homework and their research and who are reporting back to me that they're finding what you've been talking about. You said the other night that history was created for us. And of course the books (that we've been given as our histories). My question is, how do we know the history that you have read and that people are researching wasn't written for us?

Alan: Most of it has changed, but the ones that are consistent, especially the older books, were mainly written for them in the first place, the ruling elite.

Jackie: Yes. There are some books today that you have to pay four or five hundred dollars to get. Alan: That's right. You noticed, eh?

Jackie: I hope that the New Year will bring change, but not their kind of change. Alan: It takes effort.

Waiting for the Miracle...

PART II INTERVIEW 4

Jackie: Happy New Year, whatever that means. We celebrate the New Year every year that comes in. and I bet you could tell us something about this.

Alan: There are a lot of stories about New Year; they call it Hogmanay in Scotland.

Jackie: Maybe it means something to each of us that an old year, a year gone by, and the New Year are coming in. all of the things that we would like to do and the ways we would like to be. Then we make promises, and we break those promises, don't we?

Alan: Yes. We tend to. I think it's time we stop making the usual ones and try for something new.

Jackie: Resolutions are made to be broken, and if we're going to make changes, and if we're going to begin anew, or begin to do or be what we want to be, why not right now? That's what you're talking about.

Alan: Yes, we've had too many centuries of being half awake, and maybe not even that. I think it's time we really woke up and had a good look around at everything and looked at the structures around us. and all of the things that we think we hold near and dear, and decide what is real and what is really dear. I was just thinking the other day that at this time of the year they always pull out bagpipes in Scotland, you know, the bands and so on, and they have military marches, and it has the same effect, a sort of wag-the-dog scenario; in Scotland if you hear the bagpipes and you're Scottish, you'll go off to wherever they point and die. If they tell you to, it's a very primitive emotional genetic tug.

Jackie: What a way to start a new year.

Alan: Yes. I think we'll see a lot of changes this year; we've got to get more chaos, that's for sure. Since this is the year of chaos, more chaos and double-speak.

Jackie: Let's open the phone lines tonight. If somebody wants to call in and debate theology, we'll just kindly push the button, and if a Freemason wants to call in and tell us how wonderful Freemasonry is, we'll just kindly push the button. We'd love to hear from you if you have a question or if you have something constructive to offer this program; if not, please don't call in. So, what are we going to talk about tonight?

Alan: We've only scratched the surface of a very, very big ball. How about Madame Blavatsky? I guess most people have heard the usual stories about how she came into Britain and then over to the States. She was a magnet for Freemasonry in the last century, and she had her own adept schools for neophytes, as she called them, and George Bernard Shaw and Sydney and Beatrice Webb of the socialist family in Britain were all members; many of the upper echelons of the British House of Commons and some of the Lords too were members of her new insight into Zionism, her version of Zionism.

149

Jackie: What is Zionism?

Alan: Zionism is two things really. It's the usual version that a lot of people believe; a lot of Jews actually believe, with a zed, that it was a homeland for the Jews. Read about Arthur Balfour, who was the British prime minister at the turn of the century; he was the one who declared the white paper on establishing a new Israel. He was the British prime minister.

Jackie: So by the new Israel, you're talking about Hebrew-land? Alan: It was a scapegoat, really. It had different functions to fulfill. Jackie: Israel is Zion?

Alan: It was supposed to be, but that's only one meaning. That's the version people are used to hearing, and Balfour himself was a lord. He was one of the long lineages of royal family offshoots. The man who really wrote the Balfour Declaration was Lord Milner, who was in charge of the combined Cecil Rhodes groups.

Jackie: Is Lord Milner the one who started the League of Nations and the round table? Alan: I was there at the beginning of it. with Cecil Rhodes, but Lord Milner...

Jackie: That was the beginning of the English or British version of the CFR

Alan: They called theirs the Royal Institute of International Affairs, and that in itself was an offshoot of the Royal Institute, which had existed since the 1600s, and that was the first registered charter given the royal privilege to exist, of the Masonic lodge of England. But the Royal Institute was staffed with scientists who were all Freemasons. Benjamin Franklin was a member, and many others were too. Most of the scientists were given their discoveries. You find most of them, when you read their histories, couldn't really discover anything or even find their glasses on the end of their nose. I'm sure they were given, and you find this with most inventors down through the ages.

Jackie: Is that your observation, or is there anything to prove that?

Alan: There's a lot to it; a lot of the names that people are given are almost pseudonyms that you find for inventors, just the same as you get for historical figures. For example, Einstein means one stone. Stone has about three or four meanings. It can mean a family for one thing or a family line. It also is very symbolic of the so-called twelve tribes of Israel, which existed long before the Hebrews, and most people are familiar with the twelve stones on the breastplate of the high priests; each one was supposed to represent a family, which they called a house, and this tradition existed long before Hebrewism, far, far longer. From the name stone you get ruby, sapphire, and all the different variations of them, all written into names of people who don't claim to be Jewish at all. But you certainly are world leaders.

Jackie: Was Albert Einstein Jewish?

Alan: Yes. He's another one from Switzerland, though. You must understand in every caste of people there's an upper echelon, and yet the upper echelon are connected with other castes that are not of the same so-called faith as them. They use the faith more like a cover.

Jackie: We know that Sammy Davis Jr. became a Jew. That has nothing to do with race or bloodline, does it?

Alan: To an extent it does if you're willing to believe it. The way it works is that there is a trunk of a tree; if you imagine the trunk of a tree, that's the solid part, the core, and all the branches come off. And the further you get away from the trunk, you see, the less of a lineage or the strength of the bloodline you belong to. They also have all the dead ends on the ends of the tree, and these dead ends are the ones who generally think they're joining a faith or an order (an order is another name for it), and they tend to be used.

Jackie: The dead ends are the ones you can snap, and they break off because they're not even connected.

Alan: That's right, they think they are, but in reality they tend to be used and then cast off because the ones near the center of the core don't mind sacrificing the ones outside of them, and you still get all down through the ages people who join societies only to be used, and that's pretty typical. But with the Rhodes-Milner group. Lord Milner presented to the Houses of Parliament his house paper on the Balfour Declaration, where it said that Britain looked favorably upon establishing a home for the Jews in the Middle East, in Palestine. What happened was, of course, they had been moving them in by the Rothschilds since the late 1800s; they'd taken over land there long before they established it officially, and they were mostly coming from Russia and that area.

Jackie: Where are the Palestinians today?

Alan: Behind barbed wire, the fenced-off areas.

Jackie: There are Christians who believe that the Jews are God's chosen people and that Israel belongs to the quote Jews, and they've had nothing to do with the religion. It had to do with kicking people out of their homes and establishing—what did they establish? What is Israel today?

Alan: From its beginning it's been a testing bed for socialism. They call it the communist party; they don't call it the labor party in Israel.

Jackie: How many billions of dollars have been sent to Israel from America, from the sweat of the brows of the American people, from their labor, to support a nation? How can they believe that what's happened in Israel is God's plan and the Jews are God's chosen people when the Jews don't even exist anymore? Are there any Jews today?

Alan: Well, define a Jew. Morris N. Kertzer has a book out titled What is a Jew? I go through it, and basically it's hard to define what a Jew is. If it's a racial thing, they're so intermixed in every race that they can't claim an original bloodline. Most of them aren't religious, just as most Christians aren't religious anymore. So what is a Jew? A Jew in many respects is a scapegoat, and I'll explain that. The people in Israel were brought in there and are the second or third generation. have been brought up as their homeland, and they've been indoctrinated since birth, so what you have is like groups of people everywhere; they've been given an identity and now believe in it.

Jackie: They believe that they're Jews.

Alan: That's right, and they believe everything that's being drummed into them. There was a massive social experiment in Israel because they brought in professors from all over the world, they set up the Kibbutz system, and they practiced true communism from the very beginning.

Jackie: You want to hear what I think is the oxymoron of the world? Judeo-Christian.

Alan: Look at the Christian side of it. Christians are following certain leaders like Mr. Greyham, you know. Mr. Graham. Billy Graham. Alan: That's the ancient Hammite once more, the same as Britain. The name Grey was very important long, long ago.

Jackie: Well, is Greyham a Jew?

Alan: Forget the word Christian or Jewish here. You're dealing with a race. Jackie: Is Billy Graham a Jew or a Christian?

Alan: He leads Christians, put it that way. That's as far as you could go with him. Just like those who have been brought up in the Jewish tradition will follow their leaders. They have monuments.

over in Israel to Rothschild: at one time, in fact, they called him the new messiah. They have the Rothschild library and all the rest of it. It's shaped like a pyramid, of course, which tells you it isn't Jewish at all. Why would you erect some symbol of a country that you were supposedly enslaved in at one time? You just wouldn't do it. So we're dealing with people who, certainly at the top of every tree, you might say, don't belong to the tree: the same as British nobility. But people being people will always follow human beings.

Jackie: So who is Billy Graham?

Alan: Billy Graham belongs to the elite nobility: the same international nobility. He's made many comments that there are many pathways to God, and Christians because Billy Graham is a very convincing speaker and he's a media image. You don't get up there unless you have the backing of the media. If the media didn't want him up there, they would have had him tossed down long ago, but I have never ever seen any of the media ever attack Billy Graham on anything. Back in the 1960s, when Time magazine had him on the front page, he was going off with a sack full of donations for his pay because at that time he just emptied all the money that was coming in and went off with whatever he wanted to. There was a bit of a scandal about that; now we're told he has a panel that actually pays him.

Jackie: I heard him when he did the invocation at Clinton's second inauguration, and if what he said doesn't prove to every one of our listeners that he is a Graham, well then they should tune in to Beavis and Butthead. and they should quit listening to programs like this.

Alan: People will always follow leaders who can then reinterpret what they can read for themselves. Jackie: Well, people want to hang on to their beliefs.

Alan: Unfortunately. It's a shame that they don't think for themselves and they disregard their own eyes and ears, and people will always end up worshiping people. That's the bottom line.

Jackie: Worshipping people. Remember when I told you I campaigned for Bo Gritz? He was a hero to me, and I wound up campaigning for him, and you know what my big lesson from all of that was? I realized that Bo Gritz was a phony, and I didn't know about the controlled opposition then. I was very, very disoriented when I found out that there is no hero. There is no hero. Only God and its only from in our hearts.

Alan: That's right. We're so used to everybody interpreting everything for us that we always end up denying our own senses and going with what they say, especially if they're up on a stage.

Jackie: 1. Talk to friends who listen to shortwave radio and satellite radio that I know are very intelligent and not just religious but very spiritual; they have knowledge within them, and you know 'what I hear? I hear them quoting the doom-and-gloomers on satellite radio and shortwave who say we're going to have a war.

Alan: It's inevitable because it is written.

Jackie: 1 low else are we ever going to get out of this? It isn't realistic to think that there is a solution other than what we're hearing from satellite and shortwave radio.

Alan: Yes, and the solution is for everybody to stop following leaders and start thinking for themselves, and once they start communicating amongst themselves, they start themselves in gear. We certainly have a big boulder going its own direction, and we have to. No matter how small we are, hit this boulder and crack it.

Jackie: Actually, we are not small.

Alan: No, but one at a time, it's amazing what we can do. If you can get a few thousand together, then you're reaching a period of critical mass, and that's what it takes because every balloon pops if you hit its right spot. Certainly I know that they would like to carry out their plans, and they actually talk about it if you understand their language. No. We can definitely stop it.

Jackie: How are we going to stop it, Alan?

Alan: Stop following all the leaders they put up there for us; switch off the terror networks, which are simply mind control. When you're terrified, you're running in a circle, and as soon as somebody offers you a hand, you grab it, the first one that comes along. That's how it works. That's why they pop up with an FBI man or a CTA man or an ex-spy or something. Of course, we're conditioned to look at those medals and then follow; that's the whole technique. The Protocols of Zion, which, by the way, as I say, is not Jewish (there's a big difference between Zion with an S and Z). There's a big difference between Zion with a Z and one with an S. I'll tell you what put me onto it before, and then that will explain it. When Arthur Balfour made his Declaration,

The Labor Party opposition (the equivalent of Bill Clinton's group in Britain) objected to British money being used to set up a foreign country. Balfour. (I've got it on record, and I've got the books.) is quoted as replying to the opposition leader with a strange slur, a name he called him. He didn't call him anti-Semitic. He called him anti-Zionist. I thought, what on earth did that mean?

Anti-Zionist? Because the Zionists with an S are very different than the ones with a Z, and I'll explain the difference. The Knights Templar were in the Middle East for a period of over three hundred years, in the Middle Ages, from when the first crusades came in, all about the 11th century, and carried on until the third crusade (there were actually a few crusades after the third, but the rest of them were very minor.) So, in the 1300s it is the Middle Ages; they have Knights Templar, and they're in the Middle East. Each of these Templar knights (at the top were the lords) were nobility from Norway. Germany, Sweden. Britain. France, all over, but the international language they used was French. That was the Latin of the nobility, you might say. used amongst themselves. In the old name 'coin' in old French (because they've modified French just as they did with English), they had a name called coin. C-O-I- N, you would say, which is like Cohen. C-O-H-E-N, which is Cain. C-A-I-N.

Alan: Yeah. Now when they changed the language, they updated it. Just like they did with Old English into King James, and then again, it became scion with an S-C-I-O-N, scion. But you don't pronounce the C. It's a silent C, so it's scion. It sounds just like Zion with a Z. What that means in French is that a scion is the cutting; it's like a twig, which is a perfect shoot of a perfect cutting of a branch, so that means it's worthy of grafting or planting. It's descended from a worthy stock.' That's what they used to call it, and now that's what they refer to as the noble bloodline.

Jackie: Are you of worthy stock?

Alan: Well, as far as I'm concerned, I'll look anybody in the eye. I don't go by noble bloodlines or any of this nonsense. I've met quite a few of them, and I'm certainly not impressed.

Jackie: You said that you had some bad blood in your background.

Alan: I said everybody's got bad blood, meaning every race or caste has done something they're ashamed of. Jackie: You said you had some people in your bloodline who were not good.

Alan: No, they were looked upon as being good, that's for sure, but then I found that most of the good guys in history were all scientists with an 's,' and they were working for a completely different goal than the rest of the public imagined them to be. As I said earlier, it's like the tree when you really are attached to it, and then you get those ones who then become attached through orders, as they call it, various types of orders.

Jackie: Are those the dead twigs?

Alan: Yes, Freemasonry as they know it today from the 1700s. That's when they basically opened it up to the public, the idea being that they could recruit from the public the ones who were really willing to climb the ladder of society and success at any price.

That's the basic idea.

Jackie: The price of your soul.

Alan: That's where that all comes from, in fact, selling your soul, because when you take the vow to obey and put aside your own judgment and everything else, you don't know what the final goal is. You're taking a vow and a pledge, and there's a blood oath, of course, all based on the fact that you know in one way or another you're going to suddenly become accepted into a higher level than you already are. within the controlling group. We live in an order, and it's called archy. It's a higher archy (hierarchy.) It has always been that regardless of who you think has won or lost another battle, it's the same hierarchy.

Jackie: What does anarchy mean?

Alan: Anarchy literally means opposition to archy. It means the archy's opposition to people having the right to decide their own way of life.

Jackie: We've been led to believe that anarchy is chaos.

Alan: Anarchy means against archy. You can check the dictionary. Archy literally means the existing order, and it has always been this existing order. Anarchy: an anarchist is against archy, so archy. the higher-archy class anarchism as being against the right of free peoples to decide amongst themselves their own mode of life, conduct, and way of life. This is the term that the hierarchy gives those who wish to decide amongst themselves as a free people their own mode of conduct and way of life. Anybody who is against the order.

Jackie: Anybody who is against the order is an anarchist, and we have been led to believe that anarchy is chaos. So, we have been led to believe if there are not people in higher places...

Alan: No, that's not quite right. We've been led to believe that if it's not these people who already exist in this particular type of order (that's really how to phrase it), and literally, the whole order of society is and always has been by a particular mode of being with a hereditary hierarchy. It's a hereditary system.

Jackie: In other words, through anarchy, we're led to believe that anarchy is government without control. Alan: Their government. We're led to believe that.

Jackie: When has there ever been a government? Alan: That's correct.

Jackie: So we are led to believe that anarchy is chaos, living out of control. Alan: Yes. They would call it chaos.

Jackie: Of course they would be, out of control, out of their control, and so anarchy would be for us; it would be the desired system.

Alan: Yes, it would be the first step to any freedom that has never existed before, and when Masons take their pledge, they pledge to uphold the order. That's part of the oath, and in Britain too it's to preserve the royalty, the lineages, and all that stuff, and on and on it goes; in other words, the existing order, regardless of how corrupt, cruel, or parasitic or nihilistic it might be.

Jackie: We must have somebody to lead us. to rule us. What do we call that? What do we call the desire of people in this world to have somebody else rule us? Government? Governance?

Alan: Yes. And even the word 'to be governed'—when 'you look back through the French and Latin and even Gaelic, it's 'yco or 'gau. which is cattle. It's the rulers: it would go right back to those who would drive cattle. The Scionists is what the Priory de Sion was called for the nobility. They have Jews. Mohammedans and the British royal family are all involved at the top; they all belong to the one club. So you can discard all this infighting amongst religions, which they only use when they want you to be in disorder.

We're all in the same boat no matter where you are. We're all ruled by a people who see themselves as a family. You know George Bush...

Jackie: Talk about Cromwell.

Alan: The Cromwell family line were hereditary rulers; next to the British royal family, they were the Lord Protectors, the protectors of the law for some centuries, along with the Buckingham's, the other group: Lord Buckingham. Eventually they wanted to get rid of one of the top lineages. Cromwell had his revolution financed by the Dutch relatives (because it's international nobility'), and they set up and armed Cromwell: they gave him arms, men, and equipment, and he set up the Protectorate, the first sort of British Democratic Party; later we'll look into what democracy means. But the Cromwell line was still of royal blood; they are a noble family, they were lords, and it was in about 1823 that the last male lineage birth of the Cromwell's died out, but the Cromwell line was carried on through the Bush family.

Jackie: However, as you explained to us, the bloodlines carried on through the mothers. So the Cromwell male line died off when? Alan: I think it was 1823.

Jackie: It continued in the name of Bush.

Alan: Bush is from a French word. It means the mouth, la bouche, and it also means the mouth of a cave, tunnel, and soon.

Jackie: I always think of King George. I always have the thought that George Bush wants to be king of the world when the new world order comes in, the first king of the world.

Alan: He hasn't a chance, though. He's up there, but he's not in the running. Margaret Thatcher kept referring to George Bush because she was in Britain at the time of course when they had the last fracas in the gulf, saying in all the newspapers and on TV, "our special relationship with America," and it was almost like a sexual manner she was talking about. She never explained what she meant, and of course, the special relationship was George Bush's lineage.

Jackie: Do you think she had a special relationship with George Bush?

Alan: Oh, I don't think she's ever had a special relationship with anybody. I really don't. But it was interesting because George Bush got his knighthood, and he became a Knight of the Garter.

Jackie: Yes, it wasn't just George Bush, but how many of our other presidents have been knighted?

Alan: Quite a few, quite a list of them. Roosevelt. Of course, Nixon mixed up there. But I know that even Washington was related to the British royal family...

Jackie: But after they were presidents, because see, the presidents cannot hold any royal title. Alan: Well, so they say.

Jackie: So the constitution says. So after they are no longer president, they become a knight of the Queen of England.

Alan: It's more than just a knight; she was enrolled in the highest order you can get because the Knight of the Garter means, if you go into the history of the garter, the French call it jarrettiere, from garrot,. and it means the leg, the shank, and that's part of the old Masonic ritual of rolling up your trouser leg. They wanted to show that you're white-skinned, you sec.

Jackie: Well, that's one of the first rituals when you become a Freemason. They take off your shirt? Alan: To show off your white skin.

Jackie: They put on your pajama pants, and they roll up one leg. Alan: Yeah, well, what they used to do is rip it. and rip off a sleeve too. Jackie: They put a hood over you?

Alan: Yeah, but anyway, this Garter business here is the badge of the highest honor of knighthood to be bestowed by the royalty in Britain. That was first established in 1348 by Edward III.

Jackie: Charles is one of them too, isn't he?

Alan: Well , he has to be. What else can you do with him? He's too busy playing polo. If you look at the Knight of the Garter, it isn't just a member of the knighthood. It means you're now a member of the underlying, the family.

Jackie: So George Bush is a member of the family. We have many other presidents who, after they were no longer presidents...

Alan: Well, Benjamin Franklin had the royal portraits of Britain in his house along with the French king; they were special gifts to him, so you know actually it doesn't matter who wins in what.

appears to be war. It's mainly for our benefit, and it also speeds up the progress of the new world.

order. See, this is the new world, this part of the continent. There's no doubt about it; you know it was set up. There's no doubt. The whole story about discovery by Christopher Columbus—his name was Cristobal Columni, and it's straight out of the so-called mystery words. A column means a body of people that you put in when you intend to occupy. Cristobal is the dear bell or clear light. It's another one of these pseudonyms they give the characters in history. Of course Columbus went straight across, and then Amerigo Vespucci, who drew up the money, also sailed right across right after him, right to where all of the gold was. They just knew where to go, where the previous pyramids were. Cristobal Columni also married into a very high-degree Freemasonic family, and he had what they called the old charts; he knew where he was going, there's no doubt about it. every single thing that happened since...

Jackie: In other words, it had been pre-charged. Alan: Oh yes. long ago. This was the third time round. Jackie: Alan, we've only got about five minutes left.

Alan: No phone calls either.

Jackie: Well, maybe there's nobody listening but Freemasons. No, that's not true. I think our listeners... Alan: Well, if you're a Mason. I should correct that; you're not free.

Caller: Ili, my name is Bud from St. Louis. I have a lot to say about your guest; he's fantastic. I wanted to mention to you and him there's a book that I've come across. It's a pretty hard-to-find book, and I wanted to ask if he's heard of the book by Joseph Borkin, The Crime and Punishment of I.C. For Hen.

Alan: Yes, I've read it.

Bud: I don't want to say "Happy New Year" because I think it's a pagan holiday. Bless you and your family. Alan: The same to everybody out there.

PART II INTERVIEW 5

Jackie: What you're going to hear tonight is the conversation Alan and I had before the program, and you will excuse a couple of words, because this wasn't really done for radio. So this is Alan from Canada continuing a month-long conversation that we've been having.

| Prior to the recording, Jackie has asked Alan a question along the lines of “What is the way out of this (mind control and programming)?!”

Alan: We’re talking about the masters of war. We’re talking about the masters of strategy of all kinds. They are the masters of education. They have even created the language that imprisons you. Any anthropology book will tell you that language itself must be manipulated in order to control society; general anthropological knowledge.

Jackie: You’re not answering my question. Alan: You can’t do it in the regular...

Jackie: Then what would the way be? Alan? When you think about this, their whole hold over us—I mean, besides religion, besides the lies there—their hold over us is money. Everybody’s going broke because of taxes.

Alan: Well, they create gold, and they shove it out there. They’re just going to change it (the monetary system). Jackie: Then what is it? Do you have any thoughts?

Alan: You’ve got to change the people. People must change for the individual. This is a fight of socialism, communism, or society against the individual. This is exactly where it is: it’s socialism as it stands right now.

Jackie: You change people, but people have to stop buying into the system. Now what do they do?

Alan: You can only change, first of all, by recognizing that everything is a front. Everything you see is a front. Plato told you in so many words that everything in his day was a front. He was a front. They hired professional orators to open buildings and open the games in Greece and Rome. That’s all these people could do, and they were sons and daughters of orators. They didn’t even have to know what they were speaking about. They had teams of writers working for each person who was a front, including Plato. It’s no different from today. The heroes we follow are nothing but fronts. Your news anchorman sits and reads a dummy board that rotates on a screen in front of him. It’s all written by twenty-five people behind that one person. It’s the same with every author you get: every book out there is written by a panel of people.

Jackie: How is what you and I are doing going to change enough people?

Alan: Because you're bringing home a reality to people that they've never had a chance to glimpse before. The individual must change to change anything. A movement is always created, always has been. They used to call themselves cattle drivers. Driving is a very important word with them. They drive, and you drive things by creation, creating motion and conflict. They've always done it. All of the Middle East, all of the kings and princes were related to the pharaoh. It's the same all over Europe. It was the people who were getting driven like cattle. They always create the conflict, and they always give you the heroes. They've already planned the outcome because it's a massive chessboard. They're giving out the methods to do it, and we follow their methods, and we always lose. They control how we think about news, media, and marketed entertainment, and we don't get that everything you see is a control mechanism. When even linguists, professional linguists, and anthropologists tell you that they have deliberately and have always and must always limit the vocabulary and the amount of language a person is able to use because they cannot have individuals thinking off in directions that are not under control. That's the expert's opinion. We are born in a prison.

Jackie: Born into a lie.

Alan: When everybody comes up with the same old bullshit, which is. "If we just do the same old routine," they don't even have to give you a new carrot; they just bring out the same old carrot, shove it in front of you, and away you go. That's what they've always done.

Jackie: So you say we have to change people in order for it to be changed. Alan: They've got to break out of it by themselves. It's the only way.

Jackie: So when people stop paying into the system, they go to prison and lose their homes.

Alan: No, that's not what I'm saying.

Jackie: So, we get a whole bunch of people awake. What is going to get people out of this system? What is going to break down the monetary system?

Alan: I wouldn't even think about it. These things will automatically start breaking themselves when people are awake. You're still inside a shell trying to break out from the inside. Everything that you touch, see, smell, and hear is inside. You're inside a prison. A purposefully, scientifically constructed prison. I watched one little team on TV one day. They were going to cut back the CBC, which is the publicly funded, taxpayer-funded control mechanism, our BBC if you like. They have four people on for twenty minutes every couple of weeks, and it's a show called 22 Minutes. a comedy. They showed you the team that would get laid off with cutbacks just for this one twenty-minute show a week. There were over a hundred and fifty people behind them. Now, meanwhile, people are saying. "Well, I like so-and-so and so-and-so and so- and-so; they are fantastic." They don't realize the organization of everything that we get in five- to ten-minute segments and the number of experts, each in their own field, that goes on behind the scenes. That goes for Bill Clinton or anybody else, or the pope for that matter.

Jackie: How many people do you think need to wake up for the thing to start breaking down?

Alan: Oh, not too many, not too many because there are not too many at the very top who control it. They're so inbred to keep it that way: they are the trunk of the tree, they are the pillars. There are very few of them. But wherever there's an avenue of escape, it's always theirs. It's always been that way. They spent a thousand years from about 200 B.C. to almost 1000 A.D., preparing the whole of the Middle Ages. Preparing it; literally bringing in people through invasions at some point from the Middle East, settling them in, and indoctrinating them into a completely different identity until, about three hundred years later, they have no clue of their origin. It's always been that way because this is not the first stage. What always works with man (psychology will tell you this) will always work with man because man is taught from his infancy that he is inferior. We get books thrown at us by what's called the great authors; we don't realize, just like Plato said, there's a whole bunch of people in expert fields behind the author.

He's the frontman. It isn't any different today than it was then. It was no different at all today than it was then.

Jackie: It is impossible to speak without using the language they've given us. because that's our only language. So how do we break out of this?

Alan: In everyone's ability, in their head. Let me say this first: the technique of control is through language. Language consists of five senses; each one the brain can interpret. We dismiss the other ones; we dismiss our own hearing. It's what we see. That's the big thing, and that's the biggest illusion of all. Then you have your hearing, and then you have your smell, taste, and so on. They tried all of this in cinemas back in the 1930s; they had peel-off wrappers that would give fragrances off. Now they have virtual reality, with which they literally can fool the brain. But we are almost within virtual reality with the psychological techniques and the lies since childhood that we are inferior, and we're told we're inferior because you see others' names on books you're given at school, and you're taught right away at school, This is a special person, and you can never really be like that. You flip through it, and you think. "My god, how can they write on so many subjects? I could never do that." Well, of course he never did it, either.

Now they have roaming specialists like they had roaming actors, who are now all in Hollywood and now basically all over the world. When you wanted something, you could have an expert on the Hittite civilization; the guy wouldn't know anything left or right of that. You go through school without using your own senses because when you go to high school, you get a geography teacher, you get a physics teacher, and you get a biology teacher. You don't go to your biology teacher and say, Give me the knowledge of the religions of the ancient Sumerians. He's only a specialist in one field, and you take it for granted that anybody with a bowtie is shoved in front of our face on TV. with the latest book or something, he did it himself. It's a frontman. He's an orator. That's the technique of belittling everybody.

The biggest part of our brain is called the parietal lobe, and it isn't used. Why isn't it used?' They don't want you to use it. because of the power of everything, the id, as they call it. the complete person, the psyche is in there. Now we have been shut off from using it by our feelings of inadequacy since we were children and our feeling that there are special people out there way, way above us, whom we should obey. They threw out musicians during the sixties. It took what Plato said it would take; it took a fashion industry coordinated with a music industry. The hereditary children of musicians who wrote all the music first came on TV in the 1960s, and they mimed whole shows. They had Top of the Pops specials when they first came out with the Beatles. They had four groups on in twenty minutes. You don't even have time to set up your equipment; you wouldn't even have time to plug in your guitars in that time. They stood there, and they acted. They mimed and lip-synced it, and to this day, not one magazine and not one book has mentioned that fact.

Jackie: It was their music, but it was prerecorded?

Alan: No. They never did it. They never wrote a damn thing in their life. Jackie: The Beatles did their own music.

Alan: Oh, no, no, no. Even when they did the New York thing, it was completely pre-taped; it's called a Swiss echo. When they got back to Britain, it was admitted.

Jackie: But they did it pre-recorded.

Alan: No. They followed it. But only with somebody else's backing; most of these guys get in session guitarists, guys who are professional guitarists. We had two number one hits in Britain, with videos out there, in the late 1960s by a group called Marmalade. After they had their second hit out, they put them on the BBC. Not one of them could play the guitar; they couldn't play a note on it. They already had some big "bought" session guitarists, and they came, and these guys just added their voices. The technician and the studio did all the rest of the work, and out came the finished product. They stood on TV, just like the Beatles, just like the Stones, and everybody else before them—all the rest of them. They lip-synced and jumped up and down.

Every tiling is a front, and I knew that as a kid. You could see. How come these big guys are playing with all this electrical equipment, and there's no cable going from the guitars into anything? There's no sound that comes out of them otherwise.

The whole media created the image of the people. Every kid is falling for this ideal. People are buying guitars and wondering, "How come I can't play like that, but these guys can?" Well, they couldn't. That's the same damn thing with everything you look at. We are brainwashed into believing the specials are up there. Of course they're up there; most of them were picked out of lineups.

Alvin Stardust had three hits in the 1970s. He was a club singer, the son of a club singer, and the grandson of club singers. He went to a lineup, and he was six feet tall exactly, dark-haired, and weighed about a hundred and fifty pounds, and he went into an audition. There were guys smoking dope, and men with tweed suits on and women with tweed suits on in their late forties. They picked him out, and they showed him drawings that were done by artists. They showed him what he was going to look like. A question was whether he could wear the suit. They showed him how to hold his microphone above almost his mouth and his hand up over his nose almost; a diamond bracelet was on his right wrist. Then they said you'll sing this song, and then in two months it will be this song and then that one. And then that's it. You're out. That's what happened, and that's how it's always been. It's a complete illusion. Every kid out there is presented with these heroes and heroines, and they show you sex and everything else. Be good or be bad, whatever the message happens to be for the era they're in, and the kids think they are these special people. They are special. I am nothing. They are special.

Jackie: What about the Spice Girls?

Alan: Oh come on, for god's sake, do you really believe that? Do you really? Did you see them? They've all had acting lessons, and that's it. I heard a woman in her sixties who sings through the equipment (I've been in the studios), and they can make her sound like an eighteen-year-old. They can make it sound like anything they want to. It's all done on the board, electronically, in the studio.

Jackie: Are the Spice Girls singing?

Alan: Not when they're on TV. They're just miming.

Jackie: Do they prerecord stuff?

Alan: They don't play anything. They're dancers, and therefore they're actors; they're taught to lip-sync. When they sing to a tape, the music is played just like they have the karaoke machines today. They're told when to come in, and if it's off, they re-take it again, and then they'll add their voices. That's how it's done.

Jackie: But it is their voices.

Alan: (Exasperated sigh.) Well, eventually, through all the gizmos and gear.

Jackie: Right, in other words, they're singing, but not necessarily because they can sing.

Alan: That's correct.

Jackie: But they just fix it up.

Alan: Paul McCartney's voice was hoarse when he was twenty. It's still hoarse. If you ever hear him singing live on one of these documentaries they do on him. The guy's voice is broken all over the place. He can't hold a single note without his voice just cracking up, and most of them are like that—Rod Stewart, the whole lot of them. I'm just telling you how it is. If you want to believe the fantasy, you can carry on. But the reality is there are teams of people, teams and teams behind everything you see. Teams of them, psychologists, even zoologists, and everything else involved. Nothing you see is just happenstance, little boy making good, any more than the Rothschilds sold rags in the streets and just happened to take over five central banks. We're always given the bullshit story. It seems we swallow that easier than anything else.

Jackie: You say according to their timetable we have approximately until the year 2030, maybe less. Alan: How are you going to change it by using their system?

Jackie: I don't know: stop using their system?

Alan: No. There's a power in the mind. There's a power in the mind that people have been taught not to use. Anything else is a tool given to you by them. The answer is within people themselves.

Jackie: I guess what I'm always thinking is what would move people?

Alan: They use emotion to move people, but you cannot use emotion in this respect. Emotion is a technique they use all the time on everything. They give us our values or de-values, if you like, by the use of emotion.

Jackie: Well, if it works for them, why couldn't it work for us?

Alan: Because it's like number one. And it also isn't true; it's not a truthful experience. The emotion they give you is always for a purpose. It's the truth that sets anybody free. Even that thing on Hollywood—they've got these producer/actor types or PR guys for Hollywood giving you the spiel of "Oh, how sad it was when they all came into America." Even while they're explaining this to you, the hands are going, and the techniques are all there, of deportment, they call it. They're taught to stand in front of mirrors for hours and hours and hours, for years, to get these little actions at the same time. They use mirrors just like ballet dancers. There's nothing, not a single movement of the eyebrow that isn't rehearsed. They con with music; supposedly they're telling you a factual statement. Why do they need music and sadness behind it to give you a factual statement? They have every technique of indoctrination that has been carefully worked out. There's nothing new about it. It's been done for thousands of years, and it worked for thousands of years. We get the Christian give-me-your-money-guys giving you the same thing after they've just bombasted you for an hour with guilt, and then they come on with music, and he speaks over the music, and everybody is crying, and then you've got your hands on your purses, and so on. This is the technique. It is lying. The truth doesn't need any accompaniment.

Jackie: What would break down the money system that has trapped us?

Alan: I wouldn't even think about the money. I hate that will fall by itself if people wake up.

Jackie: I don't see how.

Alan: No, because you're looking materialistically at everything. You're going around inside the shell. You're going where they want you to go. You're inside a shell, and you go around with your hands on the walls of the shell. Anything you find has been put there for you. You've got to think yourself out of the shell. You need to think out of it. You can only think out of it when you realize that everything that has been given to you is a lie. There is no great so-and-so. There's no Arthur C. Clarke, who is a TV documentarian, an author, and a scientist at the same time. There are no great men out there that make you feel so small. They don't exist.

Peter C.J. Newman is an official biographer for the multimillionaires that run this country, and he has access to them. He has the proper name too. Peter Newnan. Peter Newman is a very popular name with them now. Nazi man. The new man. Just like our main TV guy for the news is Mansbridge, the bridge of man, who just got an award, by the way, for being the most trusted newscaster in Canada. Peter Mansbridge. Most believable; he got Most Believable Newscaster in Canada. Why would they have to give him medals for that? Then Newman, who's the author for the magnates, let slip in a book that he has tons of people who come and do the books for him. He's got the one that's out on the Bronfmans. He goes around giving lectures, and everyone comes to hear him, thinking, "My god, what a brain this man has." Bullshit! He's a performer. He's an orator; he's presented to the public.

As I say. You go through high school, and did you ever meet a teacher who could give you a lesson in physics and a lecture in something completely different? Of course they couldn't, any more than these guys can. Just like the music industry, where they get a bunch of actors and you pay them a fee in advance. They sign a contract, and they're sworn to secrecy for life, or it's broken.

Jackie: My hope is that something can be changed so that the children can have a chance.

Alan: You can change them by yourself. You can change them by saying to them exactly what I'm saying to you. Jackie: I can't see in my mind what is going to happen.

Alan: Well, that's because you're looking for a concrete, normal, tried-before method. That's why it won't work. Jackie: Well, this has never been tried before on a grand scale.

Alan: No. And of course the whole lie of illusion is to make you think it doesn't exist. They give you the illusion and tell you the illusion is real. They make you feel small. Your parents will do the same thing. In Britain, it's a great thing with the working class to talk about their doctor and what an intelligent man he is. What's intelligence got to do with being a doctor? He went through a higher education than they could ever have imagined. That's how it was rationalized by their parents before them. These are very, very special people. You automatically put yourself in a lower category. The biggest part of the brain is not used.

Jackie: Is that the frontal part of the brain?

Alan: It goes from the front up towards the IHC temporal lobe. They call it the parietal lobe.

Jackie: When is that used?

Alan: We don't use it. (Or most people don't.)

Jackie: Well, what would people be doing if they were using it?

Alan: They would find they could think themselves outside of the confines of that which has been created for them. Jackie: You're saying I don't take any action?

Alan: It takes waking up to truth. Don't grab every tool that's presented to you. The answer is in each person. There's nothing you're going to fool somebody on. It's inside the person. Zoologists, anthropologists, and sociologists (and I'm not talking about the itsy bitsy, pithy, little books they hand out for first, second, and third years here). I'm talking about the amassed ones) say that they know that society can only exist when language itself is limited, because it's necessary to control people for society, plural; it's a plural form of the individual. It's an order; we've got to stop and think whose order it is or why the bla. Is there an order to begin with? All the anthropologists and the linguists and so on at the top are working for the order and are well paid.

Jackie: If people went back to bartering?

Alan: Bartering certainly is a definite help in any event. It's the only real exchange there is.

Jackie: I'm going to admit I'm inside the shell. We have property taxes. If we don't pay them, we lose our home. I mean, if you don't have the money to pay them, you lose your home. So, with all my higher thinking...

Alan: If each person is awake and they can only wake up one more person, you see, now there are two of you. Once there are enough of you and once you know what law is, which you don't have to study, once you understand language and the illusion that is all around you. These people can't stand.

Jackie: I wonder how many of us it would take thinking this way.

Alan: Yes. It is communication; you can get it out to the few, and it's going to be a scattered few if you can't get it out there. That's why they own the communication. There's no way that they make a little hole in the shell so you can stretch out with your arm, you know.

Jackie: You said the answer is within all of us. and that we have a power in our mind that people don't realize and recognize.

Alan: If you stop using it in the traditional methods they put forth for you. How can you change a system that they created from the first?

Jackie: "Okay. I* know what it looks like; it's all futile, and it's all hopeless." Go beyond what it looks like. Alan: Well, you've got to go beyond what they've given you.

Jackie: Well, what it looks like is what they've given us.

Alan: That's right. That's right. It will take the people who say, Let's throw out everything that influences them on a daily basis, and there's not very many There are only a few techniques, and we all use them, and we do it voluntarily, generally. Buying a magazine, buying a book, watching TV. listening to the music, watching the video games, watching the damn sports, which are everywhere, and we're using all that: we're giving all of our time away voluntarily to be numbed, to be numbed down. You watch TV, and your alpha waves change to beta waves straightaway, and you're in a hypnotic state. This is very well tested. They know it. In Britain, they have lines that you picture on TV made up of horizontal lines; in the U.S., they use a small dotted technique all over the whole screen, they've bombarded the screen, and you go right into a hypnotic trance. I saw a guy go into an epileptic fit once, and he was not classed as epileptic. I was just closer to that brain sequence with that very last hashing, which you don't consciously see on a TV screen. All these things were well-known from the very beginning. We give our wills over willingly, thinking we're getting entertained and told news or whatever, and you're presented with these people who make you feel completely inadequate; they're now bringing on actors on some shows to discuss politics.

Jackie: You're talking about Arnold Schwarzenegger running for office. What about the people who don't even have a television and do a lot of reading?

Alan: Reading is a paper chase; that's what I eventually clued into. Why now? Why are they releasing all the outer layers, all the little swastika signs, and what does this or that mean? Why didn't they do it all during the war? Why not then? They're doing it to keep us all chasing at the latter end, because it is now. This is the only time in history where people have had a chance to break out of it.

166

Right now, and they know that. They know at the end that the truth is always shouted from the rooftops because it has happened before.

Jackie: Because by the time they let us know, they're all way beyond that.

Alan: They've gone past it. Absolutely, so you'll get all these Alex Marrs books, and all that.

Jackie: Oh. but if they're reading selectively.

Alan: You won't get it until you understand that you're reading the compilations of experts in each book you read. Jackie: What about the stuff you read?

Alan: I clued in on that. I clued in on it even with I.O. Wells. There are fifteen or twenty different stylistic techniques here; this was never done by one man. H.G. Wells failed every exam in school just like Einstein did. H.G. Wells studied, by the way, under Huxley, who was Darwin's best buddy. Then H.G. Wells, even to the day he died, kept trying to pass his science exam to get into the Koval Institute, and he didn't make it. He wrote all these sci-fi things. He said in his biography that he was given the papers by professors from Eton, Cambridge, and Oxford. He was a frontman. Lie even came out with an outline of history in two volumes, and in the very first volume I could see there

There were many different penmanships behind it. The style was all wrong in each one. So you have each historian for each phase in history.

Jackie: Where did you get all of your understanding and knowledge from? I know you use your mind, but you also have read a lot of history.

Alan: Yes, I'm piecing pieces from a thousand different books to get one story on any one of them. It's the ability to pick them out without even buying them (or else you'd be living on beds of books.) Why can't one person, if they have access to this information, come out and give you the whole damn story in one book on one particular civilization?

Jackie: Why don't you write a book?

Alan: No. I'm not wasting my time on that. general history.

Jackie: I'm not talking about general history. I'm talking about the lie. all of the stuff we've talked about.

Alan: Yes. It would have to be, first of all, to a selected few who are awake, because of the cost to get it out. I'd have to make it up myself, the book. There's no way I'd get it published. I'm well aware of that.

Jackie: You've talked about maybe writing a newsletter.

Alan: Yeah, a newsletter is another way, but again, you'll have twenty or thirty people all belonging to the same organization buying up the newsletter, and they won't tell the author.

One of their groups of people who are literally working for the government, and they're just buying up your time;

You waste your time because they're buying it just to get you to write the damn thing and waste your time.

Jackie: So you say there's a select few' and yet you say that the change won't happen unless enough people wake up.

Alan: I'm not talking about a huge crowd. I know that there will be other people around doing the same thing as I'm doing, and if each person manages to get another person, one more. Then that's one hell of a power there.

Jackie: You said it could be stopped too.

Alan: Of course it will. Because since we're living in an illusion, we're completely conned from the day we're born, and the list of schooling has conned us even further through high school. We're given people who've been taught one avenue of education, and we're presented with all these authors and famous people and nonsense, which just belittles you all the more. We don't recognize that "How come I can never meet the science teacher in school who can tell me all about history or the botanist that can tell me about astronomy, et cetera?" It just doesn't happen that way. That's why. So if it doesn't happen in high school, why do we so willingly believe that it happens everywhere else once you leave school? Professors going around lecturing on different subjects, completely different topics in different fields; authors doing the same damn thing.

Jackie: There's a lot of doom and gloom out there, and the truth isn't doom and gloom. But this gets depressing to me.

Alan: I would not dare to offer the standard techniques, which will never work. I use the standard techniques: just get a group together, just get signatures, and we can change it. That's never worked in the past; it'll never work again. Another law will come again under a different name, under treaties of whatever, and you're snookered again. I mean no. There are a thousand ways to divert people by handing them the tools. It will only happen within the brain of the person, the whole person, the complete person, the psyche, the id. It will only happen when those bonds are broken.

Jackie: When enough people are awake, could this all be altered or changed?

Alan: I couldn't even really explain it to you in normal language. The thing is I can only tell you what you're doing. We're just going in circles here. You're just looking for that hole in the eggshell, which was already made for you. The people that listen must go through a process, and then it's up to them to either switch the TV back on or not. fall for the next Secrets of the Unknown by so- and-so, or whatever. It's up to them; once they understand the techniques and the processes, it's up to them what they want to do. Generally people are not cattle, people are not sheep, but what they are is they wear a donkey's mask and have a beam stuck across their forehead, with a string hanging on it, and it says, "Please put carrot here." That's what they're looking for, and they want the amazing. The more amazing, the more they'll go for it. So they add in a bit of religion and mysticism, and they use secret signs, and that's what they want. They want mystery stories; they don't want the truth. But the truth is inside them.

Jackie: I believe the truth is within all of us. I know that. Thank you for joining us tonight. 168

Waiting for the Miracle Part U Interview 6

Jackie: We were talking about solutions, and we've talked about this a lot on this program: that the truth is within us, so we're going to talk about that. Thanks for joining us tonight.

Alan: So where do you want to take off?

Jackie: We were talking about the illusion, and we were talking about what people can do, and you said anything that's ever been tried has been tried within their system, and it's always been their game, and that it's your belief that trying to do it from within their system is not going to work, and what you had said is that the answers are within us. You said it wasn't going to take a whole lot of people. I don't know what a whole lot is.

Alan: Well, it's not a matter of a numbers game. It's more of a matter of waking up and finding that you're getting managed. That's the word for it. You're being managed: society is being managed, and eventually you can laugh at it when you can see it actually happening around you and hear the same terminology that was used to join Europe together coming out of the news here without the explanations of what the terms even mean. The favorite phrase during the 1970s and 1980s while they were working on the European Union, which, remember, was sold to the public as just an economic trade thing. They always use the words in the newspaper or in speeches, such as Margaret Thatcher, who would say she was seeking closer ties, and she never explained what that closer tie meant, and that's straight out of Freemasonry because a tie is something that holds, a closer tie is something that has been joined, and it's an architectural phrase. So I heard it tonight on the so-called news here, where Mr.

Clinton is now seeking closer ties with Cuba, and of course, it's the same technique because there's no explanation of what they really meant.

Jackie: Did I tell you about the book I have on the Nicaea Council? I'm telling you that the speech that Constantine gave to the bishops there, the religious leaders at that time (that was 325 A.D.), And he even used words like coming to a consensus. He used the words peace and unity, and if you didn't know that it was Constantine, you could have thought that the speech was given yesterday.

Alan: It never changes. It never changes. Karl Marx talked about it in the 1800s; he said that there would be three unified trading blocks in the world, which consisted of all of the Americas and the Caribbean together as one, then Europe as another one, and then all the Asian countries as a third. That's exactly what you're seeing today.

Jackie: That's what the Trilateral Commission is set up to do?

Alan: Yes, and they always find the top of the Trilateral Commission with the top of your trade department in each country. In this country, it's Lloyd Axworthy, another old knightly name.

Jackie: I've said many times that this whole world is an illusion, and yet it's very real to us here. Here's where we are, and we have been talking about the monetary system, and I'm always looking for a solution. Here we are in their game. When people try to get out of their game, they wind up in prison or lose everything they have. People who have property taxes and don't pay them lose their homes. We cannot sit and do nothing, even if our resistance is within that shell; it seems so hopeless or helpless.

Alan: Traditional methods are handed to you. They give you a hero, you follow the hero, and you either follow them into rebellion and you always end up worse than you were when you started, or else you think you've won a war and you've lost it in reality.

These are traditional methods, and we're talking about an organization that since its inception was based on the military example. Military technique and warfare: long before the Knights Templar came along, they had lancers in the Huns and the Veringians and the other mobs that came out of the Caucasus area. They were lancers; they were wearing armor in 1000 B.C., and they had a brotherhood then, and they held everything in common: all property was in common. When the Knights Templar did the same kind of thing, everybody pledged their estates and their castles to the Templars, to the organization. They were a religious military order. That's what you have today. Everybody in Cecil Rhodes' group, for instance, was rotated from the inner circle. They would be the head or director of a bank for a year or two. They would be in politics for another year or two; then they would be on another international board of gold or something else in the Transvaal.

What you have today is the same technique. These people could have their castles back but only basically in trust, they called it. And that's why Cecil Rhodes created the trust laws. They already had trusts because everything from the Middle Ages onwards in Europe with the royalty and the nobility was actually held in trusts to the order. So technically, they themselves never owned anything, but they lived at the pinnacle of material existence all down through the ages. Communist Russia was exactly the same way. The elite in communist Russia could school their children in Switzerland. They became the next ruling generation. The artists, the various scientists, and so on all had a beautiful home generally in Moscow; they'd have a beautiful country home, a dacha, somewhere, but in reality, technically, they owned nothing, and that's the military order of the Templars. It's exactly the same thing.

Jackie: In America, we have the Rockefeller, the Carnegie, and the Ford trusts and hundreds of them underneath them—trusts within trusts. Then they changed the laws after those trusts were set up. Those tax-exempt trusts—so then they change the laws, and nobody else can do it.

Alan: Yes. There are ways, apparently, of doing it if you have an in with them. It isn't just in the U.S.; it's all over the world. They have certain islands set up since time immemorial that are literally tax-free havens; they call them ,havens or aheavens. The Cayman Islands is one, and there's the Isle of Man; that's another one. That was one of the very early ones. That's where the money revolves through. It revolves through these places, and you can't find the paper trails; eventually you lose them because they transfer payments to their own people through various trust companies, one after another, so even when you're looking for illegalities, you can never get to the end of the trail. They've tried it here in Canada, and they've run out of leads. It's a completely closed shop, and transactions are international all the time. They always have been international. So what you have is just like the Knights Templar or the Rhodes crowd, which is only the manifestation of his generation. Till today you have the same politicians at the very top, the inner cabinet, the inner chamber as they call it, and in one year or two years they'll be the head of a board or a corporation, like George Bush and our Brian Mulroney that signed the NAFTA deal. They both got the directorships in a big gold corporation.

Jackie: George Bush was knighted, wasn't he?

Alan: They lie, and then after that, of course, they'll revolve either back into politics, or else they'll revolve into some other directorship, or they'll be lobbyists, you see.

Jackie: Dole right now is an IJ.N. representative over in Bosnia for, quote, human rights. Elizabeth Dole, there's a whole lot of talk about.

Alan: Well, they own islands all over the world, the Doles. They own the big canning plants, the Dole Corporation, and they're very old. old family, the Doles.

Jackie: Former congressmen and women lined up. literally being representatives for foreign countries in trade matters, against the United States of America.

Alan: Sure they do.

Jackie: We had a conversation after the program last night; we've got to do something. What we got into was a conversation about our children. Alan, you quoted Bertrand Russell, and I would like you to repeat that for our listeners. This is from his book Education and the Good Life.

Alan: Bertrand Russell was experimenting with children in the 1920s. He had two groups; he had one group of children that he had the use of during the week, who went to the school and who had parents living at home, and they would go back home every night. He had another group of orphans from an orphanage. He was, of course, as they all were, going back for cons; admirers of Plato and Plato's idea, like the Spartans, were to take the children at birth or from weaning into a collective organization, very much like a kibbutz system, where they would be reared solely by nonrelatives. They would never know who their parents were.

That was to be the ideal state. So Bertrand Russell tried this out, and he found by experimentation that if you can get the children by the age of three or four, then anything of the parent's culture and prejudices (meaning choices and opinions) that they tried to impart to the children would be of no effect. In other words, the school indoctrination system, which he had devised with others, of course, using psychology from Pavlov and various others, and all that psychological technique would eventually make null and void whatever the children could take from their parents as far as opinions and direction. That was Education and the Good Life.

So, there's nothing new; they were doing it for one hundred years prior to Russell. Any psychology book about the history of psychology, especially behavioral psychology, will tell you that from the 1800s onwards there were hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of names of people who were experimenting. There was no money in it because there was no social work in those days, but they were getting funding from trusts, existing trust organizations. So it was mass behavioral psychology that was the goal. In one of the books by Eleanor Roosevelt, she talks about when she went to Russia, and she said that the one person that she wanted to meet wasn't Stalin; it was actually Pavlov because she said she had studied all his experimentations and read all his reports.

She said that she noticed with the children in Russia (because they introduced the methodology into the school system) that they weren't as happy going and coming from school as American children, but it was more than compensated for by the fact that they were so well-behaved and orderly.

Jackie: She wrote this book herself?

Alan: It's hard to tell if it was ghostwritten or not.

Jackie: In the book she made the statement that they had to; in order to bring in a program, they would literally have to change human nature. I mean, that's a whole subject in itself but one of the most important things that any of our listeners could do.

Anybody who has children and they are in the public, government school system, they need to get out, and I can't imagine any sacrifice that would be too great.

Alan: Yes. because they are you. Your children are part of you.

Jackie: Yes. It's like you said. Two or three or four hours in school, and anything the parents try to do, any values they try to instill, it doesn't matter.

Alan: It doesn't matter. It's null and void.

Jackie: Because they have their methods of operant conditioning and brainwashing the children. If you have children and they stay in the public school system, you can say goodbye to your children and your children's minds, because they are being stolen. I do know people who have gone back to driving one car and taking sack lunches to work. People say, "I cannot do it because I don't make enough now to make ends meet, and I can't quit working because I'm the sole income," and I know that there are communities where when the parents have to work, then a parent who can stay home will, and everybody contributes a little bit so that the single parents are able to continue working and their children can be homeschooled. Maybe this is what you were talking about when you said the answer is within people and creativity has been so stifled that truly when there's a will there's a way, isn't there?

Alan: Not only a will, no, it's more. It's an understanding. Society is being brought to the stage where you do have masses of single parents, and not only is it accepted, it's almost more approved on a higher level than anything else, and that again was part of the world plan, to disrupt the basic unit of anything, which is the family. They actually started way back in this century, using music and various techniques to try and see which would work better on children to create a separate class within humanity, which we now call teenagers; there was no such term in the 1920s, that came out in the 1950s. They tried it with the movies, of course, which they churned out during the 2nd World War. They tried after the war to introduce what they call the Beatnik generation, if you remember that, where they even put the fashion of a pullover or a sweater with a high neck and the beard, and then they reintroduced marijuana and jazz, and it didn't take off too well. So they worked really hard, and bang in the 1960s, a door was being unlocked everywhere at the same time: you have this perfect system, which was solely aimed at kids, which was called pop then. Eventually it was called rock for a very good reason because that's what they ended up taking. But the thing was geared with sex.

In Britain, the BBC brought out this show in the 1960s; it was called Top of the Pops, and you had a middle-aged guy with longish straw hair, with a silly cigar like Groucho Marx, who giggled like a kid. I was a kid watching this, thinking how stupid this guy looked. Yet it worked with the children; they had go-go dancers who wore hardly anything at all for that period. They had all the instant groups that were presented to the people overnight, who were all from old family lines, by the way, like Herman's Hermits and so on, and as I said last night, they would stand there and do their miming act because you couldn't sing live unless you set your equipment up. They had solid wood guitars, which make no sound unless you plug them in. They had no cords going anywhere; they were simply lip-syncing; they were actors. The kids swallowed this, but at the same time it was accompanied by the cooperation of all of the media—written, photographic, magazines, everything of the period. Then at the same time they bombarded Britain and Europe with LSD. There were men going around handing out bags to university students at the beginning, but nobody ever caught them. That's very strange, isn't it? These LSI pills appeared everywhere, and masses of cannabis resin and cannabis were handed out, and then their runners came and started making money on a regular supply route. This all happened within a four-year period. They had all of the muses, as I say, working in concert. The fashion industry came out, at the very same time, with all of the clothes that you were to wear if you wanted to be this new thing called a teenager, with your own identity. Jeans appeared, and you had the frilled jackets. Now that's the fashion industry. Plato talks about the fashion industry.

Those are his words translated right from the Greek.

Jackie: He actually called it the fashion industry?

Alan: Yes. What you had was massive promiscuity, and you had illegitimate births all over the place. Then you had the well-funded feminist groups, which came out of nowhere apparently, who demanded abortion on demand. So you created the problems and came up with a solution. We dehumanize ourselves, and once that generation has grown up by gradualism, you can put more sex on TV. They don't call it making love; they tried that expression then, but now they just say having sex. So they dehumanize stage by stage until, if your great-grandmother could be brought back and put beside you, you should be blushing if you could sit and watch the TV for one or two hours straight in her company.

Jackie: Don't forget it was the 1960s when the Kinsey report came out.

Alan: I was patterned from those same techniques, and he was a complete lie, too. Jackie: He was a pervert and a pedophile.

Alan: He was a homosexual too. His wife was a prostitute; there's no joke about that now. His subjects were homosexuals, and they were prostitutes as well.

Jackie: When they put all those figures in there, about premarital and extramarital sex and homosexuality, probably a lot of people maybe reacted the way I did when I read this. I thought there was something wrong with me. I'm serious.

Alan: Oh yes, and it's not only that, you see. Again, it took the cooperation of all of the media to build this man up just the same way as the media and the magazines build up the next pop star they're going to present to you. No different. They don't inquire into anything when they're presenting an image or a new hero to you, another role model to follow. It takes massive cooperation. So anybody who thinks there's anything free out there as far as any kind of media goes. I'd forget them. I think they're lost. But anyway, that's what happened, and it happened all through Europe. Today there's no difference. You can go from here to Germany and beyond, and you'll see the same kids wearing pants with the crotch at their knees and a hat on backwards and a shirt that's way too big for them, because they get it from Hollywood, they get it from Much Music'. That's what they said in the 1960s. They were discussing what the future culture would be for the world. They said it would be created and distributed by Hollywood, you see. And now we have it. So those cultures, those things with the baggy pants, didn't originate with a Black gang leader in the States somewhere; I mean, those things appeared first in the video and much music, and then they hit the stores. So the kids look for an identity; their identity is given to them, and they follow'.

They follow live, and then the zoologists get in on the act to make sure that these techniques work. I mean, if you watch the wildlife programs, they show you when an ape attacks you, a gorilla always has that long grasp. They have the camera almost at ground level, and you'll see that ape rushing towards the camera, and it will go up laterally to each side, and then the hand goes up to the head level, and it shakes its hand, and it's very threatening, and you're seeing it from ground level. Then it rushes back again and then back and forth. That's exactly the technique that they use on the rap music. What it's doing to the Black people.

Jackie: What do you mean?

Alan: It's the same technique. If 'you watch any of the rap music videos, the camera is almost at the floor, the guy waddles side- to-side up to the camera, and then up go the elbows to the side, the hands move up, and then they start shaking them and then pointing them at the camera and drawing their hand away, as if they're thrashing you. It's a very threatening gesture: it came right from wildlife. I heard a Black guy talking about it who left the system. He said he was picked up by a bunch of guys; they had a few easy-going songs on the go amongst themselves, and he said once they hit the studios, they completely rewrote the songs. They put in all the hate stuff—you know, the anger stuff, like killing policemen and all this stuff. I le said they then dressed him for the part. He said we just went through what they told us to do. There's no difference from anything that you see now; it's all produced. It's all pre-made.

Jackie: People can identify with the animals?

Alan: Well, you don't get it. You see, what they're also doing is mocking themselves. If you're creating an identity for a people who are then turning and mocking themselves, and they're also being very aggressive to other people, that's what the image is meant to create. You can't watch a rap video without feeling that you want to push that guy's hands out of your eyes because that's what it seems to be doing. Then Desmond Morris, who was a zoologist and who knew Pavlov, wrote a book in the 1960s called The Naked Ape, and he went through the whole pop scene of the time. He said you can't play a guitar normally when it's strung down at your waist, and you can't. It's very difficult. You can't do a proper bar across with your fingers; it's too awkward. He said it was deliberately created during the sixties when it first hit, when they dropped the guitar right down to the crotch level, right? Now, you can picture how these guitars work. The neck of the guitar is the phallus, and they literally play that on stage. Subconsciously you don't recognize it. he said, But if you want to know why they go wild with these pop groups, they're actually seeing a sexual display on an altar. Those were his words.

Jackie: I think that's pretty obvious to most people, don't you?

Alan: Most people don't, because they're only taking in a different level. They're taking the presentation, what the presentation is trying to give them. No. They don't sit and analyze it at all. especially children, especially when the parents come to be approving.

Jackie: It's almost as if parents are afraid to say no to their children.

Alan: Well, each generation, with the speed now of the increase of technique, it doesn't take fifteen or twenty years for the next age. I think it was Beria, the Russian KGB police leader in the 1930s, who at the international Comintern meeting made the statement that we now have the psychological techniques to literally change the people every five years. They've brought it down to five years; they can hit the next stage and the next stage. We don't realize that kids, very small kids, will sit, and they'll turn to their parents looking to see if the parents are showing approval or disapproval. But when those parents have been jaded themselves through gradualism, they'll sit and watch. In psychiatry (it's still in all the books today), voyeurism is a sickness. It is people who watch others having sex. It's a sickness. People get locked up for that, the peeping Toms and so on.

Jackie: Today, they show it all over the television. Alan: They've turned the whole world into voyeurs.

Jackie: There's a lot of difference between us and animals, but there's a tremendous similarity when the spiritual is missing. That's what's so frightening: it's because when the spirituality is somehow subdued or eliminated, what are we left with—a thinking animal?

Alan: Every child is unique when they're born. They're unique from everybody that's been before because that child has not yet been conditioned and has all of its senses intact, and it's waiting to use them, and as soon as he has awareness and memory, he's lied to from the very beginning. We do it all the time. You say Santa Claus is coming, and the kid looks at the chimney, and the kid says, "But a man couldn't get up this chimney or down it." Then the parents say, "It's magic, and only special people have it."

Jackie: But then when you finally tell them, or they find out, we lie to them, and we expect them to be truthful.

Alan: Yes. And you're also conditioning them that there are some people who are special, and they're not because they can't do that. That's the first real big mistake.

Jackie: Well, our parents do that to us. We do it to our children.

Alan: Well, they've been conditioned themselves. You've got to stop the conditioning and the cycle, and you know that's the first stage. You can't do it when there's the carrot of materialism out there and enjoying oneself is the main purpose in life. You can't do it. You can't have both parents going off, and in fact you can hardly have a stable marriage to begin with, whether you have children or not, when both parents are off. They've done thousands of studies of the workplace, and that's where all the affairs happen. That's where they begin. They've always known that you don't just put males and females together in close confinement where they spend more time with other people than with their husband or wife at home.

Jackie: Especially the reality of marriage and a relationship, the good and the bad. They have these beautiful women; very few women are as beautiful as the ones that are on the screen, and there aren't so many handsome, masculine, sexy men: it creates dissatisfaction.

Alan: Of course it does, yes. It always will.

Jackie: Then, like you said, they come home after a hard day's work, and the children have been screaming all night. That's the reality of it, for better or for worse.

Alan: Yes, and again, with each generation we're losing the contact that we even had with our own parents because we don't even look after our elderly anymore.

Jackie: No. We slick them in a home.

Alan: We stick them in a home, so you see from each part of your own life experience, you have the elderly put away, and you're there on your own. The children are off doing their own thing, and they see themselves as a separate entity. They are teenagers. They are a different group than you, and so each section of life has deliberately been parted and planned that way; there's no doubt about it at all. That was what Karl Marx said in the Communist Manifesto; the abolishment of marriage would be one of them.

Jackie: As tough as it is, I think today when people look around and see how little there is of real value in life—I mean, because the good life isn't the good life—how many people do you know that are wealthy that are actually happy because of that stuff? It's the relationships, and isn't that what Jesus taught us?

Alan: Well, when you're dying... I haven't seen somebody dying yet who talks about their latest TV set or plastic this or whatever. It's about who they knew, who they do know, and who might come and visit them before they die. That's what matters.

Jackie: Yeah, and also, being grateful, looking at that person who is with you, and being thankful.

Alan: If people really started looking at each other and showing their own spirituality to each other instead of listening to people telling them who to thank, to be honest with you. Billy Graham or the guy from the local church is no nearer to God than I am.

Jackie: I mean by acknowledging the blessing of having one another.

Alan: Yes. I mean, that's all you've got. That's all we have. If America were taken over tomorrow by some other nationality, what would be your prime concern? Is it going to be everybody in the U.S. or your immediate family? It's only who you know. Real estate is just the land that you sit on. We've been created into nations. That's what Karl Marx said, too. That through Communism you can take over hundreds of whole nations, he said, which would take hundreds of years of negotiations and treaties if they were all separate. So we've been changed from families into tribes, into regions, into countries, and now here's the final one where you're moved into the big plain where each time they get bigger and bigger, we get smaller and smaller as individuals until you're a number in a computer in Brussels. That's where we've ended up.

Jackie: Do you happen to have your tape The Future from Leonard Cohen handy? I'd like for our listeners to hear that.

Alan: He is one of the big-timers; he's not a front man like most of them because interviewers are in awe of this man when he comes on for an interview. He sits there as though he's royalty, which is sort of a giveaway because they have such massive egos. Here's the one called The Future. "Give me back my broken night, give me my secret room, my secret life; it's lonely here, there's no one left to torture. Give me absolute control over every living soul. Lie beside me, baby. That's an order! Give me crack and anal sex. Take the only tree that's left and stuff it up the hole in your culture. Give Let me hack the Berlin Wall; give me Stalin and St.

Paul. I've seen the future, brother, and it's murder. Things are going to slide in all directions; there will be nothing, nothing you can measure anymore. The blizzard of the world has crossed the threshold, and it's overturned the order of the soul. When they said repent. I wonder what they meant. When they said repent. I wonder what they meant."

Alan: He repeats that because repent is an interesting word, as I've said before. "You don't know me from the wind; you never will, and you never did. I'm the little Jew who wrote the Bible. I've seen the nations rise and fall; I've heard their stories, heard them all. But love's the only engine of survival. Your servant here, he has been told, to say it clear, to say it cold. It's over; it isn't going any further. And now the wheels of heaven stop, you feel the devil's riding crop. Get ready for the future; it is murder.

Alan: Then back to the chorus again.

Jackie: “Your servant here, he’s been told to say it clear, to say it bold.” Is he referring to himself? Alan: Well, he’s one of them. Yes. I did go through his phase with...

Jackie: “I see the future; it is murder.”

Alan: Yeah. Of course it’s murder. We’re being convinced that we are nothing but animals, and we’ve come to believe that. Every tiling you see on wildlife shows, you know, man is just another animal, and once you start believing in the lies, then when they put things or what appears to be a practicality towards you, like overpopulation, then you will give permission to have yourself euthanized.

Jackie: We mentioned Zachariah Sitchin. I’ve been on programs; I’ve been on Art Bell quite a bit. Lie’s the one that wrote the books that tell us that we were cloned by beings from another planet. Lie writes a good story that makes you wonder if this is possible.

Zachariah Sitchin was raised in Palestine, he was a published journalist, and he attended the London School of Economics and Science.

Alan: Yes, which belongs to Oxford.

Jackie: He graduated from the University of London, majoring in economics and history. Why would these books be so widely published anyway? They’re cheap, whereas the books that have the real information in them are almost beyond our means to purchase: three, five, and eight hundred dollars. Alan, thank you once again.

Alan: Goodnight, folks.

PART II INTERVIEW 7

Jackie: Alan has been with us for five weeks now. We’re going to continue with our inspection of the lies and the revealing of the truth, of history, of the lies we’ve been told down through the ages that we were all born into because our parents were and their parents before them and before them and before them. Thank you once again for joining us.

Alan: Hello.

Jackie: We have been led to believe that we are inferior and that there are people (experts and special people) who are so far beyond us, and a lot of it comes from the writings in the Bible that I don't attribute to Jesus. Tell me what you think about that.

Alan: Well, the Bible really is a legal book. It's a book of rules cleverly crafted, and most of the words we use come from it, and yet we don't realize what the legal meaning of the words really is. We use them every day. What the elite call the commoners use the common verse, but the legal specialists, of course, know what the meaning really is.

Jackie: I went through Acts, and I've been reading Paul's letters to the Romans and Paul's letters to the Corinthians. First of all, in Acts, we had three different versions of Paul's experience on the road to Damascus. One of them said that Jesus came to him and said, "Paul, why are you persecuting me?" and then he said he told Paul to get up and get into Damascus, and of course Paul was blind, and he would be given his instructions, and it said that the men who were with him could hear the voice but couldn't see anything, and they were frightened. The next time it was told, it said that the men (and Paul was saying this) who were with him could not hear any voices. The third time Paul told the story, he had a whole much longer version of what Jesus told him, and what I've been noticing is that so much of what Paul writes to the churches, you can find nothing in the Bible to confirm that Jesus said most of what Paul is saying. Jesus talked to us about love. He said, "Love your God with all your heart and mind and soul, and love your neighbor as yourself." and He said, "Love one another even as I have loved you." He told us that we should do unto others as they do unto us. Jesus told us to love our God. Paul talks about the wrath of God. I would like your insight.

Alan: Well, they didn't have the internet in those days, so they had a hard time coordinating their stories, and that's why the first book is the book of Acts, and that's why Shakespeare wrote that all the world is a stage and we are but the players. You have the name Paul (he changes it from Sun, which is Saul, S-O-L, S-A-U-L; it's all the same thing), and he changed it to Paul. If you look at the root of where Paul comes from, in old Latin (they've changed Latin about three times down through the ages), the ancient root of Paul was pagla, then they changed it to page, a noble squire. Part of being a squire is being a page, and a page is also a leaf, and a leaf is part of a tree, you see. So Pala, which is the old name for it, pagela also means a spade or a socket. It's a socket where you put a jewel into a ring, called a pala. Pala in English is P-A-L-A. That's what the word Paul means, so Paul is the seat into which the jewel is fitted. So in other words, it's a pseudonym. It's made up. We normally call it a bezel today in jewelry, but the old name in Latin is actually pala, so it's also a seat or something that you carry, like a pallbearer carries the body. The old root of that word came from Palacmon, who was the old sea god in ancient times, also called Melicertes, who was a shepherd or the keeper of cattle. The word palestra comes from palace. The word Palestra, in Latin (the same as the Greek), was the art of speaking, or rhetoric. Of course, in Greece, they had the sophist school and the wrestle; you need to wrestle with the words and wrestle with the voice. That's where you get Palatine or Palatine Hill.

Palatine Hill was the hill on which the temple was seated, the temple of Apollo in ancient Rome.

Jackie: There was somebody named Apollo that he referred to in Romans.

Alan: Yes. Palatine Hill was the hill, or the seat, the stone in which the temple, or the jewel, was set in Rome, the temple of Apollo. The Palatine Tribe were the troops of the nobility who guarded the temple and the royalty; that's why you have the palatine. The Palladian Rite of the Ku Klux Klan comes from that. You have a palatum, which is the palate of the mouth. That's where it lies in the verbal wrestling, to wrestle with words. So all of these words go right back to Paul or Pales, P-A-L-K-S, who was the ancient goddess of herds and shepherds. So Paul was a pseudonym made up to carry the jewel, the word. That's why you have Palestine, which is the seat of the stone, or the jewel, the stone.

Jackie: What about the changing of his name to Saul after he had his experience on the road to Damascus?

Alan: Saul is already the light. He was the bringer of the light; he became the pallbearer. He wasn't a he at all, obviously. He is a pallbearer. He was the carrier. He was the speaker from his mouth, palestra, verbal wrestling in the school of rhetoric, you see.

Jackie: We know that he was a Pharisee, and he was busy killing a lot of Christians for a long time. He wasn't one of the apostles who traveled with Jesus, whose books are very slim, but he's quoted more in my King James, which is supposed to be a Christian Bible, and the Christian Bible is supposed to be based on the teachings of Christ, and yet of a seven-hundred-page Bible, five hundred pages are the Old Testament. Paul's letters to the Romans, the Corinthians, and the Hebrews get as much space as the apostles did. In fact, all of the apostles aren't quoted or written about in the Bible.

Alan: This was the mythology of the new teaching. The mythology is a method of unifying the world. The Universal Church is what it turned into eventually. Universal, the una voce, one voice. Today, the word international means inter, to bury the nations, inter- nation. So anything with international is to bury the nations. The old uni was the uniting of the one voice. We've all been confused since early times, and that's the myth of the Babel creation, where man was confused with words and languages. In other words, at one time, in ancient times, there was one understanding, which eventually had to be disrupted by those who control.

Jackie: Is that what the origin of Babel was all about?

Alan: That's basically the only way it could have been. At one time people obviously could understand one another. Understand is a bad word. They could stand one another, put it that way. You don't put yourself under anything. But they were on an equal footing or level. They could definitely communicate and understand, if you like. But the universal meant the one voice, una voce. So since then we've been fighting to create nations, and now it's time to enter. Inter means to bury. It's time to bury the nations.

International was only created as a term in the 1700s.

Jackie: I notice here in Acts, chapter 11, and verse 26, describing when Paul went into Antioch. It says that for a whole year they assembled themselves with the church, and the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. So actually it was Paul who established the church, wasn't it?

Alan: No. There was no Paul. There was no such person as just one singular Paul. Paul literally is the root meaning for speaking. It's a name. It's like Lazarus rising from the dead.

That's what Lazar means. It's a pseudonym for a method of pushing something. Pala literally is the socket in which you set a jewel. We call it the bezel today. Anybody can go and look it up for themselves.

Jackie: So you're saying that these letters were not written by a person named Paul.

Alan: They couldn't have been. It's like somebody calling a person who weeds your garden. Dandy Lion, you know. He gets on the road to Damascus, and the symbol for Damascus is the rose. The rose of Damascus. The rose of Damascus is the cross. It's the sun cross. It's the equidistant cross within a circle. It has four areas inside of it. Each one of them is ninety degrees, which is a true angle. That's what you'll see on most of the Templar dons, their cloak. You'll see it on the badge of the Ku Klux Klan; you'll see it in Israel. You'll see it everywhere. It's the sign of the sun. The rose. Each petal being four: the four parts of order.

Jackie: When he wrote the one letter to the Romans, he saluted and said, You know, say hi to Priscilla, and she's done much work for us, and there were several women mentioned who were really great in the building of the church, and yet in his speaking, he said that your women can't talk in church. You know it's an anathema. You have to keep your women quiet because they're not allowed to talk in church. I just would like to hear the difference between this and what they have given us of the teachings of Jesus. It is so opposite.

Alan: What they did was turn the old religion and give it a new face, a new facade. The old one was very anti-female. It was an order of knights that was previous to the Knights Templar; it was always a knighthood organization. It was the order of the military from the top down. Women basically were valued...actually even the words mare, Mary, and merry, apart from all their other meanings, also mean mare, a female horse. You find that also means sea, so Marc is also a sea. The Mare Noir, you know, in the Black Sea. So you find the women were only valued for their offspring, their breeding purposes, for a genetic line. The pure line, you see. That's why the old ancient mother goddesses they've dug up all over Europe and the Middle East, the person, or the woman generally don't have a head, just the body, and it's an obese, terrible-looking thing. Something that is used simply to breed.

Jackie: Diana was pictured with a hundred breasts?

Alan: Well, yes. That's typical. It's that in Hinduism as well. This religion was a worldwide religion of its day.

Jackie: In Acts, when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, "The gods will come down to us in the likeness of men," and they called Barnabas Jupiter or Zeus and Paul Mercurius because he was the chief speaker. Now, is that just a symbolic thing?

Alan: Mercury basically is just another symbol of Apollo, being nearest the Sun, S-U-N. He was the messenger, the planet nearest to the sun. generally pictured with wings on his ankles and so on.

Jackie: Jesus said not to take an oath, not to take oaths or vows. 1. Here it says Paul took his leave of the brethren Pricilla and Aquila, having shorn his head in (I can't pronounce these places), for he had a vow. Now this was supposed to be an apostle of Jesus?

Alan: What you have to understand is that even in today's nobility and all those attached to them and all the workers of the nobility, in other words, the orders of nobility, here's how it goes. You have to listen to this. In ancient times, you had symbology, which often used birds for symbols, and the birds they used were the ones who had a plume or a crest on their head. Now all I'm going to talk about are signs. These are signs of who you are. So you have a plume on your head, and it's also the same thing that the knights had on their heads. That was their recognition sign who they were; eventually it changed, and they called it a crest; a bird has a crest. It's the same thing as the plume. In French you have your nom de plume; that's your name, your plume. It's the same thing. You can go on and on and on with this. Your eye is also a crest. It has the symbol of the flower, the iris. In the Middle East even today they look at your eyes. They want to see what color your eyes are because that's the color of your crest or your hereditary genes, if you like.

Jackie: Blue eyes are supposed to be good?

Alan: It varies with where you are. It goes all down through it, so your crest, your sign, and your symbols—all of those things—are very important when it comes to talking to people or the names of organizations. In the old sign of knighthood (long before the Knights Templar because the Khazars also were armored knights and long before), they had to show their sign. It's a legality to show your sign, to come forth and be recognized. You'll find in most orders, they give you their sign. Companies and organizations will give you their sign, either through their name or a logo. These are all signs, and each sign is your crest. It's a symbol of who you are.

Jackie: You know that they show themselves because we all have to be willing fools, like in the story of the wicker man.

Alan: The ancient story of the wicker man is even described by Tacitus, who is a supposed Roman historian who went into Britain, which they called Albion after the hills of Rome, the white hills of Rome where the white people lived in the white palaces. The wicker man was a form of sacrifice where the people who did the sacrificing were the so-called druids or the trees (it's another name for trees), and trees themselves are architectural with their limbs and their boughs and their arches, et cetera. What they did was they would get a stranger who didn't know the rules, and they would lead a line right through the town, and people would speak to the stranger and say something's going to be sacrificed. They might even let the person meet a child, and then the child would disappear, and the stranger would be concerned. I would get led straight to the sacrificial site, which was a huge man, basically this figure of a man made of wicker, like a basket. He had to go to the very end, so he thought he was there to save a person or the people, a savior in other words, and in reality he was the sacrificial victim, but he had to go along with it unwittingly, and he was eventually put inside of the wicker, and the doors were tied closed, and then he was burned. The basic premise was that they could only sacrifice the willing fool. In other words, they had literally given him the true signs, but he had misunderstood them.

Jackie: What were the signs that he should have understood?

Alan: He should have understood number one, generally it was held on certain festive occasions, which were planetary or the various equinox occasions. That should have been his first clue. Many, many other clues were laid down for them. But again, he always, theoretically, would end up inside the wicker man and be burned to death.

Jackie: Today we're all willing fools?

Alan: We're willing fools. One of your main heroes in the U.S. is Jefferson. Now Jefferson, like most of them, gives you his history, and no one else does. Basically, it's family history, the same as Franklin. But Jefferson's writings almost come out of a place he called Monticello. That means basically the secret is cello. The secret off the mountain—that's what it means. Now there's another shortwave radio bringing in people, and they call themselves Monticello. You must be a willing fool. This is how the technique works. If you do it knowingly, then you better know where you stand. Most people don't do it knowingly. Another term is sub-rosa, under the rose, which means the oath of secrecy. That's what every military person in ancient Rome had to take at one time: an oath sub-rosa, under the rose.

These terms are hidden from the public. The high clergy are well, well aware of all the meanings of them. There's not one single part of your anatomy that is not named after, or vice versa, part of a church, you know. The vault—you've got the arch, and you have your ribs of the arch. You have the mouth itself; the flick word glossa is the old term for the tongue in Saxon, your Anglo-Saxon; this is your tongue. Your tongue also means power of speech. Power as in a tower. It's surrounded by your mouth, whose old name in Anglo-Saxon is moot, mouth. It also is where you have a moat surrounded with water inside your mouth. They use the various dental signs on tower walls; you'll see them—they're little squares, like teeth. That's the teeth that protect, and that's also where you get the word paladin from. The guardians of the people in the tower.

Jackie: What has this got to do with churches? What is their symbology of all of this?

Alan: The people at the top know very well that they have brought you into somebody else's temple. Your temple is your head and your body. It even tells you that in the Bible. It must tell you that.

Jackie: Your mind.

Alan: It's more than just your mind. You have a temple on either side of your brow on your head. You have a crown on your head, which is your arch. You have an arch on your foot. Your foot stands on the ground. It's what you walk with, your pediment. The bottom of a pillar is called a pediment. It stands on a rock. It's all the same symbology, all going back to the same root meanings. Your eye is your window to the soul. You have the eye; you have the pupil of the eye. the apple of your mother's eye. Once again, apple is what you call yourself in French; you give your name, Je m'appelle, and that's where it comes from: I am called. Your eye

(I) is also your name; what you are called is Je m'appelle, I am called. So this goes on and on and on.

Jackie: What do you know about Phi Beta Kappa and Thomas Jefferson?

Alan: It's supposed to be the first university fraternity set up in the U.S., the very first one, supposedly. I think it's at Columbia University, the column, the pillar; Columbia—that's why you have Christopher Columbus, you know. Columbus. That's why you have a Saint Columbus, who is the first saint who comes into Britain. It's all symbology. Christopher Columbus, Cristobal was his name. Cristobal Columi. Columi is the same as Columbi.

Jackie: You said we just have to understand and accept every hero we've ever had. they gave us. That brings us to our constitution. Because when people find out that our founders were part of this, you know, being part of Freemasonry, the Illuminati, and Benjamin Franklin—these are people who sat in and drafted our constitution—my question to you was, "Are you saying that they fooled us?" You said, "No, because the document itself is a very workable document except they're not following it." But you explained that they did it because they had to give the people something that they were going to accept but that they knew the people would throw away at the first crisis.

Alan: Pretty well, that's it. The technique that's always been used from the earliest times by people who rode horses was basically the knights who started all this going right back into our prehistory. They arrive on the scene as the masters and the lords, the ones who rode the horses. The word equestrian is the old Latin name for a knight, long before, thousands of years before the Knights Templar came around, and you get your name equestrian, meaning a horse rider, from it, and part of the name quest (a knight is on a quest) comes from equestrian. These orders have always ruled this planet. It's an international brotherhood. It doesn't matter the color of the people at the top because they're carefully interbred, and they're the head of every people on this planet.

I love you because change in any society and anything, any living being, is to create disorder or fear. If you can imagine a herd of cattle grazing, they'll graze quietly and slowly and move on at an independent pace, but how you get them into motion to move is to create fear, and once they're moving, then by using other riders or sheepdogs or whatever, you can then push them into the direction you want them to go. While they're doing it, they're in a panic, and when you're in a panic, you don't think for yourself; you're easily led. That is the technique that's been used all throughout history; you can go into the ancient pharaonic times, and you find the pharaoh would give his daughters away to other princes that he had dominion over, the whole of the Middle East and then to China, and he wasn't giving them away to foreigners because when you really look into it. The ones he was giving them away to were also relatives of his because his predecessors had also given his sons away to become knights, and just like in the Middle Ages and up until the 1500s, the knights and the lords would give out their sons to neighboring knights to be brought up as squires and learn the art of knighthood.

The new world order was the last stage of the game of creating a dominion over the whole world. What they did was they carefully, carefully laid their plans (and then sent in the man). They always call it the man or the frank. Frank comes from the Veringians, the early Hun groups that conquered Rome, who were also relatives of the Roman nobility. So anyway, they send in the frank, the line of frank, Franklin. Franklin tells you himself he was carefully coached from an early age by relatives who came from Britain on two or three occasions just to see him as a child. When he was old enough, he went over to Britain; he used the term that he mixed and met with the merchants of London. He wasn't talking about shopkeepers. He was talking about the people who had the cartels and international trade of the drug.

Jackie: When people find out that our founders are not who they thought they were, they automatically believe that our constitution was a trick and it was no good, but as you pointed out. They had to give the people a document that was good because the people never would have accepted it. It's like the story we've heard about Benjamin Franklin (also cited to Thomas Jefferson): when they came out of that constitutional convention and the lady said, "What have you given us?" and he said. "A republic, Madame, if you can keep it." What I would like to hear is not that the constitution is not good. It is that they had to give us something good in order for the people to accept it, and then they knew that the people would throw it away, but it is a workable document, and I maintain that one of the reasons there's been such an effort for the last twenty to thirty years to get into our constitution is because they're afraid that enough people will wake up and say. "Let's do it right."

Alan: No. No. No. They're not afraid of any of that. They have the constitution. They know what it means in their legal terms; they know what it means. They gave you a term, which is called republic. That means republic, from the plebeian. The plebeians were the masses, the commoners; they "recommoned" you when they gave it to you. They were well aware the average person of the day who couldn't read or write hadn't a clue what it really meant. They thought one thing, and the lawyers are laughing up their sleeves. You're an RC-plebian and RC-public. The Greeks called it the demos, you know, the mob. In Latin it's the plebian, from which we get public. You're "republicked." If people don't know what it means, they can do what they want with it, you know. If you don't know what things mean, what good are they to you even in your hands when they can come along and say you don't even understand the language that you're using? It's true. We don't understand the language we use. That's why they have lawyers who reinterpret and go through piles and piles and piles of ancient books. Not to get truth out of anything or right or wrong; it is part of their rhetoric story to show you that they can win by any means at all. They have the ancient history; they have the ancient knowledge of the meanings of words. We don't have it.

Jackie: But when you and I talked about this earlier, you did agree that the constitution is workable as a form of government.

Alan: If you understand it. If everybody understands it.

Jackie: That was my point, Alan.

Alan: Unless you could spend half your life in law, you could never get to the understanding.

Jackie: But it's simple! The thing is that the law, the lawyers, and the judges reinterpret it. I'm talking about the constitution as it's written, as a document. If people were involved, we wouldn't have all gone asleep at the helm a long time ago.

Alan: When I was in Europe, I used to meet a lot of young Americans who were traveling the world. Often a lot of them were volunteering in various groups to go into Africa or wherever, and I would listen to them talking, and they were always very cheerful and happy during the 1970s when money was abundant. I thought about how incredibly naive they were in their happiness because they would tell people that they were off to various parts of the world to spread democracy and their way of life. I said, "I thought you fought to get away from democracy."

Jackie: They only said democracy because that's the word that's used over and over.

Alan: It doesn't matter what you were given. I don't care what they give you. If the people will allow themselves to be mastered by those they think are elite and more intelligent than they are.

You'll give it away. I wouldn't put my faith in any piece of paper or anybody else. My senses can only judge what's around me and what's important to me.

Jackie: Well, what's important to you is freedom and truth.

Alan: Truth is only your interpretation using your own senses, nobody else's. I'm saying people create the truth for you; it's created by other people, and we follow. We don't use our own senses. Every baby is born with the ability to use its own senses; that's true rationality. Right away, as soon as he can understand and think, he's getting lied to in every direction by people who often don't know they're telling a lie. This is a war of the totality, the masses, and the order against the individual. It always has been. Always has been; we follow people all the time.

Jackie: In other words, what you're saying is that each individual has the truth within them.

Alan: Of course, absolutely. It's right in you, and we take everything at face value, and we question very little. We never think of looking into anything for ourselves. We go to someone who's got a PhD, and we ask them what it means.

Jackie: I don't think everybody is like that.

Alan: Most people are. They go through a schooling system, which is a tunnel, and the ones at the top are the only ones at the end of it. You can't see on either side of the tunnel.

Jackie: One of the things that amazes me is people who say the Bible is the word of God and God will not let his word be tampered with, and yet we have thirty or maybe forty or fifty versions of the Bible. Then there are people who say, "Oh, it's the King James 'version. That could never have been tampered with because it was divinely inspired."

Alan: Christ comes from Crista, C-R-I-S-T-A. And it means the crest of a bird, just the same as a plume, as the comb on the head of a bird. It's the crest. That's what Crista means. Look it up. The old words were creseo and crinis. Cristatus. The ancient Latin used to be Draco. Draco is from the drake, the cock of the male bird, and the crest of the male bird. The cock. It's the plume or crest of a helmet of a knight. Crista. The guys who are rambling at the top, in charge of all these huge physical temples, know all this stuff; they're well aware of it. From the arch of your foot to the crown of your head. I'm not following anybody.

Jackie: Lots of food for thought for all of us. Thank you for joining us. Alan: Good night.

PART II INTERVIEW 8

Jackie: You know we were talking about what was going on and what has been going on since time immemorial.

Alan: That's a good place to start actually. A good place to start is silence, if you think about it, because the only time you can think clearly is when you have peace and quiet, and yet since you're born, you have so much noise and distraction. You buy your distractions like you buy every other drug that's given to you, including all of the noise. People can't do without noise anymore, and it's funny because in psychiatry you get people coming in who are schizophrenic, and some of them hear voices. They term these intrusive voices voices that come from the outside or appear to come from the outside of your own thoughts, and so they have intrusive thoughts, and they can't switch them off. Some are quite happy with , and some of them will smile and laugh as if they're being told jokes. Others are paranoid types who feel they're being cursed all the time, "You're no good," etc. But these are intrusive thoughts, and that's classed as a mental illness, and yet whenever you turn a radio on. some music that's blasting out. Or you go for a haircut, or you walk in a shopping mall, or wherever you go, you have this intrusive music and words being blasted out at you. It's very, very, very similar, and the whole process really stops you from having your own clear thinking.

Again, Pavlov and all of that gang explored this whole area completely as a form of controlling people, and like every drug that's given to us, we end up paying for it. You always pay for your drugs. So silence is very important. Some people, especially if you're brought up in a city, can't do without noise. They feel odd if there's no noise around them. I remember a true story about an Eskimo that was brought down to a hospital in Canada, and he almost went crazy with the noise, even at night from cars, because he was so used to complete silence. We've lost it, basically, is the meaning of that.

Jackie: For the Eskimos, it would be complete silence, except for the creaking of ice. Alan: You see it in the desert too, in more ways than you would think, in fact.

Jackie: We were talking about solutions, and you said the answer is within us, and we are not going to be able to hear if we can't get silent, don't you agree?

Alan: It's almost impossible until you literally can take silence and be with yourself. Even during work time, regardless of where you work, whether in factories or offices, you have nothing but noise all day long. Then they come home and turn on the TV or radio or whatever, and when they're driving home, they've got the radio blaring away. In other words, you aren't thinking for yourself; you're listening to input from other sources. Intrusive, if you like.

Jackie: We've been down through history, and I know we haven't covered it all—the words, the language, the selective breeding, and the controllers—and let's say, for the sake of the fact that people have been listening and we won't repeal all that, will you share with our listeners whatever it is you would like to share with them?

Alan: I think the first thing to do, in order to think, is to start to wean yourself off noise. I learn to turn off that TV and switch off the visual as well. I aim to be with you until you can literally begin to think for yourself. The whole day is someone else either singing words to you or speaking words to you, either through a glass screen or directly, and yet we seldom use most of our brain; in fact, we don't use it at all. Most people. The silent area is something that is purposely kept silent. The confines of our language have been carefully constructed to be a cage. The psychologists and anthropologists agree that by minimal language or minimizing language, you are literally caged in into a society that is then ruled in an order form or an orderly form, but we have to find out who it is that's been creating this order that's never been any different since our history began.

What we have to do also is stop looking at the obvious, which is generally presented to us, and blaming other people for causing problems in our own lives, and I mean the people that are next to you or across the street or in the next area of a city, if they're a different color or whatever; that's all been done on purpose to keep everybody fighting everybody. One of the strangest things when you look back at Egypt is that although Egypt was always focused on being in the north of Egypt, there were two Egypts, a north and a south. The south kept quiet, and it's hardly ever known that it existed, and the rich and lavish (the show, if you like), the upper pyramid, was stationed in the north, yet when they got invaded on two or three occasions, it was always this quiet south (the "Spartans of the Egyptians") that came up without any problem and overthrew the invaders, put the pharaohs back on the throne, and then just left quietly. We find the same thing and the same technique all down through history. The obvious places where we look to point a finger are very Middle Eastern in concept. The Middle Eastern mentality doesn't have the same value system as we do, and most of the whole structure of a world society began in the Middle East, in the Oriental mind, the cradle of civilization and religion. The hero in all of the oriental stories (One Thousand and One Nights, and so on)—there's always the person who by any means possible controls everyone and goes through each test or battle that he comes through by any means possible, including all types of deceit, including always putting the blame onto someone else. So Ali Baba and his forty thieves had not what we would think of as a good value system. Their virtues were literally the cunning and skill of their own minds and treachery, by every means possible. They would always survive, and we find that international nobility, all down through the ages, have the traits of the Middle Eastern mind, just like the present rulers of the Middle East and Saudi Arabia and Oman and so on.

They are of a noble lineage; they're of a noble lineage. They also claim to belong to the sons of Noah, and they also often also have ham in their name, Mohammed, and so on. You find the Mid-Eastern Tuaregs were called travelers, and that's where the Masons today get the term the fellow travelers. They were a nomadic people, and the nobility of Europe, even today, are really classified as nomadic because they have their summer, spring, fall, winter residences all over different parts of the country and the world. So they have the same trails in common, and as is usual, when they light wars in the Middle East, they will sacrifice the masses of the common people.

There's no crueler place on earth in history than the Middle East because the rulers didn't belong to the same race of people. They were of lineal descent. They still are: the same with all the nobility of Europe and America and Canada. I have the idea that knights existed from the earliest times, long before the Christian era, and they were lancers, and they were knights. They were the wandering knights; they would drive cattle. They would winter in high fortifications and high places, just like castles all over Europe, just like the Khazars were found to do in the 8th century A.D. You'll find they're all interrelated; they have the same mentality. The people they always rule over are not of the same family, although the people think they are and they honor them. They have everyone fighting everyone else, and often the losers in the battles and the wars are in effect the winners. When they are throwing their cruise missiles over Iraq right now, they know damn well that they're not going to get their man. They don't intend to get their man; he's way underground. The Arab sheiks all over the Middle East had all the gold before there was oil. long before there was oil, and almost all of the science we have today comes from the Middle East.

Even in the Middle Ages, when the priesthood and nobility (which was all the same thing in the Middle Ages) ran the universities of Europe. They were given Plato and Aristotle and different philosophers, and they didn't gel from Greece or anywhere. We're told in history that it was all given to them by the Arabs. The Arabs were the possessors of knowledge. Franklin talks about inoculation.

Inoculation was being done by Mohammedans and the people previous to Mohammed. They would scratch a person who had overcome the illness in the last stages. They would scratch the boils, for instance, on the skin because it contains the antibody that that person has made; their body has made an antibody to the bacterium. Then they would scratch the infants and themselves with the same needles. They've been doing that for thousands of years. Your writing system comes from Arabic. Your numerical system comes from Arabic. Your planetary system of astronomy comes from the Arabic. Everything comes from the Arabic. So we have to take a look at these impoverished countries where you see the big tell-tale signs of an international nobility because wherever they go women are treated as slaves, property, or whores. It's very cheap. They also have the smallest number of people holding all of the wealth, fantastic wealth, and yet round about them in their cities they have the masses with the most massive amount of poverty existing at the same time.

So for the outside person to look into the Arabian countries and see all the sand and the poverty and people with real old faces, we get the wrong idea; we don't realize the power that emanates from the Middle East. A power that has no limit to how far they would go as far as sacrificing the people they rule over in order to save themselves, and that's one thing that the French king realized in the Middle Ages when they were throwing out men and arms into the Middle East, into Jerusalem, to fight the Saracens. They found that the Knights Templar, this nobility crew, were international nobility, and not all of the knights were Templar—very few. The Templars were, in fact, lineal descendants of all the people they thought they were fighting in the Middle East, and all the money that was being sent from people's taxes from all over Europe was simply disappearing, and yet these Knights Templar, after all these wars and crusades had come to a halt, could live on their own estates in the Middle East, side by side with the people they were supposedly fighting. So you come to the conclusion that the French king clued in to what was going on; there was one big scam going on here. There were revolutions in Britain in the Middle Ages over the amount of money and taxation that was all going to these crusades to regain the Holy Land. You were all disappearing. Richard the so-called Lionheart kept going over there and being captured, at first by his cousin, one of the small French kingdoms (at that time France consisted of a few different kingdoms in reality.) So his cousin always caught him over there, and the British people were taxed on demand of the church and the monks and the priests in order to raise money to rescue him, to ransom him. Then when he went over to the Middle East, the same thing was happening. The Saracens are capturing him, and then the priests are demanding more money from the peasantry of Britain for his release, and after about the third or fourth time, the people just simply refused, and they had rebellions all over England. So people clued in to a massive con going on with their own nobility all over Europe, who seemed to be in cahoots with these strange ancient travelers, these nomadic lancers, these knights. They were right on, and the system hasn't changed today. Saladin had no problem in diverting a couple of thousand of his men to be slaughtered just as a diversionary tactic; it's the Oriental mind. We cannot comprehend it. Because we cannot comprehend it, we're basically at a big disadvantage.

The curious thing with thermal imaging and scanning the brain is that you find that people who study writing and cuneiform or hieroglyphic writing, including the Chinese, use both parts of their brain at the same time. They've tried this on all races; this thermal imaging was first advanced in Sweden. What they do is they can give you mathematics, for instance, and then they can actually localize the part of the brain that comes into use; it glows on the screen, and the same thing happens with writing. So they can tell which part of the brain comes into force according to what's put in front of you or whatever problem solving is there. They find with the hieroglyphic type of writing, or the Chinese character figures, both sides of the brain come into play, and yet the language, you see again, is the cage of our languages (the European languages, which have been carefully manufactured and filtered many times.) We only think with one part of the brain when it comes to writing, and what you find is that we take things at face value. In other words, we go for any deception because we think in concrete terms where that other part of the brain, which can include emotion, doesn't come into play, and yet that part, which we also call intuition, is a safety valve. It's a trigger lock. It's a warning part of the brain that what you see might not be what's real. Kvcn, the Eskimos, have, curiously enough, the same way of thinking when presented with different problems in that both parts of the brain come into play. The hard physical evidence that your eyes perceive and your ears hear and so on, but also the other part comes into play where they know that you can't just tread over snow because it could be hollow underneath it. So there's an intuition also involved here. We are taught ever since we're conscious to disregard our intuition and to trust. When you trust, you are at anybody else's whim or whimsy. They have an advantage over you because of trust.

Jackie: I listen to intuition, and the more you listen to it, the more apparent it is and the more it works.

Alan: The more it will work, too. The more it will work. When people learn to use or even read in other languages, especially in the hieroglyphic type of writing, those other parts of the brain, which we don't use, start to light up. In other words, they come into play.

Jackie: I hey know this how?

Alan: It is thermal imaging, and they knew this a hundred odd years ago and long before that.

Jackie: Are you suggesting or saying that at one time we would have been using both of these parts of our brain at the same time, and that they have intentionally created a type of language and all of the noise for distraction so that it shuts down, and that learning to get silent, to get quiet, can begin to activate that part of the brain again?

Alan: It can. It can if you learn to trust yourself instead of trusting other people. The common thing you're asked is, "What do you believe in?" Now, "What do you know or what do you believe?" They're two different things. A belief is given to you by somebody else.

Jackie: When doing the research on the phony Christian conservative leadership, I just knew that there was something wrong, but I didn't really know what, so since there's no way to figure out why there is something wrong, you think you must be making this up. Learn to listen and go with that intuition.

Alan: Yes. You see, as far back as we can go, in the Middle Eastern manner or logic of living, their stories and their mythology and the type of things that the Bedouin will talk about around a fire are stories where cunning and skill are used to these extremes, where the hero is the one that wins regardless of how much of a rogue or a tyrant or a sadist we would think him to be. It's a completely, completely different way of looking at life. It is pure survivalism at any cost. That's the hero. The stories have twists and turns where fingers are pointed, people are hunted, the hunters are diverted into thinking it's someone else, and the stories go round this maze of twists and turns. Then there's (The fox. The cunning fox, the desert fox, is the one who gets away; who's the hero? This is the typical type of story or mentality that Freemasonry literally was born into. I think the big lies they are told are the lies of virtue because in the Middle Eastern mentality, to lie is perfectly acceptable. To lie is perfectly acceptable, and I'm talking not about the people who are poor, the majority of people in the Middle East. I'm talking about the royal lineages going right back into ancient times, the true kings of the Middle East.

Jackie: I have a quote from a book by an educator, one of these educrats, who said that any child who cannot learn to lie has a mental disorder.

Alan: Yeah. It's completely alien to our type of logic, and because we're so naive and we worship people, we worship our own nobilities, and you better believe you've got them in the U.S. as well, just as we have up here in Canada; it's the same thing.

Jackie: You mean our politicians?

Alan: They're not just the politicians. These are the lower spectrum. The trick in the Middle East was always to be hidden. You were hidden behind the cloak and the mask, the one who hides: the eye is all you see. We see the obvious. What we see are the puppets. We see the egotists who are picked out carefully who join an order but really are not of the lineage even though they call each other brother or sister. They are the tools, and they are well rewarded for it.

Jackie: Who are the useful idiots?

Alan: Yes. Some of them are not so much idiots. They can have intellect, but generally all in all. They are psychopathic personalities, which are chosen. The Rhodes scholarships, for instance, are the prime pulling out of the people for the Rhodes scholarships; the prime ability is not intellect as much as a desire for socialism in its true form. In other words, in its totalitarian elitist form, you have to have leanings towards that in order to be picked and to be pulled out. And you must have a huge ego, psychopathic, in other words. Though the psychopathic personality as we would define it is someone who is born literally without a conscience or feeling for others. They are egosyntonic, meaning they only do what feels pleasurable to them, but at the same time, because their ego is all they have and all they live for. That is their whole being to them.

Jackie: That's how they're used.

Alan: Yes, and they also need the applause of people. They need the applause. Even when they're caught red-handed in corruption, they still want the people to applaud them and to like them. That's your psychopathic personality. A psychopath can behave the same way as anybody else that you know, and generally they're the most likeable people because they've learned since childhood how people interact with each other. They don't feel it, but they see the responses that pleasant people get, and they copy them exactly. They're the best actors on the planet. In fact, in psychiatry, actors and actresses are classed alongside the hysterical, attention-seeking psychopaths.

Jackie: You made a statement when we were talking about the monetary system, and you said it cannot be fixed within the system, not their system, because anything we do they would be giving us. and you made the statement that the answers are within ourselves.

Alan: The answers are within yourself because all you have is an illusion, a crisis-causing or crisis-driven herd mentality, where the hand that spans you. Its opposite hand comes out with the answer to pull you out. This is always the technique, and you have to come into full awareness and stop being fooled by the techniques that are applied to you on a daily basis. You've got to look behind the suits and the ties, the fast-talking salesman who is either going to sell you gold or death: one or the other. You've got to stop following people because the panic is behind you and the hand is in front of you, and you grab the hand; it's part of the same body. That's how you control the herd. You drive a herd. You create the fears. You create the problems. You create the direction you want them to go, and they end up in the pen. Wherever they go, they're being driven, in one way or another. I listen to shortwave, and I listen to nothing but fear, panic, and terror: it's worse than the regular media because shortwave listeners generally have been listening to the panic and fear for so long, which is the big selling technique, that they've become addicted to it. They're easier to keep going with a heightened sense of panic than regular people. This is basic psychology, and you can stock up on whatever you want, but what's the good if you don't even know if you'll be able to sit on your own property if a really big crisis does come along?

Since everything is from the food industry, there are only six corporations or brotherhoods that own all of the world's food supply today, under many different names below them, like a pyramid. They own all the gold. You don't even know how much gold is in circulation. Somebody just mentions it from London every day, one of the Rothschilds, and according to his spoken word, your currency either goes up or down, or gold is valued at X, Y, or Z because a man gives his spoken word. You're conditioned into it, and you cannot eat gold. These people had gold in the beginning. They've always been the masters of the circulation of currency. They are the creators of currency, so when you look at the reality of the whole of history, they came into people's lands, they conquered them, and they forced their way in by using coinage, and they called that the wedge. The first coin was a wedge shape.

Jackie: I'm referring to all of the manipulations being done; it looks very overwhelming.

Alan: Of course. It's meant to. but it's basically an illusion. People have no confidence in themselves, and when you have no confidence in yourself, you're a stampeding animal. That's the technique. You've been kept from having any confidence in yourself since the day you were born. You're taught to look up to people. You're taught to believe everything you're told. You know the Walt Disney cartoons; they have the different animals, the old cartoons. I don't know if they still do. They had a character that they called Pluto. He was the dog. long ears. Liven at that, you see, the face value of the name is thrown at you, and you see a dog, which, out of all the animals there, lies the nicest of them all. He's gullible. He's nice to everybody. He falls for the same tricks over and over and over again. A thoroughly likeable character. The reason they called him Pluto is because he is the furthest planet from the sun. He's the furthest from the light.

Jackie: The dumbest, the most ignorant.

Alan: Yes. These things are thrown out at us at an early age, and we're being mocked because people generally don't know what words mean. They're given one meaning; they don't question it. We're trusting, trusting fools. When I was about six, there was a program on TV from the U.S. called Have Gun Will Travel. Paladin. How did the song go? It was Paladin, Paladin. The paladin was of the Palladian Knights of Rome and also of Palestine eventually. We discussed this last night. It says, Paladin, Paladin, where will you roam? A knight without armor in a savage land; a soldier of fortune. A Knights Templar, you see; a paladin. There we are. and it's put out in cowboy form, the Kids sing the songs and haven't got a clue what any of it means. It's just a catchy song, and you're getting told the story of the knight who goes out into a savage land without armor. Paladin, where will you roam? The spoken word, von sec. Why do you think they call the written words spelling, spell, and under the spell, and in law they call it the spoken word, which counts? So from an early childhood we have all this stuff thrown at us, and we don't know what we're even seeing.

We're taking it as entertainment, and we enjoy ourselves, but the knights looked down upon the population of the common people in ancient times. The warfare was on the common people. Paladin, where will you roam? A knight without armor in a savage land. That's what all of these corporations and politicians belong to. It's an international brotherhood, and that's why they can create multimillionaires, and that's why they can create an Armand Hammer and anybody else they wish to create. They can make anybody anything they wish to, and they always have. The Phoenicians, when they called themselves the Phoenicians, had the whole world's trade route; they had tin mines in England, in Cornwall. They had monopolies on all trade; monopoly is their bottom line—all trade. Nothing has changed, and they create wars amongst the commoners. You get slaughtered off just like Saladin did in the Middle Ages. You have wars between each other, and your pointing fingers. They are never killed, they always survive, they are cunning, and they are international. They go from country to country and from area to area just as the old Bedouins did.

Jackie: We need to be cunning.

Alan: We've got to wise up to the whole scam.

Jackie: Yes. I thought of the phrase from scriptures, gentle as doves and sly as the fox.

Alan: That was another title for Semiramis of Babylon. The double pcacc. That was the first symbol we were given for the dove. It means divine. The Sumerians only had two flags, one of which was the flag of war and the other of which was the flag of peace. The United Nations by peace will destroy many. It has never changed; the game has never changed.

Jackie: When I was talking to the National Security Council about the presidential decision directive, specifically the one that Clinton signed, PDD-25, giving himself the power to send our troops to war without congressional authority, I said he doesn't have the right to do that unless Congress declares war. And the man said under international law, peacekeeping is not defined as war. So you go to war and you call it peacekeeping.

Alan: It's lawyer's talk. It's always the definition of language. Again, we give our authority to these people, and we always have; you see, this has been going on forever. Then after wars and everything else, the people who are the survivors of the slaughter turn out in droves to worship them as they drive by. I mean, it's never changed. It never will change until people on an individual basis wisen up and use their whole brain and turn around to laugh at them. Laugh at them, because it's only a tiny minority at the very top and the descendants that have run this planet for thousands of years. It's a big Wizard of Oz. That's all it is. and it's all done by deception and mirrors and having people point their fingers all over the place.

Jackie: Yes. Whenever they say that an expert or a group of experts decided something, and the experts aren't even experts.

Alan: No, of course not. Yes, they give us experts when they have something they want us to believe. Bertrand Russell said that a woman wouldn't be able to change a diaper eventually until she has the advice of an expert. 11c said that in the 1920s. So as I say. It's a huge mirror show; it's a mirage, and we worship those because we're being taught to follow rather than take our own instincts from our own senses we're born with and judge everything and find out and question everything for ourselves.

Jackie: This whole world is like an illusion; their whole game is an illusion, and I've never realized how much truth there was in that until these conversations. It is truly an illusion.

Alan: Oh, absolutely, the small amount of people who run this planet, and I don't mean the egotists they just pick out to be fronts, which is what the world consists of: fronts. The small amount of them claim that they all belong to the same family, and the royal families of Britain and Europe all claim the same relationship as Mohammed did to his lineage, survivors of the last time that they wiped out the planet. The only thing that Noah supposedly needed or was given favor for was to be saved. Saved is a very big word in a real sense. The only thing or virtue he had going for him wasn't that he was any better in his morals than anyone else; it was that he and his family had kept their genetic lines pure.

Jackie: These people claim to be from that same genetic line.

Alan: Yes. In the Middle East, for instance, they have emirs, amirs, amaras, and so on, and these go way beyond the time when they called themselves Saracens. Hven Mohammed (the descendants today are the Ham line); they claim they are descended through Fatima, who was a daughter of Mohammed. That's why they bring out a revelation of Fatima much, much later. But that was the daughter: that's the lineal descent. They are the prophets or the prophesiers because they plan it in advance, not because they're so bright. They have a power of memory that is beyond most people; that's the basic thing, because they use the whole brain, but they have been through this before.

Jackie: It can be stopped; the answers do lie within us, and it will be up to each and every one. individual. I'm not through with Paul yet; he said something about . Do you know what Abba means? Alan: Well, basically it's a Masonic term for the offspring of a father's brother. It's a Masonic term.

PART II INTERVIEW 9

Jackie: Revelations was written about five hundred years before Jesus actually was here. Would you concur with that?

Alan: Revelations, as the idea of a catastrophe, is as old as Egypt. It's thousands of years old. this coming catastrophe. Mind you, it was always held over the people by the priesthoods, who said that they could put it off if you just donated more and were more servile to them. But gradually through each time or phase of the world's plan, if you like, it would get updated to suit the times, and then into the Christian era it was updated once again to fit its time. They still retained a final apocalypse where the saved ones would survive and the rest would perish.

Jackie: The saved ones are those who will be pulled out?

Alan: Yes. It's the oldest story ever. This entire story is in all the old religions; in fact, there would be a coming age where man is destroyed except for a chosen few, and they would survive the catastrophe.

Jackie: The story is that they were chosen by God; in fact, in the past times, those who were saved were saved by those who believed that they were gods here on earth.

Alan: Oh yes, absolutely. Yes, when Shirley MacLaine runs around screaming or screeching that she is God to the sky. This is what the whole theme is, because ultimately, if you are totally rational...this is how it goes, even in the Kabbalah. The Kabbalah is meant to bring people through mysticism to complete rationality and complete consciousness, but since you have reached that attainment and you say there's nothing else there, then obviously you're God. You are, and each one is a god. Each very special person is a god.

Jackie: That's what they're teaching, and that's what the new world religion will be all about.

Alan: Eventually. Right now they're going into the second to last phase of nature worship, and Gorbachev's last book said that. He said in his book that he is an atheist. Now here's an elitist, "I am an atheist, but we must create the new religion, which will be based on nature worship." So he's an atheist telling you the atheists are creating a religion for everybody else.

Jackie: What is the name of that book?

Alan: It's called Towards a New Civilization. That's what he says in it. Now that's not unusual because when they changed the last in the 1700s, there were the philosophers Rousseau and all the rest of them. A lot of these philosophers in France and in America were complete atheists. They still believed that the people themselves would have to attain an altered religion in order to keep law and order, so they have a completely different ; that's why they break the laws with impunity and are left alone, while you get punished if you break the laws. They are a separate people from the masses, and the whole system recognizes that at the top.

Voltaire was another one; he said his main function was to destroy the Catholic Church, but retain some of the elements of Christianity but update it for our next phase. That's typical Masonic talk because they are building society abstractly and changing it as it goes and by knocking down the previous building. That's really what Freemasonry means. So they create it for the time when they knock it down, when it's served its purpose, and then start using the rubble of the last one to construct a new one or an altered one.

Jackie: I quoted Nelson Mandela saying you are a child of God, but he wasn't talking about God. He was talking about them. Alan: That's right.

Jackie: This is why it's so confusing to people, especially people who haven't been looking into the possibility that we've been hoodwinked. To use that intentionally because of what we call New Age. They've taken many of the truths, or the truth, and they've tied it in. and mixed it in with their big lie.

Alan: Of course they have.

Jackie: So how is anybody going to see the truth because they won't look at it because it's hiding in plain sight?

Alan: If you want to read about the philosophers, you can read The Age of Voltaire and The Age of Reason, and those are also by Will Durant.

Jackie: That's what we're talking about right now?

Alan: They mention it. And then Ben Franklin's over there in France at the time too, and it talks about initiations into the crux and all the rest of it. It's not a conspiracy at all. It's a university book. They talk about how the philosophers met in the societies and basically planned the whole of France and the world revolution. But the main thing was that although Voltaire and the others were complete atheists, Franklin was a deist, meaning he believed in a supreme being.

Jackie: Now when I was reading that book on the Gnostics, they mentioned the deists, and they did specifically mention Ben Franklin. How would you define that? I highlighted it because it really is the same thing. It is humanism, isn't it?

Alan: It goes right back to the ancient Syrian Babylonian theories that there was a supreme being who had created the universe, and that underneath him there was a grand architect who used the material because God left it incomplete, and it was up to the Masons, in other words, to use the material. They couldn't create the material; only the supreme one could create it, but they could use the material and modify it and improve it, and that's what they call The Great Work, the material being earth and everything in it, including man and society.

Jackie: I thought the word deist is somebody who believes in God.

Alan: Actually, in one of Franklin's letters to a woman who asked him, What exactly do you believe in?. He said, "I believe in a supreme being and lots of minor gods underneath him."

195

Jackie: Oh, he did. I've even admitted that.

Alan: Yes, now that's also another way of saying you believe in the philosophers. They used to use planets as symbologies of gods or an idea of a type of being.

Jackie: So God didn't quite get the job done. Is that what they're saying?

Alan: Oh yes. That's what they're saying.

Jackie: I read this where they refer to the Great Architect; in my mind I said, Well, they're just referring to God, and that's what they called God, and that is not what they were referring to at all. This is some sub-being under God.

Alan: An architect can only use the material. Basically they split into two factions, apparently in opposition, but that's part of the plan; for the French Freemasons it ended up being completely atheistic, and the story was that British-American Freemasonry was pantheistic—you know, they believed in forces and so on. Each god is represented as a force, and vice versa. It's from Plato; he talks about that type of thing. Plato (or we should say his writing team of priesthoods) mentions the forum, his idea of a forum, which would actually be real things, not abstract. He meant the institution of learned men who would guide the world on how to think, how to behave, and what their goal ultimately would be. and that was ultimately adopted into the Kabbalah as well.

Jackie: In Revelations 6:6, the number 666. First of all, before you explain, the pope was going to be in St. Louis, and a listener mentioned that they were going to be ringing all these bells, and she broke it down numerologically to 888, and do you know anything about that?

Alan: 888, again it's different in English. There's a different numbering system. There are different letters in each alphabet, you see. In fact, going back to Bacon in England, who modified the English language, he dropped the letters down to twenty-six; there were more prior to that. So he modified the language to fit in with this system, which had always been used in every language, and so you have a different numbering system.

Jackie: Are you saying that our alphabet, which contains twenty-six letters, was changed by Francis Bacon? Alan: Yes. He's credited for doing that.

Jackie: How many letters do we have in our alphabet?

Alan: Well, we know that there were at least another ten. At least, and that was at that time. Now remember they had it changed prior to that, too. Bacon was around just before Queen Elizabeth I. Just before the 1500s, and during, as well. But anyway, he was credited with that, which would mean there was a master book of the language existing at the time. For instance, they didn't use an E in the old English language of that period. They used a Y for an E. England was spelled with Yngelde, and that's where the word Yankee eventually came from. You can't find that in the history books; in school you get childish stories. Yes, and there were sounds too, which have been omitted. Scotland, in a way, is lucky, because Scotland has three languages there. They have the Gaelic. They can speak very proper English if you want to do it. They also have Old English, which was taught to the Scots by the Saxons who came up when the Norman invasion happened in the 11th century. They've tried to eradicate it on many occasions. They're still trying to do it. But when you go into the Old English language, you have sounds like a C and 11 pronounced together, meaning like nacht and nicht and so on. That's all been taken right out and stripped right down until the word ham ends up being cam in Scotland and the north of Ireland, but it's the same word. That happened with many, many, many different words. So there was a vast vocabulary there at one time, and the vast vocabulary, of course, meant you had a greater power of conveying ideas, each word being a symbol, you see. By filtering them down and down and down, then you're left with fewer and fewer words, and it becomes harder to do any kind of research with fewer and fewer words.

1%

Jackie: This is something that we have to get clear: we think in our language, and when our language has been reduced, it limits our ability to think and express. For example, people who are thinking have no way to express what they're thinking.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: You mentioned something about every now and then they do this. Like they kind of pour it through a sieve, and then some of the words are left out.

Alan: The longer ones, you know. They're like taking pebbles out of soil through a sieve and each time changing the mesh that it goes through to smaller and smaller mesh until you end up with...

Jackie: Three- and four-letter words. "You know,"* and "double-good." Alan: Yes. Doublethink.

Jackie: Double-plus. When we're talking about doublethink, the way you explained it, it is being able to hold two opposing thoughts at one time.

Alan: Two opposing opinions on the same subject in your head, thoughts, images, and impressions on the same subject. Jackie: That's happening today.

Alan: Oh yes, because you have the government version of everything coming through your TV generally, and then you have what your own senses tell you. You see massive layoffs all over the country, and then you see the official declaration from the spokesman from the so-called Bank of Canada saying that employment is up and there's more money than ever to go around. It's all contradictory.

Jackie: Clinton says he's growing jobs. Growing jobs. I want to use this as an example. In Orwell's 1987, chocolate cost sixteen dollars a pound, and they raised the price of chocolate to twenty dollars a pound, and then they got on the telescreen, and there were loudspeakers all over the streets and in everybody's homes and in the woods, and they said, "People, we are so glad to announce that the price of chocolate has gone down to twenty dollars a pound." Now the people knew that they had been paying sixteen dollars a pound, but the government told them it had gone down, and the way he worded this, you could almost see them making these calculations in their mind, and then they said. "Hooray, now we can afford chocolate!" when they absolutely knew that chocolate had gone up.

Alan: It's called political correctness, and everybody is in the same job, especially the higher the job. has to give the same line. Those who are better paid than everybody else near the top must give the same line even though they know it's a big lie.

Jackie: Our economy has never been better, and here in America we actually have a reserve in our budget. Alan: Yes, we have the same thing here. That's why they're closing all the hospitals and schools.

Jackie: Over here now. They were talking about the children's health insurance program and that so many children who are eligible for it aren't on it. and it's called the CHIP. It's called the Chip! I wonder if any elected official reads this thing, if they see it.

Alan: It's all part of the game: you cannot get in unless you are part of the team. You're a team player. You can't be a team player if you're not in one of the brotherhoods. It doesn't work that way. Give them their apprenticeships. They joined the fraternities long ago, generally. They've been sitting on boards for anything at all; it doesn't matter what kind of board; they've done their apprenticeships. They know the game, and the game is to go along with what comes down from above.

Jackie: I met with our state rep after we moved up here on seven different occasions for an hour at a time. This man told us later he's such a novice at this because he was a legislative aide for twelve years. 11c looks like he just got out of college. But he has children, and he sits and looks at you with these big, wide eyes and this kind of half smile on his face, and the man isn't there; he isn't there!

I showed him documents about workforce development and what they're going to do, and I said, 'I don't care if you're homeschooling them or if you're privately or Christian schooling them; your children are going to get caught up in this. You have got to work and lobby to stop it!' and he just sat there looking at me with these great big old wide eyes. It's frightening. The thing is this man calls himself a Christian. He has children! Now it goes beyond my ability to believe that he truly knows what he's doing.

Alan: He'll go along with anything they say. You've got to understand that the feds are in control, no matter what you think, in any country. We have prime ministers here who will tell everybody in parliament that they better pass this bill or that bill, or else they're out the door. It's so natural; their so-called party all go along with it, and they are all trained seals. They just stand like seals at the circus and clap.

Jackie: I know we're getting off topic, but this millionaire has put out an offer of a million dollars for anybody who can prove any one of their U.S. elected officials, either a congressman or a senator, has had an affair. At first when I heard it, I thought, Isn't this going to be interesting?. I'm told he's with the CIA; he's working with them; he's part of their controlled observation.

Alan: They're brothers. They're all in brotherhoods. It's all one big brotherhood. Technically they own nothing; their money is all in trusts. They live the life of kings and queens as long as they play the game.

Jackie: Yes. Sell their soul to save themselves.

Alan: Yes, and you cannot get up there unless they allow you in. They had their monopolies in the Middle East thousands of years ago. The Phoenicians sunk anybody who tried to be a free enterpriser. When they called themselves Carthaginians (the same people actually), they opened up trade routes all over the Mediterranean, way out to the Black Sea. They owned the whole Romanopolis. Complete monopolies. That has never changed right through today; when a millionaire comes out from somewhere, he's being let in, or else he's being created, but there's no way they would allow opposition unless the guy is actually one of them. Mark Twain wrote about that, about picking up the pens at the bank.

Jackie: What do you think about Mark Twain; was he for real?

Alan: He played the opposition, the side of the working man; Samuel Clemens was his real name. They always give you the opposition, just like they created Karl Marx and so on; this is how you drive mankind. They talk in the ancient religions of spinning the wheel. The problem is once you get the wheel spinning, you have to keep it going, and we are the wheel, mankind, being driven at breakneck pace towards the completion of the great work.

Jackie: In these last two civilizations, did they reach their pinnacle? Did they have that kind of technology?

Alan: They had to have had it. Even the religious terminology we were given gives you clues to it. the water of life, the fish symbols. Jackie: What does that have to do with today's technology?

Alan: Even with sperm, if you put it in a very, very, very mild saline solution, and you're shoved into the fridge, you're put in the darkness, and you could be brought to life and created a thousand years from now.

Jackie: You mentioned philosophers explaining material, our matter, physical matter.

Alan: They had many different philosophical schools, and they inherited these schools under the leadership of Democritus. It already existed then; it's older than 500 B.C. Herodotus is another one. But it was Democritus that came up, and by the way, they all studied Egypt and went back to Greece. That was a learning center, and they took the priesthods to Egypt for twenty years minimum. Democritus was in charge, at one time, of the school of the atomist theory. We're supposed to believe that just through talking and being so intellectual and bright, they came to the conclusion that nothing is really solid matter but was in fact composed of billions and trillions of atoms, all revolving around each other in consistent motion, so they knew about atoms back then. There's no way they knew that by sitting and figuring it out; I don't care how smart these guys were. So this has been around for a long time. They had electricity at one point at one of the temples in Rome. You can read about that in The Last of the Pagans by Peter Chuvin, C-H-U-V-I-N. tells you how one of the priesthods in Rome had a huge lightning rod set up there, and the priests would bring the people in, and there was a storm, and hopefully this thing would collect the electricity from a lightning strike, just like you would have on your barn, but much taller. It would come down that copper strip into the temple and light up the image of Apollo. They had the word electro back then; that's where we get the name from. They did it one time, and the last priest was still holding the metal, so a whole bunch of them got electrocuted to a crisp that night. That is in the J. Chuvin book.

Jackie: You had mentioned something about the atomic bomb back in the early 1900s, Eskimos, or something?

Alan: No. It was at the beginning of this century . In Siberia, there was an explosion prior to the revolution in Russia, just prior to it. They sent a team up to investigate it because it was widely reported and the people saw something streaking over with a trail of fire behind it. Not like a fireball, just a lire. It was at night; it was coming in low, and so it wasn't a "coming from out there" type of thing: it exploded and flattened hundreds of miles in a circular pattern, and it blew up above ground, zero ground, really.

Jackie: So it wasn't like a meteor or a meteorite hitting the earth.

Alan: No. From the angle it came in, if it had been a comet or anything like that, it would have trailed off, leaving debris, which would have landed and left a trail; it didn't do that. This was a circular blast: trees were flattened in a circular pattern for hundreds of miles. They sent a team up there to investigate it, and it's been widely published, and they found some interesting things when they were up there. They found woolly mammoths that were frozen in the ice, and they photographed them. They still had food in their mouths, which they analyzed, and it had been frozen for thousands of years, but the fauna couldn't grow there anymore. It had been there at one time; it was a warm climate. -"The mammoth that they found had an erection when it was frozen. Now that tells you it was in a pretty good mood when it happened, and it was an instant freezing, instant. That was thousands of years ago.

Something had happened so quickly, instantly, that it caused everything to freeze; there was no gradual lead-up to it. It was instant. That can be caused by massive calamities from external sources, but we can certainly cause it today; it's called a nuclear winter. Something that came all across the Mediterranean, for instance, across the central band of the planet, could literally suck the air in so quickly that anything north or south of there would be instantly frozen. There would be gales from the north going towards the equator, sucked in at many thousands and thousands of miles an hour.

Jackie: We were taught about this in school, and they attributed it to a tremendous shift of the poles of the planet. I remember they talked about a mastodon. Is that the same thing as a woolly mammoth?

Alan: It's slightly different. They found fish that don't exist anymore, which they fed to the huskies after they thawed it out. And they also fed some of the meat from the mammoth to the dogs, and they were none the worse for it. So it was an instant freeze.

Jackie: We were going to talk about 666.

Alan: Yes. The 666 thing is always coming up. Prior to being 666, it was 616, and they updated it to 666. That was about A.D. 50. I guess their plans were a bit off, so they updated it again to 666. What we have to take into account is that around A.D. 68 or so, when they had the rebellion in Judea, the uprising of the Maccabees, it wasn't just a localized rebellion; it was a rebellion all over the Roman Empire at that same time, including within the army.

Jackie: I don't know anything about this. What was the rebellion all about?

Alan: It was to get that present Caesar out of power and replace him—more pay, all the usual things. It was also an international brotherhood-type thing as well, remembering that the Roman army was a part of the brotherhood. It didn't start with the Knights Templar at all; this had been going on for thousands of years, from the beginning. If you take the Hebrew letters, each letter being an actual word, and each word and letter being a number. You have your piece of paper there, and on the left-hand side you write down nun, N-tJ-N, which would be an English translation. Then down below it, underneath it, you put resh, R-E-S-H, and then below that, you put vau, which is pronounced O. V-A-U. Then below that you put nun again. Then start at the top again, and across from the first nun you put N~50, and then across from RCsh you put R=200. Now vau (O as they pronounced it) equals 6, and then you have nun again at the bottom, and that equals 50. So then you go up to the other part of the page and you put down the keph; that's K-E-P-II. Then you put down underneath it samech, which is S-A-M-E-C-H, and then underneath that you put resh again. Across from the keph, you put K-100, and then you put samech, which is S-60, and then next to resh, you put R-

200. Then you add up each of your columns, and you get 360 and 306. Then you add it together and you get 666. That's from the Talmud and the Kabbalah. What you get if you read it down the way is N-R-O-N. Then on the other side you have K-S-R. That gives you Ncron Caesar. You see, that was the emperor Nero; that's the Greek Nero, kay-zar. That's written in Greek from the Hebrew. Meaning that was the name that you could put into Latin. Ncron Kaiser is Nero Caesar. Now the Scarlet Lady is Rome; that's who ruled the empire in that day, sat on seven hills, and reigned over the kings there.

Jackie: That's in Revelations.

Alan: That's Rome; Rome still sits on seven hills. At the time that the book was written, the revelations of John, the sixth Roman Emperor, were in power. It said in Revelations, After him another will come who is "one of the seven." That's Revelations for you, right? It said who was wounded but healed, and whose mind is contained in the mysterious number and Auraneus Luge; it was the name of Nero. So they come from Augustus. You got Augustus, Tiberius. Caligula, Claudius. Nero the fifth, the sixth, is the one who was in power just before the rebellion; his name was Galba, and when he ascended the throne, there was insurrection by the legions all over the place. There was an insurrection of the Judeans within the whole land; this was an international insurrection of the day. The Roman one was led by Otho; he was the rebel leader. So the book must have been written under Galba, who reigned from about A.D. 6 to January of A.D. 69, if it takes the time of Nero being imminent. Nero the second, he's the one who was and will be.

Jackie: Oh. because the seventh Caesar, or the seventh ruler, was another Nero.

Alan: Yes, and so he was titled Nero, and he was in power when the book was written. "Who was and will be again" is Nero, and that's basically the revelation.

Jackie: So IHC 666. ii. It says in Revelations it shall be the number of man. Why is it said it's the number of the beast? Alan? Does it say that somewhere? Where did we get that, then?

Alan: It was the beast that pulled him into power. So then they changed and altered it again for the upcoming era after it had all happened, you see, to keep it in an apocalypse, a final apocalypse. Do you remember that a lot of that was fulfilled at the time, because John predicted the time of Nero for about the year A.D. 70, and there would be a reign of terror under him, which would last 42 months, about 1,260 days, and after that time, God would arise and vanquish Nero, who was the antichrist, and destroy the great city, the lure of Rome, thousands of years. The millennium would begin, and so forth.

Jackie: I remember Jesus was talking about the upcoming upheaval, and he talked about the gnashing of teeth and all of the terrible things that would happen. He said that I should tell you that all of this shall come about before his generation comes to an end. If we read that and take it literally, he was talking to those people sitting listening to him. When they see what happened, some will be gone and some will be here. Our churches have led us to believe all of this, and they use the scriptures to drive the point home. It's in the book. It's written. We know what's going to happen when it looks as though it's already happened.

Alan: Plus the fact that Revelations wasn't pulled in the original Bible. It wasn't put in until about five hundred A.D., and then they took it out again and re-inserted it later. You can get that from The Age of Faith, as far as the insertion of Revelations goes.

Jackie: Because in this book I have on Constantine and on the first Council of Nicaea, the author goes a little bit further and talks about some of the other councils, and he lists the books of the Bible as they were decided upon during the Council of Nicaea. Then in another council they had some other books and looked them out, and then there was another council, and they just kept changing their mind about what was going to be in there.

Alan: Yes, and we'll never really know what the original IHC ones really were. None of them were eventually left in for hundreds of years, but there were more, even then, at the beginning than they let on about. I have destroyed all the other ones that didn't fit in with the power structure. They popped Revelations back in again in the Middle Ages to keep people in their place when they were losing control and taxing them very heavily. Then of course, when they created the Protestant movement, that's what they preached all over Europe. That's why eventually nobody went to church with the hail, fire, and brimstone. So it's just a continuation of each part of the building structure from Catholic to Protestant to the schisms of Protestantism through the New Age, which is the one they're creating again.

Jackie: You read a quote by Benjamin Franklin, who said those of us who created Protestantism will destroy Catholicism, and then we will destroy Protestantism, and Christianity will be dead.

Alan: He said once it had fulfilled its purpose, and that's when he started to attack the local ministers and his brother before him.

Jackie: Christianity was the message of Christ of Jesus. He did not build a building, the church. His church was the gathering of the people, and Christianity does not have to be dead if people know in their hearts that Jesus' message to us was life and light, not death, not sin.

Alan: It never was, and that was blind obedience. You've got to realize that the Christianity that's taught today is as far removed from a hundred years ago as a hundred years ago was from King James. It's been altered and altered by leaders. That's how you alter society. You put in the right people.

Jackie: It comes down to loving your god with all your heart, strength, mind, and soul and loving your neighbor as yourself, and this would be the message that would lead our lives.

Alan: I don't think that would work. I don't think that really works because people are gregarious. Plato called them not herd animals but gregarious. People are gregarious; it means coming together. Like birds coming together in the winter, you see them all packed in the tree, you know, like starlings and so on. As soon as you have that, somebody comes in and impresses them very well, and they follow.

Jackie: Infiltrate. Well, maybe each individual. I'm not talking about people coming together, but every single individual living by that rule, that law. that commandment of love.

Alan: You can't do that either if you're watching TV and you're getting brainwashed from a thousand different areas. The media itself is the biggest tool today. You can't have it all ways either. Learn to live with yourself and your own senses, or join them because that's your choice. That's your choice.

Every religion has the same commandments that everybody would have to follow throughout their life, like don't steal and all the usual things. It's the same through every single religion. None of the religions follow it, but they all have it in their books.

PART II INTERVIEW II

Jackie: This is Alan Watt from Canada to give us some history. Some people go along with the program and end up getting whacked anyway.

Alan: Certain ones do. It depends. As far back as you can go into rebellions, prior to even the times of old Christ in the Middle East, you've had secret societies. All rebellions seem to be led by members of secret societies, and within those societies they have one major one that everyone thinks they're a part of, but in reality there's always a higher one at the top. So the ones at the bottom who do the legwork and the pushing tend to get whacked at the end of it: they're expendable, mainly because they've got mouths, and if they were to find out that the world was never going to end up as it was envisaged for them, they would talk.

They're whacked before they can even get to see the end of it.

Jackie: Would you talk just a little bit about the Russian Revolution? During the French Revolution the same thing happened with some high people in office, didn't it?

Alan: The French Revolution had a lot of preparation for that whole century from the 1700s onwards, and they also had bankruptcies in that century as a prelude to it. They also financed the American Revolution, which led them into further bankruptcy, so all of this preparation fueled the revolution. It was to be a world revolution beginning with America and the U.S. France was to be next, and they hoped to carry it on right through there, right through Europe.

Jackie: What about the Spanish and the revolution of Spain? Alan: That was similar.

Jackie: That was set up by the same crowd, wasn't it?

Alan: There's no doubt at all. When you look at the amount of writing that was going on from 1700 onwards in preparation for all of the revolutions, it was astronomical, with very intelligent people coming forward with unlimited financing, publishing books everywhere, distributing everywhere, and all talking about the same agenda, a world agenda. The financing was astronomical. It could overcome any establishment through underground means of supplying books and literature and so on. They were even recruiting priests and ministers into Freemasonry, who would then also slip out the agenda during sermons in a very clever way.

They got it to the people who would be doing the actual lighting, preparing for it.

Jackie: When you mention Freemasonry, aren't you really talking about the Illuminati?

Alan: The Illuminati is only one name; each branch of Freemasonry has a purpose, and each one has a function. Freemasonry at its very core believes in progress (it doesn't matter what they call themselves or who they actually say they belong to; it's the same one at the very top). They believe that progress must be made to a specific ending that can only come about by creating opposites and having conflict. What arises out of the conflict is the winner having its opposite created again, until it's never-ending. So it's never-ending conflict towards this goal that they have, and eventually Hegel would come out and write about it. And now we call it Hegelianism, but that existed long before him.

Jackie: I was reading NEA: Trojan Horse in American Education by Samuel Blumenfeld. The way he explained the Hegelian dialectic wasn't like Hegel created it or thought it up. He observed it in the way society moves, and when he put it into words, they said, "Let's do it."

Alan: It had always been done with the same technique by the same controlling crowd. I really think the world has been in the control of a small bunch of people from the beginning.

Again, that's another higher philosophy of Freemasonry, that there is another history, that there is another controlling group who moved throughout the world thousands of years ago and set up their own kingdoms in preparation for the great work, which was the conflicts that they would create amongst themselves to the ending that they had envisaged.

Jackie: When you say the conflicts that they would create amongst themselves, are we talking about creating your own opposition, a controlled opposition?

Alan: Always. They always create a problem, then they create a reaction to it, and then they give you a solution to it, but it doesn't end with the solution. The solution must then have an opposite created. It goes on forever.

Jackie: Constant movement.

Alan: That is why. Also, in the French Revolution, towards the end of that. Robespierre was the leader of it. turned on his own people and started killing them off because he said they weren't radical enough. That's the same thing that Trotsky said about the Russian Revolution at the end of it. It was supposed to carry on, he thought, worldwide by physical violence, and of course Lenin had other ideas, and so did Stalin, who took over.

Jackie: But they were all just front pieces.

Alan: They were front pieces, but they'd also had allegiance to whatever order of Freemasonry they'd joined. Trotsky, in his book called My Life, which was written in 1934, said there are a thousand points of light working towards this goal, which is the same quote that George Bush used. So they use the same terminology and the same phraseology, and they're all Freemasons. Trotsky tells you in his book that he is a Freemason.

Jackie: So what exactly is Freemasonry then? The Khazars—I don't know what you call them; they call themselves Jews, and they are. There seems to be, in so many history books...

Alan: Long before. Even ancient history that was given in the regular history books differs completely from the history you get from Persia, or Iran, or Iraq, and also Lebanon. They have completely different histories concerning Judaism, and some of them actually say that twelve tribes were really twelve nations, not living where we're told but living all over, right up to the Black Sea. and that Judaism was created literally on the spot; that was around 250 or 300 B.C. It was the Persians who had conquered that whole area and taken over Babylon, where they brought the peoples that they had captured, and they emerged calling themselves Jews. The Khazars who adopted

Judaism en masse (they themselves, prior to becoming Jews, have a very secretive history once Again, because they had outer layers of people who they controlled called themselves Khazars, but some of them were Muslim and so on to the outer rings, the peripheries. But in the very center, where this royal lineage was, there were two Kagan; they called them Kagan. That's really the top man, the king. One was never seen by the people. Only dignitaries from foreign countries could see him. But in the ninth century or so they said that the inner circle of the Khazars was blue-eyed and blond-haired. They only intermarried amongst their own family. The king who ruled over the people and was seen by the people was called a Beck, B-H-C-K, and Kagan. He was the social administrator, and you find so many people today with the names Beck and Becker and so on. That didn't exist in the Middle East and came directly from the Khazars, and when they eventually moved out of there, they settled primarily in what is now Georgia, the part of Russia near the Ukraine.

Jackie: You remember when you talked about the international priesthood? I've got this book by Douglas Reed called The Controversy of Brian. He talked about the fact that these people who lived over there that are touted as the twelve tribes (the children of Israel according to history) really were about ten, and they were loosely connected. Sometimes they were warring, and sometimes they intermarried with each other; sometimes they were at peace. He said the itinerant priests came wandering in and began preaching their dogma. At that time in history, the people had already begun giving up their many gods and seeking their belief in the one god. Then these itinerant priests came and began preaching their dogma, and the people rejected it. But the people of Judah were the ones that more or less were conned into this thing, and he said that they were called Haburu; the itinerant priests were called Haburu, which is where he said the word Hebrew comes from.

Alan: I'm ill again with Freemasonry. There was a Freemasonic writer at the beginning of this century called Mackay. He talked about the other version of history, and he wrote about the six kings that he called the Vikings. Vikings is the same as six kings, if you take the V and the 1, and if you look up I Kings, Chapter 6 in the Bible, it's the building of the temple of Solomon, so Vikings means six kings, which is the sixth chapter of Kings, the building of Solomon's temple. So everything's been tampered with.

Jackie: Doug Reed said that when the people were taken into captivity in Babylon, those itinerant priests ' their first great experiment in living apart, making a nation within nations, a nation unto themselves. You told us that the Hebrew language was actually written then.

Alan: Yes. It's a conglomeration of a few other languages that were from the area where they lived. But they can actually write the Bible and write the code into the Bible; there are other codes, and again, depending on the language and the Bible, there are other codes with other meanings. Vikings literally is six kings, and it's the building of Solomon's temple, which is another esoteric thing in itself. Here's the quote from MacKay. "It appears from the northern chronicles that Sigge, that's S-I-G-G-E, the king of Asher, an Asiatic tribe, emigrated from the Caspian and the Caucasus into Northern Europe; he traced his course northwesterly from the Black Sea to Russia, although according to tradition he placed one of his sons as a ruler, which he is said to have done over the Saxons and the Franks," which is France. "He did advance through Simbria and then to Denmark, which acknowledged his fifth son as their sovereign, and he passed over to Sweden. He soon made himself master there. He built Sigtuna as the capital of his empire and promulgated a new code of laws and established the secret mysteries. He then assumed the name of Odin and founded the priesthood of the twelve Jotars, who are Druids, and he then conducted secret worship in the administration of justice, and his prophets revealed the future. These secret rites of these mysteries Arc celebrated the death of Baldwin the beautiful and lovely and represented the grief of gods and men at his death and his restoration to life." This is thousands of years old, according to Freemasonry. So the world was set up long before Jesus Christ came along, and they had many dying gods and resurrections of the same dying gods long before them, right into Egypt.

Jackie: The story of Moses was an absolute duplicate of the story of the king of twenty-six hundred years before that, to the point of being put in the basket in the rushes. lie quoted from a Jewish rabbi who said it doesn't matter. You see. The lie that has been told doesn't matter. The only thing that matters is the outcome, the plan.

Alan: The plan—it's interesting. They believe the masses will never move towards change unless you give them myths. Down through the centuries the Freemasons claim that they create the real myths. They create the "William Wallace" of Scotland. They create the "Robin Hood," fighting the rich and giving to the poor. In other words, they create the myths to get people worked up.

Jackie: We discussed William Wallace, and I picked up a couple of books after I saw that movie; I was very intrigued. There was very little history written at that time, and basically all they could do was piece together some of the old oral histories. But you said you believe that William Wallace did exist and that he did in fact do some of the leadership feats that they portrayed in that movie. But you said that now they built the big Masonic memorial to him.

Alan: Oh yes. They built it in the 1800s. It was the largest Masonic structure or monument given to anybody in Scotland, and it's completely funded by Masonic lodges. You have to look at the similarities of his death. There's sort of the dying god, dying for his people, and he was sliced up into parts at the end, and a shoulder was sent one place, one to the other, and a leg here and a leg there.

Jackie: Like Osiris.

Alan: Yes. His head was put on top of the lower bridge in London, and so you have these same similarities through history, always with the dying and resurrected god. dying for the people. But the historians are well aware of all these international myths and the similarities between them. They know it's the same stories. Freemasonry claims that Christianity was created by their predecessors as a myth to change the world into a world state. So they claim that they created it; they say again that it was hijacked by the Roman hierarchy and altered and that it wasn't meant to end up this way. Very interestingly, the descendants of the Stuart lineage from Britain, later replaced by the present crowd, are now on the world stage again with a lot of the other royalty, the post-royalty of Europe. It turns out that the Stuarts and other members of royalty have been working for the building of the United Europe from its beginning, according to Stuart himself, who has written a book. They also sat on various panels for the United Nations.

Jackie: You mean the royal family, Stuart?

Alan: That's right. It doesn't end there. Now this is Stuart, who claims to be the head of the Knights Templar organization, and his sidekick. (A man called Gardner, who has also written a couple of quite thick books, which are well-funded) claims that the Stuart lineage and others of the post-royal families are all intermarried with one group from Georgia, Russia, according to the lineage, and they claim to have what they call the royal blood. This is the "Holy Blood, Holy Grail" thing. They claim to be keepers of the royal blood, the gene, the alba gene, the white gene, and...

Jackie: Is that the Albigensians?

Alan: That was one of the groups that they claim were their ancestors. While is alba, like albino. You'll find wherever there was a group that controlled a part of the world or an empire, they always named it, wherever they lived. Alba-something or other. The Romans lived amongst the Alba Mountains. Albany. New York was named after it, too. Scotland used to be called Albany as well. So it's really interesting.

Jackie: So they believe that the people, the masses as they call them... I heard someone from the Bank of Canada, when he was talking to Rothschild at that Fourth World Wilderness Conference, say that "Unfortunately the cannon fodder that inhabits this earth will never of themselves move for change.*"

Alan: That's right, and that's the whole Freemasonic philosophy, and yet they never tell you. They all know amongst themselves that there's an agenda and a final goal, but they never tell the people what it is, and that again is part of Freemasonry.

Jackie: Now you're not talking about the lower degrees of Freemasonry.

Alan: Once you get up into the skull, there are 33 degrees in the Scottish Rite. 33 degrees are the bones of the spine, the spinal cord, and there are 33 of them. When you go up the degree of a spinal cord, you go through the opening of the door, which is the portal into the skull. (That's why the skull is important, too; that's part of the reason.) But once you get into the skull, you go up to the upper temple, the upper room, and you can find the same stories, which are six thousand years old at least, of going up the stairs, up the degrees through the portal, the door which is guarded by Atlas. Atlas is the name they give to the bone on which the head swivels. So once you go into the upper chamber, the upper room, where again you have the story of Jesus taking his disciples. The twelve disciples are simply the twelve signs of the zodiac going through the sun, the son of God. Thirteen. Our knowledge is contained, for an individual, in the head. That's what it literally means. By giving people a different story at birth, they can control your whole life. You'd never think for yourself. All the tools that you've been given will always bring you to the same point that they want you to come to through your reasoning methods. The whole thing with Freemasonry is a takeover. The initiation is to let you know that all knowledge that you think you have is contained in your head. It doesn't come from outside. By controlling all knowledge, you can control everyone's upper room, everyone's upper chamber.

Jackie: That brings us to the mind control that's going on today.

Alan: Mind control has always been the same. I've come to the conclusion that with the televisions and electronics, it's easier. You know there's hardly an opinion, a social opinion, that a person has today that hasn't been given to them through fiction, through somebody on TV, or a movie. They create different dramas; some of the best series were the Star Trek series, and the word bold is only used with knighthood, and so their whole thing is about boldly going off into space and working for a federation of earth.

United Nations. Even in the movies, what they use is pretty identical to the U.N. logo as the backdrop of the council meetings where the committee meets. Then they give you situations where they meet aliens, which represent the races. They intermarry, you know, this kind of thing, and accept strange customs, and so on and so on, and then they go into the next generation because Freemasonry works intergenerationally, and then it steps up a bit. Once again.

You have the bald-headed priest or the captain, the new one, and again you have social situations happening “on board.” With the third series, you have primarily women in charge, and the men take on a secondary role, which fits in again with the Knights Templar, Freemasonry, Mithraism, the mother-goddess type of thing, and the movements. Even the Stuarts, the head of the Knights Templar today, are green, which is a turn to the worship of the mother earth. That’s according to them...

Jackie: They’re teaching it to our children in the schools, too.

Alan: Yes. This is the oldest religion that ever existed, just simply being brought back again. Freemasonry believes that the female is the carrier of all creativity, but she’s not the door. She can only do it through a special mating or selection and through a son, through the sun; that’s why there are the two pillars of Joachim and Boaz in Freemasonry. They have the female and the male for the temple itself. Stuart and the revamped royalty from Europe are pushing this whole mother goddess type thing, the carrier of the alba gene, the white gene. It’s amazing because Stuart now is the head, the approved head by the United Nations and by the European Parliament of the European Council of Princes.

Alan: This is the descendant. Michael Stewart. This is the descendant of the King James Bible Stuart family. It’s the same. They were deposed.

Jackie: This quote by Adam Weishaupt, “the useful idiots,” is that a term that they have actually used that would have helped them to implement their plan?

Alan: It’s a contempt that they have. Albert Pike used it. He used similar terms to that. You’re only seeing one facet, one side of it. Jackie: I think maybe these are the useful idiots that Albert Pike or Adam Weishaupt mentioned. Maybe we’re all useful idiots.

Alan: There's a definite plan to all of this. But you must remember that whatever they do or show to the public, they do everything in groups of four. There are four methods of attack. You only see the one method. They work behind the scenes in three other directions. That's the standard philosophy that they have. That's why everything goes the way they want it to go, regardless of what the people eventually say they want. What we see is a show. They would love for us to fall for it and say, Please do this. But it doesn't make any difference because they have the three other methods working in the background behind the scenes.

Jackie: Now you had made the statement that George Bush, he's not a keeper. That's because he's sort of a twig on the family tree. Like a dead twig.

Alan: Let's graft, yes.

Jackie: Because you said once if he absolutely knew what their plan was. He wouldn't continue doing what he's doing because he's not going to be one of the keepers.

Alan: Yes. He got his payoff. He was probably picked for his part very young. That's what they claim that they do. Like Clinton and Bronfman and all of them. It's funny about Bush: I was watching a video from Britain on Westminster Abbey, which goes back into the Middle Ages, and it showed you the hall of the Knights of the Garter, and they have all these chairs set up, or tiers of chairs, and each one is sectioned off, almost like a stable where you would put a horse for each knight that they've sworn in. They have this sword in front of them where the knights held it and a flag above each member showing his family coat-of-arms, and it showed you the George Bush family one.

Jackie: I love cum, you know this, and George Bush doesn't?

Alan: I don't think any of them get the true goal. That's what it is. I don't think they realize what the true goal is. Jackie: So it's not like you have inside knowledge but some reading and watching.

Alan: Yes. When you look at the past, and then you look at what's happening today, and then you read the philosophies of as many Freemasonic writers as possible and the ancient histories concerning the mysteries, you find they've always had a particular goal, which is so weird to our way of thinking that you don't think it's possible that they could pull it off. But their end goal has to do with changing the physical structure of humans. That is their true goal. They claim that man was created imperfectly. Imperfectly, because man has free will. Now this is from the writings about Freemasonry. Freemasonry is only a method of getting up in an order if you're chosen to join an order after you're a Freemason and go up in degrees. So an Order is much higher than Freemasonry, and then there are Orders above Orders.

Jackie: Like the Order of the Garter?

Alan: They claim that man from the beginning was created imperfectly. They're talking about mass man, not them. They believe that they either have the royal blood or the ancient royal blood, "sang real," as they call it. or they have been grafted onto the tree or the vine through knighthoods, et cetera. But the masses of people have free will, and free will, they claim, is the problem of all evil on this planet. From their point of view, they're right because we won't do what we're told, generally. They want people who will be robots, that is, without lowering the higher intellect, the reasoning powers for calculations and language, and so on. They want to remove free will from humanity. They know the parts of the brain that literally make you. you. It makes you decide on this decision or that decision. They know the parts of the brain.

Jackie: That's what all this brain research is about.

Alan: They've had so many international meetings going back into the last century on mind control, not just this century, on how to alter man, and they've tried it through breeding; they admit that. They've had three main methods, four really, over the century. They've experimented surgically, altering man through lobotomies in Russia. They had thousands and thousands of experiments on people during the Soviet era. But you see, they'd always, or they generally ended up destroying the personality, which is also free will, which is also higher intellect, so you couldn't talk or whatever, or you'd be a zombie.

Jackie: So the only way they've been able to achieve it so far is physically with surgery. 210

Alan: Surgery, but they've also found methods through drugs and chemicals, which can cause permanent effects, and also through mass psychology, which can only get you to a certain level, but pretty far. So in one of the meetings they had in San Francisco in the 1960s, they went through all the methods they'd tried; it was an international meeting on mind control, and that was the title of the meeting. Where was the press then in 1964? They went through each method and each technique, and each leader for each department (psychology, surgery, chemicals, and so on) made a speech, and they gave the results to date. But they all admitted to the final goal, which was the eradication of what they called free will, the primitive part of man. If you can eradicate that, you can have peace. Well, we will have peace because we'll all be zombies.

Jackie: Tipper Gore, the expert on healthcare and on mental health. I listened to this lady, and one of my first thoughts was, "What makes her an expert?" I even wrote it on the Action Alerts that I was doing at the time that it appears that they have decided that what's good for what ails everybody is drugs. They talk about a world of people free of fear and free of want. Now there's a whole different story when you talk about needs; there are certain needs that we have, like shelter, food, et cetera. But there isn't a person alive on this earth that doesn't have some wants that aren't part of their needs, and I don't know anybody who is free of fear. I think that's part of what they call the human condition, and I thought to myself, Then you're talking about a world of zombies; any world with people who are free of fear and free of want has lost their minds.

Alan: Well, they admit that, though, to a certain extent. Charles Galton Darwin (the grandson of Charles Darwin), who wrote The Next Million Years, said quite openly what the intentions were of this group he belonged to, and he wasn't suggesting things; they were already putting it in place. They're doing it. and he went through methods of controlling populations, population control.

Reducing it to a certain number, and then using what they call the common man. Basically, it's a robotic slave.

Jackie: Cogs in the wheel. Cogs in the wheel.

Alan: Yes. He said by removing this primitive part of man, we shall also be removing their instinct for self-survival. So we, the elite, the controllers, must not alter ourselves. Now I think they've already been doing it. They've been reducing population in the western world since the 1950s at least with the introduction of the polio vaccine. I've got a videotape with Dr. Salk, the man who is credited with engineering this, and it says on the tape that he knew that there were at least seventeen live simian viruses contained in every polio shot that was given. Live viruses. When you look at what polio itself does, it causes encephalitis primarily. It attacks neurons in the nervous system and primarily the brain. Now everybody who got an LLU shot in the 1950s and 1960s, the mothers were told, were generally about three years of age when the brain cells were literally doubling. The skull is growing. They hit you then with the flu shots, three in a row, which causes mild encephalitis, and every mother was told they might be off-color. The child would be off-color for a couple of weeks, "but don't worry about it," and might have a little bit of fever, and again, "don't worry about it." Well, that fever is in the brain of the child, and it attacks certain areas of the brain, specific areas. What about those seventeen other viruses that have been hybridized, I'm sure, from the chimpanzee? What were they supposed to attack? I don't know, but I know that everybody now, every doctor, admits it. General practitioners say they've never seen such a plague of people with arthritis, autoimmune problems, allergies, chronic fatigue syndrome, et cetera, et cetera, and I am certain that was one of the methods that had a two-fold purpose, partly to cull the population down and also to literally dumb down the higher sensors of reasoning as well. I'm certain that was part of it. These people, we find out. that whenever they suggest something, it's not a suggestion. It is mandated.

Jackie: This book that I have, Cogs in the Wheel: The Formation of Soviet Man by Mikhail I. Idler, describing the principal peculiarity of the regime. "In our Soviet Union people are not born, what are born arc organisms. We turn them into people, tractor drivers, engine drivers, academicians, scholars, and so forth." He said, "The first realm of freedom on earth for the working man has become the motherland of a new and higher type of Homo sapiens, Homo sovieticus, with the utmost clarity, the authors proceeded to draw up the ballot sheet of the experiment they consider to have been so bravely executed. It has taken millions of years for the cell to advance to the stage of homo sapiens and to reach the level of man endowed with reason, but only sixty years for him to be cleansed of all impurities, and for the highest type of homo sapiens, a new biological specimen, by the name of Homo sovieticus. Soviet man." That is the blueprint, isn't it? The Soviet Union was a huge laboratory, the closed doors, the iron curtains. What do you know about the Russian people? today?

Alan: The Russian people are being run by the same descendants as the bunch that took the country over in 1917. I have that from some Russians. There are two hundred families that run Russia, and their grandparents were running it in 1917, and they still do, and of course they control the government and the mafia because it's one and the same thing, really. They've also moved out into Europe; in Britain and Ireland they call them the stinking Russian gangs.

Jackie: However, people in Russia still do have a semblance of their reason, and they still have a desire, don't they, for something different and better?

Alan: Something better, but I think they've been conditioned to look to the government for help, and food is one of their biggest problems right now.

Jackie: Big brother. The big brother will help you out.

Alan: Yes. They've been taught that every answer comes from the government.

Jackie: I see that in America today. I see it when I listen to these people at these meetings, pushing like crazy to get this government money in here.

Alan: Yes. and it is all public/private enterprise.

Jackie: Yes, I know. The United Nations' business plan, and it isn't really the U.N. that's pushing this: it's just the bureaucracy that was set up for them to implement their plan.

Alan: Take nothing for granted. Take nothing for granted. You can't even afford that these days. Jackie: I know. Thank you so much; this has been delightful.

Jackie: I read to you a transcript of a conversation with Alan Watt from Canada and our dear friend Effie. Alan is on with us tonight and is going to expand on the content of the conversation, talking about the force, the spiritual force that is within each and every one of us, and there can be some great changes made. Thank you for joining us this evening.

Alan: It's a pleasure. I think that the world has been run for the thousands of years that we are aware of and probably a lot longer by people who are aware of truth, and they have given us the religions over the millennium for their own ends, basically. Right now in the world there's a tremendous attempt to bring us down to the level of every other living creature on the planet and say that we're nothing more than a bunch of DNA molecules and helixes and so on, in order to allow ourselves to be managed more efficiently, population-wise and right down to genetic engineering. If we forget the fact that there is, if you like, (it's an inadequate word) a soul or spirit, if we forget that we have that in us, then we are playing right into their hands.

Jackie: They're being successful in their quest to fix spirit in matter, as you had said. I thought a lot about that, Alan. It seems to me that it would be almost impossible because the spiritual force that they're trying to pin down is so much greater than anything physical.

Alan: Again, according to their religion, and it is a religion, the force is neither positive nor negative. It's up to the individuals to choose which way they want it to work. If everybody (the mass) gives up their individuality, because we are individuals, and we mustn't forget that fact either. We're so used to being called the herd or the people or the populace, the nation, and so on. that we are in danger of losing our individuality, and what is true down through the ages it's never been the majority who have ever changed anything. It definitely is up to a minority. Right now there's a minority running this planet, and there's a minority who are aware and who are prepared to go against them. Because scientifically, when they say that they've found the last remnants of the DNA structure. I'm sure they had it a long time ago; they're simply making it official.

Jackie: But you say that today there is actually an opposing force.

Alan: Yes, and it's scattered. It is individuals. If those individuals didn't exist, there's nothing to stop this path that we're on. There's no other track off it. because you have to have the will to get off it. Before you can get off it, you have to understand the road you're on right now. Most people think that history is an evolution, a simple daily evolution of things that suddenly happen and governments suddenly deal with. But in reality, (when you go back into the old writings of (IRCCC and Egypt,) you find this religion plans way, way, way in advance in order to keep power. They plan the future, and they control the past, as Orwell said. "Those who control the past control the future" because they create the future.

Jackie: They're very aware that there is that force, that consciousness, and that they are actually creating the consciousness, because it appears that one of the ways they have created that consciousness is by thought control, where people, Christians who read the Bible and they read Revelations, the prophecies, and the prophets, and they say, "This is God's plan; there is nothing we can do about it. It is going to happen." They actually joyfully look forward to what they think is going to be sonic heaven on earth. Now, knowing the power of the spoken word and the collective thought of all of these people, their plan is being thought, believed, and spoken right into existence. That's exactly what's happening. That's how they're creating this consciousness.

Alan: Oh yes. They made it quite plain thousands of years ago in their writings (Pythagoras, Plato, and all the rest of them) that there were two primary methods that they used. One was what they called natural science. Natural science means the senses and control through the senses and information coming into the mind, and therefore those who give the information through symbolism and writing and speeches and so on would create the person's opinions on every subject. But they also said there was a much higher plane of science. They called it science, and they were talking about a spiritual science, and it has never changed all down through the last couple of thousand years, at least. Their theology is based on and you've heard different ones say, I am god." Shirley MacLaine and Maurice Strong, meditating to himself really because he is getting in touch with his own godhood.

This is the world philosophy or religion that they have at the very top of what we term Freemasonry and the other mystery religions around Freemasonry: that they have attained the highest evolution of cycles and reincarnations. They really do believe (his! Therefore, they have the right to decide the future for everyone else. Now they begin their inductions with, for instance.

Theosophy. The books they put out for the general public can be very enticing to minds that are seeking something, because there's a lot of truth in there. But, you'll never find the books on the shelves or ones you can send away for that they give to their members at a higher level, because the whole thing is eventually to create a form of elitism amongst themselves. We see this in all religions, but they've got it down to a fine art where they appeal to the ego. You are special. That's the first thing. If they can use you on a higher level of social control over people, then they will induct you into a higher level of elitism. Theosophy did create Hitler on the one hand and, to an extent, Communism on the other because in the Kremlin (and it's come out in the British newspapers) these so-called Communists were into Theosophy. It's with us today.

Jackie: What amazes me is it's so close to the actual truth. That's what's so slick about it.

Alan: Yes, the symbol in Egypt, which we can see on most ambulances today, was the staff with wings outstretched, forming a cross with the two serpents intertwined. They control by the use of the two opposing forces; in other words, the control of this science and creation of opposites, because to control nature you must use opposites. That's what they say. They give you both sides to the story; they give you the champions to both sides to the story. In reality, there are two sides on each side of the story. There are the ones who really think they're facing an enemy, and on each side they'll also have an elite who are Masonic directing them. So they have so cleverly brought history up to its present point by using the power of opposites. They do see these a thousand different ways, but the average mind can only grasp a simple conspiracy if there are two very visible plain sides. Yet, it's like the American Civil War, where you had a Christian group facing another Christian group, and yet within each group there was a Masonic side to it. So there are two sides on every side. The mind gets lost when you get into that, for instance, when you realize. * 'No, it's not just one enemy; there are actually two within the same uniform here.' But when you start bringing even more sides into it to confuse the issue and realize that has its opposite as well, then that is the form of control. Anybody who wants to understand that mind control is nothing new at all. and your mind again, they would interchange the words soul and mind without any problem because to them it was one and the same thing. They really did not differentiate.

Jackie: How do you differentiate soul and mind?

Alan: With the higher consciousness, which is what everybody has to come to, whether they like it or not, you either go along with the group or you fight your way out of it. That higher consciousness, as I say, that part of God (I don't say you're God), but that part of God within you is the Christ within you. It's a higher consciousness, really. The ancients didn't differentiate at all because they realized you're either programmed—in other words, you have no mind or soul—or your soul is in you, which would cancel out the programming. You're either aware or you're not aware. They said most people went through their whole lives never being conscious or aware that they were a soul. Again, it's very elitist.

Jackie: We relate to who we are as a physical body. So we relate to ourselves as a physical body; we feel weak, we feel helpless, when in true fact we are a spiritual being inhabiting this physical body. That God's creation power is available to us, to everybody, to be used for good or to be used for evil. It's our choice.

Alan: It's our choice, and again, before we can use it for any purpose, we have to look at ourselves as the individual because most of the things that stop us from getting to a higher understanding, or consciousness, or in tune with this true power that's everywhere, we have to realize the faults that we have within ourselves as individuals. We tend in our own private lives to bring in all of the problems that we're addicted to. We can't get away from addictions, and those addictions tend to bring us down. Worry, relationships (the wrong types of relationships,) things we think we want but don't really need, and so on, because with this technique of control from the ones who actually do it, they give us everything that brings us down to a base level. They give us the constant sex on TV and movies and so on; for the children, the same thing and violence. We think we want it until even a murderer can be made to look glamorous, or a potential murderer, which is nothing but a bully anyway, and you have bullies in uniform.

There's no difference; it's the same mentality.

We're taught to worship people in uniforms under what they call law, after conditioning us that law is somehow proper, whereas law is a neutral term. It's simply legislation passed by somebody who rules. But conditioning puts it the other way, until whatever is law is somehow correct. It's a mirror imagining of reality. Your senses are telling you that the government is conditioning and training the whole population of the world to be stopped on highways for road checks and hold queues for miles, just back up, and so on, and somehow that is law.

Jackie: People say, "I don't care if they do that. I have nothing to hide."

Alan: That's the coward's way out of everything. Of course, those in government, through their conditioning in schools and into adulthood, know they can count on the majority to say that and actually come to that conclusion. In reality, they're extorting money, with every ticket they hand out, for the government. Extortion is extortion. I don't care what they want to call it. It's simply more of your labor in a cash form going into the pockets of the ones who are in control of the countries.

Jackie: What do you imagine could happen if everybody suddenly got off it and quit playing along with the game?

Alan: Then things would start to move, because I don't know if you've ever gone through life and occasionally met somebody who had influence around them even when they didn't speak. If you couple that with knowledge, and you can speak and put it across to people, then you can waken something up inside them and let it come to the fore.

Jackie: I want people at least to have the opportunity to hear this because that knowing is within us, and sometimes it takes something like this, a conversation like this, to strike that chord within them that begins that process of bringing it back to the foreground.

Alan: That's exactly what it is. In the old writings and within Freemasonry, they have all of this within it at the higher degrees: the soul within a person; you're born with it. You know what is right and wrong. You know it. It doesn't mean you can stop right there:

children will overrule what is right and try it anyway; even a bully knows they're wrong. They know that they're wrong, but they're willing to try and get the earthly power through their muscle, and they surround themselves with lesser bullies, and the only thing they respect is power and strength, which is the people who end up in the government or the military or the police, bureaucrats.

Jackie: Those are the guys we have to be careful of, the bureaucrats, because my observation is that the more small-minded you are. the more mean-minded you are. the more power-hungry you are. the higher up you climb on the ladder of bureaucracy. To be ruled, governed by these people who were appointed into their positions—it's almost unbearable to think of.

Alan: We're not ruled by the guys we see on TV; we know that. Most of the western countries are under the British form of rule. In Britain, in Canada, and in Australia. In New Zealand, and even in countries like India, they have a private council above what we see, above the parliaments, and it's called the privy council. They're all apparently appointed via the queen or the reigning monarch, but they're unelected, most of them. They're pulled in there, the power magnets and money magnets. They're pulled in. They have private consultations, and the prime minister gets his marching orders. He comes out into parliament and either signs it through as an order in council or they go through a show of debating it. for the public's benefit (if any of the public care to even listen), and then they ram it through. That is the way the world is run.

Regarding the art of illusion, I would say that most people should really try and read Plato's The Republic because it's a guidebook to the recruiting method they used back then and today for the people who manage countries and for the elitists. There's a section in The Republic where Plato, in a dialogue form, a sort of conversation form with a friend, goes through this whole thing about how the mind perceives its existence and how to control it. It's called The Analogy of the Cave. He says that if you can imagine a deep cave where prisoners are chained facing into the cave and they cannot turn their heads, because of the chains, and look back towards the entrance. Behind them, there's a sort of puppeteers parapet, and then behind the parapet there's a fire, and then further on there's the entrance to the cave. People are walking back and forth, and their light is being reflected right back to the back of the cave where these prisoners are chained, so all these prisoners could see all of their life was the shadows passing in front of them, the reflections that were actually shadows. They would think that is them intermingling. That's all they'd ever known. They would create whole theories about what the shadows were and what they meant. People would actually give honors to the most intelligent ones there with the greatest things to say about the shadows. Their whole idea of reality was confined to a complete illusion. If you then took one of the prisoners and led them out. At first the fire that he passed by the way would blind him. They would gradually bring him out into the light, preferably at nighttime, and let him see the stars and the moon and so on. Then eventually let him see reflections of the sun on water, meaning not directly at the sun, and then the sun itself, and then he would understand how nature works and so on. Now after contemplating that, that released prisoner would realize that everything he'd ever known was a complete fallacy. If he were to be brought back into the cave and he were re-chained amongst the other prisoners, and he tried to tell them of his experiences and what reality really was, the most intelligent ones amongst them, who had the most to say about the whole series of the shadows and what they were, would turn on him and kill him because he was breaking and shattering their illusion.

We have been brought up in a complete illusion with techniques that were known thousands of years ago, and unless we break free of it. then humanity as we have known it. literally will cease to exist because they are determined to create the new being, the new man, which they have written about for thousands of years. Every Freemason is well aware that, according to their dictates, unless Adam goes back into the phase before the fall, meaning the separation of Eve, then there will never be harmony on this planet.

Jackie: We know better than that, don't we? Knowing all this, how do you keep your sanity? As you were talking to me about getting up to the top of that mountain and seeing that everything that you've ever believed in, and ever been taught, and ever learned was a lie, and then you have to go over that down into that valley, and you said you keep your sanity because you know that it's all a lie. It's all an illusion that it can be reversed.

Alan: It can be reversed. That's right. I think those who are awake should start getting in touch with each other. Jackie: Do you think we might be in touch with each other with our minds?

Alan: I think there's absolutely something to that. I know that the Maurice Strongs of this world, who are on the other side, definitely believe that they are in touch with each other throughout the world, through their minds.

Jackie: Well, you mentioned that in your conversation with Effie, and I know that every single person can relate to this. You said we have the clues that there is another world or a different world within this world and that the clue, I mean even simple little clues, is, for example, you think of somebody and the phone rings and it's them or they show up. You had used as an example that you're feeling down or blue, and somebody calls up or comes over and says exactly what you were thinking. To me. That is the first clue that our minds are connected.

Alan: Yes. Children know it. Children will often, in the same household or as best friends, start singing the same song at the same place, the same words. Even in the middle of the song they'll break out; they're thinking it, then they sing it. Sometimes you might be going through it in your mind, and they start to sing it. These are things that we do naturally. People who are on the same wavelength or spiritual level or on the same path will have that in common. Yet they have done their best; the rulers of this planet have done their best to convince us not to look into this. It was somehow evil. Meanwhile, they themselves were doing it. They have taught us there is nothing outside of ourselves except the law. their government, their law. We have listened to that. It's been drummed out of us through a technique of going through school and what they call logic, and so even though the evidence crops up once in a while, maybe frequently when we're young, we eventually gel into this supposed adult world, which really simply means you've been programmed by their method, and we ignore this other side to this existence in which we live. The other part, which is natural, has been drummed out of us through a system of religion and education.

Education to bring you to what they claim is rational, which is right to the slaughterhouse at the very end. Because you can rationalize everything away as it's presented to you using simple earthly logic, but the spiritual side, or the power that resides within people, which gives them their actual consciousness and conscience, can be used as well.

Jackie: We have to call upon that, Alan. 1. Think about the people who are so caught and so enmeshed in the mythology; the only way that it's going to happen is if they have to ask. When that desire is there, the desire seems to be that force that moves us.

Alan: Also, it seems also to be a process of dying to the self. In other words, you have a really good look at yourself before you can come in touch with it, and you die to the world and yourself, really, in a wrap. Then you see the faults within you. Once that is understood, this power seems to come through much more clearly and more powerfully.

Jackie: In other words, being honest with ourselves about where we're at. When we're being difficult and we know it. We'll catch it. It starts like that, just catching it.

Alan: That's right. We're so quick to point the finger and cast the blame somewhere else. "You made me do it!" Of course, even the government uses that on the people. They'll say, "Oh. Look at the violence out there. We have to put this law through, which is going to come down hard on everybody because you've made us do it." That's the same technique that they use on us all. As long as we're using the same technique in our own individual lives, we accept that as familiar to us. So we have to be honest with ourselves.

Jackie: Yes. We also have a desire to be right, and so therefore being honest with ourselves sometimes is so difficult because if we are, we have to say. "That wasn't very nice."

Alan: Yes, that's right. I said to somebody the other day that called, "Everybody is trying to make the world in their own image." The ones at the top right now certainly are doing it, and as long as we're stuck in this rut, we're trying to make everything in our own immediate vicinity in our own image; in other words, power-playing over everything. The government will get their way and lead us up the wrong path. So, honesty with oneself really is a key to getting in touch with that part that has been held back for so long.

Jackie: It's simple but not necessarily easy. But once again it has to do with the desire to know the painful truth for myself. I would know the truth.

Alan: You know there are so many topics, for instance, that we have avoided in this culture we live in, which is an artificial culture to begin with. It is a system we live in. It's somebody else's system. We live in a system where most of the people in the world today live in cities, which are artificial hives; they're where the bees are. Their meat comes to them frozen and packaged and so on, and we don't see the nasty side to that. Within our own lives, our relatives and our parents and so on get sick and go into hospitals; they're cared for outside of our homes. Somebody else does the work; somebody else cleans up the mess, so we only see the clean side of it at the visiting time. We don't take care of our own, and even when they die, the experts come in and take the body off and dress it all up and keep it in a nice place, and we can go and visit it. It's so artificial and unreal that we're losing the very things that keep us in touch with our own humanity amongst ourselves.

Jackie: Do you think that's why some of us have such a yearning to be out of the cities?

Alan: That definitely is a part of it. It's an instinct there that it's all wrong. But even in the rural areas we still live in this electronic world where you can live in the North Pole and still have your culture made for you. But there are so many things we haven't faced within our own lives. ' The population of the world has never ever been given a choice, really, in anything. It's always either this or the opposite. This or the opposite. It's given to you.

Jackie: Well, there are a few who don't take either choice.

Alan: Yes, and the majority allow the government to make the choice for them anyway. They don't involve themselves. Plato in The Republic tells you they know exactly how many people in a democracy participate in the actual rule, and that's why they like democracy. It's the same with republicanism. It's the method. It's what your senses tell you it is. You give the name to it. Don't let them call it something else when you can see what it really is. It's exactly the same democracy in the U.S. as it is here. So names are irrelevant. Your own senses tell you what you're living under, or they should. Until we face the realities of life and discuss them and stop letting experts parade before us on TV telling us what to think, until we participate in the vital things that have to be looked at and discussed, because we should really be deciding what kind of future the world will have. not the experts. The experts are simply paid hacks for parties. We are given a sort of legal exposé on certain topics, which we should look at.

For instance, the Mother Teresa that was paraded in front of the people—of course the Protestants go, “boo,” and the Catholics say she's a saint. But the reality isn't so much what she was doing. The fact is there are unpleasant facts of life. Because she was looking after, or her foundation was looking after, children who were physically sick. Some of them were mentally retarded. There was a choice paraded before the public: we can either live in this illusion of packed meat and packaged bodies in funeral homes and clean patients in hospitals, but we don't see the rest of it, or we can say these are aspects of life that we have to be involved in with our own immediate families and friends, and if we don't do that, the organization of this world, the structure, which is running the whole show, will plan our whole lives for us and engineer us for the life that they want us to have.

Jackie: Yes. I had a call from one of our listeners this evening, and he was talking exactly about this: that what he has learned is that the changes will occur within the family. He said that his son is an adult, but they are staying together as a family. He said it's been tough. They've given up a lot, and they've done it because they wanted to. Each individual—that's where the changes begin.

Alan: We've got to take the good and what we think is the bad or the ugly in life, and we either take care of it as individuals and families or else we will be nothing more than little worker bees in the hive re-engineered for a small elite to rule over. We're almost there; we are already, in fact. Or we take personal responsibility. That's the choice because life and the care of life—if we do not care about others, if we have no care in us or no love in us, then it's all over. That's the choice. There was a book that came out a few years ago by Alan P. Cottrell called Goethe's View of Evil and the Search for a New Image of Man in Our Time. Goethe is a fictional character. (These fictional characters, like Shakespeare, go into realities and truths.) It came out in 1982, but here's a portion from it: "This is the domain of the antichrist, treating the world almost exclusively as if it were dead.

matter, assuming that everything can be weighed, measured, and calculated, leading man into a subnatural world hidden below the threshold of sense perception. The order that the forces of the antichrist create is not a picture of the world in which man is immediately living but a picture of the world below man. The worlds of magnetism, electricity, atomic energy, DNA codes, et cetera. Now letting this picture be painted and casting himself in the role of detached observer, man has begun to eliminate himself from an active role in earth's evolution. The human will is subverted, even enslaved, for with the models that the intellects of those enslaved in power project and with the information that is gathered from foolproof computers and data processing, a tendency develops to have the information itself dictate the decision, thus eliminating the human being from the process." That really summed up what H.G. Wells and Bertrand Russell et al. called "scientific socialism." We are in scientific socialism right now. It's the scientific and expert handling of the complete human process, the complete society, right down to how many drones or worker bees they need.

Jackie: Yes. It's like they said in our global governance: that they really didn't want to rule the world. They just wanted to organize life on the planet.

Alan: Yes. They're so clever and devious in their wording because wording is everything.

Jackie: That's the one thing I have learned from reading all this political garbage, that they mean every single word they say, and they choose their words carefully.

Alan: Yes, and again we have all the powers of hypnotism there. The media, the TV, and the movies gradually (it's not so gradual nowadays, but bit by bit) put us into the direction they want us to go until we hit a certain age and volunteer to be euthanized. It'll actually seem so sensible to us.

Jackie: It's like someone told us about the "total quality management process." While he was with Xerox, he was a change agent himself. He said that there was a meeting at one time and they were going to eliminate a department, and he said this is how they've got it to where the individual doesn't feel that he counts. He's only a microcosm in the macrocosm; he's a part of the whole. Once again, that's so true because on a spiritual basis that's true, and here in the physical, they're creating it. Anyway, they had this meeting, and they let the managers of the department decide which department would be eliminated, and the man who finally came to the conclusion that it was his department that should be eliminated eliminated himself from a job. He said it wasn't he who was important; it was the group.

Alan: It was the team, a team player. Yes. They'll probably euthanize you with the greatest kindness and love in their hearts.

Jackie: You can have a going-away party. Except if you live in another state from where your children and grandchildren are, they'll just send you a going-away card. The grandchildren will not even know their grandparents.

Alan: Yes. You know, so many of them don't know their grandparents today. They have no idea of their personal history or who preceded them and who made them. They don't know.

Jackie: No, because that isn't important to them, is it?

Alan: You must divide and conquer and separate each one from the next.

Jackie: From the extended family. You know that was in the New Order of Barbarians that said we will split up the extended family. Then when it's time to euthanize Grandma and Grandpa, they won't care. The children will be tired of supporting them. They'll be relieved, and the grandchildren won't care because they don't even know them.

Alan: It will be very sensible that your usefulness is over; it makes sense to them. You see, these are moral questions, and we are not involved in them at all. We haven't been allowed to be involved in them. Until enough people wake up and confront the people who are doing this, they'll continue taking us right to the slaughterhouse, the abattoir.

Jackie: Yes. And if you think that people could begin to do something about it in their own lives, in their neighborhood, and start attending and becoming involved in local government, in our own backyards—and we all have a backyard.

Alan: It's the individuals doing it on their own that count. You see the group can be infiltrated and swayed so easily. It's the individual thing that you do on a daily basis and the ones that you meet, and not saying "it's a nice day" to keep everyone happy, but speaking your mind. Speaking your mind wherever you go and to whomever you're talking to. That's how it has to be done.

That is also part of being conscious. Instead of acting our lives away in a role that somebody else created for us.

Jackie: Don't be tied to the results of what we're doing. Alan: Absolutely.

Jackie: When you make up your mind to do something and you do it. Miracles happen; it's just unbelievable. It's making that commitment.

Alan: Absolutely. It starts with the individual and not with a group leader. Jackie: You have said that you are willing to put a newsletter together.

Alan: I'm writing stuff right now.

PART II INTERVIEW 12

Alan: What I've found is that in all of the major books that are published by regular publishers, and especially right now when we're going into a completely new age, by giving truths, they then come to the end part, which they then bend toward the direction they want us to go. Now the Philosophical Society is the Theosophy Society, and it's backed by the Rockefellers and all the big boys. So by supposedly exposing certain things, they're actually leading you into exactly where they want you to be, in the full knowledge that the ones, just like the blue lodge of Freemasonry, will never rise above the bottom ranks, but they are in an order, and they are having their minds shaped. So you have to be careful because the new man literally will be an unrecognizable figure as far as humans go.

They used a term down through the ages to do with the Zodiac, and they called it The Plan. Because they drew up the plan and put it in the heavens, if you like. (You can make your own plan up if you want. I mean, you could make any drawing; just attach the dots. They drew it as a time plan, and they have been successful with it. On the lower level, they tell you that it is truth, which can never be changed, and they lie about that because they have changed the zodiac. They had a different one in Sumer, and they updated it. But the whole thing about Pythagoras calling himself a fisher of men and them having a ceremony for the fishers of men in Egypt. They weren't talking about water and fish. They were talking about picking young boys for the priesthood to keep the system going, and then they brought it into the Christian dogma. The end of this age is to be with Aquarius, when the planets are supposed to be in alignment. It's in about twenty-five years, and then that is to be the announcement of the new man. The new man will not really be a man at all. It will be an it, and there will be different types of sub-its below it who will be isolated from each other, and each one will be bred like any other bee. That's the symbol of the beehive. It's the perfect society, with a function. You will not be born without a function. It's a horror story.

Charles Galton Darwin, in The Next Million Years, gave the speeches and compiled the book for the United Nations, for the various British-American scientific establishments, and for various governmental meetings in different countries. He goes on about the lower classes simply being superfluous and unnecessary today. There's a value judgment immediately that we exist for business and not the other way around; that's a given for them. He then goes on to mention different ways of eliminating the populations and how they would sterilize different people. Now this was in 1954-56; he gave these speeches. This is after World War II, where we'd already seen the aftermath of the new man, the superman, which you also find in the higher Freemasonic books. The creation of the superman is in all of them, even the modern ones. The superman is not going to be a man. It's to be a different being, and it's to be the completion of God. According to them, they are God. But Charles Galton Darwin lays it all out there.

Another book to read is The Legacy of Malthus. I think that's even put out by the Simon Wiesenthal Center. That book goes through the various characters involved in Theosophy and the categorization of the different races and peoples and so on. And how (and here's the thing that people must understand because we're compartmentalized into either tribes, peoples, or nations) the people who run every tribe or nation are all interconnected in this international brotherhood, and they lose all blood ties once they're in there. Yet they keep this notion that you are separate from everybody else going, for their own use. So they can cause wars, eliminate population excess, and so on.

But in that book it goes through the industrial revolution in the various countries and what the top statesmen said. The Swiss, for instance, and Ireland talks about the elimination of most of the Irish peasantry.

They would have to do it according to them. These are the people who went down in most of the history books as great heroes and saviors, and in reality they were elitist monsters beyond anything that we can generally comprehend, and yet they all belonged to these Masonic Theosophist societies worldwide, who literally do believe that they are ultra-elitist, reincarnated souls who choose the body they will come back in. They never explain how they happen to get the right to choose the body they were born into. There are so many shapes and so on. But they do; they really do go through ceremonies at the very top, which are to do with sexual orgies. That shines through time after time in the higher material, and yet they cloak it under the most respectable phrases and language, but regeneration—and they mean that literally—they have different meanings in the different orders, and the further down they go, it doesn't seem too bad. It's only a hint at something. The higher up you go, they literally are into regeneration; they call it a godly process. That is where the soul reincarnates.

Caller: That's why there's an obelisk in the Vatican, and Christians were sucked into bunnies and eggs at Easter.

Alan: Absolutely. The movie Eyes Wide Shut—there's some nudity in it, but again, we have to look at what is in order to understand what is because that movie is the closest thing to what does happen at the top, which is so foreign to what we are given at the bottom, and yet it definitely has to do with regeneration. Every street name in that movie has a meaning, every restaurant name has a meaning (read them backwards and forwards and so on), and the whole story is based upon a doctor who goes through an episode in his life, who, because of his conditioning, cannot understand, right through this plot, that he has been set up from the beginning, but you have to see it to understand how the ultra-elite do behave. I used to wonder how they had so many...they had this brotherhood thing, and in the Middle Ages and later on in Britain, they could have these big drunken parleys for the nobility where people literally swapped wives. This is well documented in the older history books. They never worried about being the father. "Who is my real son?" because you see, they all claim to be spiritual brothers, which is just as real as the body to them.

Caller: Oh yes, as long as the child isn't of the great unwashed.

Alan: Yes. That's right. They had these huge orgies and swapped the wives and brought them up. Now in Canada, I know a family, an inventor in fact, whose whole farm I used to rent at one point, and he would come up on occasional weekends. I took his crippled son to a party called the Saints and Sinners Ball, and he had employed caretakers, young females, to accompany the son and push the wheelchair. When they came out of their rooms to go to this ball, he was dressed like the pope, with the front of the gown so that he could expose himself. One of the girls was dressed like a nun but with nothing on at the back from the waist down.

The crippled son was dressed up like a harlot, you know, with rouge and women's clothing. I thought, Well, I guess it's a weird lifestyle, and it's probably just a party, because they used to go to these masquerades and so on. When they came back. I asked the teenagers, the females, what had happened, and at the end, when they left (when the females left with the son), the hostess and all the rest had taken their clothes off. That is when the girls got out because they knew an orgy was beginning. However, the inventor and his girlfriend stayed. They really do this stuff. They really do it, you know?

Caller: In that book The Sovereign Individual, when they were talking about the end of the church-state, they were talking about the excesses of the time and how (this is around the 1500s) people really resented the church. They resented the clergy. Nobody vocalized it. But underneath, everybody thought they were despicable. Kind of like what's going on right now with our elected leaders.

Alan: That is right.

Caller: They do a comparison through this book. I think Rees-Mogg, who was the editor-in-chief of the London Times, was sitting on the BBC 'board. Lie's not a fly-by-night: I'm sure he's elite of some sort. They were talking about the excesses, and I forget which pope it was. They had orgies.

Alan: Oh, they had orgies. There were a couple of famous ones, the Borgias, for instance. The Borgia lineage was a noble aristocracy. When he became the pope, they had orgies there.

Caller: Well, this one pope even had an orgy where he would give out prizes for the people who had the most orgasms. Alan: Yes. That is correct.

Caller: They also mention (and this is just a side note because I used to be Catholic) why Catholics eat fish on Friday, and it was because the church owned fisheries and the sales were dwindling, and they had to boost their sales somehow. So they just said, "Guess what? It's a sin now if you don't catfish on Friday." The sales went up, and of course they eventually lost out because it was too top-heavy. This book also concludes that our government will be downsized fairly soon.

Alan: Well, yes. Most of it is a show primarily, and as they're downsizing it, they're building up the U.N. We don't realize how big a bureau of bureaucracy the United Nations has. They already have the structure in place, and really we're under a global government right now, and we only have the side show of the guys supposedly shouting across the aisles in the parliaments or whatever. So yeah, I think downsizing is simply a transferring of those jobs into the United Nations' assemblies.

The word U.N. comes from Egypt, and that is the inner name of the force that drives the sun. They called it un or on; you can call it either. Like Aton, the pharaoh—that was his basic name, the one that drives the sun. The one who supposedly gave the theocracy that all God was one, which is what is meant in Arabic by "Allah is one." That is what they called it. It was a name that you could almost hardly speak in public, the word on or un. The city, which eventually was called Heliopolis by the Greeks when they came in, was called On; that's where Pythagoras and all these characters were initiated into the higher mysteries.

The words we see around us today all mean something if we only stop and recognize them. They are symbols, and they are ancient symbols. They're all symbols of a plan that should be obvious to everybody and yet isn't because we're not taught to analyze what we see. or think, or hear, or anything else. The Council on Foreign Relations is CFR; you write that down and you speak it; that's what they do. You have cancer. Cancer is a herd driver. They drive the herd. The symbol they use is Bootes in the sky, B-O-O-T-K-S. You have the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. You write it down and forget the spellings, too, and remember they didn't use vowels very often in ancient times, so you have Seraphim, the highest order of angels. There's nothing in all these abbreviations that doesn't mean something, but these characters are well aware of what they mean.

Caller: I've noticed that in a lot of the symbology. We have an organization called Junior Achievement, where they take kids that show promise in building a business, and the symbol for that is a pyramid, but on the one pyramid there are three steps; to me it's just glaring.

Alan: Yes. That's right.

Caller: To most people it's just a symbol.

Alan: No. Symbols are all-important, and we deny them or disregard them at our own risk. They're all-important because the mind, not even the subconscious, but the unconscious, stores all of this and works on it. The unconscious will never be quiet. It will always manifest itself through your own behavior and what you do and your own actions. We're taking a language that is ancient and well understood by the unconscious, and therefore we do take this in and disregard it at our own peril. It's everywhere today because they believe they have won. We see it all in the ads, all of these crystals in all of the ads. We see the pyramids everywhere, in the movies that we get. and the logos. It's all glaring at us. even the phrases that they use, and yet we are almost brain-dead; we don't react to it. not in the way we should react to it.

Caller: Yes, that's my conclusion; they're so far along in the plan, they don't care anymore.

Alan: Yet that is when they're careless.

Caller: That's exactly it. I personally believe it's doomed anyway. Alan: It's doomed if we want it to be.

Caller: Because there are certain things that happen that are just completely out of their control, that they don't have the foresight to see, and I think it is divine intervention. That God knows in advance; he's the one who throws the monkey wrench in.

Alan: I really think there's a truth in here that the fate of God depends on the fate of man. In other words, we are put here for a reason. It's not all preordained. I don't believe that at all. because if it were, we'd be robots. Whether you're pro something or against something, you'd be a robot. We were given consciousness to use that consciousness. The ones who run this world are well aware of that and have kept it from us. They've had us on our knees praying to something outside as though there were no real contact except when we're on our knees. In reality, no, there's a part of God in everybody, and that's the soul or spirit. We're supposed to use it. and we're supposed to use it for positive, for what we call the good. I he good doesn't mean a selfish good. If there's no love for humanity in the heart, within the soul, the game is over. If we want to love our immediate family, the game is over. We have to love people we've never met and never will meet in generations to come as well. That is what they mean by being born again. You die to the old, which was important to you. and you take on a much bigger desire.

Caller: Did you know the whole Christian born-again actually means born from above? It doesn't mean born again. It means born from above, which to me goes back to the time that the angels left.

Alan: Yes. Also in Freemasonry they explain that even more because the above was within the skull itself. The rebuilding of Solomon's temple is the rebuilding of the individual man; that is Solomon's temple. 'The skull is in the upper room; the upper room has your temple in the front. It's part of the forehead. I have five windows of the soul, where we bring all the input into the organ, which is the brain, or receiver, or call it what you want, that helps transmit that which is above to that which is below, which is us.

We're the microcosm in touch with the macrocosm. So you see, there's a lot of truth interwoven amongst this web that they've spun.

The thirty-three degrees are only the columns of the spinal cord; that's what it means. The sacrum at the bottom literally means the sacred, and that is what the Freemasons were accused of doing when they were called Knights Templar, with kissing, literally, the anus at the sacrum because the new man will be self-born, out of man. That is what they're going to do.

Caller: So that's where the original ass-kissers were.

Alan: Yes. That is right. That's it. They claim in all of their books, and this is international, in all of the ones I've understood, that man will go back to the time before the fall, and they mean before Eve was separated from Adam, and that is why genetics has been in the forefront with so much unlimited financing for an awful long time.

Caller: Before the fall? That would predate humans.

Alan: That is what—they use that as a code basically, or another veil to hide the fact that all conflict must be removed. In other words. Adam was incomplete when Eve was removed from Adam. That is what they mean. If you understand the Indian Vedas. And it's even in the Kabbalah, and you get it through all of the Rosicrucian, Masonic, and Theosophical texts—the same thing. That the perfection or rebuilding of man will occur when man himself, through his own godhood and ingenuity, etc., etc., will recreate the new man. The new man will be the hermaphrodite. That's literally what they mean. That's one of their biggest secrets. The scary thing is that this is not Hollywood. This is what they have written for thousands and thousands of years. That is what their goal always was, and through the acquisition of science, they would achieve it and keep the knowledge to themselves.

Caller: Wasn't Merlin the magician's staff made of holly wood?

Alan: I hate Hollywood. Yes. Merlin is nothing but another rehash of Melchisadech with the same symbol because Melchisadech also was supposedly...here's the Kabbalistic way that they program us for what they want us to become. They will say it happened in the past, and they'll tell it in a mythological form. Now once that's implanted in your mind, even through mythology or fantasy or whatever, gradually you will accept that certain things are inevitable. That is what they do. So they'll tell us what their goal is by saying it happened in the past. That's how they have done it. It's a mirror imaging of our reality, and the future is the goal presented as being the past, and therefore when they say "before the fall, before Eve was separated from Adam, when Adam was perfect in the image of God," they mean God was a hermaphrodite himself. That's what they mean. They're telling you that that is their goal for the future. That is why homosexuality and lesbianism have been funded by the same organizations or trust companies that fund everything in the world that is moving the world towards their goal. Because any real, true grassroots movement cannot sustain itself. It always goes under with a lack of funding. The ones who exist and are perpetual...

Caller: Become corrupt at the top.

Caller: It's not that they become corrupt at the top. They were created that way. You see, the laws are already written in advance. They must create the situation to bring the laws into force. They do that by either creating the disturbances they need or creating the need for the law in the first place or the new bureaucracy or whatever it is. They create the NGO . themselves. They did this in Soviet Russia. That's why they can get up on the platform and say, "We're passing this law because these NGOs have demanded it. The people have spoken." Nobody elects these NGOs. They're created by the trusts corporations. That's what the trust corporations were created for. So. True grassroots movements generally go under due to lack of funding.

Caller: There was a guy who opened fire on someone in California. Someone started doing a check for his e-mail, and it turned out it was some NSA (National Security Agency) number in Seattle. So he was just another mind controller who was sent out to do this task.

Alan: They all do it.

Caller: So there'll be more disarmament.

Alan: Well, they did that in Britain with the Dunblane shooting three or four years ago, where the guy walked into the school, same thing, and shot all the children.

Caller: Have you gone back there lately?

Alan: Not for a few years. I was back and forth in the beginning; I personally could feel the despondency in the country.

Caller: That's exactly the word I would use. You know, when we went to Edinburgh, it was during the festival, and I was just absolutely amazed at the number of teenagers that were junkies on the street. To me, I had never seen anything like that before, and I thought, "What a shame." Because Scotland, really. I don't know if they know what they have there or not. But what a waste.

Alan: I grew up with all of this beginning, and I realized nothing begins in society by chance. The whole music business, which I was involved in, was show biz. Everything was fake. You'd get stars with albums that couldn't sing a note and stuff like that. I realized that the drugs that were flowing in, and it was to Edinburgh, really came in when they brought in (and they have never explained this to this day) immigration from India. That is when the heroin and all of the other drugs started flowing big-time, which was a foregone conclusion that that would happen since India has been the center of drug output for thousands of years. They became addicted because Margaret Thatcher got on national TV and said, "There's a generation growing up who will never see work in their lifetime. Get used to it." Now there's a future!

Caller: Yes. There's something to look forward to. How awful.

Alan: At the same time she extended the laws on opening hours for the pubs, and then we got a massive influx of heroin and cocaine and all the rest of it. hashish and cannabis. That is the technique they used to destroy the people and to keep them in a daze because children are happy in a daze, or they think they are. Rather than having them rampaging through the streets.

Man: Sure. That's what the arena sports are for, too.

Alan: Yes. I've got a book here, which is an insider's book on the Council on Foreign Relations and the Royal Institute of International Affairs (1938.) It was the minutes of the meeting in the book, for members, held in Sydney, Australia, or Melbourne. They had members of universities from all over the whole world, and they had planned the rest of the century into this one, way in advance. In other words, they were discussing agendas, including how many Chinese they would have in Canada by the year 2000. Right down to the numbers in 1937. Right down to where the industry would be. and it would be based in China. Now, I realize that my life was planned before I was born by people I have never met. If that doesn't get you kind of angry, especially when they go through so much trouble to convince you that societies have all been day-by-day with this crisis and that crisis, and so on.

This was all planned long ago. Almost every university in the U.S., Canada, Britain, Australia, New Zealand, and even India was present at this, all professors and politicians and heads of state and so on. I have the speeches here.

Caller: Isn't that awful?

Alan: They said there will be another war. a Second World War, there will be another war, and we have decided to back Russia against Germany, and (again, remember the date) it said it would be very good for us, as the United States would come in on our side, and this may happen if Japan were to attack the U.S.

Caller: Yes. Well, I watched that whole thing going on with Kuwait, and that to me was just astounding. How all of a sudden somebody who was trained by George Bush and the CIA is now the villain, and "Oh, they're torturing babies in IHC neonatal intensive care units and unplugging incubators." All of that was to whip everybody up.

Alan: Yes. and they did the whole thing in a studio in New York. They used the delegations, the diplomat, or the ambassador from Kuwait; his daughter, dressed up in IHC peasant rags; and had her in this sort of scene. I mean, they even put it in that movie Hag the Dog. They pull it all in that, and they began making that movie, remember, before any of that happened. They didn't simply write it a week after the event with Bill Clinton and Lewinsky. They had it all written. I mean, that was laughing at us and telling us, "We are writing the scripts here."

Man: Well, the bombing in Oklahoma City was already written about by the governor's brother. He'd already written the book. It was a guy named McVeigh that did it.

Alan: Yes, that's right. Here's definite proof, because we even talked about lottos on Jackie's show. On July 3rd, we have a newsgroup in Canada that's owned by a guy called Black who spends most of his time in London. In the Vancouver Sun, on July the 3rd, and this was announced on CFRB Radio at 8 pm that night as damage control, came out that morning with the results of the Oregon Lotto five hours before the draw. What they do, because it's very simple, is every lotto in every 'country in the world goes in through computers in the store, and then it goes to a central computer, and they can simply punch in the figures that haven't been selected and select the ones that they want. It's a payoff to one of their own boys. That's what they've been doing for years. Nothing we see is real. Nothing!

Caller: I never even thought about that. I've thought about the elections because I know that those are trumped up.

Alan: It's so simple. Every lotto number that you buy goes into the computer in the store and right to the central office, so they just type up the sequence that hasn't been picked and decide which good buddy of theirs will get it. Print up the ticket, and that's it.

Caller: So somebody who has done their job is going to be allowed to win the game.

Alan: We had a guy again in Vancouver because, see, Vancouver is the doorway to China in the drug trade and all the rest of it. He was a restaurant owner who has won the lotto four times. His restaurant has very few customers, but many thousands of dollars go through his books every week. That's the laundering. That's his payoff. winning lotto tickets. Bob Ray was the premier, like the governor, of Ontario up until about four years ago. He (this was in the Toronto Sun) invited up all the mobsters from Chicago, the known mobsters, the mafia; that's what the paper said. He'd get advice from them because Bob Ray wanted casinos way across the province, which he has done. The mafia. You see, they are the mafia.

Caller: Well, we've got a local thing going right now; the Indian tribe here in Battle Creek wants to put up a casino. There's a big campaign to vote no on the casinos. Well, come to find out it's in a township that's not Battle Creek proper. It's limited to the township. If it doesn't go in there, what some of the Battle Creek council boys have done is that they've pretty much found this old lady who lives in the area, and they bought her property. They annexed it into Battle Creek, so now the Battle Creek boys are the ones who are funding the "vote no vote because if it comes into their bailiwick, they're going to be making some big serious money. They'll have some interest in the casino at that point. People think, "If I vote no on the casino, then there's not going to be a casino." They're wrong. It's a done deal.

Alan: Everything is corrupt. Everything. It's not that it's just happening; it always was at the top, it always was. We have one set of rules and a reality for the rest of the people and a completely different set for the ones at the top. Because they traditionally, throughout the ages, have hired their own historians, all of the books paint a different reality in glowing colors with these respectable people at the top. The brotherhood at the top has always been gangsterism and thuggery. I have camouflaged it at the bottom with charitable acts. That is the technique. To them there is no right and wrong as such; it is only a matter of application in a direction of force. By using opposites, it's the law of nature, night and day and the seasons. By providing the opposites, or the spokesmen for the opposites, and through compromise, they can guide you to whatever direction they wish.

Caller: Back to the dialectic.

Alan: That is right. Again, nobody has written more copiously about this than Plato.

Caller: I remember reading Plato in high school and being bored to tears.

Alan: Absolutely. To get to reality, you have to struggle through stuff that will put you to sleep. It's written with an exoteric and an esoteric language, and Plato does tell you in The Republic, and it's not just a state; it's a world state run by the guardians of the ages. Now he wasn't putting up a plan; he, in fact, was telling you how it always had been, and even philosophies given from him and others were designed to capture the minds of the scholar types or scholarship types that they want to sponsor—the ones who like power. Plato would tell you that they would breed people two and a half thousand years ago. They would breed people eventually for the physical tasks that they had to endure. So people with long arms and legs were picking apples, and short ones were mining. Through selecting the mating process and eventually other means through the understanding of sciences.

Well, that's where we are today. He also said there would be state-registered doctors—a no would go around deciding who to euthanize as being superfluous and which women would be allowed to have children and which would not, which would be aborted. You're talking about everything that is here today. 11c was a student of Socrates and Pythagoras, who was the key inner mystery school at that time, the Pythagorean School, and he traveled all over to India again and to the Middle East and to Egypt; this was the Rhodes Scholarship of their time. The people who are inducted, for instance, into Oxford University on Rhodes Scholarships must have certain qualities, or they simply are dismissed. One of them is to be involved already with socialism, meaning the science of controlling people, in one way or another. The Rhodes Scholars also must have the innate ability to be ruthless when required, and there have been various publications on them and the speeches they've made. I mean, there are over two hundred in the U.S. civil service and government right now. We don't realize how big they are.

Caller: When I read Carroll Quigley's book Tragedy and Hope, that's what brought it all home to me because when I read his description about a study of violence and how through the ages you can compel obedience from longer distances, when he got into the middle class, and his explanation of the classes and who the middle class is. It just knocked my socks off. I've never been really materialistic to begin with, but it really opened my eyes at that point, and I would tell people when they would talk about the middle class. I would say, "You really don't know what you're talking about." They would say, "Oh yes, we do," and I would say, "Tell me why you're middle class." If they were talking about how much money you made, "I said, That has nothing to do with the middle class. You're middle class because you have no class, and because you have no class, you surround yourself with material goods." I'd say, "That's why you're middle class. You're totally predictable." I include myself in that. I can see that, and I know there are limits. My mom's from Scotland; I know what thrift is about.

Alan: Again, the key to understanding is to think as an individual and not as a group, because groups are created, which is part of culture, and culture means your cult. It's created for you by the same guys at the top who have decided what values you'll have and what type of bee you'll be. Plato even goes through the beehive and calls different categories bees, drones, and so on in the workers. That is why the beehive was the emblem of Egypt and Napoleon and George Washington and so on. The beehive is the perfect society, with these priests at the top hovering around the queen and deciding if they'll inseminate her or not to get the offspring going. That is what's been running us up until this period. Business comes from buzz. To buzz. Business. Shakespeare, who supposedly introduced all of these new updated words into the language, which, when you understand them, makes a lot more sense than the way we generally read them, made quips on that. That's why we are buzzing, and when you understand again the definitions of a bee and to buzz, and the second definition generally is something that shakes with fear, and that's what we do. We run through our lives chasing an illusion, and the labor is all grabbed by somebody that you'll never meet. They live well on the honey, and you have de-cultured honey. That's what the drones do.

These priests take out certain nutrients and feed them to the workers, and it keeps them as workers.

Caller: I'm in the middle of doing that right now. There's a book called Rich Dad Poor Dad, which talks about how his father was a professor and went into state government work, and they never had any money growing up, and his friend's dad was an entrepreneur, a hustler, and basically thought a little bit differently than most people think. He said he was trained not to be rich, and this rich dad trained his friend to be rich and did it in some odd ways. It's an interesting book. He said that even the conversation at dinner was completely foreign. He said his poor dad was very interesting because they would talk about the arts and music and so on, and at the rich dad's house they would talk about how to make money. They would talk about debits. They would talk about credits. He said it was totally different. Since I've been downsized. I've decided there are two ways to succeed, and that's to be employed or to be self-employed. So the only way you can do it is either by owning your own business or investing. Investing is ultimately the better way to go because it leaves you more time to do other things.

Alan: I've been through all of those things and worked them out for myself. Again, it's a value system; what kind of values will you put on yourself? I don't invest at all because I realize that's part of keeping this system going. It's an investment in somebody else's labor in some other country for the future, which means their children have got to pay it off.

Somebody must pay off profit. This is an eternal system. The key again to control of this planet for thousands and thousands of years was first the creation of illusion by priests and then the introduction of money, and money itself being nobody who is into the conspiracies from the top talks about money much because they enjoy it. But money is the key. At one time they'd have to extort what you grew or the animals that you raised. That was a form of tribute, and that's what they called it. In the feudal system, they sent out the sheriffs men, and they went all around to the farms and took your ducks and geese and whatever else to feed themselves, but they still had a hard time getting their chain mail and their armor. So, with the invention of money, they really had it made because of a fee. You know, feudal, where the word fee comes from—you paid for existing. Now they call it taxes.

Caller: Actually the feudal system was more forgiving.

Alan: They also had a certain way to avoid it because at least you had some forest, and you could occasionally sneak some animals in and hide them and hide yourself now and then. But the taxation system, coupled with the whole indoctrination process we're born into and brought up with, can only exist with money; whether it's an electronic beep or a coin, it makes no difference really. It's a matter of using numbers. Plato goes into that, using numbers, because that's all money is. It's another big illusion. It's keeping score, and it keeps the slavery system going forever. Somebody must pay the piper according to this non-existent law that we take as law called profit, loss, and taxation, owing, and investing as well.

They say investing into companies that are not ever worth the amount of investment in them, which does mean that somebody's going to have to work double shifts or for less money to give off the profit down the road. It keeps the next generation in that system. There's another truth to all of this because, as they say, "As above, so below. As you sow, so do you reap." In other words, if we're willing to use that system, which we know is wrong, for our own personal gain, then we or our offspring will suffer. That is a truism; that's a law. It's a natural law. It's an eternal law. As we sow, so shall we reap. Ignorance is one thing, sowing in ignorance, but sowing in knowledge brings repercussions that we deserve, really. There's no excuse once we understand it. I've gone through all these things on a personal basis and said the only thing they can demand from me is taxes, and I can either write in a jail cell or pay the taxes that they demand, which is extortion. I tell them it's extortion. That's the difference. I don't care what term they care to call it. Reality is reality, and a demand from a powerful force against somebody who does not have a powerful force is extortion. No fancy names or phrases will dress it up in my mind to be anything different.

Caller: You have me rethinking the whole investment thing.

Alan: It's the law of nature, and once we begin to excuse things in flowery language, then we can pass anything off as being either necessary or right. It's "everybody else does it" or “whatever.” But the reality is we cannot, on an individual basis, say, “My children will somehow have to cope with what I’m doing today, and that’s too bad because I did it too, or I was left with the same problem.” The fact is I don’t want my children to go through this.

Caller: Well, problems compound anyway.

Alan: They do. And that’s what they mean by the sin of the father is compounded on the seventh generation. We keep this going, and we can excuse it in every generation, but a slavery system is a slavery system, and to invest in a slavery system creates slavery for the future. This system is so well done and controlled. Under the guise of respectability the monsters lurk. It’s all presented with language that misleads us. Because language is full of symbols, and they can give you flowers, or they can give you skulls. That’s how it’s done. They dress up the skull until you don’t see it with the flowers.

Caller: That’s criticism and praise, too.

Alan: Yes. This is a whole illusion that we’re living in. In the 1930s (and I have the original book here), the CTR and Royal Institute had it right down to the quota of Chinese they would bring into Canada by the millennium as a bridge towards the three trading blocks of the Pacific Rim, a united Europe, and a united Americas. When they discussed a thing called NAFTA and GATT, it was only presented to the public openly as a thing that was just happening in the 1990s. I mean. I’m not kidding myself that I’m free. No. The whole of mankind was decided behind locked doors a long time ago, and it still is being decided in the same way for the next fifty to one hundred years. So that is where we have to come out from. They even had breeding experiments to find the ideal population that they could control, and they used 1 lawaii for it. This is in the same book.

Caller: You’re kidding.

Alan: No. They went through—they were using American sailors; unbeknownst to the sailors, they encouraged them to marry into the local population, and then, of course, the sailors would bring their children, their offspring, in for physical and mental examinations, never realizing they were part of an experiment. They were taking their IQs and aggression quotients; in other words, how tame a bee will you be? How industrious would you be? They were trying to couple the placidity of the Hawaiian culture with the workaholic ability of the American male. They had done this there. They also had studies in the same book of breeding whites with people in the Dutch East Indies and various other countries, but they're all listed for the ideal population of the future. They really did mean the most easily handled and yet the most efficient.

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
August 24, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is Tuesday and it is the 24th of August 2004. I am glad you are with us this evening. We have a guest this evening, folks, and I think there are many of our long-time listeners who will be delighted to know that our guest is with us. For those of you who are newer listeners, you heard me mention the name many times.

I want to do first our spiritual message. I'm going to do this twice, it's in the New Testament, it's in the red, it is attributed to the words of Jesus. The first one here is from Luke 8, verse 16:

"No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light. For nothing is secret which will not be made manifest; neither anything hid, that shall not be known and come abroad. Take heed therefore how ye hear: for whosoever has, to him shall be given; and whosoever has not, from him shall be taken even that which he seems to have."

I'm going to go over to Matthew 5 where he is quoted as saying pretty much the same thing a little bit differently:

"Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid, and neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it gives light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." And Jesus told us that the Kingdom of God is within us, didn't he folks? I take that very seriously and I take it literally.

Our guest is Mr. Alan Watt from Canada, and welcome back to Sweet Liberty.

Alan: It's a pleasure to be here.

Jackie: The last few conversations we've had since we've been in touch again, as always, have been not just delightful, but always meaningful. I appreciate your coming on with us. Let me ask you a question. When I was reading from Luke that verse where "nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest, neither anything hid but shall not be known and come abroad" and then it says, "Take heed therefore how ye hear: for whosoever has, to him shall be given; and whosoever has not, from him shall be taken even that which he seems to have." Do you understand that? Would you help me with that?

Alan: I think people have to understand that the mystery religion of the ages is wrapped around all religions; and if you have "gained the spirit" as they say, more is given to you; but if you have not attained spirit, then even the soul is taken from you.

Jackie: When you say "attained spirit", would you say spiritual awareness, spiritual consciousness?

Alan: That's all part of it.

Jackie: I found where he had said that "fear not those who can kill the body but not the soul, but fear those who can-- Alan: Kill the body and the soul.”

Jackie: When I read that, it really was quite frightening, because until then it really wasn't even a thought in my mind that a person could lose their soul. The battle that has been going on for all these centuries is not just a battle for world dominion over the physical, but over the aspects of our mind, our entire soul.

Alan: In the old religion, and this is the key to all of this, in the old mystery religion that pre-existed all the religions that we have today, the person who sought hard enough with their soul, if they sought hard enough, would attain spirit. Spirit wasn't born with you, that's what they believed; and so as you attained the knowledge, the spirit that was your spirit came closer to you, so it merged; and that was called “complete life” when you had body, soul and spirit in the one. That was the first trinity. Those who took over the system and warped everything and changed everything, their goal is to deny people from gaining spirit basically and to be zombies, good worker bees.

Jackie: Where that is confusing to me is that it has not been a thought in my mind – each and every one of us in this physical form is actually a spiritual nature animating the physical form – and I can't imagine a human here without being that spiritual being of Creator.

Alan: You see, this was the supposed mystery of the soul and the spirit. The soul was the animating force that gave life and made you seek out truth, and so life was supposed to be a journey, always looking for the ultimate truth; and when people pass a certain stage, thoughts would flow to them with crystal clarity that they never had before, and that was attainment of spirit. It's even wrapped in the Christian version when they get the Holy Ghost. It's the same thing. The Holy Spirit and so that was completion you might say. Everyone has the ability to communicate to that part of the Creator. However, those who rule the world and warped everything and gave us religion have attempted to squash the natural ability to find your own course towards that spirit. That's what it's about.

Jackie: In other words, the religions that we have been given have really promulgated a sense of separateness, specialness. I know that a lot of people quote Paul a lot where he said you're only going to get there by grace alone and your good works mean nothing; and then, in the red, attributed to Jesus, he said let your works glorify your father. Not like that's going to get you to heaven because actually heaven – If the Kingdom of God is within us, that's where it's all at. So it isn't like going some place, is it?

Alan: It is and it isn't at the same time, because your whole life does change as you go through your life's journey. Wherever you go, you always bring yourself along with you; and part of the problem is with shedding the old to attain the new. The attainment of spirit is a desire. They used to say it was the love of the soul for the spirit. It was the love of the soul that drove it on; and then you gained more enlightenment, not perfect enlightenment because you can't in this world. The world is tainted to an extent, but it drew you much, much closer and so your life's journey was really a preparation for what went on afterwards; and of course, in this society we have today they've crushed all hope of that. They made us think of the purely material and the scientists basically and the experts have taken over the natural religions you might say. Now we have a scientific elite religion with its own destination, which is the so-called “Great Work of Masonry,” which is to complete that which they say was left imperfect: and that's the world and everything in it, including us ourselves.

Jackie: So in other words, that when Creator created he didn't do it good enough?

Alan: Not for these characters, no. You see, once you step out of Eden, which is paradise, in other words; it's nature. Once you step out and you start making tools and so-called improvements, you're on the road to science; and science is a one-way street towards oblivion ultimately, because you cannot have science co-existing with free will eventually. The ancient scientists, or you can call them priests if you want, for an example is Babylon, and they had a lot of knowledge of the scientific world basically couched in religious terminology. They also said that through understanding nature, meaning breaking nature down to its primary components, and then by manipulating it, they could recreate man and make him better; and that role has never changed. That's why we're on a one-way street towards massive genetic manipulation, where the elite will have physical immortality. That's what they're after, and the rest will be purpose-made clones basically, and this is documented. It's not guesswork. There's many scientific papers out right now about all of this, so there's a goal and it's all being done through science and the manipulation of matter.

Jackie: When you said when we left Eden and we began to make tools, I tried to picture myself trying to garden with a spade or you understand what I'm saying. But basically in Eden then, what would have been paradise, we didn't have to garden because it was all there?

Alan: Yes. Eden is an allegory for perfect nature, but man himself is not satisfied with it. Once you start on the road of discovery or science and breaking down the secrets of nature, you're on a one-way street to an elite eventually dominating everybody on the planet and changing life itself, which is all on the books. They do want to make purpose-made types of humans to serve these elite in the very near future. Purpose-made clones basically to serve these elite in the very near future and it's well documented in all the scientific journals.

Jackie: Do you think that was done in the past?

Alan: I think so. We know for instance that the inoculation program was never given to help people. It was given literally to lobotomize the public as we went through massive transitions and it kept us placid and pretty stupid all through these transitions. A dumbed-down society is easy to manipulate.

Gloria: I have a few questions for your guest. I'm a Christian now and I know the part where Jesus says that no one comes to the Father-Creator except through me, so that's why I'm a Christian now. I used to be, I know this sounds crazy, but I used to be a former abductee, as god as my witness. I had many experiences with the UFOs, I've seen them, I've gone through so much for about four or five years. Anyway, when I became a Christian now, all that went away. That's why I became a Christian: I needed that protection. I wanted to ask: Where do the UFOs, those unseen forces out there fit in with your New Age philosophy? What about the communist courts that control Canada? Canada is like so filthy and degraded and evil, there is evil everywhere there, and in America. What is your opinion of the Jews today, the Khazar Jews that are just causing hell everywhere, and what's the answer is for us people who want to know about the New Age, your New Age philosophy?

Jackie: Gosh, that was a mouthful, wasn't it, Alan?

Alan: It's standard.

Jackie: How would you answer first to the New Age? I read a book about the Knights Templar; towards the end of the book they begin talking about the New Age; and to me, that there is a turning, but they know it and take control of it and they guided and led it.

Alan: Sure they do.

Jackie: What people call New Age so often is where the truth is being hidden amongst the lies.

Alan: Always. When truth is exposed that's been kept hidden from the public, it's always given to leaders who are the shepherds and they led us along the way they want us to go, always; and the thing is, the New Age is always becoming new. Jesus started a new covenant. That was a New Age. The Old Covenant was the Old Age. Jesus' reign was supposedly the Age of Pisces, the fish. Now it's into Aquarius. However, this again is only a timetable of the hidden elite that run the show.

Jackie: In other words, the way they configure it, about every couple thousand years we're moving into a "New Age."

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: How do you respond to Gloria in her question to you about "your New Age philosophy"?

Alan: Once you become anything and join a group that has a tailor-made formula, anything outside that group becomes the enemy, including all individuals with their own philosophy, so it doesn't worry me that she says "your New Age" because it isn't mine anyway. And as far as communist Canada, I think she was calling from New York, wasn't she?

Well, I think that says it all; it's no secret that communism was run and led and financed from New York, all through its existence. She should wonder what "Empire State" they're talking about. What empire are they talking about?

Jackie: Communists in Canada, whoever is in control of this world or certainly appears that they are; communism was created by those creatures. Capitalism was created by those creatures; all of the "isms" are a creation of them. All right, the statement: "no one comes to the father but through me."

Alan: Well, Jesus said it all. He said to his followers "I am in you, as you are in me; as the father is in me, he is in you as well."

Jackie: And "no one comes to the father but through me." In my "interpretation" it sounds to me like he's saying "listen to me, listen to what I am telling you."

Alan: That's very important because again we get transfixed on a singular human being, but it's also the pathway basically. The road to enlightenment can only go in that one direction and through that direction, and that's what that means.

Jackie: His message that he brought; that's what that's always meant to me.

Alan: You can't go through it any other way. In other words, no matter how many people diverge from the course, if they were to meet up again at the same stage, they would all have had to come back on that one course to be the same.

Jackie: The path that he more or less trod out.

Alan: "Truth" we're told today is whatever your opinion is.

Jackie: Truth in Black's Law Dictionary – actually one of the definitions is that truth is consistency of thought within itself; so, if we think it long enough and hard enough and keep saying it, that's truth; so truth could be anything.

Alan: That's what Pontius Pilot asked Jesus, "What is truth?" However, as far as the communist thing goes, it's all rubbish because it's simply the dialectic, which causes conflict, which causes faster change and this is planned by the same bunch that created both of them. Carroll Quigley said it all. He said you can get more accomplished in five years of warfare on a social scale than you can in 50 years of peace; and so, by understanding the laws of nature, which is this yin and yang type deal, using both of them, you can actually steer the course of planet earth and speed up the process. That's what they believe and they actually do it that way. They live by timetables.

Jackie: Gloria sounded a bit challenging in her questions; she was misunderstanding what you were talking about. She's called in before. I think what she was doing was misunderstanding that what you were talking about was not "a belief" system but what they believed and how they are working under that belief system.

Alan: We're dealing with people who have their own inner religion. Albert Pike, the high Mason said all this, that every church – he didn't say some churches, he said every church has the exoteric for the bulk of the people, the masses and the esoteric for the very elite.

Jackie: Esoteric meaning an inner meaning; and exoteric meaning an outer, a sensible meaning

Alan: Masonry is the same. He said Masonry also has its outer group, which is in a sense camouflaged, and it has its inner elite with its own agenda.

Jackie: Yes and he said the outer courts – he called it the outer courts, the exoteric, the lower degrees, that they believe that they understand and they're meant to believe that they understand what's actually going on; when in reality they're nothing more than window dressings.

Alan: Yes. In fact he said "we know no more than the general public." What they do know is that they help each other to get on with unmerited favor to do with jobs and so on.

Jackie: In the Protocols they call it ‘show masonry’ and that those ‘goyim’ who are attracted to it want to be in it so that they can throw sand in their brother’s faces.

Alan: They can because they get unmerited favor through employment and pay raises and they bypass bureaucratic offices and so on, and can get a lot of things done that you would have to pay through the nose to get done. Yes, they get a lot of perks and so it does attract a very basic type of person.

Jackie: --A materialistic type person. Gloria did ask for you to address the UFO situation and how it fits into all these things.

Alan: The UFO deal, we have a puzzle because we had sciences on earth here that were far in advance of what we’re told. Who knows how long they’ve been here with their physical sciences? On the other hand, too many people have had visitations with these “beings.” I haven’t met one yet who had a visitation where anything of import has been given to them. They haven’t come away from the encounter any brighter or wiser than they were before.

Jackie: Do you mean “abductees”?

Alan: “Abductees”...again, I’m sort of skeptical of the amount of people who say they’ve been abducted. They’ve had studies and they found under hypnosis with test groups – some who claim they had been, and members of the general population who had no idea at all – and they found out with the same hypnotists they had the same number of people claiming they had encounters from the group who had no record of it, so there’s form of suggestion going on here, too.

Jackie: I’ve always believed that there’s life of some form, maybe not humanoid but life on other planets. I mean it’s just arrogance to believe that we are the only life form on the only planet and these myriads of universes, but I’ve also thought about this ability that exists to literally give us false memories.

Alan: You’re right on that because some of the higher Masons belong to what they call Triangles. They belong to groups and they’re set up in triangles in different parts of the country, and they do, in the much, much higher Masonry, force their will upon the general population within that triangle; and I have some of their books.

Jackie: In what way, how do they force their will? What does this have to do with UFOs?

Alan: You’re talking about how people are so fascinated by it, but did you have an encounter or did something put that in your head, and that’s what we’re really asking. If it did get popped into your head, where did it come from?

Jackie: I had a series of dreams, three of them when I lived in Illinois, and they came very close on one another. They were very vivid dreams, in one of them I had been taken up in a spaceship, and they were poking something underneath my fingernails. When I woke up in the morning, the first thing I did was look to see if I had marks under there. I don’t know what there was about that, but I was a little freaked out.

We’re back folks, and Alan Watt is our guest tonight. For those of you who are new listeners, when Alan first began coming on as a guest – this is back in 1998 – we did a series, we didn’t plan on doing a series but listeners kept calling and saying “keep him on.” At that time, that weren’t good telephone rates and there were listeners who actually sponsored the costs of Alan calling from Canada to be on the air with us. I want you to know this, you’ve heard me mention this many times, when he was on with us originally, in a sense what he did was take us all out of the dark ages, with history, ancient history. We really never got into more current history with Alan, other than sometimes talking about current happenings. I would like you to consider just listening, and if you have questions, ask. Alan and I have not communicated in quite a while. One of the things he said to me, after we were talking after a long period of time, he said “you’re in a rut,” and I felt offended when he said that, but I knew what he was saying was right, except the use of the word “rut” I wasn’t getting. When we talked another time, I asked him to define what he meant by “rut.” He said “you’ve come to a point, and you haven’t gone beyond it.” That I knew was the truth. Folks, to me, there’s nothing today more important than us understanding, or getting closer to understanding, who in fact we really are. This thing that we call “religion,” you’ve heard me say it, I know that I’ve stepped on many toes when I have said that religions were created by man, I knew that before Alan Watt said it. I don’t say it as a parrot, I knew that when I was 15 years old that something was very wrong. I knew when I was a little girl that something wasn’t right with this world. I grew up in a Lutheran church and every time I went to our pastor to ask him a question, and it didn’t matter whether it was in Flint, Michigan or Chicago or where I was, they patted me on the arm (figuratively) and then changed the subject because my questions bothered them. I finally stopped going to church because I knew weren’t getting the truth.

(Call)

You’re on the air.

Eleanor: Alan was about to expand on what he meant by the Masonic triangles and forcing their influence on people. I'd love to hear his details on that.

Alan: I've got it in a few of the insider Freemason books, not the type you buy on a shelf counter at some big bookstore. Some of the ones come from the high theosophists, for instance, which is just one branch of it, and they go through this process where they control the thoughts of the world by imposing their perfected will, they tell you, by the way, on the public within the range of their triangle. They have in North America for instance broken up into triangles and they have major lodges at the points of the triangle in each area, and they meet on certain occasions at night and go through all this ‘will-power projection’, you might call it. Some of them certainly do it mentally. The theosophists claim that their major triangles are based in New York City, London and Switzerland and they are bringing the agenda further on, they claim. They also use predictive programming through entertainment, so that ideas that would seem absurd if presented in a factual non-fictional way you would reject it out-of-hand or even rebel against, but when you see things through fictionalization and comedy you don't retaliate when the actual thing occurs in reality.

Jackie: In other words, we don’t resist it.

Alan: It's called predictive programming, from Tavistock

Jackie: Can you think of an example to give on that?

Alan: To do with the ‘gender-bending’ let's say. That was all done through comedy and taking sexuality into a more open arena step-by-step, until you're watching programs now that hide very little; and of course they are going to go the whole way, ultimately, on TV and that will become standard fare. So the breakdown of the moral codes of the individual and then introduce the new; and when anything goes, then literally anything goes. You have nothing to hold on to when there are no rights and wrongs any more. It's ‘relativism’ as they call it.

Jackie: What we have to hold on to is what’s in our heart, what we know is the difference between right and wrong.

Alan: We must hang on to who we are.

Jackie: And who are we?

Alan: You have to find out who you are. That's the journey because most people are composites.

Jackie: Many aspects of self, is that what you mean by “composite”?

Alan: Most of it is actually downloading, like Zbigniew Brzezinski said in the "Technetronic Era" and remember who he was, he was up there in the War Department of the U.S. He said, apart from all the high technology they had back in the '60's that would eventually be used on the whole world to control the mind. He did say that people shortly would be unable to form an opinion by themselves. Now they could fight and die and hold on to those opinions, but it would never occur to them, they've never researched a single one for themselves, because it all was downloaded through the nightly news for them. It's true. I mean everyone's got a thousand opinions. They'll argue about them but they've never researched any of them for themselves. That's part composite, you see. It's been manufactured for them, so that there is part of their personality, which is fake to begin with. It's not them at all, and the rest of it is training through school and media, entertainment and so on.

Jackie: This is a book titled "The Cause of World Unrest" and there's a quote here about the Bolshevik policy is to kill industry so that unemployment, want and discontent will continue. "Read the old revolutionary maxim on which they act today. Want and opinion are the two agents which make all men act. Cause the want, govern opinion and you will overturn all the existing systems however well constituted they may appear. Cause the want and then govern the opinion."

Alan: Yes. We're always being told what the solution is to whatever they give to us.

Jackie: We're always being told what we think, too.

Alan: The next day everyone's chatting about what they heard on the news the previous day.

Jackie: Actually they talk about what they think, because they've been told what they think. In a conversation with my nephew, when he was talking about the Houston Chronicle, he didn't like it, he said, because there was too much editorializing. I said I thought there were some decent articles for a newspaper, a controlled medium. He said, but we don't need to be told what to think. I said the problem is that people think that they have their own thoughts, but they don't. He turned around and said to me – this was during the Monica Lewinsky thing, I've heard this said over and over again on CNN – let's use this Bill Clinton thing for an example, "We don't care what he's done, we just want this whole thing over and we want him to get back to the business of running this country." And Alan, my heart just fell because he said it word for word, the way he was told that the American people think.

Alan: The public are given their thoughts, and that's everyone, and you have to break free from all of the conditioning and to think for yourself and ignore all the trivia that they give you. Governments are not real. They're just fronts and it doesn't matter what side they think they're on; they're all just fronts, absolutely all of them. It doesn't matter which country you choose – they're all puppets.

Jackie: I remember reading a quote somewhere, and I think that there was a time when I wouldn't have even seen this, that the governments are supposed to make laws according to the consent of the governed. Basically, what we were saying is, you govern us so you better do what we want. It literally referred to ourselves as "the governed."

Alan: The governments are not the bosses. During the whole Cold War Era, isn't it amazing that they were creating a United Europe, unbeknownst to all the people who lived within Europe? They were creating a Unified Africa. They were creating a Unified Pacific Rim block and they were creating a Unified Americas.

Jackie: Guess what, the first of all of those Unifields were the United States of America.

Alan: Well of course. That's its purpose.

Jackie: All of us who were born in America, the "United States", it never occurred to me when they were talking about the European Union, "All those countries are going to lose their sovereignty" and it happened here a long time ago.

Alan: Jefferson said it and so did Franklin. They said "this country is founded on the basis of federation, which will eventually be a federated world under a government of 12 wise men". That's in Jefferson's writings. They knew exactly where they were going.

Jackie: Jefferson was a Phi Beta Kappa, I understand.

Alan: He was also an open member of the Illuminati.

Jackie: My understanding was the Phi Beta Kappa was one of those college fraternities where a lot of the elite were turned out.

Alan: In fact, if you look at Elihu Yale, who donated the money for the foundation of Yale University, he said, "We are setting up these universities to create the types of leaders who will lead this country into the future." In other words, they were training them before the revolution. Elihu Yale made his money from the British East India Company. He was one of the founding members. These guys are all in it together and they have created the future they wanted. The U.S. just has to finish the job it's been designed to do, and as they're doing it, they're getting the U.S. ready to collapse into the system that they helped create.

Jackie: We've got a lot of new listeners since you've been on. You said a lot of outrageous and audacious and almost unbelievable things; then our listeners starting doing research and started sending me stuff and saying, "Look at this. This is exactly what Alan was talking about." The reason I'm bringing this up is because you do say some things that sound so off the wall that it "just couldn't be true." However, in the books that you put together, it isn't just your writing explaining what is in the book, it is copies out of old, ancient books. You said at one time that their plan is to actually morph humanity so that we'll all be hermaphrodites. I said many times, and I know you probably remember this, I used to say to our listeners, just because Alan Watt says this doesn't mean it's so, and I couldn't verify it because I don't have the information at hand. In other words, don't take it to the bank. But you had it in one of your books. Then I got a book that was written in the 1950's and in there was exactly what you were talking about, how they could create a hermaphrodite.

Alan: The American Psychiatric Association put a book out in the '60's after being funded by the U.S. government for a two-year study on this very subject. The latter part of the book was all about the creation of the hermaphrodite in order to have "world peace," and they go through all this in detail. It's called The Human Agenda and you can't get much more official than that. There was a movement started up in the U.S. with people born since 1950's onwards, and they managed through the Freedom of Information Act to get their medical records. They'd all been born to hermaphroditic, male and female. They all lived around U.S. Naval bases and one of their parents or sometimes both were in the Navy. The mothers when they were expecting were all given special inoculations, they were told, and supplements because they lacked certain things and their children all end up hermaphroditic (having sexual organs of both male and female). In three states alone in the U.S., they've now found 10,000 people that have had this done to them basically. I caught it on a radio show just a few weeks ago. It's a fairly recent organization but they do have the declassified records from the U.S. Navy to prove this and back this up. They were using hormonal treatments on the mothers and it produced these hermaphroditic children. You wonder why the world is in chaos today, where a lot of women think they're men and a lot of men think they're women. I don't think it's by chance. That's the amazing thing is that this is an agenda when the American Psychiatric Association do a think-tank study with the best psychiatrists pulled in from all over the world and they conclude that they must create this kind of society, a hermaphroditic society for world peace. Really we're living a horror show; I used to say we live in a Disney movie, but that's only during the day. It's a horror show and we're living through it. The whole population has been experimented upon in ways they don't even comprehend because it's such high-tech. Now, with the towers going up everywhere, which are designed for mind control purposes, and this is on main news here, they're installing these all over the U.S. They'll be able to work and broadcast on the same frequency levels as the brain and they hope to pacify people in times of crisis and this is the reason they're putting up the towers.

Jackie: This is what was said on the news in Canada. This goes along with a lot of what is in Nick Begich's book on the HAARP towers, how they can tune into the frequency of the human brain.

Alan: They've had that ability for a long time.

Jackie: Where was it they said they were spraying Prozac?

Alan: That was the mainstream news of CBC Canada on television. It was Rumsfeld who was asked, in one of these brief clips they show you, what contingency plans he had for another 9/11 deal, and he said, "we have aerosolized Prozac and Valium ready to go and to be sprayed over the cities." And I thought, if they have it ready to go, I wonder if they're already doing it, because they're spraying the skies everywhere and people definitely are far too passive for the changes that are taking place right now. I think the spraying of the skies alone shows you what you're up against here because no government will admit to this, that they are doing it. However, they will admit it's being done, but not by them.

Jackie: You had explained that to me, they are using the "Open Skies Treaty" as their justification that there are chemicals being sprayed but it isn't us doing it.

Alan: Yes, that's right. It's like a Dr. Strangelove policy, where we do it somewhere else and someone else does it to us. When you think of the volume that they must have had stored up to even begin this on a daily basis, they had to be making this since about 1950 onwards at least, and Dow Chemical and all the big boys have to be involved for the quantities they're using and people are being affected by it. We were getting static shocks all summer when you came out of a vehicle, so much so, they put little blurbs on the news not to touch your vehicle and the pump at the fill-up station because sparks can fly across. Well that's impossible in natural summers because it's humid and it's hot. You only get that in the wintertime, but not now. We're living in the scientific age.

Jackie: When Dr. Begich was on in '95, he was talking about some experiments they had done; how they could cause emotional upheaval.

Alan: They had hand-held weaponry that they could cause this from any distance back in the 1950's.

Jackie: Before all the towers were up. But he said they could tune it to a frequency. They could make everybody feel good. They could make people feel angry and they could make them feel suicidal and homicidal at the flick of switch.

Alan: Yes. They were testing the people of Maine. They say they were the experimental test group for that.

Jackie: Ladies and gentleman, thanks for being with us tonight. We'll be back again tomorrow with Alan Watt.

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
August 25, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Our guest again this evening is Alan Watt. First the spiritual message from Ephesians 6, beginning with verse 10.

"Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand."

This was an issue with children and many of you do have children in school. When they get to certain grades, they have to have certain vaccines; a tetanus vaccine was due, and I got doing some research on it; children could be opted out of it. The first day of school, half of that class was being sent home because they didn't have a tetanus vaccine. Tetanus is not a disease, and yet the children were sent home because they didn't have "a tetanus vaccine." As far as I can ascertain I don't believe there is a state in these United States that doesn't have an opt-out form; the forms are at the schools in the offices and all you have to do is declare that it is against your religious beliefs. You don't have to be going to a church. I know that each of the schools are different, but in this case you didn't have to have something filled out by a church. All you had to do was get this one particular form; you can go to Vaccination Liberation. It's a website; do a search. I think it's vaccinationliberation.com; just put in your search engine 'vaccination liberation' and you can go right to it. They've got an alphabetical index that's just beautiful. The website is set up beautifully and it is so helpful. So this tetanus "vaccine"...there is no immunity and it was in the manufacturers website that in the United States there has been no immunity built up against this infection. It's actually an infection. The bacteria is clostridium tetani; they say that in the United States there is no immunity to it. There's no immunity in anybody because tetanus isn't a disease. It's an infection that is caused from improper cleaning of a wound and a tetanus vaccine is not going to build up an immunity for the individual. The vaccine is in fact a poison itself; they grow the lethal bacteria, clostridium tetani using mercury, that's thimerosal, as a preservative and they use embalming fluid, formaldehyde as a detoxifier, so they grow a toxin and then kill it with formaldehyde. They say it's a detoxifier and there is one of two different kinds of aluminum in the vaccines. The thimerosal breaks down in the body to mercury. It is a neurotoxin and, doesn't that mean toxic poison to the brain, a neurotoxin?

Alan: Oh yes, the whole nervous system.

Jackie: It is admitted that the aluminum and the thimerosal are both neurotoxins and so if you are still vaccinating your children, after you hear this tonight, you can get an opt-out form if you children are in school, because every single one of the vaccines have thimerosal; all of the vaccines use thimerosal as a preservative and they use formaldehyde in them also. So all you're doing is injecting these children, these precious babies that have been given you into your care with poison chemicals and even if they live through it and they don't become autistic, because autism has increased, and the autism is connected directly to these vaccines. So I wanted you to know, and Alan, thank you for being patient with us here.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: According to this one article on the dangers of thimerosal, it's been known for a long time that it's a neurotoxin but it says that it has removed from many across-the-counter medicines such Merthiolate and contact lens solution.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: It says here that the amount given a six-pound infant in one vaccination would be the equivalent of giving a 180-pound adult 30 vaccinations in one day.

Alan: Yes. And that's on a brain that hasn't grown yet.

Jackie: That's right and the liver isn't producing whatever it has to do to get rid of the poisons in the body. A listener wanted to know if you would address Harry Potter books and what you know about them, pros or cons.

Alan: Only what I've heard on the general media. I've seen a couple of the movies and it's just the old rehashed stuff that we've heard in fairy tales for centuries.

Jackie: We have an article on our website allegedly written by a former witch, and she said that these books and these movies are not harmless because they are encouraging witchcraft. A lot of children have seen the movies and say, "I want to be a witch when I grow up," but she said all of the names of the dormitories such as Slitherine. She said those are the names of the actual demons that are called up in black magic, so she said that the children, every time they say it, it's like they're calling that demon to them.

Alan: It's all old Kabbalistic formula. We are at the end of this long-calculated stage that's been planned for the world for such a long time and we're on the brink of a major change as you can see all around us. I don't think it will be too pleasant when it all comes down. It's been planned for such a long, long time by those in authority worldwide and I think they're truly meaning to push their whole New Age formula and put it into effect, to eradicate, as we keep hearing from the Rockefeller Foundation and others, a good portion of the world's population. That they deem no longer be necessary to keep themselves in the comforts they're used to. They have technology to accomplish a large amount of that.

Jackie: Everything they're doing today is part of it; the wars, the vaccines and the chemtrails; maybe people aren't dropping like flies; maybe they are and we don't know it.

Alan: They are, actually. I mean with all the spraying alone that's going on and I'm sure that – we even have more ads on TV sponsored by the government to recognize signs of stroke. We never had those before and they're on every day.

Jackie: Yes and over here it's asthma and upper respiratory problems. I've seen it on the Weather Channel quite a bit when they advertise all of their medicines. Asthma's a big one today and a lot of people have asthmatic symptoms that have never in their lives had asthma. Young people, children as well as adults.

Alan: Again, going back to inoculations, autism is only at the top of the tree of symptoms. There's a whole range of lesser symptoms not as profound or as obvious going all the way down to asthma and you have varying degrees of mental disturbances. Slow learning, that type of thing, not quite classed as autism, degrees of mental retardation. The IQ level has dropped five points over the last 10, 15 years, a minimum of five points. And of course with all the inoculations going hand-in-hand into infants' bodies before the brain is formed; you're really lobotomizing them before the brain is formed and that is one of the policies that was discussed with the World Population Council that Arthur Koestler attended, who wrote the book "The Ghost in the Machine" and took part in plans to try and lobotomize subject groups, which would eventually be used worldwide to basically dumb the people down through inoculations, through mechanical lobotomies, chemical lobotomies, everything basically. He wrote about it in his book and in the last chapter he tells you he thinks this is very important again for that same "world peace." This is widely written about. It's just that we don't hear about it on the regular news.

Jackie: When they talk about world peace, that's their "peace." I want to read this from Protocol #10. It says that:

"You yourselves perfectly well know that to produce the possibility of the expression of such wishes by all the nations (that would be probably talking about their super government, the UN) it is indispensable to trouble in all countries the people's relations with their governments so as to utterly exhaust humanity with dissension, with hatred, struggle, envy and even by the use of torture (which they're doing today) by starvation and by the inoculation of diseases, by want, so that the "Goyim" see no other issue than to take refuge in our complete sovereignty in money and in all else.

But it says here:

"If we give the nations of the world a breathing space, the moment we long for is hardly likely ever to arrive."

So when they talk about the inoculation of diseases they're literally saying they're going to inoculate diseases into people.

Alan: That's being followed pretty carefully even with the AIDS outbreak spreading through Haiti and then through Africa in the wake of the UN smallpox vaccination agenda. It followed on its heels and that has been admitted too. Of course they claim that some of the people who were giving inoculations didn't sterilize the needles properly. They just used the same ones on arm after arm basically. That's the way they wiggled out of that one.

Jackie: You had said that you would be sharing information that hasn't been shared with mankind for 3,000 years.

Alan: What we're dealing with behind all of the fronts we have facing us is a very old religion – a singular religion that pre-existed all of the other religions that we know today.

Jackie: Does it also precede what we know today as Talmudism or Phariseism; is it any different than Talmudism?

Alan: Yes. You'll find behind all of the religions, and the esoteric parts in all religions, they share a common origin, and it's wrapped so carefully into all religions that it takes an awful lot of searching to find it, but you can find it.

Jackie: I stated as I was compiling the book that it is a long-laid program for world dominion wrapped in a cloak of religion.

Alan: It's really the original religion behind all of the facades, and you find it again in the writings of Egypt and Sumer, and what the elites claimed is that they must interbreed so carefully with close kin for a very special reason. It's puzzled all the researchers who have gone into this angle of it; why the necessity of worldwide aristocracy for this intense inbreeding and the pharaohs, or at least the priests who looked after the pharaohs, wrote about this and wrote about their ceremonies associated with this. What they claim is that their bodies are the descendents of the original bodies that were created when these beings or spirits or demons or angels were cast down to earth; and through their own will power they formed, from all the materials around them, through pure thought and will power, perfect bodies to occupy.

Jackie: That is interesting that the physical body contains all of the elements that are in the earth.

Alan: Yes. However, they claim that since the closest thing from the Creator who had cast them here or imprisoned them here, they retained some of these special powers of creation within themselves and as time went on, these powerful beings that could basically move objects, huge objects just by mind power alone, began to lose these powers because they began to interbreed with the original species here, so there was an original species here. And the laws came out to command them to start interbreeding once again to get back to the original forms where they could use this "mental ability" you might say; the royalty, the elite of every country as well. If you look at flags of every country you'll see all of the symbols of what you think of today as the illuminati. You've got the rising sun for Japan. You've got the dragon which is China and so you can go on and on and the modern flags have so many pyramids on them it's incredible. The Union Jack is 'illuminated man', is Andrew's Cross with the Templar Cross in the middle. Every flag you look at. South American flags are just amazing with their pyramids, so it's everywhere. It's a worldwide aristocracy and that's the reason for their intense inbreeding. If they breed out of their stock, the offspring will not have the powers; and here's the key to it. They believe so intensely in reincarnation of their own original spirits into their own family lineages that they must have the DNA of the family lineage to keep the perfect body so that the perfect spirit will manifest itself into it. Do you understand that so far? They used to have a ceremony of the "opening of the mouth" they called it. When a pharaoh died, they go through this elaborate ceremony, this was to retain the spirit of the deceased pharaoh, and then they would transplant it literally, supposedly, into his son. Therefore, you could be a host for your own spirit and your father's at the same time. If the son wasn't there at the time, they claimed that they could transplant the spirit or energy into a statue – a statue could be anything, a container, in other words, or a scientific device, who knows? – and then bring it back out later when the son arrived home. All of the world aristocracy believe in this intensely, and that's why they believe they are so clever and they are the original physical DNA of the original bodies that the fallen ones created, and they are also hosting the spirits of the original angels that fell here.

Jackie: Their god is Jove?

Alan: [Their god is] Jove, Jupiter, Lucifer is just as good.

Jackie: You were talking about the elite and their bloodlines and I asked if their god was Jove and you said yes, Jove, Jupiter, actually Lucifer. When I did a search you were on at one time and you had said that Jove, Jehovah, Jupiter, "by George" were all the same "god." I've come to that realization more and more as this book is being compiled because I've done searches and I found an old Masonic – this was like 200 years ago and they said that a song was played to the tune of "God Save the King", which I found out is also the tune that "My Country 'Tis of Thee" is sung to. They talked in there about Lord, Jove, Jehovah, God is how it was said, and so that was a Masonic song. Do you know that one of the definitions of a Noahite is a Freemason when you look up the word in the dictionary, so the freemasonry, these people who are Christians who join freemasonry, do they all know this?

Alan: —Not at the bottom. Even the so-called laws that were given for all the gentiles meant and this is pre-Hebrew.

Jackie: I understand the word Hebrew was a word that meant "Habiru" that it meant dusty one or wanderer.

Alan: Wanderer, yes.

Jackie: Like a Nomad?

Alan: Long before that, supposedly, is at the end of another age when they talk about the flood. Noah was chosen to come through with his family, and it tells you right at the beginning of the chapter, the only reason that he was picked was that he was perfect in his generations, meaning perfect in his bloodline. He had not married outside of his bloodline, so we're back to genetics again.

Jackie: Sarah was Abraham's half-sister, according to the Old Testament, and Moses married his aunt. It was some family.

Alan: It's a eugenics program really. It's the eugenics of the body and supposedly the spirit. Even the Roman elite, it doesn't matter where they've gone or who they've called themselves in times gone past or what empire they ruled, when the Greek elite moved into Rome and created Rome they took all their customs with them. The Greek elite also had the Lares, the fire which represented the family spirits, as they did when they went into Rome and reconstructed the same system. The fire was always representative of your own family lineages' spirits which would reincarnate into your grandson.

Jackie: Is that what that eternal flame stands for?

Alan: Yes. It means belonging to Lucifer. The flame means Lucifer. The lesser flames or 'points of light' belong to the army of Lucifer.

Jackie: Is the religion of the Jews today, Talmudism or Phariseism according to the Jewish Encyclopedia that Judaism today traces its history back through the ages without a break to the Pharisees, so it would really be called Phariseism, probably. Is that a part of it today? When you look into some of these websites when you're checking into the Noahide Laws, then it says the Noahide Laws are only for the non-Jews. They give a couple of reasons, either because the gentiles rejected the Ten Commandments, that the Ten Commandments are only for the Jews because they were the ones that were there by the Mount when they were given, and so the Noahide Laws--

Alan: There were no Jews...

Jackie: But that's what they call them today. So the Noahide Laws, there's seven of them. Actually, one is thou shall not. It is a law that would establish tribunals and then the punishment – this is right out of their own website so it isn't a figment of my imagination and I'd read this before, but until I saw it in their own website for some reason I just kind of doubted it. But the only penalty for the breaking of one of the Noahide Laws is death, and the only mode of death is decapitation. What they are saying is the reason their messiah has not returned yet is because the world isn't ready for him, because enough people have not accepted "The Torah," because that's what the Noahites will be referred to, as Hasidic Gentiles. It is written in one of the books I read that any man, woman or child that does not embrace The Torah will be exterminated. Now do you think that they have something beyond that? It's in their own website. They explain all this.

Alan: The easiest thing to do, and this guy will come on your program, is to ask that Rabbi Stevak back on. He will come on because he was on Alex Jones' show.

Jackie: Do you think if I called him he would come on Sweet Liberty? What would I bring him on and ask him?

Alan: Whatever you want. Yes, ask him because all the hate laws are now in effect that were in the Soviet Union. The hate laws are in effect now. Understand? They've been passed everywhere and they're being enforced everywhere.

Jackie: Well, from my understanding, the hate laws are actually the implementation of a genocide treaty and the implementing legislation was what created the hate laws.

Alan: Not really. There was a big two-year conference ongoing in a university in the U.S. to draft something up, again, for world peace; and on that, they had the bare bones of what would become the hate laws. They had many reviews and updates of it, but they are in effect now.

Jackie: This broadcast here in the U.S. and there are other broadcasts that have addressed the "Jewish question" and there have not been any lawsuits or any fines or anything like that going on.

Alan: The last place to go will be the U.S. because they're still completing the 'Great Work'. Once it's done that, then you'll see the same laws implemented.

Jackie: So that we won't be able to have these discussions?

Alan: Absolutely, and that's the intent of them. You won't even be able to ask a question along that line. A child won't be able to ask a question. That's how totalitarian things stand at the moment.

Jackie: You gave us a nutshell of what their design is, so to speak, and their belief system, but it doesn't feel finished. I don't feel like I understand this. How do we relate that to today?

Alan: Today, the ancient elite who ran the world, the natural aristocracy that Jefferson called them, are scattered through all peoples and they can adopt any religion actually and they become one of the people. They become the heroes of the people and it doesn't matter what country you go into; it's the same ceremonies at the top.

Jackie: The questions that I have are for example in the Old Testament, and I studied metaphysics and it was said that there is an esoteric – there is symbolic and there is some actual real history, but I think a lot of what we've been given as history was not, or it was twisted and it was torped. We have a situation where there is the God Jehovah or Yahweh. There are people who say the name is not Jehovah it is Yahweh and that god chose a certain group of people to be his special people who were going to rule over the earth. There are Christians who say because they've studied the bloodline – I mean as far as who we are it seems simple that Jesus said "that by their fruits ye shall know them", not by the color of your skin, bloodline or whatever...

Alan: "By their works."

Jackie: ...Or what religion you choose to believe in, but it is how we be. Yet the people who have studied the bloodlines are absolutely convinced that it is the white Anglo-Saxon I guess, the Nordic that is the chosen of that Yahweh in the Old Testament.

Alan: Some of them are. All of that sect began in the late 1800's with a guy who emerged in London and declared all this stuff. He demanded that the king abdicate and he'd take over, and so he was locked up in an insane asylum.

Jackie: Because he looked at the bloodlines and said "I should be on the throne"?

Alan: Yes. He put in a formal request; and when Queen Victoria was in, another guy did exactly the same and demanded that she abdicate so he could get himself on the throne, and he also ended up in the asylum. Then, of course, the elite thought this could be a good tool, you see, because division is fantastic when you're destroying everything at the end of an age and so then they promoted the 'British Israel' theory.

Jackie: It's called a lot of stuff, British Israelism?

Alan: Israel foundation. You'll find that the offices are the same as the World Zionist Federation. The British Israelite Foundation, which all these characters belonged to, is the same address as the World Zionist Federation.

Jackie: The British Israelites and the Zionist Foundation have the same address?

Alan: That's right, and all modern Christians who attend church are Zionists.

Jackie: They're being taught that today, aren't they?

Alan: They've been taught it for a long, long time – a hundred-odd years at least.

Jackie: Yes, but it's really becoming widespread today. Our webmaster was telling me in the little church that they attend that there was a song that they sang "We are Repossessing" and he told me the words. In fact I've got the words to that song, but basically it says we are repossessing every square inch of land, and I said how could you relate that to anything Christian? He said, "what we we're told was this." The Jews are denied the messiah so the promises of the covenant went to the Christians and now we're the ones that are going to evidently own and control the world. It's very confusing and it's disturbing because it's almost as though we have to be double-minded to believe this.

Alan: Most people are. I mean any follower of anything is a fool to begin with. If you can't think for yourself and take your own path and you must follow, you can be guaranteed you've been led up the garden path. That's why democracy works for the elite. Everybody who's born has a chance to be their own leader, but 87 percent have always chosen to follow somebody else because they can't think for themselves. They're too lazy to think for themselves. That's the problem, and then they wonder what's happened to the world they thought was theirs as it's pulled from under their feet.

Jackie: A lot of them don't wonder because they believe that this is God's plan and that when it all falls apart Jesus is going to be here. He's going to be on his throne in Jerusalem and he's going to be ruling the world. It says in the Bible "that my kingdom is not of this world" and he said "I came here for one purpose into this world and that was to bear witness unto the truth" and the way it appears to me, he was exposing this and got killed for it and he may as well have saved his breath.

Caller: When I hear that we are too lazy to think and we are too lazy to do this and that. In the meantime, we've been fed fluoride in the water. We've been dulled down with vaccinations and now we're supposed to take the blame for not being able to think. I think there's something wrong. What do you think?

Jackie: It is true that they have certainly done one job with the food, with the fluoride in the water and the type of food.

Alan: For 2,000 years the public, regardless of the denomination or even country, followed these religious leaders blindly without all the inoculations, et cetera.

Jackie: Jesus was exposing this.

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Now today people call themselves Judeo-Christians or Christian Zionists.

Alan: Well, you see, it's an abusive father.

Caller: It's very interesting what he said that all of the churches today, it's true. They really are Jewish centers. Really they've become Judeaized, willing they do this. But I just wanted to say the Jews secretly worshipped Lucifer. I know this is true. However, I wonder if your guest will agree with me, they are the wrath of God's anger. By the way, the Jews are the seed line of Lucifer, the Lord does allow this to happen because we deserve it.

Alan: That's the typical abused mentality that comes out – the abused person. If you follow the Bible you're leading a path of mind abuse, because you can't have a loving father who also allows sadism to happen. In other words, the God of the Bible has nothing to do with the Creator at all. That's the key to it. The Old Testament is a compilation borrowed from many other countries of stories which are techniques on how to control others.

Jackie: And you had said that their god is Lucifer.

Alan: Albert Pike said it in one of the highest Masonic books ever written and so did Madame Blavatsky. She called her newspaper Lucifer, eventually called the Lucius Trust. Lucifer was the rebel. He was the chief magician amongst the angels and he led a rebellion against the Creator himself supposedly. According to the elite, man would be in darkness today (meaning ignorance and primitiveness and “arrested civilization” as they call it), if Lucifer hadn't brought intellect and intelligence down to show the people and to rule over the people. This is the religion of all aristocracy. That's what they all believe in.

Jackie: So Jove, Jupiter, Zeus, and Jehovah are all one and the same?

Alan: They're all the same but Jupiter and Jove also mean "the hidden god", hidden from the public. That's what it means.

Jackie: Zeus was the Greek god, lord of the world. In Rome, Jupiter was Zeus-Pater, God the Father, became Zeus and Jupiter are one and the same. But then Jove and Jupiter are also said to be one and the same. Which of the gods are hidden gods?

Alan: You see, it's all allegory. It's not real beings. It's allegory for the hidden god that the public must never know about until the right time. In other words, it's another front-name for Lucifer, always was the hidden god, but not the Creator. It's the hidden god of the system of this world.

Jackie: The God of this world. I remember reading where Jehovah had said when I made the covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob they only knew me as the Lord God Almighty, but I am going to take you to be my people and I'm going to be to you a god. That is pretty loud and clear, Alan.

Alan: The story about coming out of the desert or Egypt and meeting Melchizedek is very important because Melchizedek was worshipped by them as a living God on earth. They gave him the full worshipping rights of a god, a deity, the supposed slaves that came out of Egypt; and the key is that every illumined man who works up through the degrees and goes round the clock becomes a god on earth. Every illumined man in their system who comes up the degrees becomes a god.

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
August 26, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Our guest is Alan Watt. I told you last night about the tetanus shot that a lot of children get. I think it's either 9th or 10th grade but it's a booster shot and I gave you information on it. I won't repeat it all. The one thing I forgot to tell you is that in the particular schools to which I was referring they had these opt-out forms in the office and it wasn't found out until the mother of this child was jumping through hoops trying to get a hold of the form knowing that it did exist. So for any of you who have children in school and if they're insisting on them getting vaccinated of any type, go into vaccination liberation, the website, and you can look up the ingredients of any of the vaccines. Thimerosal I believe is a preservative that's in all of them that I know of. It is a form of mercury. They use formaldehyde as a detoxifier and they use aluminum and all of these are neurotoxins. They are poison not just to the brain cell, but as Alan pointed out last night to the entire nervous system. So just call the school office and don't ask if they have them. Just say I want one of the opt-out forms to opt my child out of having the vaccine because it is against my religious beliefs. That's all you have to say. I don't know the law in every state but that I know of every state has one type of an opt-out option for parents. Let me share our spiritual message with you. This from Psalm 139:23, 24.

"Search me father and know my heart. Test me and know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offensive way in me and led me in the way everlasting."

To me that is the same as where Jesus said that we must know ourselves. Know thyself, he said. There is nothing more to know and if the Kingdom of God is within us as Jesus said then wouldn't that make sense that to know ourselves is the most important thing? If we know ourselves maybe that is all that there is to know. And thank you for being with us again.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: I received an email from a lady today and she said she was very confused and didn't even really know what it was all about and I urged her to listen tonight.

Alan: We've already gone through the fact that this plan has been ongoing for the complete reordering of the world for thousands of years basically, and that this crucial point of the change you might say to global governance and a new way of living for everyone, they have to dumb the public down even more so than they had ever done before. They have been using inoculations, primarily, to lobotomize the public and the IQ has been dropping substantially from especially the '50's onwards. This is a deliberate dumbing down for a purpose because you cannot have a literate public worldwide during the time of massive change where all morality is reconfigured into a new morality with new ways of doing everything, so this agenda was all planned. We're expected to always believe that everything that happens in history is just bungling and accidents by governments and scientists, and that's so far from the truth it's incredible. Everything that happens is planned that way. They knew that there were over 100 live simian, which is chimpanzee or monkey, viruses in every shot of polio before they gave it to the public. The Simian 40 virus, it's only function is to create tumors and cancers. That's all it does. I've got the videotape. The CBC, which documents everything, is the leading government station, played an old black and white replay one boring Sunday and it was about Dr. Salk and there's quips in it and his co-workers, and they talk about the fact that they were aware that these viruses were alive and that they were hazardous not only to your basic health but long-term health, and they knew that the Simian 40 virus would cause cancers. Other ones would attack the central nervous system. Some of them even caused sterilization. Now when you realize that was all part of an ancient policy, was exactly that, to cull the population and reduce the population by sterilization and by early deaths, we've never had such a spate of brain tumors in the very young as we have since 1950 onwards. This has done its job and it's not by bungling. It's by deliberation.

Jackie: Didn't Dr. Salk say that one of the viruses' only function was to cause brain tumors?

Alan: That's right, cancers of all kinds and that was the Simian 40, but that's only one of many of them.

Jackie: Did you say that this was an ancient thing that they did, back in ancient days?

Alan: In ancient times you'll find records from the Egyptians, the priests wrote everything down like all bureaucrats do and that's what the old priesthoods really were. They were bureaucrats and they wrote all the signs and symptoms of population control. That also meant having docile populations and they tried to even reduce calories. They tried feeding them certain things, omitting proteins to keep them docile and placid and yet strong enough to do the work. This has been an ongoing thing for thousands of years. Then of course Malthus who was the top economist for the British East India Company in the 1600's eventually wrote his book on population. That was introduced in the early 1700's and he advised raising people, the masses he said, the expendable masses, the surplus and building housing over swamplands where they'd be infected by mosquitoes and would die of diseases and so they had all these beautiful ways to cull people off that they didn't need anymore. This has been an ongoing thing.

Jackie: What do you know about DDT; I have read articles that suggest that they stopped using it because it was so effective in keeping down the mosquitoes populations and what do mosquitoes cause? Either yellow fever and malaria. And that today in the modern world, in some of the third world countries people are dying, dropping like flies from malaria. Do you think that DDT was effective and maybe more harmless if there is such a thing?

Alan: What they did in fact was to try and ban DDT and they still show these same clips in science shows for children today. They show you always these birds, generally seagulls giving birth to these jelly-like type eggs where the eggshell was almost non-existent and this was the main proof that DDT was harmful to nature, but what they didn't tell the public, although the information is available on request, is that they fed these captive seagulls nothing but DDT!

Obviously Africa has been slated for a long time for massive depopulation. However, a colleague of Salk who did the polio vaccine was Joseph Gallo and he's the character who got the main contract to create the AIDS disease. They're all well connected. If you look at Frederick Banting who's held up as a hero in history for developing, amongst other things, insulin for diabetes control; he came from Alliston, Ontario, Canada but this man was the top bacteriologist for germ warfare during World War II. When you read his memoirs and what he was developing, he was developing diseases which would wipe out everybody with a German gene in their body, and he said in his own memoirs and anybody can go and find the memoirs of Banting. He said "I won't be happy until everyone with a German gene is extinct from this planet". This is a great hero who's got statues up to him for helping children in diabetes. Yes, and also he developed a disease which would be spread amongst cattle and the idea was to kill off the food production in Germany and strangely enough has all the same symptoms as what we call Mad Cow disease today. Isn't that a coincidence? Every major figure they give you in history is really one of the elite and they are mass murderers.

Jackie: You said a long time ago that every hero that we have in our minds was given to us. I have discovered in my research that at least the heroes that we were taught in school were heroes are no longer heroes.

Alan: Even Thomas Jefferson in his own memoirs says that he was corresponding with Malthus and that he was very interested in his theories on population control. That's Jefferson's own writings.

Jackie: Alan, when you read stuff that they allegedly said; did they say or was this all made up some of the good things they said?

Alan: The good things are just what they're advisors would tell them the people would want to hear. That's always been the way. In their own memoirs they say complete opposite things. It's like Winston Churchill who had a whole nation rise up to fight supposedly the Germans and I believe to be honest that Hitler was setup by the same bunch too. I really do. In fact, World War II had to happen because there was only two ways out of the situation they created in Germany. One was to change the initial demands of the Versailles Treaty, or for Germany to go to war, so they supplied the right man at the right time and they got their way anyway. Meanwhile, Churchill is over on the other side directing a war that had not started before he was the prime minister with his own agents working for him and preparing for World War II, telling the public when it began that they'd fight on the beaches and all this rot. Now his personal secretary has come out with a book called "The Fringes of Power" and it's got all the private conversations of Churchill with his own inner elite class and he says, "This is the best thing that ever happened for us. We shall have our long way to dream of a united Europe", which is exactly what Hitler wanted. There's your paradox. However, to the public, oh yes we're going to fight on the beaches. It's the same old stuff over and over.

Jackie: Here in the United States of America they were actually involving U.S. soldiers in the fighting and in the war before war had been declared by the U.S. Congress, while he was making his promises to the American people that your sons will not go to war. Not fight.

Alan: The same premise that Wilson ran on in World War I. You just tell the public what they want to hear that's all, and they still do.

Jackie: Wasn't it George Poppy Bush that said "read my lips"?

Alan: In 1990, he first gave his major speech about the New World Order and he saw it coming into view, et cetera, et cetera. That was September 11th and then he repeated it one year later on September the 11th, same thing. It's the old occult Masonic way and so meanwhile America is being stripped of pretty well any right that you thought you had. You just haven't seen it totally enforced yet.

Jackie: They're probably waiting to pull off one more terrible – they keep telling us it is going to happen. We don't when. We don't where. We don't know how, but we know that there will be another and it will be worse than the World Trade Center; and anybody who thinks that only 3,000 people died there isn't thinking.

Alan: It's amazing what's pulled off in front of our eyes even though the New American Century agenda, the booklet was produced in 1997 with the same players we saw during the second Gulf War involved Rumsfeld and all the rest of them and they said we'll have to eventually take Afghanistan first and then Iraq second, then Iran and Syria and so on. They write about it. They tell you about it and then at the same time another major player Zbigniew Brzezinski comes out with "The Grand Chessboard" saying exactly the same things in the same sequence and he says "we'll need something on the scale of Pearl Harbor to motivate the American people into action behind us." It was about '98.

Jackie: I've got this on audio tape that was day one of 9/11 and I taped the whole day and they brought Henry Kissinger out of a meeting and they said please tell us what you're thinking here or whatever and he said, "this is the same as Pearl Harbor and it needs to be handled exactly the way Pearl Harbor was handled." I have that on videotape.

Alan: It's all orchestrated. In this mystery religion we're talking about, behind it all, they have a saying, which they use on the Star Trek episodes by Mr. Spock, that the few must perish to save the many. It's a sacrifice and that to them was worth having. This goes on and on and on and it's not just a reorganization of the basics of living in the world. It's going to be a complete reorganization of every individual's life where ultimately if they allow you to be born it will be with a need for you to be trained at something and there will be no surplus whatsoever. No excess population and your duty will be to serve the world state.

Jackie: Workforce development is the implementation of that.

Alan: Yes. It's all out in front of us for anyone to go and investigate. People who live in duality want to believe the nice men in the nice suits and ties who say such nice things to us and really care about us and then they can read the other information at the same time if they want to stay in duality, that's their problem because we know where they're going to end up.

Jackie: Back in the '40's there was a teachers union meeting held in I believe Philadelphia. I do have the actual agenda, a copy of the pamphlet and it's called "Educating for One World." This was in the '40's, and they said the needs of the children on the list was that the children will be educated – trained I believe for the new needs of labor and that's exactly what you just said, isn't it?

Alan: That's right and that's also in Brzezinski's other work called "The Technetronic Era" where he goes through the fact that the elite only need a technological class now to serve them. They don't need the laboring classes.

Jackie: And specifically, Hillary is quoted as saying that children don't need to learn to read, as long as they are properly trained for their jobs that they're going to be trained to do.

Alan: In other words, what you're seeing is being implemented all over. It's the exact same system only on a larger scale than the Soviet Union. It was all done in the Soviet Union with Pavlovian training. In the memoirs of Eleanor Roosevelt, she talks about that because she went over to Russia to meet her hero Pavlov and she said they trained the children so well using his methods they don't have a personality of their own.

Caller: What most people don't know is that homeopathy can reverse these injections and heal the body, and if anybody is really concerned about the health of their children they can give vaccinations through homeopathy which is totally harmless to the body and protects it. So if anybody wants to check into this I would suggest that they get to a naturopath of homeopathy and check this out because I know it works.

Alan: I know that there are treatments that help to detoxify certain heavy metals especially like mercury. They can be sort of flushed out over a certain period. It tends to be rather expensive though. They call it chelation.

Jackie: Dr. Carley has been on this broadcast. She lost her medical license in New York because her son had gotten real ill and she's a medical doctor but since she lost her medical license and she started treating her son homeopathically and they took her son away from her. The father has guardianship now and they have told her if she didn't shut up about homeopathy that she'd never see him again. Dr. Carley has not shut up because she said there are many people who need to know this, although I have never heard her talk about vaccines that work that are healthy.

Alan: Really, vaccination is bogus because a healthy body doesn't contract the various diseases. Most people have had tuberculosis for instance and that's why they send everyone for an x-ray and they find a little scar tissue on their lung. That means you've been exposed to it but you've fought it off and you've overcome it.

Jackie: My dad came down with diabetes and Jody was seven years old at the time and she had come to visit so they did tests and they found scar tissue on her lungs but they weren't sure they said whether it was scar tissue or active TB. They said they couldn't tell so they were going to treat her and if there was no change then they would know that it was a scar tissue from TB that her body healed and that's what it turned out to be. But meantime, I let them give Jody the therapy. I didn't know any better.

Alan: They can tell immediately if you have active TB because they give you the old Mantoux test on your wrist.

Jackie: Well, you know what they told us? They said since she had it she would always test positive because there are antibodies against it.

Alan: Yes, but when it's active your wrist comes up like a balloon. Big difference. No, they can tell this stuff.

Jackie: Dr. Carley has a website and I think it is simply Dr.Carley.com but if you put Dr. Rebecca Carley into a search engine I believe that you would find her website.

Caller: I'm calling about the comment that the lady regarding homeopathic vaccinations. I had it in 1961 when I went to Italy and it is nothing like these regular vaccinations. Homeopathic remedies are prepared very differently, but it enables a medical doctor to sign a certificate that you had had a vaccination because mine was necessary to go abroad. So you go to any homeopath or even naturopaths are able to do that today.

Jackie: Thank you. Maybe that is an alternative. I don't think there is any state that has the opt-out form for the children but maybe if you are traveling abroad and they want proof that you've been vaccinated that's good to know. Maybe it isn't necessary but if it's harmless that's important.

Alan: So much in the world is just bogus and it doesn't mean that the doctors are pretending or putting you on. They're trained in a system, which they believe, is based on pure faith on the person who taught them. I mean you take a child and you tell that child when he scratches himself or gets cut to wash out that wound and you tell him why, and meanwhile they take the same child to a doctor to inject him with stuff right into his body, in his bloodstream. We don't even have the ability to check ourselves. I mean it's all based on faith. Trust and faith and that's why they have succeeded so well. Science has become our new priests. They are the new priesthood.

Jackie: I remember once that you had said that their god, these creatures that are in control here, their god is science.

Alan: Science. I mean that was the boast of Lucifer. Lucifer said when they were imprisoned here basically that through his and their, meaning his lesser beings, his followers, through their intellect and ingenuity and their knowledge of the sciences, they would eventually rise higher than all the gods and break out of this prison.

Jackie: Are you saying that Lucifer was an individual?

Alan: It's given as an individual. It's definitely an entity with a whole army basically of similar entities that supposedly were close to the Creator himself but tried to overtake even that, and were cast here during "the fall" as they call it.

Jackie: Maybe the fall was our entering into the physical realm?

Alan: Well that was theirs because they created their own bodies by their pure will, because they still had creative abilities with them when they arrived here. That's what they claim. You'll find that in all the higher theosophy books which are not available to the general public and they go through this whole process where this army arrived here and they could manipulate all matter by pure will power alone. Create their own perfect physical bodies which the spirit could then inhabit and only by interbreeding with the domestic race here at the time they claim they started to lose their powers and hence the need to get back to interbreed with only their own once more. This religion is still here behind all religions. It's the same religion.

Jackie: High freemasonry, Phariseism. Although you said that Phariseism was preceded by this international priesthood religion.

Alan: Yes. There's no doubt that they came out from Babylon, which was the home at that time of the mystery religion, and they came out with the sciences of control and physics with them. They brought it with them and some of the most famous scientists that we are given, like Einstein and so on, studied the Kabbalah. Isaac Newton, even though he was holed up for most of his life in Cambridge University, mainly because he liked young boys, this other great hero, in his own memoirs tells you that most of his time was studying the Kabbalah where he got the sciences from. These books are available in university libraries.

Jackie: I don't want to interrupt your flow of thought but do you have any books that you would recommend for people to get that would want to do their own research?

Alan: Going right back to the whole educational program, we mentioned a few years ago about Lord Bertrand Russell who came out with a few main books followed by all the higher elites around him. One is called "Roads to Freedom" and the other one was called "Education and the Good Life."

Jackie: And Bertrand Russell was a UNESCO advisor?

Alan: He was a UNESCO advisor. He was all for global governments. He was sent to China to initially contact young students, teach at university and start what became of their revolution many years later. These characters are always active all their lives with working for the Great Work.

Jackie: I have a quote here by him. This is Bertrand Russell. It says: "It may be hoped that in time anybody will be able to persuade anybody of anything if he can catch the patient young and is provided by the state by money and equipment. When the technique has been perfected every government that has been in control of education for a generation will be able to control its subject securely without the need of armies or policemen."

Alan: And that was also reiterated by Zbigniew Brzezinski in "The Technetronic Era" where he said that the public have got to the stage now where they have no thoughts of their own. They can only repeat what's been downloaded into their minds by the previous night's news. See they've been at this for a long, long time. Bertrand Russell back in the early 1920s was working fervently for this elite and this is Lord Bertrand Russell. This is one of the aristocracy here. Why is he working towards what seems to be an almost communist goal? It's because communism and capitalism are just the two elements they need for conflict in order to create and speed up their New World Order and they've pretty well arrived. If you go even further back to the writings of Plato and "The Republic" he's talking about a world republic similar to what Franklin talked about, and Jefferson. A united federated world and Plato talked about it 2,500 years ago and he explained the system on which it would be run. Outwardly it would have a democratic form of republicism. Because he said 87 percent of the population are followers and they will come to the opinion that is given to them by their leaders.

Jackie: And that would be religious leaders as well as political, the news, et cetera? Explain that percentage because you did mention that in the conversations earlier and I said well that to me is uplifting. It leaves 13 percent of the people that aren't followers but you expanded on that.

Alan: Three percent comprise the elite managers, the creative managers you might say, not the implementers. Opposed to them are three percent who are awake in any generation and the rest the seven percent or so are simply the bureaucrats, police, army, et cetera who enforce the three percents mandates. So really there are only three percent of the population who actively know the agenda at the top and they are opposed at all times by an awakened three percent. There are many up on the way to that three percent who think they know it but they don't. They're either left or they're right or they're Protestant or Catholic or whatever. You can't get trapped on the way up to the three percent who opposes them. So yes, really it's a matter of three percent against the other three percent with its force, its bureaucracies and its police, et cetera.

Jackie: Well this is so relevant; I remember on one of our broadcasts that we did you had made the statement that those that we think are in control are really not, as they are just the minions and they are being as controlled as we are by them. You said that those are the ones that are the "humanists" so to speak that they believe they are gods et cetera, but that the hierarchy behind them know that there is a Creator and a force and a power within each and everyone of us if we call upon it and that they're scared to death if enough people are going to recognize it.

Alan: Yes. And it's not the Jehovah that's being rammed down everyone's throats for thousands of years. You cannot pray to someone who gives you a hug one minute and then punches you in the head in the other, and that is what Jehovah is. Jehovah is the perfect abusive parent that you would use for mind control purposes on the offspring. The Creator is beyond all of that; and as long as they keep people worshipping the same deity which is abusing them, God's going to kill us all but he loves us. There's a paradox for you. There's an abusive statement from a victim. That makes no sense. That is how mind control works, but the Creator himself is something they don't want you to know about.

Jackie: The true message that Jesus brought that the Kingdom of God is within you and the power even of our spoken word when he said that "by our words we are justified and by our words we are condemned." I see that so many people that believe that what is happening today is the plan of our Creator because they believe that Jehovah is – that they actually pray for it and celebrate its coming because Jesus is coming back and he's going to plant his kingdom there in Jerusalem and rule the world here for a thousand years in peace.

Alan: Yes, and he's going to save little old me.

Jackie: But that whole story, when you take it to its finish that Lucifer will be released again after a thousand years; why?

Alan: Yes, because by Lucifer what they mean again in this term is that they have a thousand years of peace between the ends and the beginnings of the age; and at the end of that thousand years, even amongst the aristocracy, they start to vie once again for ultimate power amongst themselves; and that becomes a fatal trademark of theirs that you will see down through the ages. They'll all work together between the age when they've done their little wars with each and they have the order set as they want it to keep their peace amongst themselves but towards the end of an age they start vying for power again because the goal is to be king of the world. They can all work together towards the Great Work but coming near the end of it they start to – remember power is an incredible drug to these characters and each one wants to be first king of the world. They want to go down in history as the first king of the world and a united world and to them that's a great coup and we see it already with various factions amongst the elite falling out with each other and not being so cohesive as they are. So they do have their Achilles heels.

Jackie: You had quoted about those who are really in control having the fear that enough people will discover -- and the power within us is neutral except it is the way that it is used and if it is used in love and compassion it's powerful, and if it is used the other way like black magic it is destruction.

Caller: It's the evangelical Christian that's been brainwashed by the very people that you're exposing that have given you a distorted picture of Christianity and that they want to bring this all this Armageddon on because they say Jesus is coming. It's a complete distortion of Christianity. I'm not denying the coming of Jesus Christ but in an entirely different frame of reference and I thought I should tell you this.

Alan: Yes. People must remember that messiah and a Christ or Cristos are the same things that are wanted by the elite. It's their own messiah that basically will fool the world once again and even in the movies that they throw in front of our faces like "The Matrix" movie, they get the public to cheer on the main hero Neo. Neo means new. His name is Anderson from the Greek Andra, which means man. He is the new son of man with all these great powers and his people that he's fighting for are from Zion. They are the Zionists.

Jackie: What is Zion, Sion? What is the esoteric?

Alan: On one level Sion in Hebrew meant the sun, the light, Lucifer, the ultimate illumined man. That's basically what the first meaning is.

Jackie: Then that puts the light in a negative perspective. According to the New Testament Jesus is attributed as saying "ye are the light of the world."

Alan: That's right. In fact there are secrets in Masonry which Masons themselves don't understand at the bottom. As Pike said, "they're intentionally mislead" or through their own stupidity they can't understand. The lost word is the Logos, and of course the ship that even Neo in the last Matrix movie is on is called the Logos, and he goes to see the Grand Architect of the Universe. All pure freemasonry. It's Jehovah once again. It's the same character that you must overcome in "2001 Space Odyssey" by Arthur C. Clarke. One of them overcame the son which is Hal and the son was in charge of the natural laws. It's the same story over and over and over again, but in Masonry when they raise a Mason up, they give them the lost word.

Jackie: And the lost word is Logos?

Alan: No. Memre. Memre and that means in Hebrew the lost word. The significance is when you're raised up you are the lost word. To them the soul is only the primitive part that animates all life and of course with them they believe because they have the perfect physical bodies interbred at the top level of aristocracy, then they can reincarnate their own perfect original spirits that were cast down to earth to inhabit these perfect interbred bodies.

Jackie: When you talk about the perfect body, I have a videotape here. It's a black-and-white that was taped in the area where the Jews lived in Germany and a lot of them were just ugly. They had no chins. Do you suppose you could comment on that?

Alan: You should look at the chin lists or microgenia as it's called.

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
August 30, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Our spiritual message this evening is from Ephesians 6 beginning with verse 10.

"Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand."

Alan Watt, thanks again for being with us again tonight.

Alan: Yes, it's a pleasure.

Jackie: What does that passage there say to you, Alan?

Alan: That Ephesians message brings in different hierarchies of powers. One is a sort of spiritual power. The other one is a temporal power, the rulers of the darkness basically. Darkness in that sense always meant in secrecy. That's what it meant, and if you go into the age-old religion that's behind all religions that encompasses the spiritual side of their reincarnation that they believe into the physical body so they become the temporal rulers of the world. As they say, "as above, so below" and in the high meaning of it in Masonry it means bringing in the high spirit of their own ancestors into the perfected physical spirit of their genetic lines. That's what this is about really.

Jackie: Do you think that Paul knew what was happening; he understood what you just said?

Alan: I think he would have to, because he was a Pharisee. He'd been trained in the rabbinical schools and all rabbis know that reincarnation has been the main theme of Judaism from then up until the present day.

Jackie: They don't talk about an afterlife, at least through the lower classes, their lesser brethren, but they don't really have as part of their religion an afterlife.

Alan: The lower orders are allowed basically to believe in whatever they wish to believe in. The higher orders of course have their own separate religion. Albert Pike said every religion has an exoteric and an esoteric group basically and Judaism was no different.

Jackie: For our listeners just in case somebody doesn't differentiate esoteric meaning and inner secret meaning or coded almost I guess isn't it?

Alan: Yes. It's initiated through to higher degrees.

Jackie: And exoteric being the outward ostensible meaning for the profane.

Alan: For the masses. That's why the Catholic mass is for the mass.

Jackie: Is that what that means?

Alan: Yes. Eusebius was one of the popes and he wrote about it. He said when the doors are closed or after the masses have gone, we priests have our own secret religion.

Jackie: There was a pope named Eusebius? There was a historian in Constantine's time named Eusebius, too.

Alan: It was Eusebius then, too. It was written about... Albert Pike once again, mentions him too, so this has been written about and well understood all down through the ages. It's interesting that everyone is basically worshipping what they think is the god that rules the world, but the god that rules the world is supposed to be Lucifer or Satan. Those who follow Satan or Satan's ways become the leaders of the world system and that is the religion behind all of this. The Creator himself even, according to Judaism, created everything and basically sort of left to go somewhere else and they say that in their own writings that no one can understand the mind of the Creator and that ultimately the Creator himself would not return until the Great Work was completed.

Jackie: And they're speaking about Lucifer?

Alan: Who is running this world in the meantime? Who is it that everyone is praying to?

Jackie: When they say the Creator will return when the Great Work is done they're referring to Lucifer?

Alan: They're referring to their own role because some rabbis have published books about the role of Judaism and they tell you in comparative religion studies that Judaism is an active religion working towards an end. When you look at what the end is, they say it's to bring about the international brotherhood of man and when that's completed there will be no more function for Judaism as such. If you ask Masons what their role is as Masons, they tell you it's to bring about the international brotherhood of man. If you ask the Sikhs of India, who are also a masonically created group, what their function is, it's to bring about the international brotherhood of man. There are many groups.

Jackie: That's just one little cozy club, isn't it?

Alan: It certainly is. Communism was the same under the guise of communism. Theosophy is exactly the same, and that book I mentioned to you that you couldn't find it's called "Things to Come". That was published by the Lucius Trust, which used to be the Lucifer Trust, New York, and it was by Foster Bailey in fact and it was 1974 that it was published. It has the whole agenda here including the need to give up private property, which Albert Pike, the Pope of Freemasonry also said, and everyone must be born to fulfill a duty to the world state. It's all in there and the hierarchy which they call the hidden hierarchy started to emerge into public view in about the 1970's. These are the bloodlines who, for the first time, have actually come into politics and yet these are still the lesser of the hierarchy, and towards the time we're living in now, they claim, that the real hierarchy, the top ones will start to emerge for world government. It's all underway.

Jackie: This Foster Bailey, you said that's Alice Bailey's brother?

Alan: I believe it was.

Jackie: Wasn't she quite a bit older?

Alan: You've got to remember this is a big family and they also have connections with British Royalty. The same as Annie Besant. They're all AB's you'll notice. Alice Bailey and again that's part of their coding system.

Jackie: What does AB mean?

Alan: AB is an altered being and Abraham was an altered one, too.

Jackie: What does that mean?

Alan: It means that they're of a bloodline that's has highly selected mates, or had them selected for them, all down through the ages and so they're inbred to an extent, because they do believe in the perfect reincarnation of the perfect spirit "as above" and to the perfectly genetically interbred families "as below" here on earth, and that's what they call the pure Aryan race. What's interesting is this is being pushed big time by the UN. You'll find all the same terminology - the global village - all this kind of thing in that particular book.

Jackie: The Lucius Trust is headquartered in the UN complex.

Alan: Yes, I know it certainly was.

Jackie: UN Plaza or something like that.

Alan: They have a temple inside the UN, a meditation room with a green stone; and interesting enough, David Rockefeller uses a lot of the theosophical terminology in his speeches so I'm sure he's a member.

Jackie: Did you know that an Israeli firm had bought the UN Plaza?

Alan: I didn't hear that one.

Jackie: Yes, they're really getting blatant. There's Paul mentioning that he was a Pharisee and there are indications that he was actually beyond just Pharisee but that he was a member of the Sanhedrin because a listener was reading to me from Jewish information and it said that it was the custom that if somebody was going to stone, a person who initiated the stoning had to throw his cloak at the feet of a member of the Sanhedrin. In the biblical story when they were getting ready to stone Steven the cloak was thrown at Paul's feet and that is indicative that he was very probably a member of the Sanhedrin and the Pharisees - I've got a quote where the Pharisees themselves had stated that if the lower classes, the lesser brethren ever discovered Jehovah was a phantom god that they would lose all of their control and their whole plan would be down the tubes.

Alan: It wouldn't surprise me because it is an active religion working towards a definite agenda, and I think it was Prime Minister Begin that gave a speech on the role of Israel when he said the world court would eventually be moved to Israel and that would be its prime function, to be the court of mankind. Some of them have been pretty honest about what they see as their goal.

Jackie: And probably because they know that very, very few people will pay attention to what they say.

Alan: Yes. People are very odd that way. If they can actually hear something important being said in speeches but dismiss it and think the person has his own opinion type of thing, but when these characters get up and make these speeches this is not their opinion. This is the agenda. It's well documented really in all the different speeches when you go through them and even the first prime minister of Israel gave the same speech that Begin later gave about the world court being moved there. It shouldn't surprise us that they would want that to go there.

Jackie: You know there are so many – in fact it has been said that there are 40 million Judeo-Christians today or fundamentalists. They're calling themselves Christian Zionists, who are totally, absolutely, from their heart, pushing and supporting Israel, no matter what. Israel forever. Israel, we love you and they shout this at their meetings and there's so many more of them than the Jews, and it occurs to me that that collective thought, because the power of the spoken word and the power of our thoughts, when they can get millions of people believing that deeply and that intensely, they're helping bring that into the physical.

Alan: They are. As I say, it's a much older religion than people realize because this was taught to all the Greek aristocracy when they were all sent to study in Egypt, and Pythagoras came back with that philosophy and the goal of the Great Work, and of course he started up with their own little schools and these schools all led the youth to revolution. Therefore, this would be done through revolution down through the ages and it's still going on. What I'm saying is this is a much older religion than what people think. It pre-existed Judaism. It ran through Babylon and Egypt. All the Greek aristocrats and philosophers studied in Egypt and then were sent out after their initiation to start up schools for youth, and each school that they setup became a place of admission, a monastery you might say and what they were taught is how to go out into the world and create revolution. Egypt was teaching revolution to these initiates like Pythagoras, for instance.

Jackie: When you say revolutions are you talking like American Revolution, Russian Revolution, all the revolutions.

Alan: All the revolutions, yes.

Jackie: And of course, the elders of the Jews say we are behind all revolutions.

Alan: Well, maybe they claim that but I think that's a boast.

Jackie: See, it's so confusing - the word Jew - because it makes you wonder; the ones who are referred to as the elders called themselves Jews. Is that to cause confusion and they created this religion called Judaism or Talmudism to combine the people and use them? I mean they admit that it's been the lesser brethren that has been used, along with Christians. Well, all the religions actually. All been created to move this plan forward but would they be of that elite status that you're talking about, and not what we know as Jews today?

Alan: Again, according to theosophy and Albert Pike of the Scottish Rite of Masonry, also called the Rite of Perfection, they both said that they, meaning going back to the days of Pythagoras, had been behind the creation of all major religions and revolutions.

Jackie: It would be that international priesthood you told us about?

Alan: That's right. Adam Weishaupt did not create the Illuminati. He was only one branch in his lifetime, and they got exposed basically. Weishaupt himself said that we must never go into lodges under our real name. Therefore they adopted many different front names for their actual religion. Some of them in Germany were called the Beenan Order (the Order of the Bees). That's why they had the beehive as their symbol and you'll see George Washington – remember 1776 is no coincidence for Weishaupt or Washington, and Washington has the beehive down in the corner of his famous painting. He certainly said that he knew the Illuminati were in America and I'm sure he definitely did know. These guys have been behind all revolutions down through history. Napoleon Bonaparte, again, had a cloak make covered with golden bees that he took from a tomb in Egypt. You have the Mormons, another masonically created group and of course they have on their flag there in Utah, the beehive. The beehive is very important to them and you go all the way back to Plato and he said we shall create major cities, which are artificial creations, to change the world and these cities will be our beehives. This goes on and on down through the ages.

Jackie: That's what a city reminds you of, isn't it?

Alan: It's artificial. You see it's either the natural system that was created here or you have the artificial system. The natural system remains pretty static for thousands or millions of generations. And natural was living with nature as it was given to us. The artificial system is alteration through science for science's sake, stage by stage, to an ultimate goal where everything will be reordered, and in masonry they say their job is to perfect that which was left imperfect, and by that, they mean everything in the world, including basic man himself.

Jackie: That's why they want to do world cleansing, and get the people in the rural areas into their artificial cities?

Alan: Yes, the human habitat areas of the United Nations, that's what they are.

Jackie: So they can control – that was in the Old Testament there in the story of Joseph, after the people had no money because he created a depression and then they sold themselves and their children into slavery for the food that they had grown, and then it said that Joseph gathered up all the people from the country and brought them into the cities. It's right there. I hate to use this word enlightenment; it is a real word, isn't it?

Alan: I was just going to talk about that in fact. In this particular book "Things to Come" by the Theosophy Society it says here on page 27:

"There's an international group of people trained in meditation who meet at the appointed time and place in three centers representing or associated with the three main spiritual focal points in the human family. There are five such points as the esoteric teaching has told us. The three most active now are New York, London and Geneva affecting the American Continent, Britain and the Commonwealth and Europe including Russia. At each of these three centers or triangles these groups meet and follow a meditative ritual on world goodwill."

Now they explain world goodwill is forcing their will onto the public, who then basically copy these ideas that come into their head towards the Divine Plan and become international and so on. It says:

"The purpose is to increase the flow of goodwill; it's called a form."

They talk about creating a form of energy and actually pushing it on or into this triangle of humanity, who then carry out their wishes, and they say that the people who attend the three main triangles are called the hidden hierarchy. Later on in the book on page 31 it said:

"Maintaining an unimpeded relationship with the hierarchy and the Christ (and they have a different definition of the Christ) we consciously extend the alignment and identification outward into humanity to include all points of light..."

Remember George Bush Sr. said, "a thousand points of light?"

"...in the human family where the energy of goodwill is active."

Now these NGO groups that have been created by the big philanthropic organizations like the Rockefeller Foundation, the Ford Foundation, Carnegie and so on sponsor and actually start up NGOs, each working towards complete internationalism with a new way of living for everyone and they are called points of light.

Jackie: A thousand points of light. And when they say the Christ, what do they mean?

Alan: The Christ is to be the ultimate ruler whose word is law – the king of the world, a king of the world who uses logic and science.

Jackie: Okay. So they're not talking on a spiritual nature here?

Alan: They claim their Christ will be their spirit, you might say, but they're not talking about the one that people expect from a Christian point of view.

Jackie: That's why it's also confusing. When they say white we should think black, shouldn't we?

Alan: That's correct.

Jackie: And when they say light we should think darkness because everything they do is an absolute mirror reflection of what is spiritually so, like a negative.

Alan: That's right. They did also publish a book called "The Reappearance of the Christ" and that also goes into their idea of what they mean by a Christ.

Jackie: They are using their creative energy which is subjective, is that it, or objective? It's neutral, in other words.

Alan: It's an active energy.

Jackie: Yes. And it can be used for good and it can be used for evil.

Alan: Again, going all the way back to Plato, who was a member of this mystery religion and who was initiated into the high degrees and three main centers in ancient times 2,500 years ago; he was initiated into the high degrees of a few temples in Egypt and then he went on to India and then he went somewhere else after that, three main centers. He talks about the creation of energy forms and that's the usual term that's used is form, that every thought can create a form and an experienced mind uses certain techniques; they can create a form which will travel to its destination and literally impart its knowledge or its program you might say into a targeted recipient. This is very real stuff to them.

Jackie: On the very opposite side, it's the same thing as if we send a prayer of love or protection to somebody. That thought form goes and actually literally can protect.

Alan: Yes that's right. This has been used for thousands of years and this mystery sect, you might call it, is behind all the different sects have been literally building humanity. That's what Masonry means. Freemasonry is building society stage by stage as you would build a temple, and if you noticed in the old cathedrals in Europe, they would often build a structure near the base of the temple like scaffolding. Once that's completed its job they take that structure away, so once a previous program has completed its function it's then destroyed and they build again on top of the new, and of course in theosophy, which is probably one of the most open fronts of freemasonry; they tell you that their job is to build society towards this tremendous future they have planned for us. All of the higher members you see on TV, the politicians use this particular terminology of theosophy in nearly all of their speeches. Therefore, they are master builders as they claim, but they want a world where science is merged with spirit, as they put it, and eventually they plan to rebuild mankind himself or maybe itself, because I don't think in the future for the masses there will be any male or female, since they'll come out with the hermaphroditic worker to serve the hierarchy. There will be a hierarchy in this so called classless world, strangely enough, and probably the best reward a person in the future will get will be the right to have themselves cloned rather than have offspring. That's what the reward will be for serving the world masters.

Jackie: Lets start from the beginning, creation. They can not create anything. They can only use the stuff of creation.

Alan: Yes, the material present.

Jackie: I have read that every cell has that spark of the creator within it. Like every cell is in a sense a universe of its own and I've wondered if an individual is cloned, does that clone contain that same life energy of creation?

Alan: It would have the same energy but it would not have the same exact personality unless they found a way to implant a soul. They're already working towards the transference of human memory into computers as a part way stage from transferring that memory into a duplicate, a clone. They are working hard on that, and whenever they tell us they're working on something, I've always found that they've done it long ago.

Jackie: False memories. I thought about the movie that Schwarzenegger played in. I think it was called "Total Recall" and it was in a future time and he wanted to go on a vacation so he went to some office some place. Sat in a chair, they put electrodes to his head and he took a trip. Is that what you're talking about?

Alan: That's a way of doing it. However, this religion that's been here forever with the aristocracies inbreeding down through the ages in all countries with their own religion, where they claim that their own predecessors in the family trees can be reincarnated into the same future family trees, if they keep their bloodlines pure. Now when you go back to their origin where they claim that they did not belong to this planet, it actually makes sense. They claim they were cast out of wherever they came from, and imprisoned here basically, but they still retained more powers than the natives on this planet; and through their own will, being pure energy and light, through their own will they literally manipulated matter by their mental powers alone, and created the first perfect human bodies that they could inhabit as perfect spirit. We're talking about what some would say demons, some would say fallen angels, but we're talking about this particular group. Their offspring are still present today, and their own claims, and hence the reason for the secrecy, and hence also the reason for their tremendous inbreeding and genealogical searches before they can get married and so on. They have a saying in masonry: "as above, so below", so what they mean is the perfect spirits can come into the perfect bodies from the same family trees, going all the way back to these first humanoid creations that they created for themselves by their own will power. The difference being that the rest of the people here were native to the planet and are therefore commoners. We breed indiscriminately. Most people don't even know who their great grandfather was, or care, and we breed in common but these characters kept their genealogy lines pure, going all the way back to the end of one of the ages. Supposedly it was the flood. The flood is registered in the same mystery religions in three main places. One was Mt. Parnassus in Greece and the elite of Greece went into the mountain there and supposedly survived the floods. We have Mt. Ararat which is riddled with tunnels and there was another one they think in the Himalayas where the Northern Brahmins claimed they survived the flood as well. They all had one thing in common, and that is again perfect breeding down through their genealogies. The reason Noah was supposedly picked was for one reason alone. Not because he was good or any different from anyone else but because he was perfect in his generation, in his inbreeding. That was the only reason he survived. We're looking at a eugenics program basically, and of course, aristocracy is nothing but a eugenics program. We worship kings and queens today because of their genealogical inbreeding.

Jackie: And those rulers weren't even of the same nationality; Catherine the Great was from Germany but they were all inbred anyway; she wasn't a Russian.

Alan: I mean the present British Royal family have three main houses, all related though. The proper name is Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. Then of course they're related to the old Habsburgs and so on and so on. They're all interrelated and literally...why are they worshipped any differently than anyone else? It's purely because of their bloodlines that they're there and being worshipped. People are actually worshipping a eugenics program when you think about it.

Jackie: They were the "fallen angels" that were cast out, the high spiritual beings and they made with their minds the perfect human body for them to reside in. What about the rest of us?

Alan: The rest of us consists of the original species according to them...they claim again that this creator that created everything and everything on these places, and whom they rebelled against, created mankind or humankind, and they claim of course we had very low intellect and so on. I've noticed that in all Masonic writings and scientific writings in anthropology and anthropological studies and in economic studies, they all complain about "stagnant civilizations" like tribal civilizations: American Indians, the Africans and so on. The people who lived the same way as their ancestors did and seemed to have no drive to go any further, meaning "improvement," and so anything that was natural is anathema and an utter enemy to those who are working towards this great work of scientific recreation.

Jackie: And they slaughter children without blinking an eye. The American Indian or Native Americans whenever they killed an animal for their food, they thanked the soul of that animal for giving them the nourishment. That to me is so much closer to what is real.

Alan: We see again the allegories and the metaphors of Eden, which these characters gave us, by the way, have tremendous truths in them. You can either be in paradise and accept it as it is or, if you leave paradise, you're on a one-way road of alteration to eventually obliteration of all that was.

Jackie: Are you talking about the artificial cities and the artificial everything?

Alan: Yes, and they are altering humankind now. All the sexual liberation and so on were definitely planned and pushed from the top. Nothing ever comes from the grass roots and succeeds. Everything comes from the top down and it changes what we want made, and of course our psyche is being changed all the time until you have gender bending and so on, and we are ready for the first clones or even hermaphroditic creations to be put in front of our faces, and then there will be a whole new bunch of laws to do with that and their rights and so on, and the public are ready now, because they've lost their cultures. They've been de-culturalized.

Jackie: You had mentioned that our cultures have always been given to us, and suddenly it occurred to me because of the 'bios' man in the biosphere they literally claim that every living thing on this planet is equal. In other words, the very lowest one-celled amoeba is equal to human beings.

Alan: Even for that you have to go into the pharaohs of Egypt. Now a pharaoh again was a spiritual incarnation of one of these initial rebels who were put here and he was also the physical descendent of that same lineage that they created. They came into Egypt. In fact they had red and blonde hair, and blue and green eyes and they wore wigs and they found them in the tombs. A pharaoh - and this goes to the Biodiversity treaty - you'll see praises written for the pharaoh by the high priests, and pharaoh ruled everything. He owned and ruled everything that flew above the earth, walked and crawled on the earth and lived underneath the earth, and to the pharaoh everything was his property, right down to the smallest insect.

Jackie: And we are an organism, as it was stated in that book that I got, "Cogs in the Wheel", like in Russia they said in the Soviet Union. People aren't born, organisms are born and we turn them into people; you mentioned that they give us our culture and then you go back to culturing organisms in a Petri dish; this whole planet and all of us here are their huge Petri dish, and they're culturing us!

Alan: Yes. They give us their culture. Again, Plato in "The Republic" talks about that; the public can't remember their original culture and yet they'll fight and die to retain what they think is their own, never knowing that it was actually given to them as an upgrade on the last one, and it will also be destroyed as they demolish the 'old temple' and build the 'new'. That's what they mean by that. It's the old body. It's the old culture. It's the old system and the new temple is the new structure. All of that.

Jackie: And genetically engineering the body through the genetically modified food.

Alan: The food, the inoculations, through releasing bacterium. Nanotechnology. They can create viruses now which can act like little builders inside you body and alter any organ.

Jackie: It's almost like those viruses have a mind of their own – thought processes.

Alan: They're programmed.

Jackie: They have a certain function. Will you come back with us tomorrow night?

Alan: Sure.

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
August 31, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Alan Watt is back again with us tonight. I want to share a very nice thing with you here before we begin. This was emailed to me. I don't know who wrote it. It's called "Perspective."

"One day a father of a very wealthy family took his son on a trip to the country with the firm purpose of showing his son how poor people live. They spent a couple of days and nights on the farm of what would be considered a very poor family. On their return from the trip, the father asked. How was the trip? It was great dad. Did you see how poor people live, the father asked? Oh yes. So tell me, what did you learn from the trip? The son answered I saw that we have one dog and they have four. We have a pool that reaches to the middle of our garden and they have a creek that has no end. We have imported lanterns in our garden and they have the stars at night. Our patio reaches to the front yard and they have the whole horizon. We have a small piece of land to live on and they have fields that go beyond our sight. We have servants who serve us but they serve others. We buy our food but they grow theirs. We have walls around our property to protect us. They have friends to protect them. The boy's father was speechless and then the son added, "Thanks dad for showing me how poor we are." Isn't perspective a wonderful thing? Makes you wonder what would happen if we all gave thanks for everything we have instead of worrying about what we don't have. Appreciate every single thing you have, especially your friends."

Alan, thank you for joining us tonight.

Alan: Yes, it's a pleasure to be on.

Jackie: Our song, "Sweet Liberty" is part of the plan, it's in our hands, or is it a state of mind? What do you think?

Alan: It depends whose plan it is, and back to the perspective where are you looking upon it from.

Jackie: I was thinking is it a state of mind? In this world we have to be some place where it's free.

Alan: Well that's it, yes. That's the last bastion, your mind itself. You have privacy most of the time inside your head – if you use your own head, that is. Most people open up their heads to all the media and the incessant sound that's put out there for us to absorb. Very few people use the private space that they have.

Jackie: Time is precious and if we aren't then it's time we thought about giving time for that, isn't it?

Alan: Oh it is, yes. Unfortunately again, people are trained to get up in the morning and turn the radio on and some people today can't go to sleep without a radio or a TV on, and it's the greatest gift you have, the ability to think, and yet we give it away so easily.

Jackie: And it's in the silence where most of the really fruitful thinking is done.

Alan: Oh yes, absolutely.

Jackie: I wrote here, organism, red hair and I circled it and we were going pick up. Will you refresh what you were talking about?

Alan: We were talking about royal dynasties and aristocracies that rule over peoples. They're viewed from the peoples' standpoint as belonging to them but in reality they're not, because these rulers have never interbred with the people they rule over.

Jackie: Are they the ones you said that had red hair?

Alan: In Egypt they were. They have opened some of the tombs there and actually found the shreds of red hair and the black wigs that they wore on top of it.

Jackie: And blue eyes and green eyes?

Alan: Yes, and you'll see that in many of their statues in fact to the higher pharaohs and the nobility.

Jackie: In Egypt? That doesn't fit – you've already said that the rulers are never the same nationality as those they rule over, but that sounds like the white race.

Alan: It's definitely a white race, and again it goes back into the legends of the super-white race that were almost albino in the beginning and that goes back to the ancient mystery religion of the ones who were cast here to the earth and the first bodies they created for themselves were basically pure albino. You find traces of this same story with the Greeks talking about the troglodytes that lived inside caves and inside mountains with the pinkish eyes and the blonde hair and very white skin. Then, of course, in the Old Testament they use the same term but in a different language for troglodytes. They call them the Horites. The Horites were the people who lived in the mountains and in caves in the north of Israel, and the Tribe of Manasseh was given that area next to them and they interbred with the troglodytes and the Tribe of Manasseh, who's emblem, by the way, is the eagle, who hold arrows in one hand and the olive branch in the other. They came back after interbreeding over a century or so with these people. It's a very fierce war-like people who made war on the rest of Israel at one point and they had red hair and blue or green eyes.

Jackie: It's very confusing to me; in all appearance the white race is being done away with. It's being mingled and mixed and if that was the royalty or the elite, what has happened? How did this all get switched around or what am I missing here?

Alan: I think the different races or creeds you might say were interbred until they obtained those specific races, including what we think of as the white race. Not the actual troglodytes or these albino types or the ones that we see visibly as the elite but the originators of the ones who created their own bodies that were cast to earth. I think they created the different races and the white man was to be the worker bee.

Jackie: If they were white, is that God creating man in his image?

Alan: Oh no. This wasn't God creating man.

Jackie: If they were the gods or so-called gods and they created a white race to be the laborers, that sounds just like that thing in the Bible that says in the beginning let us make man in our image. Does that have anything to do with that?

Alan: Very probably, because I have no doubt that that particular religion was put out there as a control mechanism and over the bulk of the people and for an esoteric religion, for those 'in the know'.

Jackie: How it is the people who claim and believe the white man is the true "chosen"? They've done bloodline studies or they've studied under somebody who gave them bloodline studies, and they have deduced and concluded without a doubt in their own minds that the chosen ones are the real Hebrews, the real Israelites. Where do they come up with the bloodlines that would trace the "white race" back to the people that are allegedly of the Anglo-Saxon Nordic race? Is there evidence of that? Is there evidence that some of those tribes over there at that time were white?

Alan: Judging from today – when you compare present DNA samples with people from the Middle East there's really no connection.

Jackie: There is no connection. Well, they believe that those lost tribes were the real chosen and migrated out of that area and that today that is us.

Alan: Yes, I've heard that same story. In fact they also claimed that on the exodus from Egypt, some of them left much earlier and left by ship and they were also supposedly some of the white ones.

Jackie: Have you read historical information that would confirm that?

Alan: It's so mixed with legend at that stage that it's hard to get any proof. You get many believers because they want to believe it but the actual evidence is very hard to pick up on.

Jackie: You want to get into the 'chosen one'?

Alan: See, all religions are elitist to begin with because it doesn't matter who you're following you believe that you've been chosen to follow it and you're now one of the chosen, whether you're Buddhist even.

Jackie: In the Old Testament Jehovah or Yahweh has said that "when I made a covenant with Abraham and Jacob and Isaac he knew me only as Lord God Almighty, but you know me by the name Jehovah. I'm going to take you to be my people and I will be to you a god".

Alan: Yes, it's a selection process by someone who claims to be a god. As you say, a god, and in the present day mystery religion as in the ancient one. It's the same one those that attain supposedly all of the experiences of the degrees literally call themselves gods, so in a sense something, I'm sure somebody did appear to them and say yes I'm your new god. You have the qualities of the followers I want and I'll let you into the secrets basically. It's never been any different. In present-day Kabbalism, anyone who gets to the top in any profession, even money-lending, if you were the top man you have achieved godhood in the Kabbalah.

Jackie: I'm focusing on the fact that a lot of people who take the Bible or the Old Testament all the way to the back covers, that every word in it is inspired word of God and that our creator, the creator of all that is would choose a particular group of people. That is so insane to me.

Alan: Well, it is insane, because it's nonsense. What you're getting there is the beginning really of a system being born and a mystery religion which would run the system from behind. That's what that was.

Jackie: These chosen people were told that they were going to rule every inch of land that their feet step on and that kings will bow to their feet and strangers will tend their vineyards; and for a "Christian" to even want people bowing to you and carrying you here and there. It also said there that "you will loan to nations and borrow from none" and that just doesn't fit.

Alan: It does if you're into creating a take-over corporation; and that's all it is, a take-over corporation.

Jackie: You mean Jehovah took over from another god?

Alan: Whoever came up with the idea had a good idea of the take-over business.

Jackie: Are you saying that the priesthood battled within themselves within their ranks?

Alan: There's no doubt that the priesthood knew; things did not begin with the Hebrews. The world has been here much, much longer. It's been through many empires lost in time and lost in history and there have been many bids by the evil-doers, you might call them, on the planet to take the whole world into their own control and under their own control for complete and total control, as you see happening today. However, 'something', the real creator, always steps in at the grand finale and seems to lay them low again and hence they go into hiding. They go back into the mystery religions because they are hunted. They have to keep secrecy, and they work steadily and patiently inter-generationally for again many thousands of years to try to take over the whole thing again. This is their history.

Jackie: When you say "the real creator steps in," that's saying that our creator actively gets involved in what's going on. That's beyond my ability to comprehend.

Alan: Long before the so-called mystery religions, it was said that everyone on earth, the natural people who lived here could converse freely on a one-to-one basis with their creator. There was no priesthood, and eventually over a period of time this creator left the world running like a clock basically. Then they claim that there was a war between these other beings and the creator and these beings were cast here and they are the ones who started the whole ball rolling of trying to conquer everything through the use of science basically, leading to a definite end where they would control everything in the world, on the world and ultimately above the world, which is part of their main goal as well. They have tried at least seven times according to the Brahmans to do this, but the secret is that the creator himself puts his fate into the lives of some people during that period. In other words, if there's something worth saving here or changing he will come back and change it. This was written about in religions pre-existing the Hebrews.

Jackie: Wherever this thing originated, because what it's saying then is that the Creator comes and goes, and if that source of all that is is within everything, the creator can't go anywhere. The creator is.

Alan: What they used to say too is the impulses or thought or even your own spirit basically which comes to you if your soul is searching for it, emerges with you into one, body, soul and spirit then you are basically now in tune with the emanations that come from the creator. That's how they used to phrase it.

Jackie: But then if every cell in our body is a part of creation then life would just be. It wouldn't have to be something that we would call down or call in. I mean we can certainly deny it. We can turn our back on it figuratively of course but we cannot be separated from our creator.

Alan: We can actually cut ourselves off from the emanations.

Jackie: In other words, by denying it and cutting ourselves off from it; it isn't that the Creator goes somewhere, it's that we make a choice.

Alan: We do make a choice.

Jackie: We make a choice to not be consciously aware that the creator is within us and there's nothing that's going to change that. Whether we believe it or not it doesn't change it and I do understand that for the individual that doesn't believe that or know it then it would be a separation because the separation is in the mind.

Alan: Yes, it's a choice, as I say.

Jackie: I then can understand we would be humming along at a totally different 'vibratory level' so to speak and so therefore at that level there would probably be no sense, no awareness of the connection. I don't grasp it any other way. That's the only thing that makes any sense. So this is their story then of their history?

Alan: They put a certain spin on things since they write most of the histories. They will also let certain truths out, but with a different spin on it. That's the reasons for the wherefores or whatever to themselves. However, the fact is they are always terrified during the "grand finale" as they call it where they build their Towers of Babel and whether the 'one' which is the tower or the UN, which is the French for the one, it's all the same things. It's a boast of their virility through the generations and by that they also mean the spiritual virility they claim that they have. Through their own will power they have planned the world for thousands of years and are now achieving their goal.

Jackie: And their will power is not stronger than ours?

Alan: It certainly isn't. In fact, for some reason or another, they have much less really real power, you might say.

Jackie: Because they're misusing it, aren't they?

Alan: It's more than just that. You can achieve "spiritual awareness," you might say, by yourself. If your soul is seeking it, you will achieve it; or you can try and take the short-cut of the world, which is to join a freemasonic society in one of its many thousands of names and try and get it by degrees, which is basically taking entities into you with each degree that you take. These entities, since they are the ones who were cast here in the first place, they are imprisoned here, so their prison is the world. Therefore, they have a certain amount of power within the world, not total power but they can't go beyond the world. That's what I would like to say. They are imprisoned. They cannot go beyond the world. That's why their boast is always to conquer space and rise higher than the Creator, because this world and its atmosphere is their prison.

Jackie: You had said one time that the creatures that we see that we believe are in control believe that they are gods and that the ones who actually are in control know of the power that is within each and everyone of us, because they know that there is a higher power way beyond this physical earth and they're scared to death that too many people might wake up to the fact that we don't have to twist ourselves in a pretzel and pray to a saint or pray to Mary to communicate with our Creator, and that it is within us. See that is the message that Jesus was trying to get across.

Alan: He also taught the main way to do it is through basically self-analysis of one's life.

Jackie: Know yourself.

Alan: Yes, and it's an ongoing thing all through your life; and strangely enough, it's when you're looking at yourself that spiritual awareness comes to you, because sincerity is needed for it to occur.

Jackie: We're looking at ourselves because we want to walk in that path that was laid down before us and shown to us. I'm looking at it right now, Psalm 139: "Search me Father. Know my heart. Test me. Know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offense way in me and lead me in the way everlasting." That is my fervent prayer.

Alan: However, sincerity is needed for that to occur. When people join Masonic-type societies and go through formulas and rituals where you sort of earn your degree or your demon as you work your way up there, and you get the fruits of the world through unmerited favor, you get the job, you get the business, you get, et cetera, et cetera. That's for the people who belong to this world. They have chosen that, so any powers they receive through even the demonic influences that are involved in it, don't have the power of the Creator that's within, and is also given to you by the Creator. They don't have that same kind of power.

Jackie: When they talk about the Creator coming back, the high hosts of heaven, spiritual beings that are not incarnated into this physical world, being one with Creator, and maybe being part of a protective shield, that is really in a sense saying the same thing, isn't it?

Alan: It's similar.

Jackie: The Creator coming back, because the Creator can't leave.

Alan: Well, the Creator can be anywhere. This is only one of many existences, really. We're all in Plato's Cave here. You know Plato's Cave, the allegory about being born a cave and it has it's own theories as to what this cave is and it's their whole world and so everything that they learn is related to this cave. Our whole culture, history, religion and so on has been given to us and keeps us in a mind-set where we're so limited to anything beyond it. In fact, if you leave the cave you still try and relate new things that you see and experience back to that cave. That's what you find today people still, as they learn about the myth-makers of organized religion, they still try to find a view of life that still fits somehow with that view of that cave and, because of that, it stops them from really seeing what is really there or the other possibilities that are outside of this. It's like everything you look at today is just composed of vibrations and different frequencies. The lower the frequency the more solid it appears. The higher the frequency the more light and transparent it seems, and time itself is simply matter, which is this cave in motion.

Jackie: In other words, time is now, and that is a concept that I can intellectualize, but I don't experience that.

Alan: Time seems to us to be going in one direction, although we have memory of time past. Because we have fixed laws here does not mean that, outside of this cave, those laws apply. Basically, if you were to go faster than the speed of how matter is traveling through space and what we are used to, where would you end up? Would you still end up in a further part of that same space or would you enter into a new dimension, you see? Really, past and future are simply dimensions. One exists ghostly because it's in the past, and one sometimes bright but still a little dim because it's yet to come.

Jackie: Do you think that the possibility is that what happens in time, right now, on every single dimension, affects every other dimension?

Alan: I'm sure it does.

Jackie: I think it probably does. You know what that calls to us, Alan, that everything we do, right now, means everything. Right now is what matters because it affects everything. It is like we had talked about all of us how we feel separate because we have these separate bodies and yet we are all one and we are all of one mind and you said this one time and I loved it. I could literally see it. A thought that we have or a word that we speak right here because it is in the mind and we are all of one mind. Somebody on the other side of the earth would get that thought.

Alan: Again, the controllers know this themselves, and they practice this. Arnold Toynbee, who was a philosopher and a teacher for Rhodes Scholars and very active in creating global governance, gave a speech in Denmark in 1932 and he said "a thought that originates in someone's mind at the moment, an original thought is instantly broadcast all over the world." He said, people who are naturally (we're all psychic he said) and that's something they try to stop people from thinking about. He said that people all over the world will pick up that thought out of the ether as soon as it's thought instantly and that thought can influence them in their lives from then on, if it's an original creative type of thought. It goes back to what we spoke about earlier, how they've conditioned the public through the trick of the elect, which is electric, to get up in the morning and listen to radio and noise, going to work with that radio on, and watch TV at night and get downloaded with programs, but they don't sit in silence and simply think, and that's intentional. The world we're living in today was planned that way because to totally control the world and everyone in it, you must have a predictable society where everyone is predictable. Each individual is predictable. The enemy of global governance (which is really global slavery), the enemy is individualism. The individual is the enemy and the creative individual is the number one enemy, and it's those who can use their mind and who can go into realms within their mind and broadcast thoughts which are picked up, and you find it out in your own life, because people in your own company will suddenly say what you just thought. That's common the more you get experience within it. Therefore, they're terrified of this happening because they will start losing control.

Jackie: And they do not resonate to the love vibration.

Alan: They do not have any love in them. In fact, they are creatures of instinct. They're parasites too, because they could not exist outside of this system they've created.

Jackie: They exist on the negative emotions vibrations that they create within us and they suck it up. They live on it.

Alan: When you go into history you should ask yourself why hasn't one generation had a full generation from birth to death without war, without a plague coming upon them, a famine being forced generally because of a war, threat of economic collapse, et cetera, et cetera? This is all intentional because to keep power and maintain power you must always create the chaos. Fear and anger are the easiest emotions to create. It's much easier to be angry—hatred – same thing.

Jackie: I was listening to a religious broadcast and some man called into the show and said we have to hate. In other words, we're supposed to hate and maybe hate our enemies or something and this pastor said that we can't have love without having hate – and talk about duplicity, but that's pushing it. I have had people ask me sometimes how can I not hate them. I said I choose not to because I know they want us to hate and they want us to be angry.

Alan: Yes, and it certainly is an emotion which is fed upon. That's why sacrifice was always used so mightily in ancient times. I'm talking about people of course and animals too. They know when they're going to be killed and there's a terror that goes up amongst them, whether it's animal or human, and it's the buildup of the terror prior to the sacrifice that supposedly the deity feeds on. This is still going on today. If you look at the incredible sacrifices to bring global governance that planned World War I, that planned World War II and all the wars since, and the present ongoing ones and the billions of pints of blood that's been spilt for these sacrifices to attain this "oneness" as they call it, it's incredible but it has been done. That's why the United Nations building was built on the largest slaughterhouse in the United States, and that land is all ritually prepared for the UN. So that was no mistake, you know. They need blood and sacrifice, terror and fear before they can build their structure. As I say, we're dealing with this world, with a battle to retain or even find your own individuality rather than conformity – conforming to something that the priests have made for you, which is conformity, and how can people find themselves if they don't even know where to start looking? They go to organized religions hoping to find themselves and they simply become followers of a preset bunch of rules and regulations and dogmas, and they're led right back into the ways of the world and they follow the rules that they're given, which the elite have given them, because all religions are meant to make people obey governments, and it doesn't matter what religion we're talking about here.

Maria: From what I'm understanding is that these secret societies aim to achieving whatever they want to achieve, they need blood sacrifice. And this planet is the planet of duality so if you have a negative you have a positive and I think this choice is individual and your program really makes people aware of the fact that you do choose, even if you say you don't, you just follow whatever road. You do make a choice and people have to understand that.

Alan: If we go into all the Masonic literature, theosophy it's all the same. I mean they're all branches of the same thing. They say there is no such thing ultimately as good or evil, it's simply the way the force or power is applied; and this all comes from the Talmud, initially. The Talmud initially came from Babylon which was the ancient capital of the world, financially and otherwise, and the big question has always been: if that is the case, if it's the same force being applied, can good come out of evil? and this part of the doctrine here that they all believe in. If they plan for instance to have a planned society of the future where everyone will live in habitat areas and conform to this new system that they're bringing in, this new way of living, how do we get the people from where they are now to there? We'll use wars to do it. We could cause famines in rural areas. In other words, they can cause so many negative things which will cause death and harm to countless millions all over the world to achieve their goal, but they will say that out of the evil came good, so the end justified the means. Therefore, in their philosophy there is no such thing as evil, as long as it was planned by them.

Jackie: And their final intent is goodness, no matter how much evil is committed it's because it's for the good. Is that what they say?

Alan: In accordance with their plan, and interestingly enough, there's was a Canadian program on one night and they went into a Hollywood party where Steven Spielberg and a few other producers were partying and they asked three or four of them individually, "do you believe in evil or the devil?" None of them believed in the devil, and Steven Spielberg said it most succinctly. He said "evil is simply a moral judgment on the part of man. It's the same force applied one way or another and that if good can come out of it, then it's only a human judgment to call it evil."

Jackie: Do you know what that reminds me of, and I found it here in the Protocols No. 3, Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion? It's says, "out of the temporary evil we are now compelled to commit, will emerge the good of an unshakeable rule, which will restore the regular course of the machinery of the national life."

Alan: You'll find that particular type of justification all through all Masonic writings, and that's what they mean by the allegories of understanding nature and the seasons that are opposite each other: your summer and your winter, spring and fall. These are opposites so you learn to use the same forces. That's what they mean, the same force applied to a certain point will have disastrous effects on those who it does effect, but out of it will come a next season basically as long as they plan it that way. H.G. Wells, who was a main proponent and a spokesman for the Fabian Society and the British Secret Service and the Masonic groups behind them from Cambridge and Oxford Universities, who supplied him with all the materials for his books, wrote about the first world war before it occurred, and he said it would be with Germany, and he also coined the phrase "the war to end all wars".

Jackie: That means it will be war from then on.

Alan: It would be in their terminology certainly. However, not only did the young men have to go out and fight for this war that was supposed to bring in peace for the world, they had to believe that they were going out to fight this war to bring peace to the world, so they were filled with this slogan wherever they went. Right after World War I, in one of his books he said, "We have formed the League of Nations but we haven't got the world at its knees, so we'll have to have another war." This is what you're dealing with. Again, their end justifies the means. Even Albert Pike -- there's a letter in the British Museum for many years -- many letters in the British Museum went missing when they stored them all during World War II, but it is well documented and photographed that he wrote to Lord Rothschild, and Albert Pike was the Pope of Freemasonry for the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, and he talked about the three world wars in the late 1800's. Two with Germany and the final war would be between Zion and Islam, which is going on right now. We're simply living through a planned future or history, you might say. It's all planned in advance and they go through such rigmarole as we watch it unfold, but the fact is it's all planned that way.

Jackie: These are the same creatures that hid away until the next civilization. They've had a long, long time to plan.

Alan: They have. They claim in their own writings, and in the Talmud it says the same thing, that the great plan was born 4,000 BC. I prefer to say that this part of the plan was probably born and updated in 4,000 BC. That's why every Masonic lodge has two dates. The one we're used to, plus another one with 4,000 years tacked on to it.

Jackie: Oh yes. Because during the APAC American Israel Public Affairs Committee did the welcoming at the Republican National Convention and they got Mayor Bloomberg from New York up there, and he was literally giving the date as 57 something or 50 something.

Alan: That Rabbi [Stevack] who's on one of the other stations also confirmed that 4,000 BC is what they're told, and after that date in all these Masonic lodges they have the letters A.L., and A.L. stands for Anno Lucifer. It's after the fall of Lucifer and so Lucifer, as Albert Pike said is their god, and Blavatsky from theosophy said the same thing.

Jackie: You said that the god of the Old Testament Jehovah, Yahweh was representative of Lucifer.

Alan: He's the god of the world, and those who follow him benefit from the things of the world.

Jackie: I've pointed out before that everything that they are promised by this god is all of the world, all the riches and the servants, but there is nothing said about the soul, the spirit.

Alan: No. It's all the things of the world and Jehovah certainly blessed, in the Old Testament, everyone regardless of what they did. I mean Jacob even lied to his father and dressed like his brother to get the blessings, so he showed his cunning, an accused liar, and so he was blessed for it, and so that's just like a mafia system. As long as it's done with cunningness, in masonry.

Jackie: God blessed him for cheating his brother out of his inheritance.

Alan: That's right, and lying to his father.

Jackie: Yes, exactly. Deceiving his father and he was blessed by Jehovah-Yahweh.

Alan: What they're showing you is this system and how to manipulate the system for your own benefit.

Jackie: That's why people take such liberties and justify it, as slavery has already been justified, because in the Old Testament slavery was accepted.

Alan: Oh sure. The word money comes from MON, which is Aramaic for man. You counted your 'MONey' by the heads that you owned. The way of the world is in the Old Testament, and you certainly gained the things of the world if you followed this lord of the world. Another thing people seem to miss is Jesus, whom they claim to follow, exposed the deception of the secret gods when he said to the rabbis "you are of your father, the devil," and that's another word for Satan, for Lucifer.

Jackie: And their father of course was god Jehovah, their god, their creator, and it just doesn't somehow seem to register with some people. We're out of time again; we're now at the hour. "Out of time," that's a silly saying, isn't it?

Alan: The 60 minutes came from Babylon.

n spirit basically which comes to you if your soul is searching for it, emerges with you into one, body, soul and spirit then you are basically now in tune with the emanations that come from the creator. That's how they used to phrase it.

Jackie: But then if every cell in our body is a part of creation then life would just be. It wouldn't have to be something that we would call down or call in. I mean we can certainly deny it. We can turn our back on it figuratively of course but we cannot be separated from our creator.

Alan: We can actually cut ourselves off from the emanations.

Jackie: In other words, by denying it and cutting ourselves off from it; it isn't that the Creator goes somewhere, it's that we make a choice.

Alan: We do make a choice.

Jackie: We make a choice to not be consciously aware that the creator is within us and there's nothing that's going to change that. Whether we believe it or not it doesn't change it and I do understand that for the individual that doesn't believe that or know it then it would be a separation because the separation is in the mind.

Alan: Yes, it's a choice, as I say.

Jackie: I then can understand we would be humming along at a totally different 'vibratory level' so to speak and so therefore at that level there would probably be no sense, no awareness of the connection. I don't grasp it any other way. That's the only thing that makes any sense. So this is their story then of their history?

Alan: They put a certain spin on things since they write most of the histories. They will also let certain truths out, but with a different spin on it. That's the reasons for the wherefores or whatever to themselves. However, the fact is they are always terrified during the "grand finale" as they call it where they build their Towers of Babel and whether the 'one' which is the tower or the UN, which is the French for the one, it's all the same things. It's a boast of their virility through the generations and by that they also mean the spiritual virility they claim that they have. Through their own will power they have planned the world for thousands of years and are now achieving their goal.

Jackie: And their will power is not stronger than ours?

Alan: It certainly isn't. In fact, for some reason or another, they have much less really real power, you might say.

Jackie: Because they're misusing it, aren't they?

Alan: It's more than just that. You can achieve "spiritual awareness," you might say, by yourself. If your soul is seeking it, you will achieve it; or you can try and take the short-cut of the world, which is to join a freemasonic society in one of its many thousands of names and try and get it by degrees, which is basically taking entities into you with each degree that you take. These entities, since they are the ones who were cast here in the first place, they are imprisoned here, so their prison is the world. Therefore, they have a certain amount of power within the world, not total power but they can't go beyond the world. That's what I would like to say. They are imprisoned. They cannot go beyond the world. That's why their boast is always to conquer space and rise higher than the Creator, because this world and its atmosphere is their prison.

Jackie: You had said one time that the creatures that we see that we believe are in control believe that they are gods and that the ones who actually are in control know of the power that is within each and everyone of us, because they know that there is a higher power way beyond this physical earth and they're scared to death that too many people might wake up to the fact that we don't have to twist ourselves in a pretzel and pray to a saint or pray to Mary to communicate with our Creator, and that it is within us. See that is the message that Jesus was trying to get across.

Alan: He also taught the main way to do it is through basically self-analysis of one's life.

Jackie: Know yourself.

Alan: Yes, and it's an ongoing thing all through your life; and strangely enough, it's when you're looking at yourself that spiritual awareness comes to you, because sincerity is needed for it to occur.

Jackie: We're looking at ourselves because we want to walk in that path that was laid down before us and shown to us. I'm looking at it right now, Psalm 139: "Search me Father. Know my heart. Test me. Know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offense way in me and lead me in the way everlasting." That is my fervent prayer.

Alan: However, sincerity is needed for that to occur. When people join Masonic-type societies and go through formulas and rituals where you sort of earn your degree or your demon as you work your way up there, and you get the fruits of the world through unmerited favor, you get the job, you get the business, you get, et cetera, et cetera. That's for the people who belong to this world. They have chosen that, so any powers they receive through even the demonic influences that are involved in it, don't have the power of the Creator that's within, and is also given to you by the Creator. They don't have that same kind of power.

Jackie: When they talk about the Creator coming back, the high hosts of heaven, spiritual beings that are not incarnated into this physical world, being one with Creator, and maybe being part of a protective shield, that is really in a sense saying the same thing, isn't it?

Alan: It's similar.

Jackie: The Creator coming back, because the Creator can't leave.

Alan: Well, the Creator can be anywhere. This is only one of many existences, really. We're all in Plato's Cave here. You know Plato's Cave, the allegory about being born a cave and it has its own theories as to what this cave is and it's their whole world and so everything that they learn is related to this cave. Our whole culture, history, religion and so on has been given to us and keeps us in a mind-set where we're so limited to anything beyond it. In fact, if you leave the cave you still try and relate new things that you see and experience back to that cave. That's what you find today people still, as they learn about the myth-makers of organized religion, they still try to find a view of life that still fits somehow with that view of that cave and, because of that, it stops them from really seeing what is really there or the other possibilities that are outside of this. It's like everything you look at today is just composed of vibrations and different frequencies. The lower the frequency the more solid it appears. The higher the frequency the more light and transparent it seems, and time itself is simply matter, which is this cave in motion.

Jackie: In other words, time is now, and that is a concept that I can intellectualize, but I don't experience that.

Alan: Time seems to us to be going in one direction, although we have memory of time past. Because we have fixed laws here does not mean that, outside of this cave, those laws apply. Basically, if you were to go faster than the speed of how matter is traveling through space and what we are used to, where would you end up? Would you still end up in a further part of that same space or would you enter into a new dimension, you see? Really, past and future are simply dimensions. One exists ghostly because it's in the past, and one sometimes bright but still a little dim because it's yet to come.

Jackie: Do you think that the possibility is that what happens in time, right now, on every single dimension, affects every other dimension?

Alan: I'm sure it does.

Jackie: I think it probably does. You know what that calls to us, Alan, that everything we do, right now, means everything. Right now is what matters because it affects everything. It is like we had talked about all of us how we feel separate because we have these separate bodies and yet we are all one and we are all of one mind and you said this one time and I loved it. I could literally see it. A thought that we have or a word that we speak right here because it is in the mind and we are all of one mind. Somebody on the other side of the earth would get that thought.

Alan: Again, the controllers know this themselves, and they practice this. Arnold Toynbee, who was a philosopher and a teacher for Rhodes Scholars and very active in creating global governance, gave a speech in Denmark in 1932 and he said "a thought that originates in someone's mind at the moment, an original thought is instantly broadcast all over the world." He said, people who are naturally (we're all psychic he said) and that's something they try to stop people from thinking about. He said that people all over the world will pick up that thought out of the ether as soon as it's thought instantly and that thought can influence them in their lives from then on, if it's an original creative type of thought. It goes back to what we spoke about earlier, how they've conditioned the public through the trick of the elect, which is electric, to get up in the morning and listen to radio and noise, going to work with that radio on, and watch TV at night and get downloaded with programs, but they don't sit in silence and simply think, and that's intentional. The world we're living in today was planned that way because to totally control the world and everyone in it, you must have a predictable society where everyone is predictable. Each individual is predictable. The enemy of global governance (which is really global slavery), the enemy is individualism. The individual is the enemy and the creative individual is the number one enemy, and it's those who can use their mind and who can go into realms within their mind and broadcast thoughts which are picked up, and you find it out in your own life, because people in your own company will suddenly say what you just thought. That's common the more you get experience within it. Therefore, they're terrified of this happening because they will start losing control.

Jackie: And they do not resonate to the love vibration.

Alan: They do not have any love in them. In fact, they are creatures of instinct. They're parasites too, because they could not exist outside of this system they've created.

Jackie: They exist on the negative emotions vibrations that they create within us and they suck it up. They live on it.

Alan: When you go into history you should ask yourself why hasn't one generation had a full generation from birth to death without war, without a plague coming upon them, a famine being forced generally because of a war, threat of economic collapse, et cetera, et cetera? This is all intentional because to keep power and maintain power you must always create the chaos. Fear and anger are the easiest emotions to create. It's much easier to be angry—hatred – same thing.

Jackie: I was listening to a religious broadcast and some man called into the show and said we have to hate. In other words, we're supposed to hate and maybe hate our enemies or something and this pastor said that we can't have love without having hate – and talk about duplicity, but that's pushing it. I have had people ask me sometimes how can I not hate them. I said I choose not to because I know they want us to hate and they want us to be angry.

Alan: Yes, and it certainly is an emotion which is fed upon. That's why sacrifice was always used so mightily in ancient times. I'm talking about people of course and animals too. They know when they're going to be killed and there's a terror that goes up amongst them, whether it's animal or human, and it's the buildup of the terror prior to the sacrifice that supposedly the deity feeds on. This is still going on today. If you look at the incredible sacrifices to bring global governance that planned World War I, that planned World War II and all the wars since, and the present ongoing ones and the billions of pints of blood that's been spilt for these sacrifices to attain this "oneness" as they call it, it's incredible but it has been done. That's why the United Nations building was built on the largest slaughterhouse in the United States, and that land is all ritually prepared for the UN. So that was no mistake, you know. They need blood and sacrifice, terror and fear before they can build their structure. As I say, we're dealing with this world, with a battle to retain or even find your own individuality rather than conformity – conforming to something that the priests have made for you, which is conformity, and how can people find themselves if they don't even know where to start looking? They go to organized religions hoping to find themselves and they simply become followers of a preset bunch of rules and regulations and dogmas, and they're led right back into the ways of the world and they follow the rules that they're given, which the elite have given them, because all religions are meant to make people obey governments, and it doesn't matter what religion we're talking about here.

Maria: From what I'm understanding is that these secret societies aim to achieving whatever they want to achieve, they need blood sacrifice. And this planet is the planet of duality so if you have a negative you have a positive and I think this choice is individual and your program really makes people aware of the fact that you do choose, even if you say you don't, you just follow whatever road. You do make a choice and people have to understand that.

Alan: If we go into all the Masonic literature, theosophy it's all the same. I mean they're all branches of the same thing. They say there is no such thing ultimately as good or evil, it's simply the way the force or power is applied; and this all comes from the Talmud, initially. The Talmud initially came from Babylon which was the ancient capital of the world, financially and otherwise, and the big question has always been: if that is the case, if it's the same force being applied, can good come out of evil? and this part of the doctrine here that they all believe in. If they plan for instance to have a planned society of the future where everyone will live in habitat areas and conform to this new system that they're bringing in, this new way of living, how do we get the people from where they are now to there? We'll use wars to do it. We could cause famines in rural areas. In other words, they can cause so many negative things which will cause death and harm to countless millions all over the world to achieve their goal, but they will say that out of the evil came good, so the end justified the means. Therefore, in their philosophy there is no such thing as evil, as long as it was planned by them.

Jackie: And their final intent is goodness, no matter how much evil is committed it's because it's for the good. Is that what they say?

Alan: In accordance with their plan, and interestingly enough, there's was a Canadian program on one night and they went into a Hollywood party where Steven Spielberg and a few other producers were partying and they asked three or four of them individually, "do you believe in evil or the devil?" None of them believed in the devil, and Steven Spielberg said it most succinctly. He said "evil is simply a moral judgment on the part of man. It's the same force applied one way or another and that if good can come out of it, then it's only a human judgment to call it evil."

Jackie: Do you know what that reminds me of, and I found it here in the Protocols No. 3, Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion? It says, "out of the temporary evil we are now compelled to commit, will emerge the good of an unshakeable rule, which will restore the regular course of the machinery of the national life."

Alan: You'll find that particular type of justification all through all Masonic writings, and that's what they mean by the allegories of understanding nature and the seasons that are opposite each other: your summer and your winter, spring and fall. These are opposites so you learn to use the same forces. That's what they mean, the same force applied to a certain point will have disastrous effects on those who it does effect, but out of it will come a next season basically as long as they plan it that way. H.G. Wells, who was a main proponent and a spokesman for the Fabian Society and the British Secret Service and the Masonic groups behind them from Cambridge and Oxford Universities, who supplied him with all the materials for his books, wrote about the first world war before it occurred, and he said it would be with Germany, and he also coined the phrase "the war to end all wars".

Jackie: That means it will be war from then on.

Alan: It would be in their terminology certainly. However, not only did the young men have to go out and fight for this war that was supposed to bring in peace for the world, they had to believe that they were going out to fight this war to bring peace to the world, so they were filled with this slogan wherever they went. Right after World War I, in one of his books he said, "We have formed the League of Nations but we haven't got the world at its knees, so we'll have to have another war." This is what you're dealing with. Again, their end justifies the means. Even Albert Pike -- there's a letter in the British Museum for many years -- many letters in the British Museum went missing when they stored them all during World War II, but it is well documented and photographed that he wrote to Lord Rothschild, and Albert Pike was the Pope of Freemasonry for the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, and he talked about the three world wars in the late 1800's. Two with Germany and the final war would be between Zion and Islam, which is going on right now. We're simply living through a planned future or history, you might say. It's all planned in advance and they go through such rigmarole as we watch it unfold, but the fact is it's all planned that way.

Jackie: These are the same creatures that hid away until the next civilization. They've had a long, long time to plan.

Alan: They have. They claim in their own writings, and in the Talmud it says the same thing, that the great plan was born 4,000 BC. I prefer to say that this part of the plan was probably born and updated in 4,000 BC. That's why every Masonic lodge has two dates. The one we're used to, plus another one with 4,000 years tacked on to it.

Jackie: Oh yes. Because during the APAC American Israel Public Affairs Committee did the welcoming at the Republican National Convention and they got Mayor Bloomberg from New York up there, and he was literally giving the date as 57 something or 50 something.

Alan: That Rabbi [Stevack] who's on one of the other stations also confirmed that 4,000 BC is what they're told, and after that date in all these Masonic lodges they have the letters A.L., and A.L. stands for Anno Lucifer. It's after the fall of Lucifer and so Lucifer, as Albert Pike said is their god, and Blavatsky from theosophy said the same thing.

Jackie: You said that the god of the Old Testament Jehovah, Yahweh was representative of Lucifer.

Alan: He's the god of the world, and those who follow him benefit from the things of the world.

Jackie: I've pointed out before that everything that they are promised by this god is all of the world, all the riches and the servants, but there is nothing said about the soul, the spirit.

Alan: No. It's all the things of the world and Jehovah certainly blessed, in the Old Testament, everyone regardless of what they did. I mean Jacob even lied to his father and dressed like his brother to get the blessings, so he showed his cunning, an accused liar, and so he was blessed for it, and so that's just like a mafia system. As long as it's done with cunningness, in masonry.

Jackie: God blessed him for cheating his brother out of his inheritance.

Alan: That's right, and lying to his father.

Jackie: Yes, exactly. Deceiving his father and he was blessed by Jehovah-Yahweh.

Alan: What they're showing you is this system and how to manipulate the system for your own benefit.

Jackie: That's why people take such liberties and justify it, as slavery has already been justified, because in the Old Testament slavery was accepted.

Alan: Oh sure. The word money comes from MON, which is Aramaic for man. You counted your 'MONEy' by the heads that you owned. The way of the world is in the Old Testament, and you certainly gained the things of the world if you followed this lord of the world. Another thing people seem to miss is Jesus, whom they claim to follow, exposed the deception of the secret gods when he said to the rabbis "you are of your father, the devil," and that's another word for Satan, for Lucifer.

Jackie: And their father of course was god Jehovah, their god, their creator, and it just doesn't somehow seem to register with some people. We're out of time again; we're now at the hour. "Out of time," that's a silly saying, isn't it?

Alan: The 60 minutes came from Babylon.

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
December 6, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. This is the 6th of December in the year 2004. This is my brother's birthday who's passed over and this is the day before Pearl Harbor, isn't it folks? It just occurred to me as I was giving that date. We have a wonderful guest with us tonight. However, I want to share a spiritual message before we get started here. I got this as an email folks and it was so beautiful and so touching I wanted to share it with you tonight. It's titled "Now That's God."

"It was one of the hottest days of the dry season. We had not seen rain in almost a month. The crops were dying. Cows had stopped giving milk. The creeks and streams were long gone back into the earth. It was a dry season that would bankrupt several farmers before it was through. Every day, my husband and his brothers would go about the arduous process of trying to get water to the fields. Lately this process had involved taking a truck to the local water rendering plant and filling it up with water. But severe rationing had cut everyone off. If we didn't see some rain soon...we would lose everything. It was on this day that I learned the true lesson of sharing and witnessed the only miracle I have ever seen with my own eyes. I was in the kitchen making lunch for my husband and his brothers when I saw my six-year-old son, Billy, walking toward the woods. He wasn't walking with the usual carefree abandon of a youth but with a serious purpose. I could only see his back. He was obviously walking with a great effort trying to be as still as possible. Minutes after he disappeared into the woods, he came running out again, toward the house. I went back to making sandwiches; thinking that whatever task he had been doing was completed. However, moments later, he was once again walking in that slow purposeful stride toward the woods. This activity went on for an hour: walking carefully to the woods, running back to the house.

Finally I couldn't take it any longer and I crept out of the house and followed him on his journey (being very careful not to be seen as he was obviously doing important work and didn't need his Mommy checking up on him). He was cupping both hands in front of him as he walked, being very careful not to spill the water he held in them ... maybe two or three tablespoons were held in his tiny hands. I sneaked close as he went into the woods. Branches and thorns slapped his little face, but he did not try to avoid them. He had a much higher purpose. As I leaned in to spy on him, I saw the most amazing sight. Several large deer loomed in front of him. Billy walked right up to them. I almost screamed for him to get away. A huge buck with elaborate antlers was dangerously close. But the buck did not threaten him...he didn't even move as Billy knelt down. And I saw a tiny fawn lying on the ground; obviously suffering from dehydration and heat exhaustion, lift its head with great effort to lap up the water cupped in my beautiful boy's hand.

When the water was gone, Billy jumped up to run back to the house and I hid behind a tree. I followed him back to the house to a spigot to which we had shut off the water. Billy opened it all the way up and a small trickle began to creep out. He knelt there, letting the drip, drip slowly fill up his makeshift "cup," as the sun beat down on his little back. And it came clear to me: The trouble he had gotten into for playing with the hose the week before. The lecture he had received about the importance of not wasting water. That was the reason he didn't ask me to help him. It took almost twenty minutes for the drops to fill his hands. When he stood up and began the trek back, I was there in front of him.

His little eyes just filled with tears. "I'm not wasting," was all he said. As he began his walk, I joined him...with a small pot of water from the kitchen. I let him tend to the fawn. I stayed away. It was his job. I stood on the edge of the woods watching the most beautiful heart I have ever known working so hard to save another life. As the tears that rolled down my face began to hit the ground, other drops...and more drops...and more suddenly joined them. I looked up at the sky. It was as if God, himself, was weeping with pride.

Some will probably say that this was all just a huge coincidence. Those miracles don't really exist. That it was bound to rain sometime. And I can't argue with that... I'm not going to try. All I can say is that the rain that came that day saved our farm...just like the actions of one little boy saved another.

And whoever wrote this, there's no author, folks. It says "I don't know if anyone will read this but I have to send it out to honor the memory of my beautiful Billy, who was taken from me much too soon... But not before showing me the true face of God, in a little, sun burned body."

Isn't that beautiful and I hope that you appreciated that and felt it folks as much as I did and our guest this evening, Alan, thank you for your patience here tonight dear. Hello. I've lost our guest folks and you know what I'm going to have to do? I tell you what happened. I think when I called in we were late calling in and I think that I didn't click Alan in on with us. So what I'm going to do is play music for you here. Oh, I can't. I'm going to have to click offline folks to get Alan back so maybe if Nicholas or somebody at WFAR is listening. I'll be right back, folks. And this is wonderful but we are on the air. Okay?

Alan: I really don't think we were on the air before. There was music playing on that station.

Jackie: All right. Well we're going to find out, aren't we?

Alan: Well, this is what Eleanor was talking about with her jinxes.

Jackie: The jinxes. This has been quite an evening, hasn't it, Alan?

Alan: It has.

Jackie: And you know I have told a few people that you were going to be on with us tonight and my goodness I wonder – if we weren't on shortwave, Alan, I can't believe I wouldn't have been getting calls. What I'm going to do right now folks, if you're listening on shortwave and we only need one call, but we need somebody to call. Let us know if we've been on shortwave for the past half hour, because, according to Alan, he said that there's only music that has been playing on the shortwave. We've got about a minute and a half delay from WFAR to the shortwave so we should be getting a call. I'd like to know if we have been on the air because we've covered some really important topics.

Alan, is it possible for you and I to begin a conversation that we started at the top of this hour? Now we have no static and then we could continue it tomorrow night.

Alan: I'll try and reiterate how the conversation tonight began and basically I was talking about how shortwave was set-up in the United States and I think in the Toronto Star about a year ago there was a little bit of history of how the public shortwave was set-up. It was basically set-up by the CIA who setup Christian front groups at the time to combat communism and communist broadcasts from the Soviet Union. I've always suspected that the CIA hadn't quite let it all go and I'm more convinced of that today because over the last four years or so in shortwave we have had a creation of "superstars," you might say, professional speakers who have come in and taken over the airwaves and have become the sole dispensers to most people. These people come out of nowhere basically. They definitely shot to the top, tremendous backing. They knew how to speak on radio. There was no dead airtime and they became the sole dispensers of information to the public. If you look at the way their operations work, they have three minutes of talk and then three or four minutes of commercials, so it's a tremendous business at the same time, but the main problem is these people have become superstars in the minds of the followers, you might say, and they are shaping the minds of all those out there. It puts me in mind of Albert Pike of the freemasons who said that whenever the people need a leader we shall supply them; and I think that's being done and they've supplanted all of the people who did real hard work and investigations over the many years and reduced themselves to poverty in the process. Now these superstars come in and begin to use the same information and then start bending it off in a different direction, and that's been the ancient technique of the elite to subvert truth.

Jackie: In other words, they tell the truth but it's truth that it's okay for them to tell?

Alan: Oh, absolutely. A superstar must always have a little bit more than the general public can get their hands on and that elevates them above all the rest of the truth seekers, you see, and the listeners don't know. They don't think about it. They just say my God this person is far brighter than the rest; and before they know it, they've given our allegiance to this person – and when you give allegiance to a person, you've just given away your own powers of reason and discrimination.

Jackie: Well, as we've already discussed, I don't know what happened tonight. I apologize that you've missed the first 30 minutes of this broadcast because there is no recording of it. Not at WFAR. Not on my tape machine and no place, so it's very difficult to try to recreate a conversation, but what we were talking about when you mentioned this, Alan, I was thinking of a specific talk show team and what I'm saying is public information because it came right off of public document on the internet. This talk show team had in their sales tax report reported their income between 1 to $2.5 million. That's a lot of money.

Alan: It certainly is for these hardworking patriots there.

Jackie: Yes it is and then of course I probably sound like all the rest when I say Sweet Liberty is brought to you by you. It's listener sponsored and I could not afford to have this broadcast four nights a week. In fact that's why we're down to three nights a week but it has been our listeners for 6-1/2 years and without our listeners this broadcast wouldn't be on so there's no backing here and I don't make money from the broadcast. In fact, there have been lots of people who have said well why don't you sell things? I said that's not why I'm doing radio. It has nothing to do with that.

Alan: It's not a business as far as you're concerned.

Jackie: And our website we get about 300,000 hits a month and I've had people who wanted to advertise on our website and Alan, I don't know. It just seems like and those are the ones I probably would have felt okay advertising for, but I thought when you turn this into a commercial thing it loses its purpose.

Alan: It has to. It's inevitable.

Jackie: It's whole purpose, it loses it.

Alan: Then you have a lot of legalisms creep in there because there's a lot of things you can't say, it may offend, and that's part of it too. That's how the newspapers, initially, long, long ago, were taken over by being told not to print certain things. Corporations would simply say they didn't like what you wrote about whatever, and that's how you tame a person.

Jackie: There's a free newspaper – not a free newspaper, he takes subscriptions here in a county down near Philly and I knew him and I knew the sincerity of his desire to put out truth, but there were things he would put in that newspaper and I would say why did you do that? Well I can't do this because I'll lose all my advertising. So this wonderful newspaper which purpose was originally to print truth, get the truth out to people, he had to stop. There was the guidelines. You've got your boundaries and there are just certain things you better not mention or your going to lose your backing.

Alan: Absolutely. It's very simple to do and you get muzzled and before you know it, you're sort of a Jack and Jill program like the one that's on right now in fact.

Jackie: Jack and Jill?

Alan: Yes, it's highly commercialized.

Jackie: Oh, I thought you were talking about you and me.

Alan: No. There's one program that's on there that they tell you, back in three minutes, back in four minutes and so they have three minutes to talk. They have some guests on as the bait, basically, who will give out some truth but the rest of the time is selling the latest cure-all and they go through one cure-all after another. I guess they get cuts of every sale, but they've been raised again to the superstar status and I'm sure they've swayed a lot of people's minds. They're highly commercialized, too commercialized actually. I think they're probably handled with their handlers.

Jackie: This is one thing that I have talked to. I don't know if I've said it on the air. I think I have, but I know two listeners who've called me personally and they'll say what about this person and I just tell them you have to use your logic and you have to use your reasoning. Who controls the media? When you're syndicated on AM and FM broadcasts you are not going to tell the truth. You wouldn't be allowed to; and shortwave. This broadcast for shortwave alone is $140 per hour and that doesn't include the $25 for WFAR, so we're talking $165 an hour, Alan, and we couldn't handle four days a week because of lack of enough. It wasn't because of lack of support because we certainly have had that for 6-1/2 years, but enough support to keep it going for four nights a week and this is what I have said to these people who ask me. When somebody is broadcasting three to six hours a day, look at the cost. You've got to have big bucks to do that.

Alan: They're on satellite and they're on the website.

Jackie: They're on internet. They're on satellite. They're on one or two or three shortwave stations. They're on AM stations.

Alan: They all pass each other around as guests on other peoples' programs, so it's a clique.

Jackie: It is a clique and you know what? There was a while there. This was several years back. I wondered how come I never got invited to any of their what they call expos. I really did because I still was somewhat naïve but I knew that I had a message that was important enough that it would be appropriate to invite me. Never once, Alan, did I ever get invited and then when I began to understand a little bit more I thought well okay. They know I'm not compromiseable. I'm not going to compromise and that's just the way it was, so I'm the outsider in a sense.

Alan: If you were not the outsider you'd be one of them and the money would be coming in you see.

Jackie: Yes that's true.

Alan: You'd have no problem and you'd be passed around all their shows.

Jackie: Yes, I would actually get invited as a guest, wouldn't I?

Alan: Yes you would. That's what they've done. They've taken over and squeezed everyone else out. That's an old technique the elite have always used to maintain control and to stop "subversion," as they call it, of any opinions outside their plans.

Jackie: Or maybe facts?

Alan: Well, yes, sure.

Jackie: Not just opinions because everybody has them, but facts, Alan.

Alan: Sure and that's what they've done. It's been done very cleverly, well-financed, well-thought out and the right people have been trained and like Albert Pike said, we supply the leaders. They come in with information that's grabbing, it grabs you, and they have information that no one else can get their hands on initially and they become superstars. All culture is created by training superstars and presenting them to the public.

Jackie: One of the things that I want to say this for our listeners and just occurred to me. It isn't just that the host of a show itself but the guests that they have on sometimes, and not all of them, but when they say that they're an ex-CIA or ex-FBI or ex-Illuminati and they have all kinds of information they're giving you, you have to know they're only giving you what they're allowed to give you because there's not such a thing I don't think as an ex-CIA or maybe FBI. I don't know, but, Alan, these people aren't not going to come out and tell the truth.

Alan: No, they won't.

Jackie: They'll get killed, for God's sake.

Alan: They're under the Official Secrets Act so they mustn't speak about their work for 35 years.

Jackie: And don't you think they haven't been threatened?

Alan: Oh yes. I mean it's ludicrous.

Jackie: But when you have these people come out that oh I was ex-FBI officer and so on. People believe what they're saying.

Alan: It's sad they fall so easily for it, but again, the same guy that said we'd give them their leaders, Albert Pike, said "those that will not use their own powers of reason are meat on the table and beasts of burden."

Jackie: Those who won't use their own power of reason and it is within each and everyone one of us, Alan, that ability to reason, to logic. The intuition when something says there's something wrong with this, you may not know what it is, but if that comes up strongly, you better listen to it. That actually has become the only way I know how to "operate," if you would, is there are times when that intuition hits and I don't know what's wrong, but because it's there I leave it alone. I stick it up on my top left shelf in my mind, "memory banks," if you would, and it has never ever been wrong ever and it always proves itself out and if we could say names but we aren't allowed to.

Alan: It's like the professional DJs, they all sound the same. They have the same fast chatter and all the bells and whistles and chatter, electronic stuff, or songs or something; it's professionally produced. This takes a lot of money, a lot of training and a lot of backup people to put forth. Little Joe on his own cannot do that.

Jackie: We were talking about David Icke, the half hour that our shortwave listeners couldn't hear, and I thought about that again as you said that. In the first place, the name is spelled ICKE, but if you take the E and put it on the front, you've got a good Irish name there, EICK. We talked about I got a postcard from a listener who said that he had asked you questions and he was asking me the same question and he said if his message is true, so what.

Alan: That's the technique. You cannot put someone out there to sway people away from truth without giving that person a lot of the truth. In fact, they come out often with more information as I say that you can get your hands on. You can't find it until they tell you and of course, that's your first clue is how did they get it first? How come it comes to them first, and that's the bait to make the people follow, and then once you start the following—where are they taking us? By the way, remember Eisenhower was called Ike. Ike in German is Oak, like an oak tree. In masonry, that's why you have John Birch, the birch wood, the oak wood, et cetera. They always give a little clue.

Jackie: What does that mean? The tree, the oak, what is that?

Alan: An ash, like the guy who left Congress recently, Ashcroft. That's the House of Ash.

Jackie: Okay, but what does that mean, Alan?

Alan: In the mystery religion or high masonry they have houses they're put into according to their degrees and functions, and you have the birch, the oak and the ash, and of course in the Nordic religions or mythologies, the world tree, Yggdrasil, was an ash tree. You go into Egypt and you find that when Osiris was found by his wife Isis (or wife-sister Isis) he was inside an ash tree.

Jackie: So the tree was worshiped back then?

Alan: Yes and they all had symbology for specific functions. Ash, especially, was the white and of course the pure dynastic races or peoples, the kings and queens were almost albino, so ash being a white type of wood was associated with them.

Jackie: Oh, boy. You know what you're doing? You're opening a can of worms right here. You're talking about the white pure and the albino royalty. I read a book about Queen Elizabeth and they had portraits of her in the book and her face was pure white. What they said in the book was that she had used so much terrible stuff on her face, you know to make up and stuff, she got very pocked-marked, so she began putting this white paste on her face. Do you think that they just said that to justify why she was so white?

Alan: Some of the very, very high inbred people had no melanocytes in their skin (which gives you your tan) and they burned if they went outside in the sun at all, and their eyes were so pale, almost pinkish, and of course in the ancient legends they were pink.

Jackie: And those were the troglodytes? It is six minutes till, according to my clock, and you will come back tomorrow night?

Alan: Sure.

Jackie: Not to interrupt this phase of our conversation, but I would like to complete what we were saying when we were talking about David Icke because as I was saying on the first half of this broadcast that nobody heard, I was very much taken in by him and his information. What I want to do is follow-up on what we had discussed about the fact that when you whip a book out, a book that could take an average person on an even above average two to three years to research, they pop out like pimples.

Alan: He boasts himself that he tours and he lectures seven days per week often.

Jackie: Yes, all over the world.

Alan: At the same time he's dropping these books like you'd throw away handkerchiefs.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
December 7, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is Tuesday. It is the 7th of December in the year 2004 and of course today is the anniversary of that day that will live in infamy, folks, the day that Pearl Harbor was intentionally attacked. Well, let's say the orchestration – the attack about Japan on Pearl Harbor was orchestrated to get Americans into the war spirit for the second world war and that isn't what we're talking about tonight, but I did want to acknowledge and mention it and make sure that you all know that what happened on December 7th back in 1941 was a magnificent orchestrated production planned and implemented by these creatures who are already in control of the U.S. government under the President FDR at the time.

Alan Watt is with us tonight and first of all we'll do our spiritual message and this is the one right in front of me from Psalm 139:23-24.

"Search me father, know my heart. Test me. Know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offensive way in me and lead me in the way everlasting."

And when I say that, I wonder if there are any of us who don't have some offensive ways that we aren't even aware of, folks. I feel that would be the case for me unintentionally of course and last night we had some really weird technical difficulties, unexplainable, and Alan is with us back again this evening. We did get on the air on the shortwave last night at 9:30 right after the half hour break and yet I know a lot of our shortwave listeners gave up because you thought all you were going to hear was music. The thing that amazed me last night is when Alan said that he didn't think we were on the air it was about 20 after or 25 after because all that was being put on shortwave was music. I said no, we must be on the air or our listeners would be ringing the phone off the hook and for some unknown reason the phone did not ring last night. So Alan and I did the first 20 – well, it was about 10 minutes getting him connected and we did about 20 minutes all by ourselves. The way we are going to do this evening, for the sake of those of you who missed all of the broadcast last night, Alan is going to recover some of what he was discussing last night, but I feel it's very relevant and really want you to have the opportunity to hear. Alan, thanks for being here tonight.

Alan: Yes, it's a pleasure that we're finally on.

Jackie: Yours is coming loud and clear tonight.

Alan: Yes, well strange things are happening.

Jackie: I know and we reference all of the time about what as an hour and a half before the broadcast.

Alan: The clock is still a few minutes to here so I guess something's happened here.

Jackie: Folks, this really is weird because he was late calling me last night and then tonight I called him and said lets get our clocks synchronized here and he was going to call at five till and immediate right on the hour at 9:00 I was calling Alan to say hurry up and his clock was five minutes slow. Okay, Alan.

Alan: It's the energy crisis here. The batteries.

Jackie: Well at least we can laugh about it, huh? Otherwise, I don't know. Maybe we'd be pulling our hair out.

Alan: Well, that can happen too.

Jackie: One of the things that you talked about last night is that you have observed and heard on different radio broadcasts and we had had conversation on the weekend when you were sharing some of this with me and I felt it was relevant for our listeners to be able to hear your take on this, Alan, if you would be so kind.

Alan: What always gets me, to be honest with you, is that in this system that we are forced to live under, there's so much profit and money to be gained out of human misery. I found that shortwave for years has been in a sense providing alternative remedies for illnesses but now it's become such an incredibly big, big business and quite frankly some of the products which have been sold on the shortwave are just stuff that's been recycled from years ago that didn't work then. Of course, you've got a new generation of people who are in desperate pain or whatever who are willing to try anything and spend the big bucks to try and relieve some of the pain.

Jackie: I don't recall you saying this before, but some of the products that you hear advertised are actually things that didn't work the first go around?

Alan: Yes, that's what happens. They come out with something which is always touted as being brand new and a miracle cure for something or other, and, of course, once you have enough people who have bought it over a course of a year or so, then they know it doesn't work and then they've got something else ready to take over, of course, some other miracle cure. It's an endless cycle of people trying to get pain relief and these characters who are shameless who make incredible profits off their misery and that tends to get to me, that kind of thing. Because it is shameless, you know. It's shameless exploitation of people.

Jackie: See what you're doing right now is speaking generically and I don't know that you even want to, or could, but I suppose if you and I were having a conversation and we had unlimited time I'd be saying give me an example or two.

Alan: I think most of the listeners understand when they hear a product for instance being touted as "incredible," you've got to listen to the legal language that's being used, because they're giving you a legal warning and that's for future court cases. It's not credible, "incredible," you understand?

Jackie: Yes and I've used that word a lot when something seemed awesome or I'd say oh this is just incredible; and that was really the wrong usage of that that would have been.

Alan: Yes, but I think these guys are using it deliberately because technically it's a legal warning that buyer beware, that told you it is incredible, and the same when they use the word "fantastic," you see, fantasia.

Jackie: Fantasy?

Alan: They use this terminology as they sell these products and it's a legal 'off the hook' for them if there's any comeback. They have told you.

Jackie: They have told you it's incredible and fantastic.

Alan: There was one guy, who they've brought him on a few times on the shortwave or one of the main daily shows and this guy would have been raised in the 1800's the snake oil salesman. He comes out with this story that again should only fit into the 1800's, but he's still doing it and making money off of it, and that God gave him the formula for this fantastic soap and wrote it on the wall.

Jackie: It was written on the wall. Steve Jacobsen was visiting and of course Steve is most known for the audio documentaries so to speak that he's did on media mind control and he had actually worked in the advertising industry in New York and he got to realizing that the actual mind control methods that are used to sell. That was what led him to the long research and the tape that he did, but he saw an advertisement in a magazine, a two-page flick advertisement and he started laughing so hard, tears were rolling down his face. He said they're actually now using God to sell a product.

You want to take a call?

Alan: We'll see if it's a complaint.

Jackie: Hello, you're on the air.

George: Yes. I'm on the air right now?

Jackie: Yes you are. Who's calling?

George: This is George calling.

Jackie: Hi, George.

George: I'd like to ask the gentleman a question. I believe he said several weeks back talking about some of the powerful people throughout the world. Is that correct?

Jackie: Yes, probably yes. Do you want to get specific, George?

George: Yes. I believe the conversation went along what I believe in that a few hundred people throughout the world are very culturally related often times by blood, by marriage or business interests or social levels or somewhere in the power structure and they yield tremendous power through the entire world and then the United States.

Jackie: Yes. George, did you have a question?

George: You know that geographically often times these people live very close together such as New York City or some of the resort areas of the world and then you resource – have you ever done any studies to find out how closely they are geographically so they can meet?

Jackie: George, the way we're set up here he can hear your questions, but you're going to have to hang up to hear his answer, dear. It's just the one-part question, is that what you wanted to know?

George: That's part of it. I said that geographically they're close. Also, in analyzing the major businesses throughout the world and in this country, we see that there are a lot monopolies and it seems to me that if we can have a major list of these monopolies in the world, which we could find out this through financial research, that you could put the two together and that this ruling group throughout the world will have a strong control of the business monopolies throughout the entire world.

Jackie: Okay, we'll ask Alan to address that. Okay Alan.

Alan: He's quite right they do. I mean the MO [modus operandi], it's the signs and symptoms of a disease that you look for and the signs and symptoms of this disease are always the same. Ancient Egypt for instance was just a bigger version of Sumer and Babylon and they had the most incredible wealth amongst a few people of nobility and they had also the most incredible poverty living side by side.

Jackie: In Sumer, 6,000 years ago. Now is this information available for people?

Alan: There's been so many records. They're still digging up clay tablets at Sumer with so much information on them. They had receipts. They had the cashless society at one point where they used tokens instead of the gold and so on, almost like a checkbook type society. They've even got receipts at the supermarkets that they went to. They baked the things in clay ovens for 15 minutes and that's how long it took to get your receipt. They found thousands and thousands of shipping receipts for merchants who were putting their goods into ships for export abroad.

Jackie: If they were that far advanced, why wouldn't they have at least had papyrus, paper or something to write on?

Alan: I'm sure you know that they'd probably did, but paper is so much more delicate and doesn't withstand the climate and the weather. It perishes.

Jackie: So you're saying that they did that intentionally for future generations?

Alan: It's very possible. It's also possible that it was a tiered system just like today – see, today everything runs actually on a three-tiered system. There's always three levels of reality or science co-existing at the same time. Whatever is given to the public as being the latest gizmo or gadget is actually antique. There's a higher level of science which is then given to sections of the CIA for instance; and there's the real science that's kept in the hands of a very few people at the top. They're so far ahead scientifically that everything we see on the shelves is actually obsolete, and I don't think it's been any different at any time. For the general public in Sumer I'm sure the clay tablets were just dandy and they were told that was the latest thing that they had. They've found electric batteries, acid batteries, and they're in the Cairo Museum. They were dug up in Egypt. They were found elsewhere, even what was Persia, Iran and Iraq, so they had electricity at one point and again that would be for the few as well. The world is run by secrecy and power was never shared and knowledge is power, and of course these guys use science to wield their power and maintain their power over the people at all times.

However, as I say, the MO of these people down through the centuries is always the same. They run the religious business, whichever religions they make dominant for a people. They run it. They also run the pharmaceutical industry. They had that in ancient Egypt too. They run the herbal industry at the same time. They run the legal system and they run the illegal system, and they also run the illegal drug system and prostitution and so on. All of these things have been run by them from the earliest of times.

Jackie: And when we say THEM, who are we saying it is?

Alan: You're talking about an elite who have their own religion, their own belief systems, which differs from everyone else's, and they believe that their spirit is different from that of Joe Average. They believe that they were a separate created "race," you might say, spiritually and physically from Joe Average.

Jackie: They actually believe in the eternity of the spirit, of the soul?

Alan: What they believe is that they themselves were banished or cast out—and this is where the whole fallen angel theology comes from—and because they were created higher than man they still retain special powers when they arrived here; and through pure will, through willing it to happen, they created their own physical bodies, which they claim were perfect and they could do amazing things psychically with telekinesis and so on; but when they started to interbreed with the native people, the humans here, they began to lose those powers and so then they returned to the intensive inbreeding to try to get back to what they were.

Jackie: I remember you saying this on the more recent broadcast that we had done together and what you said is that when they began interbreeding with the humans here, which sounds like, okay, where did they come from, if not from here?

Alan: They believe again that there was a creator. There's no doubt that they believe there was a creator...

Jackie: Or a maker.

Alan: ...but they rebelled and that's where again the rebellion comes from, because they believed they had all the powers of the creator himself and that's where the Luciferian doctrine comes from is from the same theology. That's why the symbols are all over the world of Lucifer in all of it's guises, you know the light-bringer, and so this is an ancient, ancient religion which belongs to an inbred special few.

Jackie: Last night, just as we were going off the air, you were talking about the pure white, the royalty and all that, but it's so confusing for me.

Alan: Even in Sumer they'd find some of the royalty in an underground grave, very deep and large, and they've been buried with all their servants who were poisoned and they found the wigs that the royalty wore. They wore wigs made from the hair of the local people, which was black, but they themselves had red or blonde hair and it's the same in Egypt. You find the wigs in all the tombs. The nobility were literally a different race from the people they lorded over.

Jackie: One of our listeners called and I don't know if we were still on the air together during that time that he called. Oh, I know what it was, Alan. It was when I was replaying the broadcast that we had done, seven of them, and he didn't know that they were re-broadcasting and called that night. He said that he had just seen, I believe, an older documentary that they had replayed on one of the networks and they showed a mummy that they dug up from ancient China and they said it was actually red-haired.

I just want you to know that this whole issue of this – right now, at least it appears this way, that the white race is being eliminated; and if those rulers, if they were of the pure white race, why would they want the white race eliminated?

Alan: They might look like you, but they don't believe they are the same as you. You're an inferior species to them. Your skin might be white, but it takes more than that to belong to them, you see, genetically. They don't identify with you. The peasant of America is no different from the peasant to China to them, and we're all peasants as far as they're concerned. There's no love for the people they rule over, whatsoever.

Jackie: We know that and I was thinking back in Sumer, the same as it is today; it is a few, a whole lot less of them than there are the "masses," so they had to have their own minions, their useful idiots that would carry out so much of their plans, just as it is today.

Alan: It's no different. The first con game was to create money—and it doesn't matter what money is—as soon as public believe that money is better than real goods for barter, then they own you and they own the whole system because they can put you into a form of slavery so easily through taxation and so on. We've watched countries starve to death, not because they didn't have food, but because they didn't have money. It's ridiculous. Money is a con game.

Jackie: Look at the depressions that have been created.

Alan: The Irish famine was a beautiful one where you had people living in a country which had lush fields of lots of different kinds of grain and because the potatoes, just the potatoes, had a blight, they had to starve to death; while their exports, again owned by a handful of people who owned most of the land—people starved to death in the middle of all this grain and oats and all the rest of it because they were not allowed to touch it because they didn't have money to buy it.

Jackie: And also the land belonged to the landed gentry from England. If one of those Irish peasants was even caught killing a rabbit that might have been close to the road or close enough that they would actually be put to death.

Alan: Yes or they'd deport you to Australia. That was how they populated Australia.

Jackie: Or America.

Alan: These guys have been at this for thousands of years and coin – the word coin, which they introduced, comes from Cohen, which is money. Money, coin, Cohen is priest. It's all interrelated because it was the first priest they sent out that introduced the money system. This money is the first con game and that is the capstone. As long as they have society who believe that when they're hungry they have to spend this coin to go and buy food, rather than go and grow it or exchange for it, then that system is owned, it's owned completely, and everything under that system that's found in everything is dependent on the money boys. Strangely enough, we have a few billion people in the world who are trained in this system to accept it as it's given to them who never even know that 12 families hand out the checks to governments across the world and nothing real is ever exchanged. It's just paper.

Jackie: Yes and getting back to George's question, I don't know if you did address it fully, but his question was that he has noticed, at least I believe he was saying, that many of these so-called elite today live close to one another like in New York and maybe in other large cities so that they can meet together. Also, he was wondering if they are the same ones that are in control of the major industries?

Alan: There's no doubt that they are, absolutely. In fact, if you do go and do searches for corporate leaders and see how many companies they actually own, it boggles the mind. I have seen one guy what he owns—and Prince Charles is on his polo team—and he's known for owning one main business in Canada and yet I've seen the other companies that he owns and it's about eight pages long.

Jackie: I've got a list here of allegedly businesses owned or controlled from behind the scenes by the Rockefellers and the list goes on and on and on, and I've had this for quite a few years. Chuck and I were going over it several years ago and wondered if it were true and if it is, is there anything that they don't own other than a little mom and pop place that today they are struggling for survival?

Alan: They own pretty well everything that matters in the system. It is their system entirely, entirely. They create the money. They also buy the debt as it's called. It's all the same people who do it all and they can raise countries up to be great. They can crash them whenever they want to and move elsewhere, as they have done. What you have really from Sumer is empire building and bit by bit you find characters from history arriving out of nowhere and either conquering the old empire and creating a larger one-- Jackie: Alan, you should hold this thought because the music is playing and it will be overriding your voice. We'll take a short 60-second break and we'll be back with Alan. Okay folks we're back again. Hello. Alan, where were we?

Alan: We were basically talking about the empire builders as they moved down through the centuries; and whenever you get a character called "the Great", for instance, you know that's one of their boys.

Jackie: Like Alexander or Peter?

Alan: That's right and they were expanding and unifying vast territories to create a common culture and bring in their system and that's what they're still doing worldwide, they've almost got there and that's what the whole New World Order is about. It's the total dominance of the entire planet under one rule by a small elite group of inbred people who believe that they are essentially gods in their own right, so that's what it's all been about.

Jackie: That's where the divine right of kings came from?

Alan: Oh sure. They always give the authorized religion for the people to believe, which always tends to make them submissive to rule, but they've always had their own inner religion. John Dee was one of the members or the advisers to Queen Elizabeth I. and he wrote about it. Actually, his code was 007. He was also a spy for Britain. John Dee wrote much of the Rosicrucian books of that period but he also was steeped in the Kabbalah and he explained much of their esoteric religion. At the time he was writing for the nobility and so no one else could read basically, apart from the priests who were also in on it, and he was the first person to coin the term and give it a name and it was called it "the British Empire." He coined the term "British Empire" and their duty and manifest destiny was to create little empires similar to their own across the world and ultimately unify them, and that is what the Council on Foreign Relations was set up to do. They are part of The Royal Institute of International Affairs. That is exactly what they're set up to do. I've got their members' books going back to the 1930s and they discussed the coming World War II. They discussed who would win it. They discussed having to save Russia at all costs. They also discussed America coming in perhaps by a surprise attack by Japan. This is in the 1938 meeting that they held in Sydney, Australia. The future is planned. All of the future is planned always.

Jackie: They work out the minute details as time goes by. They lay the foundation. When I finally realized this was Mr. Dodd who was on a Congressional hearing committee back in '52 I believe-- Alan: Norman Dodd.

Jackie: Norman. Thank you and he said that they went to the Carnegie Foundation and they wanted to go through their papers and the man there told them that they wouldn't mind but that would be a little difficult because once the U.S. ratified the UN Charter their work was finished, he said, and all of their meetings – that's what Norman Dodd wanted to look at. They were all in storage but he said if you want to you can go look. Norman Dodd did say that he believed that the man who allowed them to do this really didn't know what was in those meeting notes, but what came out of it, and this was back in 1906, they wanted to know if you want to change the culture of a people and change it for good, is there any way better than war to do it; and they set up a council or committee to study it and they came up with the answer and they said no.

Alan: Carroll Quigley said the same thing. He said we can accomplish more on a social level in five years of war than in 50 years of peace.

Jackie: And this was 1906 and they decided they were going to have a war and they already had picked the Balkan state that they were going to do it and that was in 1914, wasn't it, when the first world war finally broke out. Also, I had read that they decided they were going to hold the war off, that first "great war," until the Federal Reserve Act was passed here so that the American people could pay for it. There we go, 1913 the Federal Reserve Act was passed, 1914 the war started, and what was it, 1917 when the U.S. got into it—Americans. I shouldn't say the U.S. because it's always flesh and blood that fights the wars of the rich.

Alan: It's so disgusting to realize that it's planned way in advance. Nothing is ever spontaneous and they also had plans made for after the war. They know who's going to win it because they control all sides. There are traces of them down through history because they leave their MOs wherever they go and they always introduce a religion for the people which keeps them in submission. They always introduce a monetary system. Anything will do for money. It doesn't matter what it is, as long as they control it. Many of their empires in the past have forbidden barter and of course they're trying to forbid barter even right now. There are laws being passed in North America. They call it the "underground economy." They want everyone using their money, even if money is simply a bunch of numbers on a computer screen and that's where it's going ultimately.

Lord Bertrand Russell who did an awful lot of work for the elite helping with their plans especially in the social change area and educational fields, he said ultimately towards the end of the millennium and toward the new, he said, there will be a cashless society where every citizen will be allowed or allocated so many credits per week which cannot be saved up. They must use them that week and that way no one else can rise above his fellow peasant, basically, and if you buck the system and you don't do what you're told or you break some of the rules, they will withhold your credits and you will suffer because you won't be able to feed yourself, pay your rent and so on. He wrote that in "Education and the Good Life" and also "Roads to Freedom," both written prior to 1920s. Everything that's happening today was planned long, long ago. H.G. Wells was another one; he was a front man too. He had a whole team of people working. In fact, he had a whole building and a printing press to churn his books out, and professors who belonged to The Royal Institute of International Affairs from Cambridge University and Oxford supplied them with the material which he was to incorporate in his fiction books. These fiction books at that time they called it predictive programming. In other words, society will accept change when it's seems familiar to them and it's familiar because of the fiction they've been reading or even seen in the cinemas.

Jackie: Alan, I'm back and I got a little bit of what you were saying but I don't know who you were talking about.

Alan: I was mentioning H.G. Wells and Bertrand Russell just to show that they were actually writing about the end of the millennium back in 1905 in their books and telling us what to expect because they were part of the implementers. They worked on these plans for the elite. Lenin was another one who was part of the elite. He was completely financed by the West by the banks of New York and London, and Lenin in his books also said the same as H.G. Wells and Bertrand Russell concerning the future society towards the end of the millennium, where they'll have a soviet type system worldwide ran by bureaucrats and experts.

Jackie: When you say soviet type system I have mentioned this on the air before, the book that I have called "Cogs in the Wheel". This is basically what they said in the book that the Soviet Union was a huge national "laboratory," as you call it, where they were doing their brainwashing and mind control on the people. That's so nobody could get out or in from the Soviet Union and they literally claimed that they had in 60 short years had created a new species. They called this new species "homo-sovieticus" and that was to be the blueprint around the world for what they the new man and the book is just spine-chilling, Alan.

Alan: That's exactly what's taking place. We are seeing people today who have been inoculated with so many injections since birth to make them dumb and stupid and also to bring on diseases earlier in life.

Jackie: Inoculations of diseases, yes, that's in the protocol. For our listeners that might be interested in this book it is by Makhail Heller and I don't believe it's on the bookshelves today but I believe that it can be leased from a library or from an internet book search. The book I was referring to is "Cogs in the Wheel" and the subtitle is: "The Formation of Soviet Man." So just as Alan was saying, that at all costs during World War II Russia or Soviet Union had to be protected and saved.

Alan: When you look at our social structure today with the massive bureaucracies we have hanging over us, who are constantly taking over more and more of what we use to do for ourselves, which was mainly decision making, we are run by a world of experts and bureaucrats. We've moved up from a people who have natural rights and self-evident rights into a world where we're given privileges and generally it's licensed privileges. "Privileges" are something which is granted to you, which can be taken away. This is the Soviet system. That's why the children go to little red school schoolhouses and they are the worker bees in the yellow and black school buses. We have spelling bees and so on. We are the bees. We are the workers who are helping to bring all of this about over the rest of the world.

Jackie: As you're talking about this my thought and I think maybe the thoughts of at least quite a few of our listeners is where do the Jews fit in here?

Alan: There's definitely a group who have been created to handle the upper strata of the monetary system which everything hangs upon. Everything hangs upon the money. The entire structure of the system hangs upon money.

Jackie: Like in the Protocols and I have read this in other writings where they refer to the Jewish people themselves. People born into that Talmudic so-called religions that they refer to them as their "lesser brethren" and they have said in many times and in many ways we sacrifice our own to get done what has to get done, like this "persecution of the Jews." My thought has been when you brought out the fact that it was the royal bloodlines and they were never the same nationality of the people they ruled. These are so-called elite today, so are the people who born into or convert to this thing called Judaism or Talmudism, are they even of the same race or is it just another mass of people who have been lied to and conditioned to live in the persecuted person and your god is chosen and they believe what they have been taught by their rabbis, which by the way folks, those rabbis were yesterday's Pharisees, for any of you who think the Jews gave us Christianity, I guess they did, but it wasn't because Jesus was a Jew.

Alan: They didn't really give us Christianity. Christianity was created by another bunch a long ways off from the so-called holy land.

Jackie: I know, but wouldn't it be the same creatures in control? Then that's what I'm saying.

Alan: There were no Jews until a people came out of Babylon. There's no history or mention or written history of anybody called a Jew.

Jackie: So the Jewish people in that religion are no different than the Christians who have been lied to and I believe to push this program further.

Alan: Yes and they because of their indoctrination they do feel elite above the rest of the people. There's no doubt about it. They are told they're special and that reminds of the English middle class of the 19th century that ruled India. They thought they were the nearest thing to God because of their indoctrination. It's easy to create elitism and make people feel very smug and that's the same technique that's used today on most Jews.

Jackie: It's amazing to me today that they've convinced Christians that the Jews are God's chosen people and that Israel is God's covenant land to these people and so that no matter what Israel is doing it's Israel we love you. Israel forever. The mind control is just out of this world.

Alan: It's Isis-RA-EL. It's the trinity. It's the same with Ellis Island. The symbol of Jehovah, which is Lucifer, is the Statue of Liberty; and "El is," I am, EL IS, Ellis Island. The symbols are everywhere.

Jackie: And Isis was the main goddess?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: And who was RA?

Alan: RA was a sort of the big daddy. His place in the Greek for instance would be Zeus, Roman Jupiter.

Jackie: And EL was the main god?

Alan: EL was a god actually, a Semitic deity that was created outside of the holy land and imported with them or into the holy land. He came a long later. Judaism was a compilation of preexisting stories put into one, and most of the stories came from Egypt and it's all done in allegory. What it does do is give the rules of their system, including the right to have slaves.

Jackie: Yes and that is exactly what Moses Mendelssohn had said, that "Judaism is not a religion. It is a law religionized."

Alan: It's nothing but law.

Jackie: We're under that law today, Alan.

Alan: We've always been under it, really.

Jackie: Well I didn't know that.

Alan: Even Lenin, who should know because he was taught by the best bankers and Talmudists, he said every civilization has been a form of slavery. That was echoed by Charles Galton Darwin in "The Next Million Years," their plans for the next million years, and he said the same thing that every system that's preexisted has been a slavery system and we are in the process of creating a new more sophisticated form of slavery; and that was printed in the 1950s. This is a new form of slavery we're under now and the next step will be the token system I was mentioning earlier where you would be allocated so many tokens per week and that way they'll be able to have social control over every individual, because if you buck the system in any way they'll withdraw your tokens.

Jackie: Well, either that or the tokens will be impulses on a computer.

Alan: Same thing.

Jackie: We're out of our hour here. I'm not going to say we're out of time, but we are out of time, we're out of this world. You will come back tomorrow night?

Alan: Sure.

Jackie: Ladies and gentlemen, Alan will be back with us tomorrow night and thanks for being here. Alan, thanks so much, always.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
December 8, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. This is Wednesday. It is the last day of our broadcast week.

The information that I bring you is information I have or I wouldn't be able to bring it to you, so please know that. I don't do this for fun. I don't do it because it's been lifelong desire to be a radio talk show broadcaster host, but I am doing it and I'm doing it out of my love, my hunger and my thirst for the truth and my deep desire to share as I'm learning with you all. On that, our spiritual message tonight is one that I do often and I will continue to do often. I think this is important for us to remember this. There have been so many lies told about Jesus and his time here and his message and then the religion that was made by the priesthood that twisted and torqued the message. We have been given truths in the Bible. However discernment is needed, but so many people say well he came here to shed his blood for us so that we sinners can be saved. Jesus said pretty clearly that as we sow, so shall we reap, and I never read anything in the Bible where he came here to begin a religion. I'll tell you what he said to Pontus Pilot. This is in John 18 where Pontus Pilot was trying to trip him up in that conversation and when Jesus said that my kingdom is not of this world, Pilot, this is in verse 37, he said to Jesus, are you a king? And here's what Jesus answered. According to the scriptures here, folks, he said, "you say that I am a king. To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world that I should bear witness unto the truth. Everyone that is of the truth hears my voice."

When I think about it I cannot think of a better reason or purpose for us to have while we are in this third dimensional realm in this physical world is to bear witness unto the truth and I know for myself I don't have all the truth, the whole truth and nothing but, and it is a process. It's been a process of discovery for me and the one thing I keep questioning myself and I caution you folks is that when it comes time that we say okay now I've got it, then I think we're in a world of trouble because we're closed off to any further expansion or understanding of what believe we know to be true, so it is a search; and that's enough. I think I've covered that well enough and our guest this evening again is Alan Watt and I just realized I could talk through another 15 minutes and I don't want you to miss the information that Alan has to share with us. Alan, thanks for being here again.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: It's always our pleasure too. One of the things that you mentioned today when I called you to make sure that our watches were synchronized, I hadn't realized and I don't know if our listeners, all of them, are aware of this, but yesterday being the anniversary of Pearl Harbor and you had said that their code when they were attacking Pearl Harbor was Tora, Tora, Tora. Is there a Japanese word like Tora?

Alan: We're told that was their word for attack, but we don't really know. I mean it's one of these odd coincidences you have.

Jackie: That's what I was wondering, the word Torah of course is in the Jews' holy book and I began to wonder well maybe that could be checked out. I mean if the Japanese word for attack is Tora – do you know that, if it is, Alan?

Alan: I'm not certain but that's definitely what they broadcast as they were going in and they said it three times, which is strangely Masonic because that's how Masonic instructions are. They're always in triplicate.

Jackie: I was trying to do a search for that earlier this evening and I just asked Jeeves do you know what this tora, tora, tora means and it just kept bringing up stuff about the Torah but I found something interesting. The first five books of the Old Testament being the Torah, I wound up in this Jewish website and I think it's called Judaism 101 or something of frequently asked questions, what does tora mean? They said, listen folks, it can have several meanings. The Torah can mean the first five books of the Old Testament, which they call the Book of Moses, or it can be all of that writing in what Christians call the Old Testament, or it can be the first five books of that Old Testament which is their Torah and all of the subsequent writings that make up the entire Talmud. So for Christians who want to put so much emphasis and attention on that Old Testament, Alan, like it's the world of God. You know what I mean? I thought that was quite fascinating and I'll tell you what else they said. They said for the Jews there is no Old Testament, yet they say the reason they're taking all that land in Israel is because it is their biblical mandate. They didn't say Talmudic mandate. They said it's their biblical mandate. So they claim the Bible when it serves them, don't they?

Alan: That's what most legalists do. Anything to do with legalism or law is just a matter of picking and choosing what parts you want to use for that particular purpose. That's what law is all about. When you look at the supposed history of how the Old Testament was written, and you've got to remember 2,000 years ago, the Old Testament that they were given was written in Greek. It wasn't in Hebrew. It was written in Greece by a bunch of priests who supposedly were in Egypt around 200, 300 BC. This is the story, 72 priests who happened to be in Egypt wrote it in Greek for the Jews who spoke Aramaic.

Jackie: They were in Egypt translating it into Greek for the Jews who spoke Aramaic.

Alan: That's correct. That makes a lot of sense, right? It was a compilation of esoteric stories really, not the exoteric ones, of the mystery religion that had been in existence for a long, long time before that. I mean Moses is just another form of Hermes, basically. Hermes is the truly enlightened figure and so the illumined one can go up the mountain, while the rest of the people, who are the mob, are in the dark, they must stay below. Going up the mountain is symbolic of the illumined one. Moses is just the Egyptian word for child and it's just dropped the Ra, the child of Ra, Ra-moses.

Jackie: Son of?

Alan: Yes, child of Ra. It's all esoteric high masonry basically.

Jackie: Let me hear your take on the "Ten Commandments?" He went up the mountain and he became enlightened and he came down with the Ten Commandments on these two huge, what do you call them, stones? Then he got ticked off and broke them and had to go get another set.

Alan: Well, he broke the law.

Jackie: He broke the law.

Alan: He was the first guy to break the law.

Jackie: So that story is an esoteric?

Alan: Yes, it's all esoteric.

Jackie: Do you think Moses really existed?

Alan: No. As I say, it's the same in all the ancient mystic religions. There's always a Moses or a Hermes type figure and Hermes is always related to the god Soth or Thoth in Egypt who was also the one who gave law in writing to the people. Moses is a combination of Hermes and Soth.

Jackie: Did you say that the esoteric message in there, does that have anything to do with the Kabbalah, the ancient mysteries?

Alan: Even though the Kabbalah has been added to, especially around the 1500's onwards, it definitely – even Wallace Budge who translated lots of the old Egyptian for the London Museum, he claims that he found much of the Kabbalah already existed in ancient Egypt. It's not a modern thing at all, although it has been added to since the 1500's and it's the same with the Talmud. The Talmud was a Babylonian religion which was taken over, or at least a bunch of people came out of Babylon with an updated religion that was based on the Babylon Talmud. That's when Judaism began.

Jackie: Did the Pharisees not exist yet?

Alan: No. Supposedly, according to the mythology, they were taken into captivity from Israel into Babylon where they were there for a couple of hundred years. When they went in they had Levi, the priests, and a set of rituals and so on, basically the Books of Moses or at least the oral tradition of Moses. When they came out they had Talmud, which is now the main book, and they had the Pharisaical priesthood and the Sadducees, which again, as in all these mystic religions, has double meanings. The Sadducees who were the supposed nobility of the supposed Jews and I've no doubt they were the nobility of Babylon that came out there. Their symbol was the serpent and you'll find too in the Jewish traditions of Moses the brazen serpent that he had made to go in front of him with the wings and a serpent on the staff was put into a sacred grove and it was worshiped there basically for a couple of hundred years. The Sadducees, again, have this serpent symbol and remember, too, it's really a Latin term. We're reading a Latinized name here, Sadducees, and if you take the S and put it back into a C, you have the Caduceus.

Jackie: Caduceus, and that was their staff right?

Alan: The serpent again, so it's all games and tricks you see and the blind cannot see. That's the whole idea. Those who have no eyes don't see what's right in front of them. They play these games with us all the time. Pharisees is also a play on pharaoh, you see, and Pharis- and Paris is actually the eagle, so that's the royal eagle, basically.

Jackie: The eagle for whom, the royalty?

Alan: Yes, the ancient mystery religion which ran Babylon, Egypt and all the old worlds.

Jackie: Would you pronounce that and you said the Sadducees and then you put a C in it and how did you pronounce that?

Alan: Caduceus. That's the same symbol you'll see on every ambulance with the serpent round the staff.

Jackie: It's the symbol of the doctors? American Medical Association et cetera?

Alan: Yes and if you take the two – generally it's two intertwined serpents, you'll have the figure 8, which is "as above, so below," the two circles, and it's also the double helix of the gene. All of this stuff is highly symbolic and we take it for granted simply because we grew up and seen them everywhere. We never question their origins or what they really mean. If you look at the Greek occupation prior to the Roman occupation of that whole area—we can call it the supposed Holy Land—on the Greek maps there is no Israel.

Jackie: Oh, I was going to ask you that when you mentioned that they were taken out of Israel into Babylon. Israel didn't exist at that time, did it?

Alan: There's no mention in the Persian, Egyptian or anybody else's histories of Israel. On the Greek's maps they had an entire area that was called Edomia for the Edomians. All we can really say is that the whole idea of an Israel began much later with a bunch of people coming out of Babylon.

Jackie: You were explaining the other night, Isis, Ra and El. IS-RA-EL and so if that's the trinity, would then that be a goddess trinity, being Isis, being the mother goddess?

Alan: It's more than just that. It's the sun, the moon together as the hermaphrodite because even in Judaic religions they have a whole tradition to do with god that is both male and female and again it pre-existed Judaism. Plato also talks about it, that when the god turned one way he was woman and when he turned the other he was man, so he's also hinting at the same esoteric deity that the aristocracy of ancient Greece worshiped. It's the same ancient doctrine.

Jackie: And they believe that the first man that was made was actually a hermaphrodite?

Alan: If you were to take it literally – if it was the Creator that made this particular man for the garden, the Eden story--

Jackie: Male and female created he them?

Alan: He said in the perfect image of himself he made man, you see. Now if he was male and female, then that's what they're hinting at, that Adam himself would be both, and then they took the female from Adam and he separated the two.

Jackie: Do you think they were doing some cloning?

Alan: If you go into the other histories that we're often taught to ignore, such as the histories of India, the Brahmins claim that the Brahmins of Northern India survived a catastrophe in the previous age. They said eventually the area where the Black Sea is was a huge valley which was used as an experimental laboratory where different types of humans were created and it all went sort of awry because they were mixing animals with humans and they started to eat each other, and so what they did was flood the whole valley and that became the Black Sea and that's in their histories.

Jackie: Then there's where the Khazars came from or at least there's where they landed?

Alan: You'll find too that that was also like a Miami for the holiday-makers of the nobility of ancient Greece they traveled to and then Rome as well. Always was.

Jackie: They went to Khazaria for their Roman holidays?

Alan: That's right, Khazaria by the sea. There's much, much older histories involved here and of course they think that the Troy itself was up that way somewhere, the original Troy, and there's no doubt they have found buildings by submarine. In the last few years they've found buildings one hundred feet or more beneath the surface of the Black Sea and they don't know how far down these buildings go. They're submerged.

Jackie: Isn't it a possibility that that all got covered up in that big deluge, that big conflagration that Immanuel Velikovsky wrote of?

Alan: I think this one was more deliberate.

Jackie: Do they have a timeline as to when it became a sea rather than a city?

Alan: Velikovsky's explanation would be around 1300 BC and this was prior to that. As I say, the Old Testament in Masonic parlance basically gives the rules of the game of this system in which we live.

Jackie: The rules of the game. Big game, right Alan? It's a real game.

Alan: It's the system. It's a system again based on money, wealth, debt, slavery and so on. It gives all of the rules. It's interesting to note as well that the Pharisees were the black-robed priests when they emerged from Babylon.

Jackie: Like the judges today?

Alan: The judges are exactly the same and of course that represents Saturn in the old mystery religion and Saturn was the father of the god; and they're not real gods. They're representatives of parts of the system. That's what Jupiter and so on all mean.

Jackie: Was it Zeus whose father was Saturn?

Alan: Saturn in Greek was Kronos (Κρόνος, Cronos, Chronos, etc.), so you go between the Greek and Roman. They have different names for the same thing.

Jackie: Zeus became Zeus-Pater or god the father and that's where Jupiter came from? The Greeks had Zeus-Pater. The Romans had Jupiter or Jove, which is Jehovah?

Alan: Yehovah, so it's the same thing.

Jackie: I remember that you had mentioned too that the story of Moses birth and being put into the brushes, hidden et cetera was an exact take off of the story of Sargon the Elder of was it Babylon?

Alan: That's right. He had the same story behind him and of course, again, it's a play on words because Cone or Cohen was priest in the Old Testament. That's where King comes from eventually through different dialects, but Cohen was priest and Cain was priest and so when they talk about bulrushes and the canes it's all symbology of a priesthood. It's an esoteric story combined within it.

Jackie: And the Ten Commandments?

Alan: Again, I mean there were a lot more than ten, but according to modern Judaism they have the whole Mishnah, which is the oral tradition, which is supposedly is the secret tradition that Moses gave to his followers and that was meant only for – it's crazy because there were no Jews when supposedly Moses gave them this, there was only Hebrews.

Jackie: And the word Hebrew is the word Habiru?

Alan: Habiru is the term that came up by the Egyptians of an invading people who came in from the highland areas to the northeast and invaded and took over Egypt for a period. They were vicious mercenaries basically.

Jackie: The Habiru? And that was the Hebrew, right?

Alan: That's what historians today think they must be and they do know that some of them had Semitic names, not all of them, though, but the Habiru was a conglomeration of different peoples. It wasn't just one race of people and they were all nomadic initially, until they settled within Egypt, and they were the most tyrannical rulers Egypt ever had and there was a General eventually who started an uprising to kick them out.

Jackie: The Hyksos are mentioned that way. Is that one in the same people?

Alan: It's the same thing. The Hyksos refers to another term they went by, and that was shepherd kings.

Jackie: Okay. This is still the same Habiru?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: So they weren't taken into Egypt and enslaved, that they actually went in to and enslaved Egyptians?

Alan: There were two forces that came into Egypt at the same time. One from the Mediterranean Sea and they were called the Boat People, and another bunch came by land driving their animals before them and with them. The Hyksos, they often say shepherd kings, but 'Hyks' really refers to cattle, that they drove cattle ahead of them, and Habiru was the mercenaries who backed them up, basically, armed forces.

Jackie: So the more things change, the more they stay the same because they were the mercenaries.

Alan: Yes and so they took over Egypt. They slaughtered thousands of the Egyptians and then the Habiru nobility made themselves pharaohs for a couple of hundred years until they were eventually kicked out again.

Jackie: And the story of the Exodus. Isn't it amazing how they took that worldwide conflagration and wove it into a story around these special chosen people of Jehovah?

Alan: It's more than that. Again, it's an esoteric story of a group coming out of Egypt, but the real story was to do with Akhenaten priesthood. He was the pharaoh who they claim was the first guy to say that all gods are one and Aton was the god.

Jackie: And he closed down all of the temples, didn't he?

Alan: All the Amons and so on.

Jackie: We're getting to take that break at the half hour.

Alan: I guess I'll just talk about the Peoples of the Sea and the Hyksos in the meantime and the Peoples of the Sea may have come from the Grecian Islands at the same time as the land invaders were coming across from the east.

Jackie: I'm listening again. Thank you, Alan. Is there more you wanted to say about this?

Alan: The esoteric part of the coming out of Egypt is to do with an entire Washington, D.C.-size bureaucracy, the priests who had their brand new city of Amarna destroyed, and they were forced out basically. They were an Egyptian priesthood and of course they were following Akhenaten, basically. That was the real esoteric story behind it, that all God is one, you see. They called themselves slaves to the god or servants. They were public servants. That's where the term comes from and so that's what all the high Masons know of the truth of the coming out of Egypt and what it's all about. It's their system that was to take over the world coming out of one country and moving elsewhere.

Jackie: I have a book called "Thirty Thousand Gods Before Jehovah" and it's a very fascinating book and it told a lot of the language that you had told us how words are made and what they mean. Even our alphabet has its own little code and then they mentioned the Caduceus and according to this book, they referred to the L and they used that name a lot. They showed how often so many names end in L or begin with L, meaning God, that this priesthood is the one that actually even set the boundaries where before there were no political or national boundaries and that they actually went and set boundaries and actually changed the language. They said that is why so many of the languages have similarities, but their passport to every country that they went was the Caduceus and that was the staff with the serpents around it and they took translators with them because there were translators that could speak every language of every nation and they call them the bounds. I mean they literally set nationhood. I mean you've talked about that before, that they're the ones that dreamed up the nations because if there weren't nations there wouldn't be countries fighting against each other.

Alan: And you could not have a nobility arising Jackie: Ruling over a nation.

Alan: There has to be a government because governments say that themselves, that their first reason for existing is to protect the people against those guys over there.

Jackie: They set up all these boundaries and now their intention is to destroy all the boundaries?

Alan: Yes, because they claim that the Great Work or this part of the Great Work came to these enlightened guys around 4,000 BC. That's what they claim and that's also part of Judaic or Talmudic law, that the Great Work was begun 4,000 BC.

Jackie: 6,000 years ago. The rabbis claim that they know the exact time and date that the world was created.

Alan: In a sense they do because it's the system they're talking about.

Jackie: Okay, their world.

Alan: It's the beginning of the system.

Jackie: It's amazing because I remember when you were with us so often back there late '98 early '99 and that was the first time I had even known anything about "international priesthood" and now in so many books that I read the priesthood is mentioned and I've just never seen it before.

Alan: It's all coming out now, but they definitely existed and when you do check out the esoteric traditions of the elite of Jewry you'll find the same esoteric traditions with the ancient elite of Greece and Rome and of the present nobility of Europe and the States. It's the same ancient tradition and religion within them all, so there is one religion running the whole show here.

Jackie: I wrote a little note down last night. A thought that came to me, actually it's a friend of mine who was listening to another broadcaster and then said that she doesn't listen anymore because there's too much negativity. I won't mention names because I'm not saying this to be unkind, but that a lot of times it's said there was nothing you're going to be able to do about it and she said why would he even be on the air if he tells all this terrible stuff and says there's nothing you can do about it. Really, Alan, as far as doing something about it, what does one do?

Alan: Obviously, if you live in a complete iron-clad system you can't do anything about it if you use the methods that are given to you. There's no point in complaining about it because nothing is going to change the agenda that's well underway, especially at this phase of it, and so there's no point in complaining to your representatives. They all belong to a political party and their boss is the guy at the head of the party and since they're all social climbers they're not going to go against their party. They'll do what they're told. In fact, I believe they just passed the second Patriot bill, today was it?

Jackie: I brought up an email today from yesterday that said that it had passed the House and that it was expected to pass the Senate today.

Alan: Three thousand pages of laws and nobody read it, so that tells you what your representatives are.

Jackie: How could anybody have read it? Three thousand pages?

Alan: I know but it was the same with the first one when they were told that they'd be unpatriotic if they read it.

Jackie: And yet, here we are, doing these radio broadcasts, sharing information, hopefully bringing truth, understanding and awareness to people. There are people who are led at certain stages of their understanding and their awakening, I guess, to do certain things. Ken and I talked this weekend that I was at one point for an example the people that get into the "law" and I think how futile. I have this knee-jerk how futile to take a case into a court where they're so corrupt and yet it occurred to me one time that it is not for me to judge what other people are made to do because maybe it is a compilation of all of the little things that each individual does that makes the difference.

Alan: Well, definitely using the system, which is law, you see, it might be important for that individual in that sense, but technically it isn't going to change the agenda.

Jackie: It won't change the agenda but maybe if enough people are awakened. You had said this for example about the Federal Reserve system but when I challenged you because I thought Tupper Saussy's idea was pretty cool that people within the state would have the IOU that they would present for fines or fees et cetera, taxes, in the state, and say as soon as we have gold and silver coin we intend to pay. You had said no, it's not going to work. I said well at least it's something and you said no because you cannot get out of the system by using their system. Gold. They own and control the gold. They might not own it all but they certainly control it.

Alan: They also fix the prices of it.

Jackie: That's what I was going to say, the value.

Alan: FDR confiscated the gold. They can confiscate anything they want.

Jackie: But one of the things that you said that took a long while to gel for me, when you said that you cannot get out of the system by using the system and that makes sense and then I said okay well then what is your solution and you said – this is what took a while to gel. That as soon as enough people understand it, it will collapse of itself, because you bring something like this into the light of awareness and understanding and it can only exist in the darkness out of which it was created and that it's up to each and every one of us as individuals how we be.

Alan: How we be and everything boils down to individual choices as to where you are in your life or on your journey and it's true enough. Here's your mirror image. There's no doubt about it that you do come out of the darkness into the light and when you come into the light then your mind, your body, your spirit, your soul all act in unison and you do begin to radiate something from yourself to others. Your abilities are definitely increased. As Arnold Toynbee said in his international meeting of the World Socialist Party, and he taught the Rhode Scholars and he was one of the one-worlders of his day at Oxford University, but he said that a person who's awake can think a thought that will be picked up all over the world simultaneously as it's being thought; it's instant. They know that this actually works and we again in a scientific age, as they try to atheise the public in order to control them, we tend to forget that there are other forces at work here in this realm and there's no doubt about it. As you truly wake up you'll find that synchronicities become more than just synchronicities and you can actually think about something and you'll hear people suddenly spontaneously discuss it the following day, and I'm sure that it would never pop into their heads unless you'd thought the thought in the first place. This is the power of thought in itself and for thought to be pure and powerful it has to come from someone who is awake, and I don't mean just partly awake or they think they're fighting the New World Order and trying to preserve the old because the old was never theirs either. It's all stages.

Jackie: To fix it or to turn this thing around, heck, why would we want it turned around?

Alan: You can go back to the debt system of today or whenever. It's the same con game, but for these people to play their godhood role, as they truly want to do, they must conquer every mind on the planet because you can't be ultimate and supreme or a god if there's somebody left standing that you haven't conquered.

Jackie: Yes and you brought that up. It's out of George Orwell's "1984" and I could not figure out why when they caught Winston Smith why they spent so much time torturing him until he finally could actually see that three fingers were four or whatever it was and then they killed him.

Alan: That's right. It's not good enough they said that you tell me that, you must believe it.

Jackie: When I was questioning you about it but I couldn't figure out why they didn't just kill him in the first place that was what you brought up. Everybody, before they are counted successful by their own measurement, every mind has to be controlled by them.

Alan: Every knee must bow. That's what they're after to themselves and they will coerce and cajole and use force where required until everyone does it. They tend to use coercion until you have to go into a certain direction, but ultimately they use force on those who do not.

Jackie: Let me ask you this because this thought went through my mind is that it also comes down to the emotional energy that we put out, so when we are living in fear, when we're living in hatred, when we're living in anger, we are actually feeding the beast, the system.

Alan: Oh absolutely. They're like vampires.

Jackie: Spiritual vampires.

Alan: This whole system is fear based. That's why there are no certainties in life except the fact you're going to pay taxes and die.

Jackie: So people have asked me how can you not hate them, I've just said I've chosen not to and if I do hate I'm not aware of it, because I know we can fool ourselves sometimes, but what they do is they go back to the Bible and say well Jesus said we are supposed to hate. You know, love the sinner but hate the sin or something. Well that word is a pretty strong word and would you comment on that?

Alan: The only part in the New Testament where – Christians for such a long time have been taught this strange thing of turning the other cheek and of course I'm sure that was added in there – and the Bible has been updated so many times, even from the earliest times. In fact reincarnation was its natural functioning up until the 6th century AD, the Second Council of Constantinople, they decided to take that out of the Bible.

Jackie: Under Justinian. I've got a paper on that but I've tried to do some research basically on the Internet and I can't find anything that verifies that.

Alan: You'll find it in the Vatican papers if you go into the Catholic website because the Vatican admitted that. In fact, recently they gave an apology for having removed all this in the 6th century. They gave a public apology. It was earlier this year in fact.

Jackie: So literally removing references in the New Testament referring to reincarnation?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Well, I'm glad to hear that confirmed here because it makes sense to me and there are a couple of places in there it looks like they may have forgotten about or left in on purpose.

Alan: That's why there are so many contradictions. The Catholic Church you must remember was actually the Roman Empire. They transferred from military might to psychological might; power over the mind was much easier and actually more effective than armies and so they kept updating and removing and so on parts of the New Testament.

Jackie: And put words in Jesus mouth that would tie the New Testament back to the Old Testament and then that proves to people that the Old Testament is the world of God.

Alan: Yes, even though they did leave in, he says, I come to fulfill it and this is the new covenant. He gave the new covenant. This is brand new.

Jackie: You mentioned that one night and we really didn't get into it because you said the New Testament was the new covenant. In other words, from my understanding the Christians believed that Jehovah of the Old Testament being "God" that when Jesus came the new covenant was made and that it is the same god that it's just a different system now.

Alan: He never mentions Jehovah.

Jackie: I know but he said something about I did not come to destroy the law but to fulfill it. Well, to me I believe he was talking about the universal law of creation.

Alan: Very possible.

Jackie: I don't think he was talking about the man's law.

Alan: There's simply no comparison between what he was teaching in his day to the Old Testament. There's no comparison at all. I mean the Old Testament was an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth and all that kind of stuff and traditions.

Jackie: And wars and slavery and killing and slaughter.

Alan: Get rich and all that, and he preached the opposite to all of that. There's no comparison whatsoever and of course that's why modern Jewry claimed that he was – that's why he was killed, because he was preaching against all of their beliefs. He was a heretic of that time.

Jackie: You said that he had studied the mysteries and he became a renegade?

Alan: He was openly (I say openly) but it was for those amongst the listeners who could understand the esoteric behind the stories that he was getting, but he was getting it out to the public and these were sacred things that were to be kept for inner religion.

Jackie: They didn't want people to know that.

Alan: People don't realize that the Pharisees were a brotherhood unto themselves and they had their own esoteric religion just for the Pharisees.

Jackie: Those would be the Levites?

Alan: Not Levites. They were no Levites by then.

Jackie: Those priests really raked in, didn't they, in the name of Jehovah? It counts all the gold and silver that was brought to them and all the animals and all the first of this and first of that, as though it were going to be given to "Jehovah" and the priests were just getting filthy rich.

Alan: Yes they were and they were also really enslaving the people because as Jesus said the people are so bound down with man made laws; you wouldn't believe how many rituals they had to go through in a day. People were being bound down with all of these laws and rules and so on that they could hardly get a days work done and if they broke any of the taboos (that's what it was all about, taboos), they had to go and cleanse themselves and so on before they could start all over again. Meanwhile, as Jesus said, you make all these laws that bind down my people but you don't follow them yourselves; so we're back to the old hypocrisy business which is ever present with us. However, the Pharisaical sect were a sect and they had an esoteric religion for themselves, which were not shared with the people they lorded over. They claim to possess the secret laws of Moses at that time, which became the Mishna, and they have dozens and dozens of other laws and rules that Gentiles have never heard of. It's far more complicated than the school system we've all been brought up in to believe and as I say there's no trace of an Israelite people ever having existed in the ancient records of well-established empires that existed supposedly at the same time as Israel and before it. The Persians took copious records. The Egyptians – they're still digging up records from all the different parts of the empires that they ruled and there is no Israel mentioned anywhere.

Jackie: We only have a couple of minutes left. Do you observe Christmas?

Alan: Not for me. I mean it's just – in fact, it's well admitted that's simply the turn over into the spring when the sun hangs in the air for three days. It doesn't go any further north and then it starts all over again. It starts going further north, so that was always the ancient tradition.

Jackie: Some people say he was born in April. Some say he was born in October and I guess it really just doesn't matter what the name was but the fact that there was a very deeply loving spirit that came to this world to bear witness unto the truth.

Alan: It was to show a way. What he was showing was all of the ways to defeat the system.

Jackie: Well, Alan, we just got our one minute warning here and I want to thank you for being on with us and you will be back, yes?

Alan: Yes, I will.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
December 27, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us this cold winter evening. I hope you had a lovely weekend and a peaceful love filled Christmas folks and I am glad to be back with you tonight and I'm glad you're back with us tonight. Today is Monday. It is the 27th of December in the year 2004 and our spiritual message tonight, I just happened to open the Holy Bible and this is where it opened to. It's one that I have highlighted but I don't think I've ever done this. This is from Matthew 15 and this is our statement by Jesus. It's in the red. This is Matthew 15 beginning with verse 10. "And he called the multitude and said unto them: Here and understand not that which goes into the mouth defiles a man but that which comes out of the mouth, this defiles the man. And then the disciples came and said to Him, "Do You know that the Pharisees were offended after they heard this saying?" But Jesus answered and said, "Every plant which My heavenly Father has not planted shall be rooted up. Let them alone; they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into a ditch."

Alan Watt is with us tonight again, ladies and gentlemen, and Alan, thanks for being here.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: Now that was a good verse, wasn't it?

Alan: It was, yes.

Jackie: I thought so too, and it just happened to open up to that, the blind leaders of the blind. I read an email today. In fact it was from Henry Makow's website. He's Jewish and it appears to me that he truly is awakening because he's been exposing a lot of what is going on and he doesn't seem to be one of those that say oh well we're not Zionist Jews but yet they still embrace the Talmud and everything that goes with that. One item that he had written he said his family had disowned him because he was a traitor to his race and he had posted this and he said that he posted it not knowing if it was true or not, but the fact that the man who had made these statements seemed to have so much information that he put it on his website hoping that in fact if there was truth to it that wide exposure would maybe avert a catastrophe. What he was talking about actually it was something that some German guy wrote and this German guy claimed that he used to be an insider in Germany with the government and that there were plans – this was I think done originally on the 19th of December, and that there were plans by Wolfowitz and his gang to set off a nuclear explosion in Texas and he said that they weren't really sure if it was going to be Houston or maybe Atlanta but somewhere around there. And I read it, and as Henry Makow said, this guy might be a provocateur. He didn't use that word, but this might be just to cause more anxiety and fear and yet there was a ring of truth in what this guy was saying and it occurs to me that the faster people are waking up the faster they seem to be moving.

Alan: Well, yes, they have to. They've got a lot to do yet in a fairly short period of time. If they begin to lose public interest in their agenda then they'll have to create something to get them "onboard" as they say. They've been crying "wolf" for so long now with different alerts and terror alerts et cetera that the public eventually will go to sleep.

Jackie: Oh yes and once people finally settle down and quit going into hysteria or fear and anxiety and just start saying oh it's just another one of them. It strikes me that it's their modus operandi that as soon as people take kind of a sigh of relief and say well it's all smoke and mirrors, like on 9/11 there wasn't a clue. You just woke up one morning and there it was.

Alan: Although, it was in line with their agenda and by the law of averages it seems to be that every major catastrophe in the world happens in the direction that they want it to happen.

Jackie: Well yes and that's why I guess this had a ring of truth to me. I mean the provocateurs, the controlled opposition are very good and usually when I read that stuff I don't even finish reading it. I read a little portion and then just delete and for some reason I took the time to read this and like I said there was a ring of truth and even if it didn't occur that doesn't mean that something that dastardly isn't in the plans.

Alan: The fact is, as far as the agenda goes, nothing must stop it and anything which aids it will be done if required, regardless of the cost to human life, and that is the agenda. I think it was in "The Grand Chessboard" that Brzezinski put out in '98 that he went through the agenda basically beginning with Afghanistan, then Iraq, then Iran and Syria and that coincided with the New American Century agenda that Wolfowitz and Pearl and a few others have put together. Actually it was put together in the early '90's and then revamped in about '96, updated a little bit, but they're going full-out to accomplish that New American Century agenda and that's to force the one system worldwide on the few countries remaining who don't have this form of "democracy" as they call it.

Jackie: It's their democracy.

Alan: The Central Bank, the same schooling system to get the same education so that we're uniformly trained worldwide basically. That's what it's all about.

Jackie: The new man. The Homo-Sovieticus?

Alan: Basically it is a soviet system.

Jackie: We talked about that and I referred to this book many times, "Cogs in the Wheel" by Mikhail Heller, and that is exactly what they were doing in the Soviet Union for the 60 years when nobody could get in. Nobody could get out and they said that they had created actually a new species of man. It took millions of years for man to reach Homo sapiens and it took them only 60 short years to create an entirely new species and they call it Homo Sovieticus, soviet man or the new man, and in the book it explains that that is the blueprint that is being carried out around the world.

Alan: It is. We're being standardized. Everything is being standardized and you listen to news broadcasts from the BBC and then you turn to Radio Beijing with these English speaking--

Jackie: They all have the same accent though.

Alan: Yes and they all basically talk the same way about the same things and if you're not careful you won't realize that you're actually listening to Radio Beijing because what you're hearing is what the BBC gives out, which is declarations from different departments of government. You know the department of this has decreed et cetera, et cetera and I mean I grew up with that in Britain listening to that stuff.

Jackie: Alan, the British accent that they have is a little bit different than what I have heard the British accent. It's almost like a new accent that they have created for these announcers.

Alan: It's a transatlantic accent. That's what they call it. It's partly American, partly Oxford English and it's mixed together for the New World basically. Obviously they're all being trained regardless of whether they are from China or England in the same place.

Jackie: What do you make of the terrible tsunamis that hit Indonesia?

Alan: Well, it's exactly a year since they hit Iran with that earthquake and they called it Bam. The place was called Bam, B-A-M, like the comic books. When they strike something they put "Bam!" down, and now we have this one here hitting, again, countries or primarily the peoples who are classified as overpopulated by the UN itself and there are also a lot of Muslim countries involved there.

Jackie: I have an email here. I think it was maybe in New York Times and all I saw was the subject but it said "thousands from six different countries have died." How many countries did this include? It said six, but do you know which ones?

Alan: They don't know yet because from epicenter the title waves traveled over 4,000 miles in all directions.

Jackie: Is that normal?

Alan: Well, this is an incredibly large underwater plate shift basically. No, we don't have these ones all the time.

Jackie: They said that this area that the tsunamis are almost unheard of in this area and also there is an AP article. I just once again read the headline. Well I actually read a couple of paragraphs of it and they said the governments or whatever did not – they knew it was coming, Alan. This is an AP article and that no warning was given and their excuse was that they didn't have the technology. Yes, uh-huh. So in other words, as you read that, you see these creatures or the minions of the creatures sitting high and dry knowing that this huge title wave is going to come and kill maybe hundreds of thousands by the time it's over.

Alan: Yes, because they still have millions homeless now and no fresh drinking water. It will all be contaminated for a long time and of course food shortages and a lot of children that can't survive on their own, so this could end up in the millions Jackie: Why don't you talk here for just a minute, I'll be right back.

Alan: This is an odd thing to happen at this time when they are talking about overpopulation. Years ago, most of the Western world's governments had departments working on methods of depopulating areas and they called it "Silent Weapons for Quiet Wars." Of course something that could be put down to either weather abnormalities or underground tectonic shifts fall right into that category because they did experiments and had many meetings on creating disasters by exploding atomic weapons in these large crevasses basically underneath the sea.

Jackie: Yes, I grabbed a book and I've shared this with our listeners before, but we have new listeners and in case there's anybody who doubts that this could have been caused by man, this little booklet is from the UN. It's basic facts about the United Nations. I ordered it right from the UN in New York and they're going down a list of different treaties that have been important first steps in the form of international arms control agreements et cetera, and in 1977; listen folks. This is called "The Convention on the Prohibition of Military or Any Other Hostile Use of Environmental Modification Techniques." It's called the ENMOD Convention. Now listen to this. This was in '77. They had the technology then and working.

"It prohibits the use of techniques that would have widespread or long lasting or severe effects through deliberate manipulation of natural processes and cause such phenomenon as earthquakes, title waves and changes in climate and in weather patterns."

It prohibits the use not the research so this technology has been available for that many years already and as Alan said, many times when they talk about technology they have it's old news.

Alan: They've had it for a long time and yet, because it's still in a sort of secret mode from the public, they can use it and as long as there is that slight possibility or plausibility that this is just a weather phenomenon, most of the public will accept that.

Jackie: Isn't it interesting they specifically in this little overview it mentioned earthquakes, title waves, et cetera.

Alan: Yes and that's just the High Altitude Auroral Research Program, the HAARP Project. Not only can it shift the jet stream, which it has definitely done for the last week, but it can also cause the earthquakes. They can also create hurricanes or tornadoes offshore and bring them anywhere inland and that's all in the treaties.

Jackie: When hurricane season was ravaging Florida I read an item to our listeners from Tom Bearden and I'm not so sure about who he really is but I believe that a lot of his information is accurate and basically he gave a very layperson an explanation of how they can steer hurricanes wherever they want them to go.

Alan: For the last week they showed the weather pattern on the weather forecast every night and we saw the jet stream basically crossing through Mexico, doubling back, going up the West Coast of Canada up to Alaska and in clockwise motion it was coming down through Nova Scotia on the East Coast in a perfect circle and then coming up through Louisiana and joining itself again. For a whole week they showed this big circle going around the continent.

Jackie: You were telling me about that last evening and I wasn't actually picturing as you were talking how wide a circle that thing made.

Alan: That's right because we were getting minus 45 degrees – 45 degrees below freezing here. That's how cold it was up here and of course by the time that went over land and right down to Louisiana way to join itself, it was freezing rain, but this literally affected the whole continent. On the first night they showed this strange phenomena the weather forecaster on the local station did say that the jet stream was doing a very odd thing and he never mentioned that again, of course, because he must have been told.

Jackie: They probably were told leave your comments to yourself.

Alan: Yes, that's how it's done and as long as it's presented and just read the weather off as they normally do, even if you're seeing pink clouds it will make no difference because most people will not think for themselves anymore.

Jackie: Unless they hear a comment like that from a weather person that would make them stop to think. I can remember during a hurricane, the last one named – what the heck was its name? Anyway, I heard on the Weather Channel their expert talking about different hurricanes and then he went way down south there to that last one and he said this is the furthest south that a hurricane or that a tropical storm has ever been named for a hurricane. In other words what I was hearing was that they knew what they were going to do with that tropical storm that was so far south they had never done it before, because if it was natural weather it could have just worn itself out before it did any damage whatsoever.

Alan: Yes and all of the spraying of the skies is all part of the HAARP Project because the metallic particles and the barium which they're spraying basically is making the air more conductive to electromagnetic energy and so they can certainly amplify the effects of it. Ultimately I think they'll probably go in the same direction that Brzezinski also talked about in the "Technetronic Era" where people's minds will be affected by this kind of technology. They can make you placid or angry or whatever they want you to feel by using electromagnetic pulses at certain frequencies.

Jackie: Frequencies that match the brain frequencies?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Dr. Begich was on a long time ago and in his book "Angels Don't Play this HAARP" he did address that and they actually have experimented with it and besides giving people mood swings, depression, anger, sometimes euphoria, they can actually cause homicidal or suicidal thoughts, emotions that get so deep that people go off the deep end.

Alan: Then you couple that in with a guy from the same clique, that was Aldous Huxley. He gave a speech at Berkeley University in 1962 and he said that most people simply aren't happy and researchers such as the Tavistock Institute which he worked for had been busily working to find a new soma drug or something that would make people feel happy regardless of what they actually worked at in real life.

Jackie: Actually, Alan, it seems to me that those drugs from what I know of them really don't create emotions unless it's deeper depression but that it mostly eliminates emotions, so maybe when he said the drug soma or something like soma – they do have a drug named soma out there now, but that it would make them happy. Maybe what he really meant was it would make them happy.

Alan: This is all to do with control. I mean that's the bottom line with all governments and then supergovernment. It's all about control and how to get the public from where they are now into this new society, which will be completely new. Culture, everything, ways of doing things, it will all be different. It will be a planned society and an organized society where there's no free will really. There will be laws for everything and permits for everything in the next phase that's coming up and that won't be the final phase. Cloning eventually will be the norm down the road and those ones who are compliant are the ones who will be cloned.

Jackie: You were telling me about a program they have now that they're actually cloning pets for pets for people.

Alan: Yes, right out of that Schwarzenegger movie where I think it started off with the little girl's pet being cloned because it died.

Jackie: Which Schwarzenegger movie?

Alan: "The 6th Day" or something and then ultimately of course he was cloned in the movie too, but they had a shopping mall where you went in with a sample of your pet's DNA and they would clone your pet. Lo and behold, it was announced at the weekend that a lady in the U.S. (and they wouldn't disclose her name, naturally), but she had just got a duplicate of her cat made. Her cat had just died and sure enough, she had the money. She had the bucks and they cloned a kitten for her, an identical replica of her cat.

Jackie: And of course, if that doesn't work we'll never hear about it?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: You led us right into something that I would like you to talk about because they use entertainment to get us used to something, accepting of something or sometimes, as you've said, just to mock the victims. They tell us exactly what they're doing or what they intend to do and in the book "The Committee of 300" John Coleman the former MI5 or MI6 guy, like there's such a thing. Anybody listening, folks, he's done some very good work and again there are hooks in them. I have an audio tape of a talk that he was doing for a group and what he had said to this group is that he was ejected from England with only the clothes on his back and he came to America. You know that is so phony, Alan. In fact, when he was on the air with us I asked him about that and he denied it was him. I mean it said right on the audio tape Dr. John Coleman and you could hear the voice, you could recognize the voice but he didn't want to admit that he said that because it's such a blatant – and first of all, there is no such thing as former CIA, MI6 or any of those. Anyway, in his book he did mention "the beginning of the end," if you would, with the Beatles and their music and they were lifted into the spotlight too. I would like you to address this because I am not sure what function it was they were to serve, but that was when they began in the '60's really making drastic changes in the "culture." You were talking about the fact that the Beatles never wrote one of their songs and I don't recall you telling us that before and I'd like you to address it.

Alan: Well, even leading up to that, you have to go into the 1800's because they'd already experimented with different kinds of music to find out how it affected people, primarily the young. They were going into disharmonic types of music, discords, that type of thing, which made certain audiences angry even. Remember in the late 1800's guys like H.G. Wells were pushing for "free love" as they called it and they had to destroy the current society and family by promoting promiscuity, knowing that the earlier children start the less likelihood there will be of a bonding on any permanent basis down through their lifetime. Then in the Roaring '20's during the illicit booze era which made it more daring to go into the booze cans and have parties et cetera, they came out with jazz.

Jazz had already been tested in the Soviet system and further developed to find its effects on young people and so they mixed it with drugs and so on and they came out with the miniskirt in the 1920's for the Charleston dance. Sure enough, you bring young people into the booze cans, miniskirts, dancing and pretty strong booze and they ended up with lots and lots of unwanted pregnancies and venereal diseases and because they didn't have the pill at that time it sort of faded away. Orphanages blossomed to take care of all the excess children that were unwanted and the clinics were full of people with syphilis et cetera and so that faded away; and from the '30's onwards the sciences in the West worked fervently on ways of fighting sexually transmitted disease such as syphilis and to find a way of birth control and voila! when they had it all, including the psychedelic drugs to go with it, which they had also experimented with, they gave you the pop era.

Jackie: Okay, let's hold it right there because we're taking our 60 second break here. Folks, we'll be right back with Alan Watt. You were talking about this lead up to what we're going to talk about with the Beatles and you had gotten through the Roaring '20's and they came up with the pill and they came up with a fix for the venereal diseases and then where?

Alan: Again the miniskirts, the same thing.

Jackie: In the '60's, yes, but I must admit I was one of the wearers of miniskirts.

Alan: And a whole new type of music just aimed at young people to get them going and it sex was plied openly. It's strange because in the BBC which was the only television station in Britain at that time and it's run by the government and at that time every employee of the BBC had to come from Eaton for security reasons, so basically these were minor aristocracies running the BBC. What I noticed when I was small, watching all this stuff, I thought, well, these people, why are the elite giving you a debased culture because it was very evident with the shows they were putting on for young people – at taxpayers expense, by the way. This is all funded by the taxpayers. The elite were giving you a culture which would obviously destroy the culture you already had and of course that's what it was intended to do. Sure enough, they gave you the flower power era, the rock groups and the free love, the pill at the same time they began to push for abortion clinics because there was still girls who didn't go on the pill and so they got the abortion clinics through, covertly at first and then openly; and sure enough, we see today that very few marriages have a chance of lasting more than three to five years.

Jackie: Say that again.

Alan: The chances of marriage today and promiscuity definitely has been a big part of it and they knew in the 1800's if they could get the children committing sexual acts, before even puberty if possible, then there's less likelihood that they would bond for life with a partner down the road. That's proven to be true and during the early 1900's Lord Bertrand Russell, another member of the aristocracy, had his own experimental schools in Britain where he was promoting this very thing to see how they could change children as they grew up. It had been tested in smaller controlled groups before it was let loose on the world and so they knew exactly how to do it and what the effects would be. There's nothing ever just blasted onto the scene by itself. It's all programmed.

Jackie: Very, very carefully and long time planned.

Alan: Then when the Beatles of course burst forth with probably more money behind them promoting them than anybody had ever had before and so they were famous before anybody really actually heard them.

Jackie: Thank you. When I hear or listen to old Beatle songs they seem so innocent and so will you explain what function did the Beatles serve and their music?

Alan: You have to listen to the words, number one.

Jackie: Well I have. It's been a long days night and hey Jude. I've listened to the words and only it's been a while, maybe I would hear something different. Can you think of something?

Alan: Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds, LSD and Tangerine. Mind you, we're seeing the tangerine skies now with the spraying, but they put the drug message and all the top groups put drug messages through.

Jackie: If people don't understand what that means, how does it get to them?

Alan: They knew what it meant. You'd me amazed how quickly children figure things out.

Jackie: Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds. Remember Puff the Magic Dragon?

Alan: Oh yes.

Jackie: That was supposed to be about I guess marijuana? I thought it was a cool song and I would have never thought about what they said that it means.

Alan: It's the same with Burl Ives. Burl Ives sang the Big Rock Candy Mountain and it was about homosexual pedophilia. It was an in-joke with all of the guys that understood it and this goes on all the time.

Jackie: How does this affect the listeners if they don't consciously understand what the words mean?

Alan: It's surprising how much of an effect through subconscious listening. Your subconscious can actually understand more than sometimes your conscious mind because your conscious is trying to scan things. It's very busy scanning things to censor out those things it doesn't like or whatever, but if your defenses are down and you're not scanning it, it goes right into the subconscious and your subconscious can figure things out much more quickly. The magazines as well that they bombarded all the youth with at that time also contained a lot of the messages and explained to the children what these things meant, like the Rolling Stones Magazine.

Jackie: Oh sure, there you go and a lot of the Rolling Stones Magazine was very popular, wasn't it?

Alan: It was a planned orchestrated blitz basically on the public. There were limousines going around universities, guys getting out and throwing big garbage bags of LSD over the walls. All free LSD to get the LSD culture going and that's how they started it. They were literally throwing bags over the walls for free and so this was an orchestrated blitz. Even on the BBC on the "Top of the Pops" as they called it, the shows that they gave you, they joked about this kind of thing going on as though it was all fun and how tongue-in-cheek this was. It was all fun and again I thought, well, Britain has probably had more control over its people (that's why they're called subjects) than any other culture in the West, why would the elite not only be allowing this but actually be the ones doing it? It was so evident because nothing was published in Britain unless the elite authorized it, so this is coming from the top.

Jackie: You were telling me about the writer of the Beatles songs and today what's is name that owns the--

Alan: Michael Jackson bought the rights.

Jackie: Okay. Tell our listeners about this.

Alan: The Beatles appeared on the BBC once again in the late '60's and they all said that they were broke and when they were asked why they were broke, there was a silence. They wouldn't explain, they looked at each other sort of knowingly and no one knew at that time why these guys would be broke. It turned out that they did not own the rights to supposedly their songs and never had. Then in the early '80's Theo Adorno (who was the actual owner of those songs) died and the songs went up for sale and Paul McCartney at that time put a bid in alongside Michael Jackson and Michael Jackson won the bid and he now owns the rights to the Beatles songs. The Beatles never have owned the titles of those songs.

Jackie: And they never wrote one of their songs?

Alan: I think maybe some of the little "drug-induced ditties" I call them, the simplistic stuff, they may added a bit here and there, but the big ones, no, they didn't. You can tell by the words too that someone much older had written them apart from the fact that much of the music could only have been done by someone who studied classical music and Theo Adorno was a professor of music.

Jackie: If somebody knew classical music, well, they would know that?

Alan: Yes. Even simple guitarists, if they look at the types of chords schemes and so on and tempo changes, this is beyond your typical three-chord wonder that you know of so well. Theo Adorno was one of the best professors really in Germany for many years in all kinds of music, but mainly classical, and he came over to Britain and headed the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra and he was best friends with the Queen of England and definitely worked with Martin, who was the producer for the records for the Beatles. I have no doubt at all it was him who wrote them because he certainly owned the rights of the songs.

Jackie: And what was their function?

Alan: The function again was to change society, change culture. Plato had said it thousands of years ago, that by his rights, as he said, we should control music very strictly because it effects the minds of the young. They knew from thousands of years ago how the effects can be on the young and they also knew that if they wanted to create a generation that would go to war they'd give them marching type songs and tunes, and if they wanted to generate a culture they'd give them lots of sensual music. This was meant to destroy what was in order to create that which might be, as they say in high masonry.

Jackie: What was for what might be. I may have done this but I want to mention this again just in case I didn't. A few ago, I got a call from a friend and said oh I'm watching this really beautiful movie on ABC and it's titled "The Five People You'll Meet in Heaven" and as soon as he said ABC I thought well there's something real wrong here and then I gave my sis a call. It was after the broadcast and asked her what she was doing and she said, oh, I'm watching the most precious movie and it was the same thing and so when it came on again I was able to tape it and watch it and there was some and see this is now – folks, I'm saying this so that you will be aware of this. Something that touches your heart that reaches in the truth, there was some very beautiful parts to that movie that would touch you, but knowing that it was ABC I was very clear that there was some message there, something. There was a hook and basically what I saw for the most part was the glorification of war, but I wanted to mentioned this because once again they're using entertainment and they're using our love and our compassion and our desire for spiritual truth to get their message across and that's exactly what I saw in it, Alan.

Alan: They use natural tribal instincts and bring them to the fore because regardless of the era we live in, we still have innate tribal instincts and they're the same instincts that are employed by all higher mammals. That's why they've studied such much of mammalian life forms to basically find out what are the easiest direct roads to effect humans and sure enough they know exactly what buttons to push. It's no coincidence that for the last 20 years they've generated the music down to its most primitive form to create a culture and a generation that would go off to war and be the new barbarians.

Jackie: It's their duty, it's honor and it is – that is exactly what they were – even though they showed the horrors of war. They did flashbacks of this guy who went to heaven and one of his old army buddies was there and it was terrible what they showed and yet, while they were showing you the horrors of war, they were instilling in people, unsuspecting people, that it's our duty. It's for honor. We do this for our country.

Alan: Meanwhile you have bunch or a clique basically running your country and thousands of think tanks working fervently on ways to control the minds of the young to make them go off and fight in these wars.

Jackie: And if they can't get enough of them to do it, they'll set off a nuclear bomb.

Alan: Yes and they'll bring in the draft. See, youngsters have got their values from the state and from media, as Bertrand Russell promised would eventually happen, because they've all been brought up with kindergarten teachers and so on and Bertrand Russell said that in the 1920's. He says we won't have to take the children from the parents at birth. Through experimentation, he said, we found that we can inculcate values in the children if we even have them for only four or five hours a day at kindergarten age and so the moral values of the parents will be of no consequence.

Jackie: I have read a lot of the brain research that they've done and they said from the time the child is born up until the age of nine that their brain is actually literally exploding and all these neuron-synapses are being created and that the child continues to learn after the age of nine but up until that time their learning curve is just awesome and they want that child as young as they can – and get the child. So those early years, folks, in pre-schools – any pre-school today as far as I am aware has to meet with state and federal standards and in order to do that then there is certain propaganda, certain techniques that they have to use, so if you have a child, or a grandchild, niece or nephew that's in pre-school and think it's so wonderful, think again. Think again and as long as you can keep your children out of those darn government indoctrinations centers, because if you think that what you're going to try to give them at home is going to do any good, their techniques are down to a fine, fine art and the technology today that your values that you would like to instill can be erased in an afternoon.

Alan: It's a perfect art today actually.

Jackie: I know that. One of the things that we were going to discuss and we haven't is the report that you were telling me about and maybe you would come back with us tomorrow evening?

Alan: Sure.

Jackie: If you would do that I would like you to zero in on that tomorrow and share it with our listeners because once again it is relevant and folks I want you to know I've had comments from listeners and not comments from people that say, oh, why are you bringing Alan Watt on all the time? Most of them are pleased to have Alan back again but it's been suggested that if I have Alan on all the time it will become the Alan Watt program. I don't really – how can I say this? I don't care who it is that is presenting the information to you that I believe is relevant and if I had a guest on every single night that was doing the presenting, if I believed it was relevant and that it could make a difference, I would do that because where I fit in in this broadcast, in my mind, in my heart, I am a seeker of the truth. I am very clear that of all that I have learned that what I have learned is the tip of an iceberg and so therefore it is an open process, an ever unfolding process, and I bring Alan Watt on with us because he has insight and a gift of talent that I see that I want to be able to share with you and so Alan will be back with us again tomorrow night. There's some stuff that I want to share with you, so on Wednesday probably, unless something comes up, I will save it until then and have Alan back tomorrow night.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
December 28, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. This is Tuesday and it is the 28th of December in the year 2004. We're coming up onto the beginning of a new year, ladies and gentlemen. I will begin right now first of all with our spiritual message and this is a familiar one. John 17 beginning with verse 36 with 35. Pontius Pilot talking to Jesus asked. He said "you're a nation and the chief priests have delivered you to me. What have you done?"

I want you to know by the way I am reading from a King James Version. I just take out the thee's and thou's as I'm reading, folks. I'm not reading from a new international version et cetera, not that it probably doesn't make that much difference, but just for your information I just take out the thee's and thou's.

He said "your own nation and the chief priests have delivered you to me. What have you done? Jesus said my kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight that I should not be delivered to the Jews but now is my kingdom not from hence."

Then in verse 37 Pilot said: "Well are you a king then? And Jesus answered, you say that I am a king. To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth hears my voice."

Alan, if you will give me just another minute or so, there's something I wanted to address, ladies and gentlemen. Jeff called me today. We had a conversation and mentioned to me. He did not say this out of meanness or anything. It was just part of our conversation that he said that he had people say to him comment that the problem with listening to Sweet Liberty is that I am such a downer and I was surprised to hear that. I wasn't offended and I do know absolutely that he did not say that to "hurt my feelings" or anything else. It was just part of our conversation. I want to say this to you for those of you who feel that listening to Sweet Liberty is a downer or that I'm a downer. There may be times when in my voice I sound like I'm down and then if I sound like I am, it's probably because I am.

This is not an exciting thing that we're doing, other than the excitement maybe would be in the opportunity to present truth as we know it as we're discovery it as it's unfolding, but what is happening in this world I find nothing uplifting about it. The plan that is ongoing for the mind and the soul of the people in this world and so therefore I just wanted to say that if I sound down sometimes it's probably because I am because sometimes the sadness it's difficult sometimes to be able to step outside of it and not have the deep sadness that's there within me for what is happening and the lies that we have all been born into. That angers me and I am also saddened by it because I've said that my life's search has been a search for spiritual truth and why with these "churches" with the holy book and all these holy men who are out there in the churches supposedly leading their flocks to where I don't know. We have had to search for spiritual truth because it has been hidden from us and that's what I wanted to say. Alan, thank you for your patience because I've been 10 minutes here.

Alan: That's an interesting place to start. It's odd that someone would complain about a person or a program being down, when the whole of the shortwave is generally an awful lot worse in what they reveal as to the agenda. There are programs on at one in the morning for three hours and then another guy on for three hours and it's just bad news after bad news after bad news. In between them, as you say, they have the holy rollers who are either welcoming what's happening to the world and its takedown because it's just so wicked and evil except for those guys themselves as preachers and another Christian bunch are just so happy that it's in God's hands.

Jackie: That this is God's plan?

Alan: It's God's plan, yes, so for anyone to complain that the show is down, I wonder what else they are listening to on the shortwave.

Jackie: I wasn't offended. Sometimes we can fake to ourselves. I felt nothing, I mean not any anger or upset. I thought wow that's amazing.

Alan: What you could do you know is get some bells and whistles and funny sounds and intersperse them between vocals and so on and a few comical songs in between and maybe that would brighten it up. Oh, wait a minute. That's done already. Sorry.

Jackie: I told Jeff – we were talking about some people, those of us on the shortwave and et cetera that we talk about all the problems and we never talk about solutions. I have been there, done that and the one thing I do stand by is that if a person is going to get involved it's in our own backyard and I do know that it begins with us first, period. But on a political level, the most powerful work can be done on a political and on a state level. As I was explaining to Reverend Ted Pike, he wanted us all to call the Congress. Well, my God, he already told us that 48 of the states have passed the hate crime laws, so why would we call the Congress? I told Jeff today, I said where I'm at right now and I am moved from within to where I'm at, I cannot imagine anything more important that we can offer our listeners than an opportunity to come out of the lies.

Alan: Yes and they truly are in the lies. The fact is that politics is not only corrupt. Everybody involved in politics has been already selected and pre-selected before they're put up for election and it's been like that for centuries. That's the bottom line.

Jackie: And they follow somebody else's orders.

Alan: Yes they do. They're hand picked for it and there's not a single one up there in the Senate who isn't a Mason.

Jackie: Or Senate or House of Representatives and we've had enough time to see what happened to Congressman George Hansen when he was telling the truth about the money system. They literally sent a helicopter and picked him up off the steps of building wherever he was doing his speech and they took that man away and for a long time nobody even knew where he was because they were railroading or taking him from one prison to another. The man was tortured, no, maybe with burned matches et cetera, but in leg chains. This is U.S. Representative in handcuffs and leg chains for hours without being able to get up and use the bathroom and look at what happened to Congressman Jim Traficant and there's another one, Congressman Wes Cooley in Oregon. He almost went to prison with false charges because he wouldn't play the game up there, so I've been long enough in this that I have seen that calls to the U.S. Congress are – I know that people who do it. I mean, Alan, I was there and done it, but it's futile because they will do what they are told to do or they're going to get killed or they're going to get sent to prison.

Alan: Or loss of money, that's the big one. God giveth and God takes away, and there's not one of these characters who got up there and became wealthy that didn't have the doors opened for them and just as easily those doors can be closed and they all know that, because this is a complete system we live in of control. It's complete and money is the key because everything revolves in the world on money. Not on food or clothes, but on money and everybody's in the pocket of the bankers as they say. They can have their loans foreclosed just in an instant if they don't play the game and they all know it, but mind you, because they've been selected and psychologically tested et cetera, that's why they're up there. They do play the game and they enjoy it.

Jackie: This seems almost unbelievable. It was a newspaper article. Not that everything in the newspapers is true but sometimes they do report the news. The judge in Colorado that was going to be hearing Tim McVeigh's trial, I don't now what was going on behind the scenes before he straightened his act out, but just before the trial his daughter was in Hawaii and she accidentally fell into a volcano and this judge during that trial admitted no evidence whatsoever that would have exonerated Tim McVeigh, so we know what they do.

Alan: The shortwave itself has its fronts as well. There's no doubt about it. There are people on shortwave radio who are definitely fronts for the system, although they play supposedly against the system. They do bring people down psychologically by overwhelming people with the enormity of all of this. On the other hand, people have to know what the agenda is because ultimately whatever decisions are made all stem to the individual.

Jackie: Yes and we are every day at every moment in a sense, well maybe not in a sense, but actually faced with choices, but we should think ahead of time about what the possibility is. I cannot think of anything more exciting, if you would, to realize, to become aware of the fact that we are one with our creator and the power within us and to know that we don't have to pray to some saint. We don't have to do a thousand rosaries. We don't have to jump through hoops to be in touch.

Alan: Or over goats.

Jackie: Over goats?

Alan: That's the Masons.

Jackie: To know the truth of that to me is the most important and it's what helps me to continue on knowing that.

Alan: It's also odd that so many people who worship the exoteric Jesus through their churches seem to miss all the vital parts that are in the New Testament. They miss the point that he came as a man of sorrows. He wasn't jumping up and down and saying let's all be happy, as they do in the churches or at least the churches have turned into those kind of churches. The reason he was a man of sorrows was because he was conscious and because he was conscious he knew the state of the world in his own day and it was completely corrupt as it is today. He knew the suffering of the people because of the corruption and nothing has really changed; and his message was not just be happy. That was not the message, but this cultural Christianity that's been an invention over the last hundred years basically has altered the functions and the purposes of the churches.

Jackie: Yes and then people celebrate in their churches and in their hearts, I guess, what is happening today because they truly believe that it is the plan of a loving Heavenly Father Creator and I remember Rick Wiles. He was on in fact this time in this frequency before I came here, he is doing something on TV now, I believe, but I heard him say one time, I know what's happening out there. I see it and then he went on to say but I'm not concerned because I know Jesus is coming back and he's going to establish his throne in Jerusalem and I am going to be in the front row or something like that; and then he's going, come Jesus, come Lord Jesus. In other words, basically what the man was saying is be joyous because all that is happening is happening because the time is near and now we'll have a kingdom on earth. Jesus said, "my kingdom is not of this world," and when you mentioned what they meant or what they don't discuss.

Alan: Well, really, they can't discuss it because they know deep down if they really consciously take time and think about certain things, that what they're really doing is going along with a culture and not a truth. It's a culture which was created for them to keep them to be happy sheep you see who are grazing and of course sheep are meant to be slaughtered. That's the whole point of being a sheep.

Jackie: Yes. A lot of listeners have missed broadcasts that we've done and I recall one time and I've seen the photographs, the pharaohs had the shepherd crooks. They have the statues or engravings or whatever and what you explained is – will you explain it if you would, Alan?

Alan: You'll see all the pharaohs with their arms crossed in front of their chest and that symbol is the symbol of X, which is the illumined man even today. In one hand they have the short symbol, not the long crook but it's a stylized crook of the shepherd and in the other hand he has the rod to beat you; and of course the whole idea through law is to coerce people into going along and they use the crook, in other words. That's the symbol of the crook for the shepherd and if the sheep don't go along then you beat them with the rod and that's called force. Nothing has changed today. All laws are put out there in the full knowledge that 90 percent of the public no matter what the law is will obey it automatically.

Jackie: You mentioned one time that you didn't believe that Jesus referred to us as sheep because it would be a tremendous insult because sheep are so stupid, that the shepherd's crook is used if they get themselves in a corner, they don't even have enough sense to back up. They just stand caught and they reach out with that crook and they pull them out of the corner that they're in. Remember you talked about the word repent? Talk about that please.

Alan: Repent is also a compilation of "pent," which was the pent-upness of an animal or a group of animals that were ready to be captured. In ancient times they used to come around coastlines and literally men with nets would circle little islets and they would pen-up the sheep and that's why you have pentlands.

Jackie: That's why you have what?

Alan: A place called pentlands. Pentland firth and pentland forth.

Jackie: Pentland?

Alan: That's where the ships came in and that's where they raided the coastline for sheep – not for the sheep, but for slaves basically and so they would literally net them and that's where the whole idea of penning sheep came from.

Jackie: And repent?

Alan: Repent, again, it's symbolic of an esoteric meaning. It's like regenerate or repopulate the world in Genesis and you have repent, so that which is done once can always be done again if you use the same techniques over and over and over. That's exactly what law is.

Jackie: What did you say the other day about Genesis?

Alan: It's the gene of Isis.

Jackie: Gene of Isis and I want to remind our listeners that IS-RA-EL is actually a three part word, ISIS, RA and EL.

Alan: That was common on the Kabbalah and the Talmud, which came from Babylon, was to use one or two letters of each word and make a new word from them. That was very common and of course you also use the same technique when you were pointing out opposites because they have an agenda and they've had it for thousands of years and they talk about using the laws of nature to bring about the agenda. In nature you have spring, and you have fall and you have summer and you have winter, so you have opposites. They literally create the opposites to create conflicts, which bring change, which they then direct into their agenda and so that's why they created the U.S. and its opposite, supposedly, the Soviet Union. US—SU, you see?

Jackie: Oh my and UN?

Alan: UN, which is one. It's the French word for one, so everything is in front of our faces if we care to see it.

Jackie: Something I've noticed in newspapers and reports et cetera, the UN isn't U period N period. It is just the plain old capital U, capital N and I've noticed sometimes they're doing that with the U.S. now – US

Alan: US, that's right and it's interesting that the main password in the time of Franklin and Washington and Voltaire and so on for Masons was "nous" ("nu"), which is N-O-U-S, which came from the Greek and then it goes into the French for the same meaning actually and it means "us". That was their password.

Jackie: US?

Alan: They play these games all down through history and of course most children can't figure it out and they have no reason to figure it out. They think that if there's anything worth knowing the teacher is going to explain it to them, but you find the teachers don't know themselves. In the times of John Dee, for instance, who basically was a high Kabbalist in Queen Elizabeth I. government and he was also a spy in Europe for her, his code number was 007.

Jackie: James Bond?

Alan: That's right. John Dee himself created the term the British Empire and even Britain – in British means--

Jackie: Hold this because we are going to take our 60-second break. Now remember what you were saying so that I hear you on the other side. For those of you who like to have some type of confirmation, there's oftentimes Alan will and especially when he was first on with us I probably said at least a dozen times just because Alan Watt says this doesn't mean its true and I'm saying that because I have not researched it, but we would have to do our own research. The next thing I began getting emails and packages mailed to me people saying look at this, look at this, it's exactly what Alan was talking about and it was difficult. I went through a time period where it's so difficult to grasp the enormity of the lies that we have been literally born into. History is not what we've ever been told. There was a time and a period of time and I told Alan this, that I feel like I'm in another world, some place and everything I look at looks unreal to me. In fact, Alan said, well, that's a good place to start and the books that he put together go a long way toward giving evidence and confirmation of some of the statements that he makes that sound so out of it that we would have a tendency maybe sometimes to set it aside or put it away or let it go in one ear and out the other and that's one thing that I have never done is just say I don't believe and then let it go. It's important for us to keep in our minds and do our own research if possible and take advantage of the research that others have done and this is what Alan has put together in the books. [See www.cuttingthroughthematrix.com for details.]

Alan: We were talking about John Dee coining the term British Empire.

Jackie: And when was this?

Alan: It was in the 1500's and "British" hadn't been used before really and it's a compilation of two Hebrew words and "Brit" means covenant and "ishi" means people, so obviously Britain had a different agenda from its very beginning than the average person who lived there ever knew.

Jackie: Did I hear this right? "Brit" means covenant and "ish" means people?

Alan: Yes. This was also reiterated in the writings of Francis Bacon who was around the same period. He said that we are creating the international language of the future called English. Prior to that, really, English was mixture of Germanic tongues and Celtic tongues, so they literally created the English language in that period. Then of course King James came out with the Bible to present it to the people. That was part of the reason for that Bible coming out then with that particular type of language and you find the same thing was going on in Germany with Luther and elsewhere, so they update the languages and change the languages through bibles basically.

Jackie: Oh, thank you for bringing this up. We were talking about this in our recent conversation and I have a Geneva Bible here, which is allegedly a photocopy of the Geneva Bible, and I didn't do the whole thing chapter and verse, but as I was picking at random different verses from different chapters, books et cetera, I didn't find anything different. You mentioned that the footnotes had a lot to do with it.

Alan: They put their comments in.

Jackie: Yes, the comments on the side notes, but you said that that Geneva Bible was Calvin's bible?

Alan: No.

Jackie: Okay. What did you say?

Alan: The Geneva Bible was put together by people who exiled who'd left Britain who were all Rosicrucian's basically and who were putting out a Bible supposedly for the people and they used older translations obviously to put it together. They had changes in it too, because instead of "king," wherever "king" was mentioned, they used the word "power"; whereas King James since he was the representative of God basically, as a sovereign, changed it all to "king." James' version omitted "power" and simply put "king" in all those places.

Jackie: But it's very much the same as the Geneva Bible, isn't it?

Alan: It's similar. It's a different flowery language. It's a more flowing poetic type of style.

Jackie: Are there different books in the Geneva Bible that weren't in? What is the difference between the King James and how long is the Geneva Bible?

Alan: It was put out not too long before King James first edition and they used to call it the Breechers Bible.

Jackie: The what?

Alan: The Breecher. Like breeches, you know.

Jackie: Britches?

Alan: Yes, and the reason for it being is that--

Jackie: Like pants?

Alan: Yes, because they changed the part about the fig leaf and so on for Adam for his loincloth into breeches for some reason and so they called it the Breechers Bible and I guess it was a play on preachers as well. In even older ones, if you go through the different Aramaic texts, you'll find that it was the same square lambskin that the Masons use today.

Jackie: His fig leaf?

Alan: That's right, so this has been on the go for a long time. Getting back to Britain, as I say that was named Britishi.

Jackie: What was England called before it was called England?

Alan: England was just England and Scotland was Scotland and you had Ireland and Wales, and so they united it then they called it the United Kingdom and then in John Dee's day they called it the British or Great Britain and the people were called British or covenant people and most of them don't even know that today.

Jackie: What is that supposed to mean, covenant people?

Alan: Obviously there's a covenant here being brought into play that the people were unaware of, expect those who did bring it into play. It had a mission to fulfill in other words and John Dee talked about that mission, that an empire would be created which would encompass the whole globe and ultimately bring the whole world under this one governmental system. It was written about in his day.

Jackie: Is the same priesthood behind all this?

Alan: Same priesthood, yes, and he read Hebrew and the Kabbalah and he wrote extensively about the Kabbalah, as did many of the later ones that came along after him.

Jackie: Alan, is the Kabbalah evil?

Alan: The Kabbalah is like all the writings, basically, there's always an exoteric which most people pick up on but they seldom see the esoteric. It takes almost a mindset to be able to pick out the real meanings underlying the initial writings and therefore the Kabbalah coupled with the Mishnah, which is the oral tradition supposedly--

Jackie: The Mishnah Torah.

Alan: It's supposed to be the oral tradition given by the mythical Moses. In other words, here's a bunch of laws for the exoteric people, the people who will follow, and here's the explanatory notes that go into detail for the adept basically. It was decreed system even back then. Coupled with the Kabbalah and underlying all its mysticism, if you get underneath it, you'll find it's a system basically. It's a coding type of thing and a system all to do with where this plan, the great work, is going.

Jackie: When you mentioned coding, there are books out about the Bible codes and I think most of it is in the Old Testament but it is pretty awesome the way they point out certain things. At first I was really impressed and then I thought, well, the creatures that sat and penned all this had a reason for what they were doing, but I know that people who have read these books on the Bible codes and then you go back into the Old Testament and go figuring out the difference verse and say, oh my goodness, but it is their own secret little code. I think a lot of people buy into it and say, well, this has to be the work of God.

Alan: I know. Those people you have to just leave to their comfort because that's their comforter. That's all they have.

Jackie: I guess I can relate because I have been taken in in many ways throughout my life. There were certain things like I said when I was 15 years old and started reading the Old Testament I said, no, this is not so. This is not God and then of course what is that word God is the word they gave us, but I've been taken in and it takes somebody saying something sometimes, Alan. I had a friend in Illinois and we got into a discussion about the Bible and he was very much into the every jot and tittle is the word of God, and I asked him how he explains all of the contradictions et cetera and doesn't he believe that it has been tampered with by man. It was written by man and he said, no, God would never allow it. But there are some people who will suddenly stop and say, wait a minute, this makes sense to me what you're saying.

Alan: What it is though is that person is ready for it.

Jackie: Yes and maybe that's why we do these broadcasts for those who have an eye to see and an ear to hear.

Alan: It's a fact that the exoteric or cultural religions and that's what I see around me. You're born into a cultural religion where there's formulas and baptisms and rituals and that's you. You're a Christian and you parrot this and you parrot that, but you don't think, of course, and if you do think you become a danger to the congregation because you're not supposed to be a thinker. Of course we're meant to think – seek ye the truth. Meanwhile they walk into a church and it's like picking a ready-made suit. It's all there. It's for you. They have the pants there, just the right size, so is the jacket. Wear this and you're one of us. That's your ready-made religion, so where's the seeking for the truth in there? The truth has to be truly sought and you start with yourself, and of course that's always the first step. Long before Jesus, in the original religions the first death was dying to the world and it's also dying to the old self and you could only die to the old self by examining yourself and then the changes began within the person. This was always known of course, but now it's just a formula where you repeat after me and that's it.

Jackie: A friend of mine after Steve Jacobsen was on in 1998, it had to have been sometime in the summer because we were on at 6:00 p.m. We were talking about mind control and I said well given that we're pretty clear the government isn't going to set up deprogramming centers, what do you have to offer our listeners? He said, well, unfortunately most people believe that we are human beings when in fact we are spiritual beings inhabiting or emanating a physical body and he said in order to escape – not escape but not submit to the mind control and the brainwashing, then we have to begin to go within because that is where the answers are. The truth is within us and he said meditate and I knew the minute he said the word at that time that I was going to hear some flack and a friend called and said I just love Steve Jacobsen but he's gone New Age on us.

He mentioned the word meditation. I got in Strong's Concordance and found the word meditation about 18 or 19 times. But what she said is we don't want to go delving into ourselves because we are so evil and yucky that it would dredge up all that terrible stuff and when you talk about examining ourselves I've been doing this for a long time and there are times when we see. I have an attitude that needs to be changed or questioned. Why am I feeling this way right now? Why am I feeling angry or what is this feeling I'm feeling because it isn't peaceful and so therefore we get a chance to really take a look at where we're at. What is pulling our strings, so to speak, and I think the most important thing for us to know for our listeners for all of us is that who we truly are is a perfect creation of our creator and all of that yucky stuff that she said we wouldn't want to get into is exactly what we have to get into if we know in our hearts that who we truly are, what we truly are is a spiritual being in the image, if you would, or one with our creator.

Alan: The symbol of Jesus symbolizes the pure spiritual nature and of course Judaism represents the pure earthly physical nature.

Jackie: Material?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: I wonder if people notice this, Alan, that in the Old Testament Jehovah promises his chosen people all who do his commandments.

Alan: Yes. It's like a mafia boss that says follow me and I'll take care of you.

Jackie: Yes, but it's all material rewards.

Alan: That's right. You'll prosper and live off the fat of the land and so Judaism is law and material. It's the rules of the physical life for the purely physical life and the spiritual side doesn't come into it, at least not the Christian one anyway or the Jesus one, put it that way. However, going back to what we said earlier about the British, Dee claimed at the time when the Romans came into Britain there was one little tribe called Britanni and that's why he used the name Brit, but really the way he spelled it in his initial writings was in Hebrew so it was definitely pointing at the people. When Reverend Pike comes on your show you should ask him because I think he knows that it's the B'nai B'rith, which is the Sons of the Covenant, that are putting these laws in front of the Congress and all the other parliaments and they're being signed into law. B'nai B'rith is the Jewish wing of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. I don't think he mentions that.

Jackie: I'm writing.

Alan: A Masonic group is writing laws for governments, you see.

Jackie: You know what? You're right. He does know that.

Alan: He does, okay.

Jackie: Well, he does know that it is the B'nai B'rith behind all this.

Alan: They are the Jewish wing of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry.

Jackie: Wow. Jewish wing of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry.

Alan: That's right. Don't forget that Albert Pike who was the head of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry in his own book "Morals and Dogma" said, "make no mistake. Masonry is a religion." Why is a religious body making laws for everyone else? That's never been asked or challenged.

Jackie: It's like what's his name, Moses Mendelssohn. Was that his name, Moses Mendelssohn? That Judaism is not a religion, it is a law religionized. Isn't that what you were just saying?

Alan: Albert Pike also said, make no doubt about it that "Lucifer is God."

Jackie: He said that in "Morals and Dogma"?

Alan: "Morals and Dogma," yes.

Jackie: Well, he is the lord of this world.

Alan: Lord of the world, absolutely, that's Jehovah. That's the big secret that been hidden from everyone for so long. In the beginning they were gods, Elohim, which was plural, and eventually this little earthly god, the volcano god, took over.

Jackie: The volcano god? Is that Jehovah?

Alan: That's Jehovah, yes.

Jackie: Actually, wasn't that like a phantom that the priesthood made up for people to worship?

Alan: Basically the volcano symbolized again a pyramid with the top blowing, which is the fire, the fire in the middle, and that's the symbol again of the logic. That's why Mr. Spock in Star Trek was a Vulcan. He ran on law and logic, you see. It's all symbolic and if you look at the little badges they get and cards for their induction, the boys in Judaism, when they're 12 or 13--

Jackie: When they get Bar Mitzvah?

Alan: Yes. You'll see right there that that's a symbol of a volcano blowing smoke and that's the symbol of – again, it's not real, a real people doing a real thing, it's a priesthood, not a big priesthood either, who's manipulated all the religions down through the ages and it's all symbolic and allegorical of this priesthood. The volcano is the smoke by day and the fire by night.

Jackie: You mean it's talked about in the Bible? In the Old Testament?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Smoke by day and fire by night.

Alan: Yes, and that's all symbolic and allegorical of an ancient, ancient priesthood that's many, many thousands of years old.

Jackie: Older than the Pharisees?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Like in the Protocols they say that the plan that they have been working towards for the past, I think they say either 20 or 25 centuries, is about to come in to fruition, but actually it is older than that?

Alan: It's older and apparently it's been tried before in different ages.

Jackie: Tried before and not accomplished?

Alan: It gets to a certain point and then it gets demolished.

Jackie: I like that a lot. They've never made it yet and here we are, still on the radio and still able to talk about it, Alan. Thank you for being with us tonight. Ladies and gentlemen, we'll be back with you tomorrow night. Thank you for being here and keep an open mind and ask, seek and knock. That's what Jesus tells us to do. Seek ye the truth and you will know the truth and it will make you free.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
December 29, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. This is Wednesday. It is the 29th of December in the year 2004 and I want to remind you that this is the last broadcast night for us of the week.

I want to share our spiritual message and then we'll get on with this Wednesday night broadcast. This is prayer for the power of Holy Spirit.

"Come Holy Spirit and renew me so that I can reach my fullest potential. Fill me to overflowing with your gift, your power, your love. I open myself to receive all the Father has for me. He is the Creator of everything and I am his child. Therefore far more is available to me than I ever imagined. Help me to receive it all. Teach me how to use your gift. Instruct me in all truths. Fill my mind with your thoughts and help me to recognize your voice. Make me an instrument of the Father's will."

And I liked that. It's a wonderful reminder. And tonight we have a guest and I know that most of you, maybe all of you will be delighted to hear that Alan Watt is back with us again this evening. By the way, in case I forget, we won't be seeing you again back until after the New Year, so let me wish you all a blessed and peaceful and abundant New Year and now we'll bring Alan up. Hello, Alan, and thanks for being with us.

Alan: Yes, it's nice to be here. I keep forgetting about the New Year.

Jackie: Well, I thought about it tonight while I was getting dinner and I thought by the time we get back it will be after the incoming New Year, something I was going to mention to our listeners, Alan.

Alan: This is the new Soviet system. It's here. This is all in your face now and it actually does come under this new definition of "democracy." I've heard some of the talking heads in Canada from universities redefine democracy and what they say is that it's the will of the people but the government will stand up for the rights of all minorities without distinction. You can imagine the kind of chaos that's being brought on if they're going to promote all kinds of – but the thing is, they're very selective it seems on which ones they will accept and which ones they won't.

Jackie: As to what is a minority in the states, I know that there are certain states that the "minorities" far out number – what would I say, the majority, white basically, is what it is, because the minorities are of different races and I believe probably now that in the United States probably the minority has become the majority.

Alan: Well, you've got to become a new minority somehow and somehow get yourself registered as such to get any rights at all, because that's literally what it's come down to. In the new system which is global and international and a mish-mash of everything, then obviously they made this agenda long, long ago knowing exactly how they were going to do it and implement it and the white people aren't going to stand in their way. That's very obvious. The white man is a good worker bee, I think he was basically created for this and what I see now is that it's the white man – it's generally the poor white man too, and they're using a lot of the poor blacks over in the Middle East to finish off the job.

Jackie: The pathetic thing is that there are so many minions, so many useful idiots that helped to promulgate the plan and just shove it ahead full steam. We were talking about this tonight. I was talking with a friend about the land taxes and it doesn't matter if your home would be mortgage free or not. If you cannot pay your taxes you're losing it and in Pennsylvania here and I don't know if it's county by county or what, or township by township, but there is this thing called an occupational tax. Now there was a lady in Scranton. She was a retired woman and she got the bill for the occupational tax and she didn't pay it and they dunned her again and then threatened that she was going to get – so she called them and she said I don't qualify here, I don't have an occupation, I am a retired person; and the lady says this has nothing to do with your work. You are occupying space. This is true what I am telling you and it's sounds insane but look at all the townships or counties, whatever, that pass these school districts, that pass these absolutely ungodly insane taxes.

Alan: That was also the Communist Manifesto, wasn't it?

Jackie: Yes. It's also in the Protocols by the way.

Alan: Steadily increasing taxes leading eventually to the abolition of private property and of course that's well on it's way and you can see that when you look into the United Nations habitat areas of the very, very near future where everybody is supposed to live. They're going to tax people out of their homes especially in the rural areas and we're all supposed to live very happily for a while in these little habitat communities, which they admit they'll all be rental units. There will be no private property there and no private transportation either. That's in the habitat report from the UN, so this is the future and because most people don't understand what really is going on, they fall for all the excuses that are given at the time. "We simply have to do this because of et cetera, et cetera," but the fact is it was planned a long time ago and they're actually implementing it. I really believe that once the U.S. has brought this great new democracy to the rest of the world, the standardization of the system, then it will be time to pull the plug on the U.S.

Jackie: You said that a long time ago and when you said it I didn't even have a doubt that what you said was so, and it follows. I mean we can see it happening, Alan. You said that it was brought in. Exactly what you said was right and you remember when I got really ticked off at you about the Constitution? Sometimes you've rattled my cage, Alan.

Alan: Well, it's a process, isn't it? Understanding is a process. It's a process of shedding off that which we've been indoctrinated with in order to see clearly, and until we do shed off the indoctrination we'll never see clearly and therefore a new hood can be pulled over our eyes very easily and we're hoodwinked again.

Jackie: The hoodwink. That has to do with the hood that goes on the Freemasons? Isn't that where that came from?

Alan: Yes. It's the candidate's head.

Jackie: Hoodwinked.

Alan: Hoodwinked. They do this all the time. The people are being shepherded into the whole new system with the environment and the crisis and all the rest of it and they will go along with it. The ones who are in school right now at the present time truly believe everything that they've been indoctrinated with to do with saving the planet and they will be the inhabitants of these habitat areas.

Jackie: And be very proud and very pleased that they aren't ruining the rest of the world for the animals.

Alan: Yes and they'll also be the enforcers for those old people who live in the old ways et cetera who won't go along with it. They'll drag them off thinking they're doing the world a favor. This is why they could write Revelations a long time ago, spell out the agenda in Revelations, and say that the children would turn against their parents and the reason they could write that is because it had been done before.

Jackie: What is Revelations supposed to be, the revelations of John?

Alan: It's supposed to be, but you have to go into the whole esoteric meaning of what John is. The full name is Jonathan and John is EON, which is fire basically. The old mystery religion had its headquarters in Ionia at one time and that became the J when it was Latinized so you had John and so it was fire and they had the symbol of the fire worship outside their temples, and then you have Athan, which is John Athan, which is ATON, the sun. John Aton, the fire of the sun. That's what it means. It's the fire of the sun that gives you the revelations.

Jackie: Is there any name that doesn't have some type of esoteric meaning?

Alan: All of those in the Bible do, because the mystery religion had been centered there at that time a few thousand years ago for quite a long, long time. Although it had other centers across different parts of the world, that was one of the main centers of it.

Jackie: What does Timothy mean?

Alan: I forget what Timothy was and I did know it too, but I could look that one up for you. They all had specific meanings and some of them they explain, where they give Simon a new name and he's called Peter.

Jackie: Simon Peter.

Alan: They're giving you clues there and of course Peter is Pater or Petra, which is the rock. It's on the rock et cetera and all this stuff, so they're giving you the same symbology of the old mystery religion in the names of the people. Another one is Son of Thunder, Zebedee, and of course old Yahweh used to be called the Thunder God because the volcano made all the bangs – in fact there are Psalms there that he roared in his clear strong voice like thunder, so he was a volcano god. They give you all the clues in the names.

Jackie: The thunder god, wasn't it Thor?

Alan: In the Norse religion it was Thor.

Jackie: Would that be the same as Jehovah?

Alan: Actually, it's very similar to the Egyptian because in the battle of the son of Osiris, who was called Horus – where we get "hours" from and "horizon."

Jackie: Horus rising, the horizon?

Alan: That's right. He lost an eye in the battle with Seth, which is night, Satan, and he becomes the sun, Ra. He becomes Ra. You have the eye of Ra and of course you find the same thing with the Nordic version of Thor who lost an eye to gain wisdom by hanging on a tree. He hung on a tree for days and days to gain wisdom and birds were pecking out his eye so he was left with one eye; and hence the term comes in Masonry, in the land of the blind (which is the profane, the masses, the general public), "in the land of the blind, the one-eyed man is king." It's a very esoteric thing.

Jackie: Okay. Here's something that maybe you could explain because I have made this statement that there is no place that I have read in the New Testament where Jesus said I've come to establish a new religion. He said I came to, according to what the bible says, that I came into this world to bear witness unto the truth. What Christians rely on is the fact that in the Bible he is quoted as saying about Peter, upon this rock I will build my church – and then of course the Catholic Church says that Peter was the first Pope and so the Catholic religion was the first and the only established by Christ religion. Will you shed some light on that, Alan?

Alan: He said that in response to a reply that Peter had given when Peter had said that he was the messiah. He was declaring that Jesus was the messiah and that's when he replied to him, "on this rock," this truth, that's what it means there in that sense, "I will build my church."

Jackie: And what does church mean? I will build my church? This is what to me has caused – I don't understand what it means but I don't believe that there was anything in his teachings that would implicate that you have to build churches and temples.

Alan: There was nothing about – in fact, most of his teachings were done outside.

Jackie: Well, according to the Bible. Do you think that these were words used to cause this confusion?

Alan: There's no doubt that things were added. For instance, in one of the gospels it's so out of character of what you're reading already when he tells you don't make a fuss about praying to your father. Don't do what the Pharisees do and make long prayers in public. He says go into your closet or your room and pray to your father, and then later on you find him telling his disciples what you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven and you shall have the power to forgive sins. That obviously was added in by the Catholic Church. People used to give offerings to the temple gods, especially Jupiter in Rome prior to Christianity, and they did confess their sins and they had their burnt offerings; and of course to maintain power, priests had to have something where the people would have – in other words, if the people could pray directly to their god, why would they need the priests? They had to add that in that the only way to salvation was to go and confess to the priests basically.

Jackie: Then the priests had the power to forgive the sin and that comes from that part of the Bible where he allegedly said that to his disciple?

Alan: It's completely contradictory you see to other parts of the Bible and out of nature with what he'd already supposed to have said. It's amazing how much of external or manmade theology has been tacked on to it. Of course in the esoteric religions they understand that, that the bulk of people they really want a god that they can identify with as a person with their own "frailties," you might say, and so for ages past they always gave the people gods which were very human in form in that they would be jealous. They could be very vengeful and idolatrous. All this kind of stuff and the bulk of the people love these festivals to these particular deities and so when Jesus came along they had to once again sort of humanize them to an extent in some passages so that the people could identify with them. They're talking about the general population because they need "form," as they say, so they formalized religion and formalizing religion is always done for the bulk of the people.

Jackie: What would you have to say to people – my concern has been when the lies begin to be exposed, the truth revealed, in fact I had written about this in the book and it is when it came to my mind that I see to me that Christianity was created to be destroyed. That eventually the lies would be revealed or exposed and then people would be throwing the baby out with the bath water. And for people who have clung to all that, every jot and tittle is the word of God, even though there's so many contradictions that they cannot explain themselves but they seem to pass that off by saying I don't have an understanding yet about that contradiction, but not to look at it and say this isn't – our Creator doesn't contradict itself, but then when it finally hits them that they literally begin to see the lies there is the sadness. I know because I've been through that, Alan, as you know, but the tendency to say okay then what do we do? It's all a lie. What do we have left and the only thing I could think to say is it's the truth. We have the truth.

Alan: Here's another little sort of paradox to all of that. In cultural Christianity and all truths in all ages is out there for the ones that want to find it, always, for the ones who sincerely want to find it. It's there somehow. There's always a thread they can follow, but for the bulk of the people, it is true, they're in the material world. They want a material religion. If they're given truth they will debase it back into a materialistic religion and you see the prosperity of those being preached today by the Bennie Hinn's and these guys who tell you, "send me gold. I want gold. I want it now in this world," and I've seen a tape with him actually saying that. Sure, they will always debase it because they miss the whole point of the spiritual side that Jesus portrays. It's the spiritual search of man to find the Christ within and that's what the whole message was when he tells you "if the Father is in me and then I am in you," I am in you. The Christ is in you. It's not a matter of going to a church in cultural Christianity going through a ritual or a formula like a mathematical formula, 2 and 2 is 4, and you say this and you say that then you're a Christian. That's again for the masses of people because the spiritual path is an individual journey and only the individual can make that journey. You can't do it in a crowd.

Jackie: And priests can't give it to you.

Alan: Yes, and once you're on that journey then you know that you're getting closer to that which you would call your Creator because your mind completely alters. The way you view everything suddenly alters and you know you're now on a journey and you know that something is in communication by the very way that you now see the whole world and it's a flow of energy that comes. It was always intended to be that way.

Jackie: It seems too that as we're on that journey and getting further into it that the intuition seems to be so heightened.

Alan: Intuition and other senses definitely heighten. You become alive and that's what he said too, I come to give life and more abundantly. He wasn't talking about prosperity.

Jackie: I'd like you to continue this right after this break and thank you. We're back again with Alan Watt. Before the break I mentioned the fact that our intuition seems to be so much stronger and Alan, you were talking about that, and would you please continue?

Alan: There's no doubt that children are born with a heightened sense of awareness and actual telepathy and the closer the friends that they have the more they show this because they'll start whistling a tune at the same time or they'll start singing the lines of a song at the same time and then they turn and laugh at each other because it's so common with them. That type of thing is knocked out of us as soon as we go to school because we're trained then just to be good producers, consumers and taxpayers.

Jackie: And caretakers of the earth.

Alan: That's right and that's the definition of a good United Nation citizen, is a good producer-consumer. That's how we are trained. We are collateral. There's no doubt that's how we're viewed by those who run the material world and so those abilities we have become dormant and it's like muscles that aren't used, they can atrophy to an extent, but when a person is on the right path they know it. There's nothing you can question or imagine about it. You know you're on the right path because your entire perception of things changes. You have sudden insights that you never had before and you can see for the first time. The blind see. That's what it really means in the allegories and so this can happen to people who are ready to leave the formalized – the formation – the Mason's form things for the masses, so they give you formalized religion, which is also authorized religion, and they don't like to tell people they don't need to go along with the masses. They can find the real truth themselves because that is what you're finding out is truth. It's a path of truth.

Jackie: You know when Kelly Nelson, this is back in '98 sometime when I believe I was on at 6:00 p.m. before you started coming on with us. We did about 10 weeks or 10 broadcasts on the controlled opposition of specifically Council for National Policies and the so-called conservative/Christian conservative leaders in this country and Kelly, that is her forte and she was naming names that she was giving so much information about these individuals that it just left no doubt in people's minds. The thing I marveled at because Kelly Nelson told me one time you won't make a lot of friends, people don't want the truth. Anyway, I would get calls from people and each one that called had one of their own favorite heroes. It could have been Phyllis Schlafly. It could have been D.J. Kennedy, any one of them, but then they would say you know what? I had a feeling something was wrong and in other words they were not angry and they were realizing that all the time they had been almost worshiping these people that there was that little niggling voice and I told them I said, well, then you did know you see and all you have to learn to do is listen to that. Don't ignore it; and it happened over and over again, Alan.

Alan: The bulk of the people want a deity on this planet that they can worship, something on two legs that they can see and touch and that's the problem. It's always been the problem and that's why if you tune into something like Oprah Winfrey or the Dr. Phil that's part of her organization, that's Harpo Productions which is Oprah backwards, HARPO from Harpocrates for secrecy from the ancient mysteries.

Jackie: From who?

Alan: Harpocrates in the Greek.

Jackie: Not Hippocrates?

Alan: No. Harpocrates. Harpo was the short term for it, so it's Harpo Productions.

Jackie: And like Harpo Marx?

Alan: That's right and he was the one who kept his mouth shut because he was dumb and that was the sign of secrecy. The ancient symbol of Harpo in Egypt when the Greeks ruled Egypt was the little boy with a finger over his mouth going "shhh!" That's where it comes from. Anyway, when you see Oprah coming out on stage and you see mainly women in the audience just going wild over her you're seeing people actually worship another human being. That isn't applause. That's literally worship. She represents everything that those people in the audience would like to aspire to be.

Jackie: In other words, it's her fame and her success financially on that?

Alan: Everything. Yet she represents everything they want to be and that's why at the right time people will worship someone who claims to be a deity on earth. They want that. The bulk of people truly want that and the old saying they get what they ask for and they'll find that eventually it's not what they really wanted after all, but then it will be too late for them.

Jackie: I don't know if we got off course. I know I have a tendency to do that to our conversations. I don't intend to do it. Getting back, if we may, for example people who begin to see it and begin to see the lies and they feel so disillusioned – well, I had a call from really a nice man today and he had tuned in late and wanted your address. He wanted to know if I thought that he should have the books and I said yes, and then he said are you saying that the Bible is a lie. I said that's a generality and if I said that it was a lie that would be a lie because there is truth in it. But this is what people will have a tendency to do is say okay throw it all out and I think that it was planned that way, Alan, so that they would throw the truth – throwing the baby out with the bath water and then what? Then they have not, from their churches and from their religion, they have not been helped to understand as you said earlier the simple truths that we were given that were attributed to Jesus. I and my Father are one. People take that to say he said it. He said he was God. No. He said, "I and my Father are one. He is in me as I am in you," and therefore there is not that realization that I am a beloved child of Creator and one with and I don't have to jump through hoops. I don't have to be praying to a saint or to the mother of Jesus to get to Creator and at least people with the feeling of nothingness, that has been my concern.

Alan: As I say, this is the problem. The bulk of the people in all ages want formalized religion.

Jackie: Maybe they don't want it. That's what they were born into.

Alan: You will find that even if you could somehow have a miracle and have the airwaves for a month for the whole world--

Jackie: Oh, wouldn't that be something.

Alan: I'll tell you, no matter how much truth you could put out there and then leave the people with a decision, after you've explained what's happened to the world—it was planned this way, who is doing it, where it's to go, et cetera, and with all their worries and their stress and their credit cards and all this stuff—you know the bulk of the people would demand you bring the same system in right away.

Jackie: Well, yes. However, you said a long time ago we were talking and I know everything you say isn't necessarily so but it sure rang true to me. You had made the statement that their greatest fear is that enough people will wake up to the realization of the power that is within us because the Kingdom of God is within us and once enough people, and I asked you how many do you think it would take, and you said not very many because there aren't very many of them.

Alan: That's right. There's not very many of them.

Jackie: That makes sense to me, so therefore the more people who awaken the stronger the light becomes in this world.

Alan: It's the old story. This is the darkness because of the lies and the deceit that goes on and we are talked to like children by the media. They're talking to us as though we're children and giving us little fairy stories instead of truth all the time, rather than tell us what really is going on and what the agendas are. Now some people like that. Some people will like socialism and they do like socialism. They like to believe that there's lots of different daddies out there who specialize in different departments that one day they might need and so there are a lot of people who will truly love their slavery.

Jackie: I'm not denying that. What I'm saying though is that there are people who would hear it and do have an ear to hear and an eye to see and boy, wouldn't that be something?

Alan: Yes and of course and, as I say, any truth given out in the darkness and it's getting darker at the moment. It gets dark for a while as all the laws come forward to silence people.

Jackie: Man's laws?

Alan: Yes and that's of course what happened in the Soviet system as well and it was tried and tested there and they're doing it all here the same way and eventually they'll be teaching you that the sky is naturally orange and that will be politically correct and we'll all say the same thing.

Jackie: And people will forget that the sky used to be blue.

Alan: Yes. It's the king has no clothes and the crowd will go along and say, oh, yes, I can see them; and that's what political correctness is. It's lying to yourself, ultimately, to fit in and so those who are seeking a spiritual path regardless of what happens and regardless of what the crowd does can't go along with it. Of course, people who belong to the crowd or the mob will always look around for someone else to make the first move and then they'll follow; but for those who are awake you don't do that. You have to stand up for yourself. That's of prime importance. Don't wait for someone else to step forward and say I'm not going along with this. You go ahead and say I'm not going along with it.

Jackie: Yes, the Emperor has no clothes.

Alan: Yes and of course that's the difference between the individual who's on a spiritual path and person who belongs to the mob, whether it be a church group or not, because church groups are basically part of the mob. It's a formalized religion and they act like a school of fish. They all move at the same time when the pastor makes the move.

Jackie: Or the lemmings, over the cliff with all of them.

Alan: It's never been any different in any age and there's been many ages prior to this one, where we get to a certain stage of balance where those of the material try to take over the entire planet and dominate it. It's always a battle between those who are on a spiritual path versus the material and it doesn't mean that everybody on the path gets saved by any means because people are making their choices and that means everybody is making their choices.

Jackie: Each of us every moment of every day.

Alan: If they were to get their way, the people have allowed it to happen. Individually they have allowed it to happen and that's something to really ponder on before it happens and then make the decision before it happens because they're bringing about a living hell here on earth; and if their idea is "as above so below," then their heaven is also a hell if they're trying to emulate that. You have to ask who their father truly is.

Jackie: Well, Jesus said of the Pharisees, "you are of your father the devil."

Alan: The Pharisees were a sect.

Jackie: They were the priests of Jehovah. Wouldn't that be whom Jesus was referring to?

Alan: It's obvious.

Jackie: To me it was obvious.

Alan: It was very obvious. People don't realize that the Pharisees, who ruled over ordinary Jews, the Pharisees themselves were a separate esoteric sect. They had their own inner religion that came from Babylon. They're being used, but there used to be a lot more information on this, like the B'nai B'rith. Everyone thinks that the B'nai B'rith is an organization that stands up for supposedly downtrodden peoples' rights, but the B'nai B'rith is registered as a Masonic organization and all their building are still called lodges yet, if you want to check them up. If you want to go into the Congressional Records, you can find I think it was General Grant during the Civil War issued an order that all Jews in the army were suspected of being members of the Knights of the Golden Circle, which was a spin-off of the B'nai B'rith, and that was all mentioned in the Congressional Records at the time and it was Lincoln that rescinded that order. However, they were actually fomenting dissention on both sides, south and north, and these were not Kazarian Jews. These were Sephardic Jews that formed the B'nai B'rith. Most of them came from London and they were merchant families.

Jackie: What is the definition of a Sephardic Jew? Would it be Semitic?

Alan: Sephardic were the ones who lived mainly in Spain.

Jackie: It wouldn't necessarily mean that they're Semites?

Alan: Again, even that's a whole other story, but supposedly the story is they moved into Spain after the Roman wars basically when Rome vanquished them and in fact they became the nobility of Spain for a few centuries and they ruled the trading routes and they were very, very wealthy and they ran – that again is in the Congressional Records, they ran most of the slave ships to the U.S. and they ran the slave trade.

Jackie: You know that was a good plan too when you think about it. It was far beyond just a wonderful money-making scheme, but to bring so many Africans into America, I mean in the south I understand that the slave population was almost equal to the white population, so when they were all freed there we had the division again.

Alan: They always create a division or a Northern Ireland or a Quebec in Canada. Somewhere they can stir up trouble when they want it. That's traditional.

Jackie: It occurs to me that the ultimate plan of slavery was to do exactly what is happening today.

Alan: There is an authorized book by the B'nai B'rith about their history, even though they put spins on it, because at one time there was a lot of information on them and what they'd been up to and so they put a book out to try and cover up what they'd really been doing but they still admitted to it. The book was written by Esther L. Panitz was the author and it was authorized by B'nai B'rith and that was published in 1987, I think, and it's worth a read because it goes into the fact that it is a Masonic organization. It's separate from Judaism as such and it has a different religion from Judaism. It's basically the Illuminati sect and it's also chartered under the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. They have a Masonic charter, so here's the B'nai B'rith writing the hate laws.

Jackie: What is the name of this book again?

Alan: It's called "The B'nai B'rith" by Esther L. Panitz.

Jackie: That would probably be available then at any bookstore.

Alan: I don't know. It was published in 1987.

Jackie: 1987 isn't all that long ago.

Alan: The B'nai B'rith was actually again in the Congressional Records; they were implicated and brought up in the death of Lincoln.

Jackie: And what is the author again?

Alan: I think it was Esther L. Panitz.

Jackie: Panitz? Like paying penance?

Alan: I'm pretty sure that is. It's been a long time since I read it, but the head of the organization, the Grand Master at that time of the B'nai B'rith, was Simon Wolf, who originally was a lawyer and his name came up and the B'nai B'rith because he was so friendly with Booth that shot Lincoln. There were photographs taken of Booth with the Knights of the Golden Circle at the B'nai B'rith Lodge, the Masonic Lodge.

Jackie: It has been written and said that Booth was a relation of the Rothschild's.

Alan: It's possible. I do know that Booth's father was a Shakespearian actor and when he died the Catholics came to the funeral. They thought he was a Catholic, that he attended the Catholic Church. One of the Methodist ministers came, he thought he was a Methodist, and a rabbi came because Booth used to get up and read in Hebrew in the temple, in the synagogue. However, one thing they all agree on, he was given a Masonic burial.

Jackie: They've been behind everything. I never thought of this, but they obviously were the fomenters of the American Revolution.

Alan: You'll find that again in that authorized book about the B'nai B'rith by the B'nai B'rith.

Jackie: Well in the book that I quoted heavily from in that section is a book I have here from 1944 I think by some guy, a Jew. It was titled Israel in America or America in Israel and I think it was in there referring to the Revolutionary War and it named the name of a wealthy Jew that basically they said without him the war could never have been fought.

Alan: There was Judah P. Benjamin in the south. They had ones in the north and the south.

Jackie: It wasn't Judah Benjamin, but wasn't he named Davis' treasury secretary or something?

Alan: Benjamin was in the south and he was up in their congress or a senator even, and then after the war he went over to England and was knighted for his part in fomenting the revolution. He was knighted and I think it was his daughter married a relative of Israel Levin.

Jackie: We were led to believe that the Revolutionary War was fought to win our independence from Great Britain and we have grown up believing that. These are the types of things that when it hits you that it was such a lie that I think it's what begins to occur to people, everything that we ever thought we knew was a lie and maybe when I said to you that time everything I look at looks like not real. It's like I'm living in another world someplace and you said it's a good place to begin.

Alan: You have to start to freefall, be willing to freefall.

Jackie: Well, you're a good catalyst for freefalling, Alan.

Alan: I can do a bit of that too. However, the B'nai B'rith was founded I think it was in the 1840's, 1862 was the official founding in Washington, D.C., and in fact I believe Simon Wolf who was the head at the time was arrested right after Lincoln was shot because they said he was implicated in the plot, so the B'nai B'rith were definitely mentioned in the Congressional Records.

Jackie: When you read the history after the war in the south, basically it appears to me that Abraham Lincoln was not an evil bad man. He was probably misadvised and probably led around by the nose, like all the presidents, but he kept insisting that after the war it had to be all forgotten and let us start over again and they were bound and damn determined that they were going to take over the south. They were going to bring a military force in and continue the destruction and of course we've got the 14th Amendment out of it. It occurs to me, besides the fact that he had given an Executive Order to issue the greenbacks, that they did not like it at all that they were going to compete with their banknotes.

Alan: It's so complex when you get into it all the machinations that were going on at the time and when you find the B'nai B'rith which definitely is a Masonic order and even today they still call their big skyscrapers lodges. They're registered lodges and here they are making laws for the general public.

Jackie: You know what? A topic for another broadcast, George W. Bush, royalty. Also it appears part of that Jewish bloodline, so when I look at that and John Kerry the same thing.

Alan: I think Burke's Peerage came out with that.

Jackie: He had more royal blood than any president before him and he's Jewish, so they we are with that "loyalty" and that special bloodline. Folks, we're out of time. This will be a discussion that we will pick up in another broadcast. Thank you, Alan.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
September 1, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is Wednesday and it is the 1st of September in the year 2004 and Alan Watt is back again with us again tonight. Alan, thank you for being here.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: I want to do our spiritual message here before we get started. This is from Matthew 5 and it begins with verse 14, and this is in the red, folks. These are the words that attributed to Jesus. He said, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid and neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel but on a candlestick and it gives light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven."

I think Paul said that the only way you get to heaven is by grace not works, right, Alan?

Alan: Yes, there was a dispute about it I think. Actually, James really took over from Jesus, the brother supposedly of Jesus, and he was promoting good works.

Jackie: Where would you like to go tonight? There is something I would like to share. Remember last night when you were talking about genetically engineering the worker bees to be good workers? I've got something that's not real long. Hold on a sec. It's amazing, Alan, because every time you start talking about this stuff our listeners start finding information.

This was actually from BBC News, August 12. "Monkeys Test Hard Working Gene. Scientists in the United States have found a way of turning lazy monkeys into workaholics using gene therapy. Usually monkeys work hard only when they know a reward is coming, but the animals given this treatment did their best all the time. Monkeys are rather like people in their approach to work - at least, those who live in a laboratory and learn to press levers for rewards of food and water. They concentrate on their task only when the moment of delivery approaches."

Listen to this. "Monkeys under the influence of the treatment don't procrastinate. Dr. Barry Richmond U.S. National Institute of Mental Health. It says: "Researchers at the National Institute of Mental Health near Washington DC, led by Dr Barry Richmond, have now developed a genetic treatment which changes their work ethic markedly (and this is a quote by Dr. Richmond). He says, "Normal monkeys and people procrastinate - tend not to work very well when they have a lot of time to get the job done, and work better when the reward is nearer in time. The monkeys under the influence of the treatment don't procrastinate he said. The treatment consists of blocking an important brain chemical - dopamine. After about 10 weeks it had worn off, and the monkeys were back to their usual unmotivated selves. Dr Richmond believes treatments based on this concept could one day benefit people with conditions like depression, where motivation has largely disappeared from their lives. But for the rest of us, the day when such treatments fall into the hands of our bosses may be one we would prefer to put off." That was from the BBC News, August 12th. Eric sent this over, Alan.

It's exactly what you were talking about.

Alan: They've been doing this for a long time and conditioning us to the acceptance of it.

Jackie: It's confirmation and you say some things that are so far out that sometimes people just sit there with their mouths open. In fact a listener called today and he's been really appreciating the broadcast, but he said he sits there half the time with his mouth hanging open in awe or in shock and that's why I wanted to share this because it is blatant, just exactly what you were talking about.

Alan: Aldous Huxley gave lectures on stimulating the brain by mechanical and electrical means and also by the use of drugs back in the 1960's. He worked for the Tavistock Institute in London and most of his work was not involved in fictional writing. We know "Brave New World" was one of his, but most of his work was actually promoting these so called benefits of science and he thought it was fantastic that they could change the behavior of people by putting wires into their brains and having other people control them. He thought this was just great and he gave a lecture at Berkeley University in about 1967 on that very subject, so they've been doing this for an awful long time.

Jackie: This said it was gene research and it is from the National Institute of Mental Health. You know that is creepy.

Alan: Someone should really define "mental health," because who is defining it for us? We never think about that. It's the same with that little topic about dopamine you mentioned there. Is our primary function here to serve the system as workers? These questions are never asked; or is the spare time that a person has perhaps necessary for your real mental health? And if you're being deprived of that to make you work more and more efficiently, a system will definitely benefit but I don't think you personally will. You understand?

Jackie: You don't think we personally will?

Alan: I very much doubt it.

Jackie: You very much know that we won't.

Alan: All these institutions have an agenda. They all get their agenda from the apex of the pyramid and they define what's normal and what our functions as human beings are supposed to be. They can completely reverse the meaning of their own "laws," you might call them, of psychiatry or psychology when they change their politics. In the Soviet Union they'd lock people up for simply pointing out that the government was completely corrupt and they'd lock you up as a psychiatric patient for saying so. We have to be very, very careful about these definitions that keep getting thrown out and we just blindly accept them.

Jackie: You mean like "mental health"?

Alan: Yes. What is mental health? Who is defining it for us?

Jackie: I've told this before and I've probably have told you, pre-95 or sometime in '95 so I lost the document but I was faxed a proposed bill from Colorado State. They were redefining the term "mental health" for insurance purposes and I actually got it from the legislature, but one of the new definitions of a person who was mentally deranged or mentally ill is somebody who has an abnormal fear or unnatural fear of the government. I don't know what ever happened to that. I don't know if it was a proposed amendment to the insurance act I believe, so if we have any listeners in Colorado and if they were doing it there and that if dog gone thing passed it's probably laying there, at least unknown by most people in a lot of states, maybe all of them. "An unnatural or abnormal fear of the government."

Alan: I guess all historians must be crazy because that's the one thing that crops up over and over down through history is what the government ends up doing to the people. Once they get to a certain level of power and arrogance, all hell breaks loose and it's generally caused by the very government that's supposed to organize our lives for us. Yes, we always have to be watching governments. Apart from that, the governments are far too big anyway. You cannot watch them if they're too big. There are too many departments. They have a department for every part or function of your life today.

Jackie: That follows right along with the Talmud, doesn't it?

Alan: Yes. It's literally all encompassing and it isn't just your federal government. It's also your state government. They all get the laws passed from the United Nations, and that's another super government with an equivalent department of bureaucrats dealing with everything that your federal government is dealing with, so you have millions and millions of bureaucrats with their own little agendas written down for them, their own protocols to follow, regardless of who you think is in power.

Jackie: The bureaucrats actually don't have their own agendas. I mean the minions, the ones that are following out the orders, but they do have a school – a special school for bureaucrats. Our listeners need to remember that a bureaucrat is a non-elected – it's an appointed or paid, but they're not elected so they're not answerable to the people.

Alan: You'll find when you look into a federal bureaucrats, they're all hereditary positions and so you have more family dynasties – old family dynasties stretching way back down through time, simply putting their own children into their own jobs. It's just amazing and of course they're never talked about. We always get diverted to the politicians, the front men.

Jackie: Do you remember the woman governor of New Jersey, Christie something? Whitman I think. Well that really was driven home to me, the point that you just made, when I saw a photograph of her 4 years old with President Eisenhower.

Alan: It's just incredible when you think of how we're trained from birth to believe the system is and how it truly is, which is completely different from anything we've been told. Every bureaucracy has its protocols. They have their agenda written down to follow and they implement them day after day, year after year. Back when they created the League of Nations, H.G. Wells was writing that now the heads of the bureaucrats at the federal level could correspond and travel and meet their brethren in other countries and basically iron out their differences.

Jackie: Their counterparts.

Alan: Yes. It makes to an extent the politicians almost irrelevant.

Jackie: However Alan, that is also on the state on the local level because they have international mayors associations. The Council of State Governments is an international organization.

Alan: And the same with the International Association of Police Chiefs.

Jackie: They almost all have their counterparts today all over the world.

Alan: That's right and you find that the heads of them attend meetings at the United Nations to find out the next part of their policy.

Jackie: I read something one time where I think it was one of the UN when they did the women's group and those different – what do you call them? Anyway, one of the elite said that they had invited state, national and some local officials so that they could feel that they're part of this whole process. That's actually what he said. So they feel like such big shots.

Alan: The ego is a tremendous thing to play with.

Jackie: I think that's Lucifer.

Alan: They know how to manipulate the ego – have their photograph taken at some high function at the United Nations and that's on the mantelpiece for everyone to see.

Jackie: Oh yes, blown up big on the wall.

Alan: Really the public have no real input into what's happening. In fact, they don't even really know what's happening most of the time until laws are actually implemented.

Jackie: They're kept too busy.

Alan: You know even all the housing codes to do with building houses, electrical, plumbing, everything structure wise, septic tank. All that is coming from the United Nations.

Jackie: Yes it is. I have a report on two international meetings that were held. One was in Moscow in the USSR and this is exactly what they were dealing with, zoning laws, regional governments et cetera. It was very creepy to read it and because they don't really pull any punches at all, even a layperson can understand what the heck they're saying. I remember a quote where they were talking about the regional planner. One of their most important functions is the transference of property from private to public use with the least amount – with ease, in other words. They have to learn to be able to do it.

Alan: Now of course they have new weapons, they have weather control to flood out the farmers or give them a drought and dry them out. They have so many weapons at their control, which they have been using for years, and they are gradually getting their way. You'll find that all the major hurricanes and cyclones and so on that hit the world today are right along the paths of the very areas they want cleared for the wildlife species, but they want them cleared of human habitation.

Jackie: I received an email about this hurricane Charlie. It was a man who was there on the spot and he took pictures and he said that they are so under-reporting as far as the deaths and the devastation that had taken place and my little flags went up. The guy who sent it over to me, I said I wonder what's going on here. What's to hide? I wonder if this was a real one or was it part of weather control. I asked him if he would please send me anything that he gets on it and the one I got today, which I haven't read yet, said "Hurricane Charlie, is this Scalar Weather?" The scalar weather control and that when you mentioned this, too, about where the wild lands are going to be, I found a map and this was from their wild lands project and this was in the North American continent, basically the U.S., and they were talking about this sign of the western border. They had this great big grey arrow, a real wide swath that went all the way up from Canada all the way down Central America into parts of Mexico. The other one, I think they called it the Artic something, this arrow went all the way across the top, partly in Canada and the U.S., mostly in the U.S. from the northern U.S. all the way across and it looked like almost the entire state of Pennsylvania was inside that arrow, Alan.

Alan: They had their plans already made with the Tesla technology. I think eight years ago they admitted there were over 54, 55 of Tesla HAARP stations worldwide. That's what they admitted to. In the 1970's the U.S. and other countries signed a treaty not to use this as weaponry against other countries.

Jackie: Actually it was the ENMOD treaty and what they said is that it prohibited the hostile use of the technology that can cause earthquakes, tornadoes, and I can't remember all of it, but it mentioned rainfall.

Alan: They said they could actually create a hurricane out at sea and bring it in towards land and guide it anywhere they wanted.

Jackie: That was in the '70's. I've got it in a book from the United Nations.

Alan: They've got it all and it's a great weapon because they'll never admit they're actually using it to the public. Although if the public look up and watch all the spraying that's going on, I'm sure they're using it hand in glove with this technology because with the aluminum oxides and titanium traces in the air nowadays, they're literally creating a fantastic circuit for this electromagnetic pulsation to travel along. Yes, they are using it but they won't admit it. The governments will admit if you ask them that the skies are being sprayed with something but they cannot tell you for reasons for national security. That's the standard reply letter you get back. Advanced sciences have always been used on the public and the public are always the last to know. No different from the polio vaccines and the fact that they knew what all the simian viruses would cause down the road. They tell you 50 years later.

Jackie: I told you that I'm in the process of writing a book. It's been going on for a couple of years. It sat for almost a whole year after Chuck passed over, but in the preface of it I was talking about the plan for world dominion and I said this means everything, every aspect of our lives. We can get along without a lot of things but we need good clean, healthy food and fresh water and clean air. Then I went down the list of the food and the water and the air and what they're doing to it, and that has been bothering me because I never had brought up – I didn't know about it at the time, the estrogens that we were talking about last night because I had quoted in there that statement by Charles Galton Darwin in "The Next Million Years" and that was 1952. He said that "it is in the biological sciences that the most exciting possibilities suggest themselves. I will only speculate on a few among these possibilities which might have great affect on human life. I've already referred to the possibility of [quite] new sources of food and I need not enlarge on that further."

Then when he mentioned this thing on hormones I really didn't see how that – but I put it in there anyway. He says, "Hormones. Those internal chemical secretions which so largely regulate the operations of the human body. The artificial use of hormones has already -- (this was 1952) been show to have profound affects on the behavior of animals might have similar affects on man." Then he talked about a "drug which might remove the urgency of sexual desire and so reproducing humanity the status of workers in a beehive. To produce effects of these kinds there must be a master and the master must be above and not subject to the procedure he is enforcing on his subjects." That's what you mentioned last night and because that really had bothered me, I decided I was going to add that information on xenoestrogens and there's an article I found. Now remember this book that Darwin put out was '52 and a report from 2002 I believe from a Canadian, a Dr. Kay Jensen. He said, "over the past 50 years we have seen a dramatic increase in estrogen dominant conditions." And I thought wow, fifty years ago was when this book or over 50 years ago but it was when the book was published and what I realized is because this one article gave different sources of xenoestrogens. Xenoestrogens are in the food we eat. They are in the water that we drink and it is in the air that we breathe, and we slather it all over our bodies and our children's bodies, so they've covered the whole gamut. There are over 60,000 ways that we ingest or osmotically – is that the word, osmosis, take it in through the body. Over 60,000 ways and the devastating effects, it's unbelievable.

Alan: We already see the changes in society too and they have the effeminate men and the very masculine women.

Jackie: He said that Canada has the highest incidence of hysterectomies other than the U.S. and it's double of any other country in Europe and that many of the reasons that women – and endometriosis is a big one and endometriosis is caused by estrogen dominance. He says something like 35 percent of women by the time they're 60 will have had a hysterectomy and many of them would not even be necessary if the hormones were balanced. All right, we're going to be taking a break here.

Alan: I'd like to mention for the farmers who are interested in what's happening to their industry, there is a booth at the International Plowing Match, an expo which is held every year in Canada. This year it's in Neford, Ontario, and it's September 22nd to the 26th and there will be a booth there and it's called "Matrix Explained."

Jackie: Is that you?

Alan: There's a couple of people I know who are holding this booth to tell the farmers and others what's really going on with the weather, with their crops and what the UN agenda is and I might be there too.

Jackie: That's in Neford, Ontario, September 22 to 26th and the booth is the Matrix Explained. That sounds exciting.

Alan: It will be, yes. The farmers don't really know the full agenda because they can't believe their own governments are intent on putting them out of business.

Jackie: They think the governments love us.

Alan: Yes. They don't know the agenda that food simply will not be produced here in the future. That is the agenda under the United Nations and NAFTA they've already set up Chile and other countries to be the food manufacturers for basically the world.

Jackie: I was just going to say that it appears that the farmers that they're taking down are in Canada, America, Australia, probably the UK or do they do much farming there?

Alan: UK's in the same boat. They had their mad cow slaughter, one cow and everything in Britain was slaughtered. Of course they are trying to turn the world into a vegetarian world so we'll have nothing to eat but their modified vegetables.

Jackie: Alan, in this report on xenoestrogens.

Alan: I think you should really call it Zena.

Jackie: Zena?

Alan: Yes, the warrior princess.

Jackie: They said that in virtually every single vegetable that's grown today is filled with xenoestrogen in fruits, berries because the xenoestrogens are used as the weed control and so it's in the soil and now it's in the plants.

Alan: Now it's in the people because they must get rid of the excess weeds. It's fantastic too how they encourage people to go through the fad of buying this spring bottled water that comes in these lovely plastic bottles and that plastic is not completely inert. It's giving off molecules all the time and all plastic molecules contain synthetic estrogen.

Jackie: Yes and that's mentioned also and it says that the softer the plastic, and I don't know if – I guess the best thing to do is to avoid plastic, period, because if you buy juice in plastic bottles in so many of the things and of course, like you said, all this water, but they said there's a number in a pyramid on the bottle and if it's less than a 7 it's leeching estrogens like the devil. Saran Wrap is really bad and of course people shouldn't be using microwave ovens anyway and they do and they cover this stuff with Saran Wrap and according to Kirk Newbie it's sort of like – I could be overstating this but I don't think I am. When you cover something with Saran and put it in your microwave, you increase the estrogen in it by 20,000 times. It all leeches right out of the plastic. .

Alan: They've covered all the bases and Monsanto knew all this back in the 1950's, what the estrogen from plastic does to people. Nothing is ever by accident, nothing. It's all well planned and rehearsed long before and that's the world we really live in. They tell you generally 50 years after the fact, when most of the people have died and the generation growing up then don't care because if anything happened a few years ago it's ancient history.

Jackie: They've been demoralized.

Alan: Everything is used as a weapon and I believe one of the women who were in charge of the UN agricultural department said that – and I think most people really miss the point. There's a double meaning there when she said "food has always been used as a weapon of war and we shall use it."

Jackie: And she said, "We make no apologies."

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: I've got quote right here on this sheet that I printed out and she, by the way, used to be a Rockefeller before she had her post. She said, "Food is power. We use it to change behavior. Some may call that bribery. We do not apologize," and before she was with the UN she was a former confidential assistant to New York State Governor Nelson Rockefeller.

Alan: That's a lovely philanthropic organization.

Jackie: Change behavior. That's important that word. That statement that she made just speaks volumes.

Alan: It does. More than the average person would think, because these people plan the future, sometimes hundreds of years before, and they knew all this stuff about the estrogen back in the 50's at least.

Jackie: Evidently, that's what I found interesting, the correlation, this article by this doctor that said for the past 50 years we have been seeing a rise in and they call it estrogen dominant syndrome and that was 1952 when Darwin's book was published, where he said we're going to use artificial hormones.

Alan: He was a physicist.

Jackie: I've got Dr. John Lee's audio tape and also a book that he wrote and I had no idea – when I think of hormones and I think the average person thinks of hormones, we think of progesterone, estrogen and testosterone, yet there are so many of them and according to Dr. Lee, he seems to have risen to the top with his research. They literally – what am I trying to say here? In every function of the body, hormones are involved.

Alan: Yes. The whole endocrine system that sets even adrenaline and so on into operation receives information via hormones.

Jackie: Regulate, that's the word I was looking for, and there's more than just the three.

Alan: There's lots of them.

Jackie: That's what they're doing. They're genetically engineering the body by the use of their artificial hormones.

Alan: They know exactly where they're going with it too, and they will have eventually a passive docile population if they get their way.

Jackie: What do you mean eventually?

Alan: They have the bulk already but they always did really. It's those who have the capacity to wake up and stand up for themselves that they're really after. Although, they are trying to make the rest far more efficient in ways that they've never been. In fact, Charles Galton Darwin also said that. He says, "we are introducing a more efficient form of slavery," and that book was applauded by all the big newspaper companies of its day, if you look at the acclaims on the back page.

Jackie: I want to remind our listeners you said it and I heard it but I didn't really hear it, but we were talking about it later about – you were mentioning it with this Dr. Kelly. Was he a biophysicist, is that what you call it?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: A lot of people are aware of this if they have internet access and of course I guess it was on the news, but he was killed and what you pointed out, which I did not know, is he actually admitted that he was involved with Israel in a program that was creating a DNA or gene selective, what, virus or bacteria?

Alan: Porton Downs, that's the big bacterial warfare department for Britain, collaborated with Israel and mind you they've been doing this for a lot longer than five years, but Kelly mentioned they had been creating race-specific viruses, smart viruses that would attack people with certain ethnic genes and there's a whole range of them for every basically ethnic group on the planet. I think he knew once he admitted that – it wasn't just the fact that he exposed all the lies that Blair was talking about the weapons of mass destruction being in Iraq. It was also because he knew he was blowing the whistle on a far greater danger that had already been developed, all this stuff with Britain, Israel and I have no doubt the U.S. was involved as well.

Jackie: The U.S. is under the control of the Zionist neo-cons they call them today.

Alan: The U.S. certainly funds them.

Jackie: Alan, they're in every high position in this country. They control the military. They control the State Department. They control the U.S. Government, Inc. literally. I read a list to our listeners a few weeks ago and it was a list of 30 in some of the top positions and they're in total control of the U.S. government.

Alan: If people were to dwell on all the things that could happen, it could collapse your whole mind basically.

George: Jackie?

Jackie: Just a minute. I'm sorry Alan. I didn't say we would not like to take calls tonight. Do you want to take a call?

Alan: Sure.

Jackie: Hi. You're on the air.

George: Hi, Jackie, your old friend George from New York. I said I'll call you up to tell you about it's nuts over here with all this traffic and cops just one big [mess].

Jackie: George, we're on the air with a guest.

George: I'm incorrect and I'm sorry.

Jackie: Okay, thank you, George.

George: Okay, Jackie, have a nice evening.

Jackie: You too. He's calling from New York. They're having a Republican Convention there and I guess he wanted to report on what was going on. I'm not saying that it is not important but it's just one of the jillions of details of what is happening, and to dwell on that stuff, it just seems a waste of our time and a waste of our listeners' money.

Alan: Absolutely. The problem is there is so much going on and if you knew it all, never mind some of it, some of it's bad enough. That can close you down. That can paralyze you with fear and I think that's what its intent is also to do.

Jackie: Yes, well some might say that this broadcast that we do could paralyze people with fear. I was thinking about that at a quarter till and I was thinking of saying is there something uplifting that we could talk about before this broadcast is over tonight? Can we?

Alan: I think it is, because until people come to their own spiritual consciousness and stand up for themselves as an individual against basically anything and everything that they disagree with, it doesn't matter what really happens to you eventually here on this planet, this world, because this isn't the end of everything, but you can always say and know that you've done the right thing for yourself, and by doing that it can benefit others anyway. People take a long time to follow that which is right and they generally do it by example and you will get hit hard if you simply stand up for yourself in this day and age. Those who think they're still in a free society will find out very, very quickly how free they are when they start saying no to all the officials that come around in this day and age demanding things et cetera.

However, you have to live what is right for yourself and take the consequences for it, and in the knowledge that others will eventually follow that same route. It simply takes people to start doing it.

Jackie: In other words, become an example, a demonstration.

Alan: You have to be an individual, walking, breathing, demonstration of what it right. You cannot join a group because the groups are generally created by the elite for you to follow, or else they're so quickly infiltrated they're taken over by experts so quickly. Bill Cooper I think even started a party up. Was it the Libertarian Party or the Constitutional Party?

Jackie: He didn't. He was involved in the Constitution Party for a while.

Alan: Then he came out on the air and said he was giving it up because it was already infiltrated and taken over. You cannot form groups and try to fight this system by using the system. You cannot do it. They haven't left you any real method of redress whatsoever; and let's be honest. We're not multibillionaires who can go into court and fight things forever. They know that too. That's why the system was set-up that way. However, you will generally suffer for doing the right thing in this world, but as long as you realize that you are a spirit, basically, then you can leave this place behind at the right time regardless of what happens and you have done the right thing for yourself.

Jackie: And for many other people.

Alan: And for many others.

Jackie: We were talking last night about time not being linear but that there are many dimensions and that is when it hit me and occurred to me that everything that we do here is affecting every other dimension and vice versa, and so everything we do right for the right reasons make all the difference in the world.

Alan: In a flash of creation every possibility already exists for everything to happen in time – this thing called time that suddenly bursts forth into existence and so past, present and future are all to an extent coexisting at the same time. You will influence by finding out who you are and doing the right thing when you're here all through your life.

Jackie: In other words, instead of waiting and saying "I'm earning my place in heaven" and saying certain things that the church tells us we're supposed to say, you know, "I believe in Jesus Christ and his blood. He's God's son, God in the flesh, and he died on the cross and he saved me from all my sins. He saved the world from all the sins." That is so weakening and limiting to the individual and besides that, if they read in the Old Testament Jesus said, "As you sow, so shall you reap." He didn't say, okay, my blood is going to wash away your sins. The church said that, Alan.

Alan: Yes, I know. The church also made a dogma of the fact that he came to save the whole world and he didn't. He said I come to look for the lost sheep, the people who were lost in the system and knew it. They knew it was a system. That's what he was looking for, those who are alive or "trying to stand up," you might say, and it's never been any different. He also said, "follow me, do as I do." He didn't say I'm going to do it all for you, and it's never been any different.

Jackie: You made a statement one time and I'd like to repeat it. You said I don't really believe that he used the word sheep, because sheep are the stupidest animals in the world; but the good shepherd with the crook and we talked about this sometime ago how the crook is used – they're so stupid that if they get into a corner they don't know how to get out and pull them out of a corner and turn them around and that crook, that of the good shepherd has been pictured many times in the hands of the pharaohs, Alan.

Alan: The pharaohs had the rod and the staff and the staff was the crook and every bishop including the Archbishop of Canterbury and you'll see the same thing in Rome has that crook there you see and it's well named, crook, because they are all crooks. They've certainly fleeced the sheep indeed for a long, long time. However, Jesus told his followers, "the Father's in me and I am in you," well I don't think he was meaning that the father is also a sheep or that he was or that you were. All church organizations have been given to the public for control purposes only and whatever truth manages to survive a particular individual is vastly warped in favor of governmental control and it makes the people placid and they follow along. Christianity was supposed to free you and the truth would make you free.

Jackie: Jesus didn't say Christianity would free you. He said "the truth will make you free." They took some of his messages and they turned it into a religion. We're out of time here. Will you finish off this week with us?

Alan: Sure I will.

Jackie: Tomorrow night is the last broadcast. Alan will be back with us tomorrow night. Thank you, Alan.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
September 2, 2004

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is Thursday. It is the last day of our broadcast week. It is 2nd of September in the year 2004 and today was probably one of the most beautiful days that we have had all this summer and I mean that seriously. The air was dry and it was warm, but not humid of course, and it was just absolutely gorgeous.

Alan Watt, thanks for being with us tonight.

Alan: It's nice to be here.

Jackie: How are you this evening?

Alan: Not so bad.

Jackie: And how is Murphy's Law doing with you lately?

Alan: Murphy's always hanging around.

Jackie: Well, Alan I don't believe last night when we finished there was anything left hanging where we were going to start, so where would you like to start this evening?

Alan: Oh boy. Well, I think people should realize that the world today is simply a stage, which was planned eons ago basically.

Jackie: I'm sorry. Your volume is low for me again by the way. You said it was planned what?

Alan: Eons ago and you don't change something overnight that's been working steadily and planning steadily and enforcing steadily. You cannot change that in a single lifetime and that's what people generally think they have to do. The only reason they think they must change in their lifetime is because that which they're used to (which is the system that we're born in) is now changing again and they're fighting to try to keep what they think was their system.

Jackie: Maybe because I've said this myself in the past to take our country back. What does that mean? Go back to the way it used to be? It's never been the way it should be, Alan.

Alan: Never, never. It didn't even begin that way. In fact, sovereign nations were part of the plan, a stage in the plan to serve again another purpose – a stepping-stone towards ultimately internationalism and a one-world government system.

Jackie: Yes and you were talking about the trilateral plan with the Americas being one and the European Union being a second. Would you explain that again? I think we talked about this not on air, didn't we?

Alan: Yes, that's right. Karl Marx wrote about this in the 1840's and Karl Marx was a nobody at the time. He was a front man who was paid by the Rothschild's to live in London after being booted out of Germany and he came up with the "Communist Manifesto" and a few other books with his friend Engels. He actually wrote about a world to come that they were working for, which would comprise of three basic trading blocks which would consist of a United Americas, a United Europe and a Pacific Rim conglomeration under a supreme world government; and it's no coincidence that we're on the very verge of it being announced today. It's been steadily worked at. Capitalism was an artificial creation. Its antithesis communism was a necessary part of capitalism and the aims of capitalism to create the new system, the synthesis of them both, which is dominant elite that's running the world under a communistic type bureaucracy running the rest of the people beneath them.

Jackie: Today they're calling it democratization.

Alan: That's correct.

Jackie: They're democratizing the nations.

Alan: Yes and this was planned a long, long time ago and it started an awful long time ago. People at one time lived in tribes and tribes were the closest system you could have to any kind of natural living. Of course, with the advent of money, which was the truly artificial creation – before you had barter. People would barter for what they wanted. Now you have a third person who comes in and says this coin is worth that sack of wheat and for a percentage of your wheat I'll make this transaction for you; and once the third party came in, he eventually obviously ended up controlling the guys with exchanging sacks and it's been that way ever since. From then, they had to create the first city and the legends of Nimrod, the city builder. Everyone pretty well knows the reason the Masons praise Nimrod, or for what he stands for, is he created the first artificial system of human living, which was bringing people off the rural areas, creating a city which was walled, so they were walled in and then creating a bureaucracy and taxing the people outside of the city because people in the city produced nothing. They can't even feed themselves and so the artificial ends up lording over the natural, and it's still the same way today.

Jackie: And what timeline and where was Nimrod?

Alan: Nimrod is legendary. It's pre-everything. It's half myth and half legend. It's pre-history really.

Jackie: In other words before Sumer?

Alan: Yes, even before Sumer because all these legends were borrowed even to the time of Sumer and we know there's another bunch called the Hurrians that pre-existed the Sumerians and they apparently also had the trade routes which Sumer eventually took over.

Jackie: And was Sumer supposed to be about 6,000 years ago?

Alan: Roughly about that, yes. Once again, Sumer appeared on the scene as a complete basic system. It didn't evolve into a system. It appeared out of nowhere with a complete system of trading with money – with even receipts, date receipts you could have and forms of checking accounts and priesthoods to deal, who did all the work that the modern bureaucrats do and they ran the trading for the known world at that time, but they were also a form of governmental bureaucracy for the rest of the whole world as well. I don't think much has changed.

Jackie: I was thinking about those caravans. Were they back in that time? The caravans of camels that had those trading routes?

Alan: They had them before Sumer because they had so many of the Harappan peoples' old dwelling places that pre-existed the Sumerian trading routes and they also had a complete route from Egypt all the way to China, and that was pre-Sumer.

Jackie: What race would the Hurrians have been?

Alan: It's difficult to say. We know for instance that the original Sumerians, who may have taken over, were dark-haired primarily. In fact, one of their prayers to their god Enki was to thank Enki for making them the dark-haired people who ruled over the fair-haired, but they got invaded themselves by other Arabic peoples called the Akkadian and they merged with the Sumerians and eventually the Akkadian. However, the original Sumerian peoples were definitely dark-haired. That doesn't mean that the kings and queens were, because they found even when they dug up what turned out to be the local garbage dump they found deep down some of the royal graves there.

Jackie: In the rubbish dumps they found royal graves?

Alan: Later peoples had turned it into rubbish dumps, but they did find some old articles. They did find some amazing tombs where a few hundred peasants or servants were killed along side the royalty--

Jackie: So they could serve them?

Alan: Yes and there were no signs of struggle, so they think they all took poison of some kind. Once again, the queen especially her wigs were found and they were all made of the local hair of the people, but they think that her hair may have been of a more fair color, her own particular hair.

Jackie: That's intriguing, mysterious.

Alan: I don't think it's ever been any different. As I say, the present royalty of Europe lord over people and if you really traced their ancestry they never interbred with the native people.

Jackie: It seems that from things that I've read that the old gods like Quetzalcoatl, that he was described as a white man coming out of the ocean and so many of them describe their gods as white.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: So Alan, here I go again. I don't which question to ask first. Never mind because they're all gone right now. I haven't been writing them down. The Hurrians, the gods.

Alan: The planet is so old that you cannot change it in a generation because the system you're living in and been born is complete all around you as a system. Lenin himself gave a lot away in his writings because he could afford to, and Lenin was just another front man for the antithesis basically.

Jackie: When you were talking about Karl Marx and his writings, he was a front man too.

Alan: All of them, yes.

Jackie: In other words, what he was writing wasn't his plan.

Alan: No, no. In fact, it was 20 or 30 years before they even put Karl Marx's name on the "Communist Manifesto." He was so long down on the tiers that it wasn't worth mentioning his name at first.

Jackie: A trade on the family tree?

Alan: Yes that's right. His real name was Karl Marx Mordechai Levi.

Jackie: One of the questions that popped into my mind as we were talking about these rulers and they're white skinned or fair skinned. They have light hair or red hair, blue and green eyes and now you're saying all the way back to Sumer and before there's evidence that that's what it was. One of my questions is why is the white race being annihilated today and is the white race—maybe this would have to be an opinion, maybe an educated guess—but is the white race today part of that race of all long, long ago?

Alan: I think this royalty that keeps cropping up was a separate race in itself. Going back even further to Greek legend and some of the Arabic legends when they talk about the troglodytes, which is just a Greek term for these cave or underground dwellers. These particular creatures were pretty well complete albino. Now whether the white race was bred off of that, it's hard to tell. It's possible.

Jackie: Would you describe to our listeners what you described to me out of that real old, old book on freemasonry? There were different types of beings that were being described in that book.

Alan: They were the tree dwellers they claim that just hopped around in the trees and ate the fruit and so on. Some of them would come down to kill animals and then you had these troglodytes that would rush out of the caves when the animals had been slain by the tree dwellers, chase off the tree dwellers and then drink the blood of the animals that were killed. These troglodytes were supposed to be completely ruthless to every other species.

Jackie: Describe them the way you described them. They had no lower jaw, did they?

Alan: That's right. They were very thin creatures, very white, completely white.

Jackie: Spindly, lacking in musculature?

Alan: Yes and it's funny because I remember reading a scientific magazine many years ago saying what the future man might be like, if science was to take its full course and go into artificial food or food that was liquefied and went straight through the body basically.

Jackie: So we wouldn't need a lower jaw?

Alan: You wouldn't need a jaw at all, really. You'd have nothing to chew. You'd have spindly legs because you wouldn't have to exercise if you were taking long voyages in spacecrafts, for instance, which is one of the theories of the future and how man would look like. It put me in mind I read this Masonic book of that very thing. These creatures, it's hard to see how they got to that stage by themselves. You would think everything else would have eradicated them, but again it's thought that they may have had advanced weaponry and that's how they managed to survive.

Jackie: Oh thank you, because the thought that occurred to me was if they were so spindly and weak, then how in the world would they have the strength to force away the people that did the killing?

Alan: Yes, and they were ruthless apparently.

Jackie: And a slit for a mouth because they were just blood drinkers?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: That sounds very familiar, doesn't it, Alan?

Alan: Oh it does and I think that's where all the old vampire films come from. I think the vampire stories of Masonic tongue-in-cheek were maybe a very real thing that happened long ago.

Jackie: Did they say anything about whether they had hair or not? Head hair or body hair?

Alan: I can't remember that.

Jackie: I don't recall you reading about it either, but as you were describing them reading that I can recall that what I was picturing were the pictures we see of these so-called aliens.

Alan: What I do remember too is that made a funny hissing sound when they spoke to each other. It was the high-pitched hissing sound rather than the normal vocal sound.

Jackie: That's interesting. Do you have any thoughts or understanding of why today, and it does seem that it's intentional, extremely, why is the white race being eradicated, mixed all up with the other colors?

Alan: If you go back to the Brahman legends of the north of India, the Brahmans there claim that they are descended from the man from the previous age, that they came through the last catastrophe. They claim that where the Black Sea is today was a testing ground where different types of animals and humans were created. It was actually a valley at one time and they claim that it was a big laboratory and these "scientists" were experimenting with different types and eventually the experiment got out of hand and the people began to eat each other and so they flooded the whole valley and that became the Black Sea. I think man is far, far older than we know. Far older and I'm pretty certain that if science, for instance, today where they're going with their modifications and their adaptations of the human species for other tasks in the future, then it would be obvious that we've gone through this before. They would have done the same thing in the previous age. They would always get to the same point where they'd have to change and adapt and so on, exactly as Plato talked about in "The Republic"—creating new types of humans for different tasks, special hybrids; but the Brahmans do say that was on the go prior to the previous world catastrophes.

Jackie: I'm sorry Alan. I had a call come in here and so everything you said I did not hear, but this was Annette calling and she couldn't understand. She said that even the American Indians knew the difference between the pale face and that it's a seed line and it's the seed of Cain and why didn't you bring all this out?

Alan: It's doesn't mean it's the seed of Cain. You can't bring Plato's Cave along through everything with you. Eventually sometimes you have to leave the cave behind or you associate all brand new information back to the cave but in the previous areas, you see. The mark of Cain was circumcision. It wasn't a people. It was a brotherhood. Circumcision was the mark and that's how all Arabs and even today some of the high sheiks will do this. They put their hand under the person's kilt, as they say, to see if you were a brother and the lowly person would swear allegiance to his chief that way in Arabic countries and he would swear it literally "on his future generations." They were all Semitic peoples. That's where the word seminary comes from, semen, that's where it comes from, and you swear oaths by literally grasping the other person's penis. That was part of the ancient law structure of all the old Semitic cultures.

Jackie: I would like to go back for just a moment. You're saying that the mark of Cain is actually a circumcision and that was real old and that was even before the Bible?

Alan: Yes, in fact the Egyptians were also circumcised.

Jackie: This has never made sense to me in the Old Testament where it says Adam and Eve were the first people. They had their sons Cain and Abel and then Cain slew Abel and then went to a land and took himself a wife, but people who are into the bloodline that the whites are really the chosen of Jehovah or Yahweh. That is one of the big things that this is all hanging on, I believe.

Alan: But that's their problem. In Genesis there are two creations. There's the first creation and again this is all mystic. If you understand the esoteric you understand the beginnings and you have the void and the darkness and the deep, which is the abyss, and then you have eventually the Garden of Eden. You have the first creation and it's man and woman and in his image he created them; and then you read further on and it says there was no one to till the soil so he created Adam and then Eve. There's two creations there and that's the secret between the rulership dynasties and the peasant laborer. In it's an allegory form for the purpose of Adam and Eve.

Jackie: It's an allegory?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Well that makes a whole lot more sense because I don't know how somebody could justify in their mind that this all started with Adam and Eve and Cain and Abel, the first people, when evidentially according to just what the story says that he went and took a wife. I can remember when I was 15 and reading the Bible and that was one of the things that grabbed me and I thought well where did these other people come from then?

Alan: Of course, it says in the Bible to go out and repopulate the earth. Repopulate, which meant it was populated before. Really, this whole part starts with the beginning of the next age, in other words, after a previous catastrophe when not everybody was killed off but a lot were.

Jackie: There have been books written about the seed of Cain.

Alan: Of course Cain is all allegory because you think about Abel and what it means as well and into the English language, because all the mystery religions eventually were adapted into the English language, which was again a Masonic creation you might say. However, the word cannibal, part Cain and Abel, you see, and Cain of course – the old god didn't know what was going on, so they had to ask him where his brother was.

Jackie: And did he say I ate him?

Alan: Basically you're left with the conclusion that he was eaten but it means more than that. It also means the clever part of it, the killing of the natural person who herded animals – the part of themselves pretty well, the one that was favored by the creator. Not the god but the creator.

Jackie: Oh I'm sorry. Okay, hold that because I'd like you to repeat it because I really didn't get what you said and I will expand on this after this break. First of all, I just want to do a little recap that the story you're saying the story in the Old Testament of Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, is allegory. The two creations is meant, one for the elite, and one for the worker bees, I guess you would call it.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: And those are the ones that were supposed to go out and till the field and everything.

Alan: Do all the tilling of the soil, yes.

Jackie: And you said that Cain and Abel the whole story is an allegory and that Cain-Abel actually stands for cannibal and the evidence in that story is that they're saying that Abel ate Cain.

Alan: Cain ate Abel. Again, it's to do with what they tell you to please the deity. The sacrifices that Abel gave to the deity were acceptable, but the ones that Cain gave were unacceptable.

Jackie: What did Cain give?

Alan: Cain was a farmer who grew grain and the meaning behind it all was that he had to know basic sciences to fulfill his occupation; whereas Abel was a natural sort of nomad where he went with his animals wherever they grazed, so he lived more naturally. Therefore, it's really a war between the man who lived naturally and the one who had to use science to make his crops grow. Science conquered the natural man is really what they mean here. That's what it means.

Jackie: You talk about thinking in the cave and even when new information comes it's sort of like thinking in the box, isn't it?

Alan: Oh yes.

Jackie: I mean it's a term that is used today, getting outside of the box instead of thinking in the box. I received a letter and information from Annette, and I don't say this meanly at all, because I reread it tonight, this evening and I reread the information that she had sent and with the letter that she had sent to somebody and she had sent me a copy of it. She was giving a bit of a background on her own progress, if you would, and she had been a Mormon and then she became involved in metaphysics, studied metaphysics and she was reading the Old Testament she wondered how those terrible people could be God's chosen. That led her into the understanding where she is now and where so many people are instead of realizing that our creator does not choose special – a real creator, a true creator is not going to say I'm going to take you to be my people and I'm going to be your god, but instead of rejecting that, then what happened was she began study the bloodline stuff and probably studying under people and reading information. Hello?

Unidentified Caller: Yes, can I ask a question? Alan?

Jackie: Go ahead.

Unidentified Caller: I just wanted to know, in the Bible you were talking about Genesis where the Lord said to Cain when he was chased out, he told Cain, he said I'm going to put a mark on you so that everyone will be able to recognize you and Cain was really upset. He says if you do this, whoever will see me will want to kill me; and I don't know what happened after that. They sent him away. Anyway, is this mark what I see today in the Jewish people, you know the yellowish skin, the coarse hair, the large ears, the large mouth. Sort of Sarah Jessica Parker or Barbara Streisand kind of nose. I just want to know does he feel that that's what that mark is for us. Thank you.

Jackie: Okay. She has to get a radio back on for your answer, Alan. Maybe she didn't hear you say that the whole story was an allegory? Do you want to address that?

Alan: It isn't just that. I mean the serpents, for instance, according to the higher masons, represented a wise man from a previous age and he became the father of Cain. Cain was a bloodline different again from Abel and Adam was not his father; that's what they mean by that.

Jackie: By the serpent?

Alan: A high priest from a previous age. That's what it really means.

Jackie: That's how it translates?

Alan: That's what all the mystery religions claim, yes, the higher you go, and, in other words, he was injected with the intelligence, the scientific bent you might say.

Jackie: Abel or Cain?

Alan: Cain.

Jackie: Oh I thought it was Cain – oh, that's right. Cain slew Abel.

Alan: Of course, once Cain left and was chased out – and, by the way, in the older manuscripts they tell you that they all wore aprons, and that's representative of the present Masonic aprons, that's why the mark had to be covered.

Jackie: And the mark being the circumcision?

Alan: Circumcision. Let's be honest here. If a creator made you perfect in every way, in his own likeness, why would he then demand that you cut a bit of your skin off?

Jackie: In a very sensitive place.

Alan: This is a different purpose all together.

Jackie: And so her question was about the appearance of the Jews today.

Alan: I have a train going by from China. They go across Canada everyday and bring Costco all of its goods. Hold on a second.

Jackie: Did you hear what I asked, Alan?

Alan: No.

Jackie: Well I just wanted you to – I guess you did answer it, but she did ask if the mark was the appearance of the Jews today?

Alan: No. It wasn't Jews. In fact, there were no Jews at the time of Cain and Abel. It pre-existed all of that and circumcision was common amongst all of the so-called Semitic peoples. The Egyptians, when they fought the peoples of the sea who invaded from somewhere in the Aegean, were surprised to find that these enemies also were circumcised as they were. Circumcision was a common thing because they all shared basically a common religion, even though the deities had different names.

Jackie: Yes and it was the same priesthods that were writing these religions?

Alan: I am certain of it because since they had international trade in those days and they had with the trade routes also went the priests. The priests had to know all the religions that different peoples were worshipping were in fact the same religion under different names. You always had a dynasty of a father, mother and a son, always, and of course they give them different names; and so the Egyptians would never think the guys to the north across the water there were worshipping the same deities, but they were in fact. Cain, anyway, supposedly his father was you might say Lucifer or high priest from a previous age and because a he had superior genes, this great inbreeding thing again, he became the first artificer or worker in metals and made tools and weapons and scientifically created things.

Jackie: So you're saying that he would have learned that through the priesthood?

Alan: He would have learned it, absolutely, and again the inference is that he inherited that type of mentality to understand it.

Jackie: What people, if you know this, are considered the people who carry the mark of Cain today? Is it the Jews?

Alan: There are some, definitely a lot actually, of higher-up ones, but really it's one separate people who are at the top of the tree in almost every country, regardless of what they claim to be. They're separate all together.

Jackie: In other words, the elite of the Jews are not of the same bloodline as the average Jews today?

Alan: No. I mean the average Jew today does not marry his sister or his niece, but when you look at royalty for instance that claim to be – the Queen is the head of the Church of England, a Protestant church and yet look at the inbreeding they do.

Jackie: She's got a real horse face.

Alan: Some of them have been some disasters with Princess Anne. She liked horses and she had a nice smile along side her horse. They kind of matched each other and Prince Charles looks like Akhen-Aton of Egypt.

Jackie: And he has very little of a chin, doesn't he?

Alan: Little chin, lock neck, big hips. Interestingly enough too, Charles said at one point that he was the descendent of David and then he said he was also a descendent of Noah. The whole allegory of Noah is the same elite coming through another disaster and surviving and starting the mystery all over again of how you dominate the ordinary people. That's the reality of Noah. Noah was chosen to survive only because he had not out bred of his family lineage. He inbred only. He was perfect in his generations; so you have this elite coming through.

Jackie: It's starting to come out today, although I think a lot of people don't see it, but I have an article. It was in a newspaper and it was a group of rabbis who actually made the statement that there is no historical truth in the Old Testament, but nobody seems to pick up on that, Alan.

Alan: I mean the fact is, in no one else's history was there even a place called Israel. It's only in the Bible. When you look at the histories of Greece, who ruled that area at one time, before the Romans, they called it Edomia. The whole land was called Edomia and then when the Romans moved in it was basically the same.

Jackie: Would I be pronouncing that "Idumean" [Idumea]? Was that the same thing you just said?

Alan: That's right. Interestingly, a lot of them have names that were actually Edomian, like Jack Elam the actor, he did a lot of old westerns, but Elam was basically the capital of Edomia at one time and yet he was a Jew, so there's a big controversy about was there ever a historical Israel.

Jackie: Well, historical Israel actually, I think, isn't it because it's my people Israel? I mean it was actually tribes.

Alan: There were no tribes. It was Isis - Ra - El. Is-ra-el. It was the trinity.

Jackie: That's where Israel came from.

Alan: It was a religion that spread all over the area, you see, and that came from Egypt itself.

Jackie: So these two tribes, how many ever there were, the lost tribes of Israel, that is not what we think it means?

Alan: Not at all. It's astronomy in fact. It's astronomy and astrology. It's the 12 houses of the Zodiac and if you look at the blessings that Jacob gives on the son, you'll see the allegory within each blessing of a symbol of one of the houses of the zodiac. Dan, of course, he's the eagle. He's also the serpent because the eagle basically rises – Aquila rises opposite Draco, which is the old serpent. That used to be where the old North Star was a one time; now it's Polaris. Another tribe is like a lion. Judah is like a lion. That's Leo. Each blessing is actually one of the houses of the zodiac, so they never existed as a people and the rabbis all know this. They're all well aware of this. It's zodiacal. There were three primary groups in existence in ancient times of priests and one was solar, one was lunar and one was stellar, the stars. Now I'm sure they all came under a higher authority above them all, but that's how they ruled all the people. It's entirely zodiacal and the blessings themselves are that. They are the symbols of the zodiac.

Jackie: And the rabbis know all this?

Alan: Oh they know it all, yes.

Jackie: Why do you think they came out publicly and admitted that there is no historical truth in the Old Testament?

Alan: I think now is probably the right time because-- Jackie: Because they want to destroy all religions and mold them into the one?

Alan: That's part of it too, sure. I mean it's the same with the Christian guys. The ecumenical movement is doing the same job to destroy that, you see, at the same time and that's well financed too, big players there. They always do things at the right time. As Masons, once a temple has fulfilled its structure, you knock it down to build anew.

Jackie: They're knocking the pins right out from under all of the people who have been so steeped. Jews and Christians in the Bible and I was talking to one of our listeners, very fascinating and intelligent man but he made a statement. He said if you have a bottle and you empty it – or let's say for example this religion Judeo-Christian, which is almost today as one, but let's say that you knock everything out from under people where they finally realized that it has all been made up for them, then you've created a vacuum and if there isn't something to fill that vacuum, something real, then more garbage will just come into it.

Alan: Actually you see they have been creating a new religion and they've been pushing it for quite a few years, and it's based on earth worship. Mikhail Gorbachev wrote a book and it's called "Towards a New Civilization" and in it he said that he himself was an atheist and later on in the book he says, "we for the global society are creating a new world religion. It will be based on earth worship and it must be so." So there you go. We've watched the Buffy things on TV for years now, there's been witches programs on TV for years, so they're pushing all this stuff because this is the new religion which is to move in and take over.

Jackie: It actually sounds like when they're getting into earth worship and that almost that it's going back to the ancient religious times.

Alan: Yes, because when you have a society run by one single power worldwide you want total control of all land and all people and all animals and everything else, and you want the people to believe they're just part of the same structure. You have the same value as any other animal and your animals are your brothers and your sisters et cetera, et cetera and therefore when the government wants to reduce your populations, the people will do it gladly. In ancient times they had the first-born being killed every year.

Jackie: Yes and the new religion will probably go back to sacrifices.

Alan: The new religions in its higher degrees already do it.

Jackie: We're out of time here, Alan, and the music is playing and I understand that we are not able to be heard over the music. I want to thank you for being on with us this week and I know we'll do some more. All right, thank you very much. Good night, Alan.

(Transcribed by Linda)

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

What does that mean for America?

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

What does that mean for America?

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

What does that mean for America?

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

What does it mean for America?

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

What does that mean for America?

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

What does that mean for America?

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

What does that mean for America?

It's so awful we can't talk about that.

Here it first on First Amendment Radio dot com and First Amendment Radio dot net around the world and on satellite.

Sweet liberty, sweet liberty is in our hands.

It's part of the plan, or is it a state of mind?

You're listening to Jackie Petru and Sweet Liberty, and now here's your host, Jackie Petru.

Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty.

Today is Wednesday, of course, and it is the 28th of December in the year 2005.

I hope you had a lovely Christmas, if you observe Christmas.

If not, maybe just a family time, a holiday season so far, folks.

I can't think of anything more important today than spending time with our family and with those that we love, regardless whether we observe the actual Christmas season or not, because regardless when he was born, the one we know is Jesus, there was a message, and a message of love that was brought into this world and a message of truth. Our spiritual message tonight is a part of that.

We've done this many times, John, chapter 18.

We'll start with 34. Jesus was talking to our Pontius Pilate, and Pilate had entered into the judgment hall and called Jesus and said to him, Are you the king of the Jews?

I don't know how much truth is in this story, but there still is a message here. Jesus said, answered, he said, Do you say this thing of yourself, or did others tell it to you about me?

In other words, when Pilate asked him if he was the king of the Jews, and if I recall, the word Jew actually didn't even occur in the Bible until sometime in 1600s or whatever.

But anyway, Pilate said, Am I a Jew? Your own nation and the chief priest have delivered you to me.

What have you done? And Jesus answered, he said, My kingdom is not of this world.

If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight that I should not be delivered to the Jews?

But now is my kingdom not from hence? And Pilate said to him, Well, are you a king then?

And Jesus answered, You say that I am a king.

Now listen to this, folks. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I in to the world that I should bear witness unto the truth.

Everyone that is of the truth hears my voice. I came to bear witness unto the truth.

And we've had many, many, many lies wrapped around the truth that was brought by Jesus and by other teachers, masters, as they call them.

And we're going to discuss that a bit tonight with Alan Watt, our guest.

And Alan, thank you for being here tonight.

Yes, it's a pleasure.

Always. Thank you.

When we talked earlier this evening, the one thing that I wanted to bring up, and you said that you believe that most Christians today realize that the birth of the one that we know of Jesus wasn't on the 25th of December.

It is the winter solstice.

And what brought this to my mind is that my sister and I were talking earlier, and I was explaining to her, I believe it was my sister, that the solstice starts on the 23rd and the 23rd, 24th and 25th, allegedly that the days stay the same length.

And then on the 25th, of course, the days begin to lengthen again. And that is the old story about the God going way back to Isis.

And I don't know how many fire back and how many gods they told this story about, that he was buried for three days and rose from the bed.

And the myth of it is the fact that the days began to lengthen instead of shortening again. Yes?

Yes, it is ancient. And of course the summer solstice is the opposite. You see that begins on the 22nd, I think, of June.

And then it is the same thing with December.

It is generally the 22nd of December. And that is when the sun is furthest from the equator. And it doesn't go much further north for those three days as it hangs in the sky.

And that is where the hanging God comes from. And they used to draw it north, south, east and west in the sky. And they drew it as a cross. So the God hung on the cross as he was crossing the sky.

And so when he was pretty stationary, he didn't go any further north for those three days. That was the death of the old God, the old year's God.

And then when he started moving forward after Christmas, we call it Christmas now, they all cheered and had their celebration for him. He was born again.

So that is where that came from. But that predated Christianity by many, many thousands of years.

And the story was told in many ages under different religions, wasn't it, Alan?

Pretty well, every religion. There are different names for this, for the same scenario. You had the same thing with Semiramis, the wife of Nimrod, and Tammuz, the son.

And they had their Tammuz celebrations as the son was born at that time of year. And then in Egypt, of course, they had the weeping in midwinter.

The weeping for Osiris, the death of Osiris. And the constellation, of course, was linked to Orion, which also was down for three days.

And then starts to appear in all its glory at the full constellation for those three days leading up to Christmas.

So it's the same story over and over again, the death of the son, really. And then the rebirth after three days as it crosses the sky.

It's in every religion. And of course, Horus was the son who was reborn, the son of Osiris. So this is the same religion over and over.

You know, the thought has entered my mind. I can remember when I was a teenager, you know, and going to the Lutheran church, wondering in my mind, why did he get himself hung up on that cross? Because he didn't have to. And I wondered if he really did. I don't know the history, the actual history of it.

But I have read, you know, books in it. It puts thoughts into your mind. For example, in the Bible, where, you know, it says that, you know, this, of course, happened at Easter.

And I was telling you this evening, you know, in the Lutheran church, we did the Nicene Creed. I think the Catholics do the Apostles Creed.

But ours was the same way. I believe in God, the Father Almighty, and in Jesus Christ, his only son, our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, and was dead and buried. And three days he rose again and came to sit on the right hand of God, the Father Almighty.

Well, you know, that story is just, it's etched into our minds. Like, it's just etched into our minds. And I believe, you know, in the Bible, it talks about how they, you know, when they put him in the tomb, Joseph of Arimathea, that the guards at the door fell asleep at the entrance. And then when they woke up, the stone was rolled away and he was gone. One of the books I read suggested that in the story where he said,

We're told that they put vinegar, you know, in his mouth on the sponge. Is it a possibility that he was given some type of a sleeping, like, soma or something like that, that they were able to take him down so quickly?

And when the guards fell asleep, if all of this happened at all, Alan, possibly the guards were drugged.

Well, this author has made millions on this, many, many authors. And I think the Bejian Lincoln, the Messianic legacy, et cetera, they go into all that stuff.

What are your thoughts on that?

I think it's nothing to do with what it appears to have to do with this. It's always been an esoteric religion behind the exoteric.

Uh-huh.

And the exoteric is always given for the public consumption to make them well-behaved in an orderly society so that they can be controlled by a small few who understand this.

And every age has had religion to keep it in check.

And when you realize that even when they're bringing in the new age religion, as Michael Gorbachev has said in his own writings, towards the new civilization, he said, we must create a new religion, even though he admits in the same book that he's an atheist.

Wow.

He says, we are creating, actually, he says, we are creating a new religion for the world which will be based on Earth worship.

So they understand that they must always have a religion to keep it in check.

Is that what the new ages say, father, mother, god? Or that that creator is asexual? I mean, where does that come from, Helen?

It comes from, again, it's the esoteric. People get lost when they get, it's like you're saying they get fixed in your mind when you're a child through repetition and indoctrination.

And from then on, it's almost impossible for most people to break out of that and look back at it from the outside.

In other words, what's being programmed into you will always make you think in a certain program direction.

It limits you.

And of course, in the esoteric religion that's always been here, they give you a beginning which is really the goal of the end.

And so they write it as a story because these priests for thousands and thousands of years know where they've been going.

And so they give you a deity that everybody will try and emulate or work towards really for their end product which is almost here.

And that's why in the esoteric religions and all of them, it doesn't matter if it's Hinduism or Christianity or whatever, or Judaism, you find that the deity is male and female.

It's the hermaphroditic deity.

And that is where we're all heading towards the hermaphroditic type of new creature which they're going to call the great leap forward.

Well, what they have planned.

Yeah, and it's here because they can do it now.

I know.

They can do it now.

They can create any kind of life they wish right now.

But that's where they want to go with a new type of human creature for slaves, of course.

The elite have always, in their own books that they're written for them or by them, have always said that they themselves will remain unchanged.

But for the slave class, like Charles Galton Darwin in his book The Next Million Years, and in his book he states specifically that the elite ruling class because they are running the ship of error.

He refers to them the ruling class as the masters.

That's right.

The masters will not be subjected to the same type of food as the subjects.

Yes.

And so they would remain unaltered so they could do the usual breeding by selection done by genealogists and priests.

While the new slave race will be perfected in that it will be self reproducing basically.

No doubt we'll put them in injection to start the process.

But that would mean perfect control, you see.

And I can envisage today when you are a perfect slave, your reward will be to have yourself duplicated as a child.

I can't envisage that day.

Well, I hear you and I do understand that it is their intentions.

And I'm not saying it's never going to happen.

I guess maybe the reason that I won't do that, Alan, is knowing how absolutely powerful our thoughts and our words are and even the ability to visualize all of that together.

If I dwell on envisioning it, I would feel that I was part of helping them bring it into being.

And I hold in my mind and it isn't like hopefulness.

I know that all things are possible and they have been at this for a long, long time.

They've actually been changing humanity for a long time.

I know they have.

I see that the sperm count in the meal gets issued every year by the United Nations.

The World Health Organization, they make the announcement and the Western meal is only 25% fertile now compared to 1950.

So it's already happening whether they know it or not, you see.

Well, they're doing that messing with the hormones, aren't they?

They've been doing that since before I was born, yeah.

And I think the inoculations were really part of the reason they brought them out was to target reproduction because they had meetings in the 1800s and 1700s even about population reduction.

People don't realize how far back the dominant minorities, they call them, have been meeting about this kind of stuff.

Explain the dominant minority.

As you did once before, that was very fascinating.

Well, the dominant minority are those who, he can go back as far as Plato, who called them the guardians.

Who was it that wrote about this, though you quoted him?

Yeah, with Charles Dalton, Darwin.

No, it was somebody else, but that's okay.

No, he did write about it.

Okay, but there was somebody else you quoted.

It wasn't Bertrand Russell, and I don't remember his name.

Well, they're the ones who H.G. Wells, he wrote about them too.

But definitely it's in Charles Galton, Darwin's book.

The next million years, he talks about the dominant minority.

And what is the dominant minority?

Well, he's one of the workers for them.

The ones who rule the world economically.

Everything in the world runs on economics.

Okay, and then the ones behind them are the what?

Well, the ones behind them are, as they say, the guardian class who hold the keys of the mysteries, as they call it, which means all knowledge and archives.

The real archives and knowledge, not public libraries.

And so they have the wisdom of the ages, meaning the sciences of the ages, including the science of ruling man, you see.

And this was back many thousands of years.

They existed in Plato's day and before him.

The ones who steer the ship of earth, as they say.

The ones that we don't know about.

Yeah, the ones that, and they're never out in public.

They're never in public view.

They always have their front people, their helper classes, they call them, who take the heat.

You know, they'll implement things in front of the public, but they'll take the heat for doing so.

And these are the people that we all talk about, you know, the Rockefellers, etc.

They're, again, in turn, they're answerable to their masters.

So it's the dominant minority that believe only in, what am I trying to say here, this third dimensional world, that this is where they want to rule.

It's only for eternity, in eternal bodies.

And they don't believe in a higher being, that they are of the gods, right?

They believe that they are the higher beings.

They believe that they have, actually, they believe that they have spirit in them as well as soul.

That's where the body, soul, and spirit are.

But the class, the few behind them, I recall this in a conversation that we had on the air where you said, we were talking about this, and you said they don't.

They believe that they are gods.

Well, they do.

But then the actual ones who are really in control know that man is a spirit being.

And you said their greatest fear is that, you know, because of the religions, we're taught.

I mean, you know, we're taught that, okay, God so loved the world he gave his only begotten son.

When I was a little girl, I laid in bed and wondered, you know, well, if Jesus was God's own son only, then who am I and what am I?

And I've heard many Christians say, well, God knows that I'm just a weak sinner, and he, you know, forgives me.

And that's because of Jesus' blood that was shed for me.

Okay, I see that it has given people an out, Alan.

I can't help but I'm just a weak sinner when, in fact, the power that is within us is known by the hidden rulers behind the dominant minority.

And you said their greatest fear is that enough people are going to wake up to the realization that that power does lie within us.

And if enough people, and I ask you at that time, how many do you think it'll take?

And you said, I don't think very many because there aren't very many of them.

So the ones really in control, so the ones that we believe are in control are more controlled in a sense or as much controlled as we are?

Absolutely.

Absolutely, there's no doubt.

Even Karl quickly mentioned that in his Anglo-American establishment.

He took us through the many of the well-known families that we are familiar with.

Their names pop up down through the last 300 years or so in positions of power in the U.S. and in England and Canada.

And he mentioned that those people work ceaselessly, implementing various agendas, but he says they take them from higher up.

He says the real people work behind the scenes whose names are never known to the public.

They work tirelessly and their reward is knowing that they do wield the real power, not the Rockefellers.

Right.

So yeah, everything in this world is very similar to communism because communism was only a branch of the same structure.

And communism was run by fronts.

Everything that you looked at was a front and front groups and so on.

And it's no different when you go to the main body, which is the ones who rule all of it, including so-called capitalism and commerce, etc.

The ones who work for them are all the front workers, the front organizations.

But the ones who rule capitalism, who created the monetary system and all that, they're still not the ones who are in real control.

They're just the workers.

That's right.

As you see in the esoteric, the guy at the top is called the Lazy Boy.

And the Lazy Boy is in French, you know, it's a female.

The letter Z is connected to the above and below.

And Boy is a Lazy Boy.

He doesn't work.

And they made a chair called the Lazy Boy.

Yes.

A long time ago, I don't know if there's still one, but those recliner chairs.

They still make them.

Yeah. Alan, I'm going to try to put us on the speaker here.

Okay.

And let's see if everything is still okay.

It's going to make a little bit of a noise.

Okay. Can you hear me okay?

Yeah.

Oh, good. Oh, and you sound good and clear too.

Okay.

Well, you know, that one broadcast we had that night and you were talking about that.

It takes us out of, in a sense, it takes us out of the doom and gloom and the despondency and the hopelessness that this is a plan that is, quote, going to succeed.

And, you know, I thought about this.

I thought, well, Christmas is over.

A new year is beginning.

And of course, the new year, it marks, evidently, something important, but the next day is like every other day.

You know what I mean?

At 12 midnight and everybody says, happy new year and everything's still the same.

Yeah.

But in my mind, I thought I would love it if tonight we could talk about the possibility and the potential, Alan.

Do you understand what I'm saying?

I think, yeah, but been there before.

Yeah.

But it's been a long time.

Yeah.

Well, let's see.

I'm not a cheerleader for the world.

I'm not talking about cheerleading for the world.

We won't save the world.

That's another thing, too.

And we won't save the system because the system is there.

We have no say in the system.

It's complete.

So what's going to come out of this and who will come out of this?

It has a bit of a question mark on it yet, but there's no doubt that we'll go through a tremendous chaos.

We're already in it.

We're starting down the brink of the cup going into it now.

They hope to collapse the system through a controlled collapse, like controlled demolitions, which they're very good at.

And then, of course, by controlling it, bring out the new system, the new world order.

And this is probably a very dicey time for them because they have to use so much marketing strategies.

They do hire thousands of think tanks, which are marketing think tanks.

Yes.

To market all propaganda to the public via the media and the news to try and mold their minds along certain paths they want us all to follow.

So that we'll obey properly in the proper direction when we're told.

So it's a very tricky, tricky part for them.

And that's why for every bit of intelligence that breaks out from independent sources, their agencies of counterintelligence also go into action and muddy the waters by putting out things there with certain people and dragons and stuff like that.

Which is incredible, but it's working in a lot of people, you know.

And for everybody who brings out a story of 9-11 and how the towers came down, et cetera, and the fact that everybody knew it and the BBC admitted that they've warned the US agencies this was going to happen.

We know, I mean anybody with reason has that fixed in their head now.

They don't have to watch movies about it.

But now they're turning out more movies about it, but you're only there to muddy the water.

Because they all have little bits in it that the other movies didn't.

And they have you talking endlessly about some things you have filed away in your head by your own reason and your own reasoning powers and said, wait a minute, they did it, I'll move on from here.

You see?

So the counterintelligence forces are out there on the shortwave to muddy the waters of reality.
And no one can give you your reasoning powers except yourself.
You're born with them if you care to use them.
But you can give them away and you can give that power to the media to do your thinking for you.
And lots of people, as Brzezinski said, have already done that, have been trained to do that.
But Albert Pike, the Pope of Freemasonry, said it was up to the individual to use the individual your power of reason.
You must rely upon your power of reason at all times, regardless of all the information around you.
And he said that those who will not use the power of reason for themselves are therefore just need on the table and be so burdened by choice and consent that it was to be used to play.
So, yeah, the counterintelligence is out there at take time to muddy the waters and so we have so much information along the truth.
So it always provides a standardized media version. That's why counterintelligence...
The World and on Satellite.
On TAPE, MP3CD or CD for only $15.
You may do all of this online at FirstAmendmentRadio.com.
Just follow the instructions to make a donation or subscribe.
You may also adopt an hour of your favorite program.
Please don't forget that most of the programs on FirstAmendmentRadio.com are listener supported.
Don't do internet then call 559-781-3773 and we'll be honored to help you.
Thank you from all of us here at FirstAmendmentRadio.com.
Government takeover of the church.
This DVD is the most powerful tool we have for waking up those asleep in the pews.
The scripture calls for his people to come out of her.
The corporate church is the apostate church.
The whore that rides the beast.
Get this DVD for a donation of $25 from FirstAmendmentRadio.com.
Make copies and give them away to your corporate church friends and loved ones.
The truth will make them free. They will watch the DVD.
Government takeover of the church.
Order online today at FirstAmendmentRadio.com or call 559-781-3773 who will tell them if not you.
Since the beginning of time, kings have sought it. Nations have fought for it.
It has been traded. It has been borrowed. It has been purchased.
It has been stolen. There's a reason for it.
To secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity.
Invest with the security of gold and silver.
Call DiscountGoldenSilverTrading at 1-800-375-4188 or visit DiscountGoldenSilverTrading.net.
Listen to financial survival with your host Melody Cederstrom and regular guest world-renowned economist Robert Chapman.
Right here on FirstAmendmentRadio.com at 4 p.m. Eastern or 1 p.m. Pacific Time.
Visit DiscountGoldenSilverTrading.net or call DiscountGoldenSilverTrading at 1-800-375-4188 toll-free 1-800-375-4188
You're listening to FirstAmendmentRadio.com Galaxy 13 Channel 16 Audio 7.70 and worldwide on the internet at FirstAmendmentRadio.com
Alright folks, we're back again with you.
Alan Lott, our guest tonight.
So Alan, where we've talked in the past you have about the individual, the possibility, the potential in each and every one of us.
And sometimes when I would like to have this conversation for some reason it seems that you would rather not have it but there's so much more than what our eyes see.

There's so much more than the plan that these creatures have for this physical world.
And I would like, if you would, to speak on that tonight.
Well I don't think everyone is capable of coming through number one.
I didn't say that.
Yeah, you said everyone.
A lot of people have chosen who they want to be.
And only those who've got their own soul searching I think.
Good, okay, thank you, thank you.
I don't think what we call spirit is something that's just there.
I think it's something you have to look for.
And of course that was the old esoteric religion, still is actually.
What?
That the old secret was that all life was composed of body and soul.
And soul was an animating principle, but it wasn't completion until you had spirit join it.
And even the ancient Greeks who were all taught, all the aristocracy were taught in Egypt who had it from elsewhere of course.
They believed that that was the journey of an individual, that the soul hungered for spirit.
And that was the journey for truth.
And truth has no conditions.
In other words you can't drag things along as you're seeking truth.
You almost have to cleanse yourself in a sense and be open because there's partial truth and there's cloudy truth.
And that's all due to the dragging something along with you on a new plan.
So the soul would seek out spirit as they called it.
There could be allegories too.
But when a true seeker had found it then spirit joined.
Not anybody's spirit, but the one that was for you.
The creator made a spirit for every soul.
And of course that's where the old term soul searching came from.
Soul searching was the animating principle within every life.
And the soul on its journey through earth here has now joined matter and animates it towards seeking truth which is spirit.
And when he had sought it with awesome serenity then spirit joined.
And that was the soul mate.
And that was the soul mating.
That's where it comes from.
So you reached perfection in this reality.
And I'm not talking about longevity or superpowers.
I'm talking about perfection on your journey when you had attained all three and when three merged together.
What is perfection to them or to this?
Perfection was when you now knew that part of you that always seemed to be missing was united within you.
You see that's what it always really meant.
I think many people do go through life.
They know that there's just something wrong or they're always thrusting for something outside of the material.
Those who rule the world try to fill that gap in with making you rush after toys and things to buy etc.
And that's why all things which we purchased, the ad shows, make us smile.

We're not smiling for very long now.
We're unsatisfied so quickly.
And we're always looking for the next thing.
And it ran and stopped and re-evaluated everything and says, what is it we're really looking for?
The system tries to stop you getting to that stage where you just come to a complete standstill and think it out.
Because truth sometimes is a veiled way of saying it's that spirit that was made for you.
But it's out there somewhere and it will not join you until you've re-evaluated and sort of cleansed yourself.
It's almost as though you're going to not just an able-gazing self-absorption state but you certainly will re-evaluate your life.
And there's a sort of process.
I think the person goes on the way there on that journey.
And that was perfection, knowing and having the wisdom that came with it.
In other words, full spiritual consciousness.
Yes, it gave you an awareness over whole vast areas which you perhaps didn't have before.
And also a knowingness, a realization about things which were instant.
You understood things very easily.
It was before you had false ideas, false conclusions, false programming in a way.
And that hampered your progress.
But now it's much easier.
So that was a person's journey.
And everybody really, an ancient time said that everyone was here on a journey.
This is a journey through life, you know.
But it wasn't just through the material for the material sake and having children and dying, etc.
It was to actually find yourself which was that part of you which had been made for you.
What does that mean, a part of us that had been made for us?
Yeah.
Like there's a disconnection someplace?
Pretty well.
Could it be that the disconnection is simply in our mind Alan, because we're not aware of the connection?
You could put it that way in the sense, in one sense, because most people are making choices all through their life.
We all are, not most people.
We're always making choices.
Yeah, and you'll realize that every choice they're making is taking them a certain path.
Most people live, work and die never really understanding what's really going on about anything.
And that's a sad comment, but it's true.
And they can be very, very nice people and their family love them and all that kind of stuff.
But it's never dawned on them that there was anything evil within the world, running the world.
It never dawned on them that the system that they were born into was totally, totally different from the way that same system trained them to look at it.
They had never realized any of that, you know.
These thoughts simply didn't come to them.
And so they die, never knowing.
You know, metaphysically, it is said that this third dimensional world is illusion.
And that's something maybe we could intellectualize, but very difficult to actually grasp the concept of.
I'll tell you, metaphysically, it was meant, and it was put out there and taught out there, to form a sense of disassociation, which I've seen in many people who've been through.
But what I mean, what I was going to follow this with, Alan, is that when we begin to learn the truth of this whole physical world and the system in it, we begin to see the illusion that was created for us.
We should be.
It's because the whole everything we've ever, almost everything that we have ever been taught, been a lie.

And so in a sense, we have lived in an illusion.

And also the illusions turn to delusions, because a delusion is a fixed false belief.

That's the definition of it.

So illusions can create delusions.

And as long as enough people have been trained the same way in the illusions, then the majority of people are now deluded.

That's what that would come to.

Well, it seems that down throughout the ages, something has stopped their plan.

And maybe it was what you said a long, long time ago.

It isn't going to take very many, because there aren't very many of them.

And I've wondered, because you know, the book that we call the Bible, that is called the Bible, which I understand Bible means book, Biblio.

Yeah, but, oh shoot, I lost my train of thought when I took myself down that cul-de-sac in the Bible.

Shoot, never mind, it'll come back to me.

Yeah, but as I say, I think we have to even think outside of the box as we always.

And it's possible to do.

It is possible to think outside of the box and not use any of the tools that have given us.

Right.

And unfortunately holy books of any denomination are their tools.

Right, however, according to what I understand, I don't know if this is true, but they have to give us truth.

Well, they can give us truth, but it's always so vague.

It's always mixed in with all the lies.

It's always veiled. It's always veiled so heavily.

But there are some simple truths, Alan.

Pardon?

There are some simple truths.

Oh, simple ones.

And what I'm saying is that in the book that we call the Bible, there are truths.

Yeah.

We need to be discerning.

I talk to people who say, oh, yeah, part of the Bible is symbology, you know, because you just can't take it literally.

But then there's certain things and stories and I call them stories because I don't know the truth of any of the quote stories that we've been given in the Bible.

But the simple truth that we've been given, allegedly, that they attribute, if you would, to the one that we know as Jesus, simply, for example, do unto others as you would have others do unto you.

You know, Alan, the whole world, the whole world would be working if that were in the process.

If that were, if each and every single one of us treated others as we would want to be treated, not as we're treated, but as we would want to be treated, their plan would fail.

Yeah.

That's one of the simple...

They also want the populace to understand these truths.

They want them to?

Yeah.

Why?

So that they will be well-behaved while the elite do things so covertly behind them, behind the scenes.

Because society can only work on certain basic rules and those are the basic rules you're talking about.

But people, we don't live by those rules.

No, but society, we still have...

That's the rule.

That's the place, basically.

So see that as the rule.

Sure, I know what a maxim is, but I see that if we...

See, because think about this.

Think about the people.

I think a children's family services a lot.

Yeah.

Think about those people that work for the bureaucracies.

Yeah.

If they were treating people as they would want to be treated, Alan.

Yeah.

That whole bureaucracy would fall apart because nobody could do what they're doing.

That's what I'm saying.

Everybody said they were supposed to be doing...

There'd be no money to hire people to work in those places.

Yeah, I know that.

But I'm...

See, everything is coercion in a monetary system.

I know that.

Where you're given no choice but to use their money and you are given no choice today.

Fine.

However, a person who works in a bureaucracy, let's say there was one whole big, huge bureaucracy called children family services.

Okay?

And everybody that they hired, no matter how small-minded, mean-minded they seem, because those are the people they hire, if those people got into that position and they went into somebody's home and they see that that home's not a whole lot different than theirs, but they don't write up these terrible reports because see, they get paid for how many children are stolen out of the home and et cetera, et cetera.

If they wouldn't do that, Alan, that whole bureaucracy would fall apart.

It couldn't exist.

Do you see what I'm saying?

Yeah, I know that.

But as I say, none of this would...

We know all that, but you could never do it in just one bureaucracy.

You'd have to literally...

I'm just using one as an example.

Yeah, you'd need to do away with the money, then all of this system would have to go.

You can't have some things as they are.

How can you do away with the money?

You know what you said?

You said this a long time ago, too.

When enough people understand that monetary system, it'll collapse of itself.

Well, it would.

That's what I'm talking about, Alan.

You see, the choice is you either go along with the money system, which is part of the policymaker, you see, for the planet, leading us to know where the...

We know where they're leading us.

They've told us often enough.

And that's a choice.

Or we can literally all stop and attract.

And it would take that.

It would take people stopping in their tracks, not driving to work, not going along with it, and shutting everything down.

That's truly what it would take.

We are talking about a kind of a miracle in that sense.

But that's what it would take for people who realized that that was the only way to literally stop the system.
Because you can't have parts of the system and expect some other parts to change.
It won't work that way.
Money in the world is all-powerful.
It's all-powerful.
It runs every country.
It runs the lives of every individual.
Including you.
Everybody.
We're given no choice.
You can't sit in your land.
They come along demanding taxes.
They won't take rabbit skins anymore.
Let's take that as an example.
The people who are in the government,
local government, state government,
I don't know, forget federal government.
I'm talking down to the individual.
I had a conversation with one of our county commissioners that one day I told you about this.
He said this so nonchalantly.
I had called him, left a message.
He called the next day.
Apologize for not returning my call quicker.
But they were out seizing a home.
Taxes.
And he said it so nonchalantly.
And I said, isn't, oh my God, Walt, isn't that a shame?
He said what?
I said taking somebody's home.
Because they can't pay their taxes.
He said, well, we've got to do something or nobody would pay their taxes.
Okay, this is the example I'm talking about.
And this may sound like la-la land to you, Alan,
but this is what I'm talking about.
This man who is a county commissioner says, wait a minute, something's real wrong here.
What are we doing?
These people have paid for their home.
It's mortgage-free.
They don't have the money to pay the taxes.
Are we going to steal their home out from under them?
I'm saying, Alan, and I know this sounds really maybe la-la land or esoteric or whatever you want to call it, what I'm saying is that if all of us did unto others as we would have others do unto them, to us, we couldn't do that.
We couldn't do that, Alan.
Yeah, but how are we going to get all people to do that?
You said yourself it isn't going to take very many.

Yeah, but the thing is...
Because there aren't very many of them, Alan.
I don't think...
I'm not saying how are we going to get people to do that.
He aren't going to get people to do anything.
I mean, we can have conversations and maybe somebody listening starts thinking and says, oh my God.
All you can do is bring them to a certain understanding.
The system, one way or another, the whole system is going to change totally.
I mean, totally, you know.
It could begin to collapse, Alan.
And it will either come out with...
It will come out with either their new system.
So just for fun, we'll say that everybody listening to this broadcast tonight, maybe there's 50, 60, 70,
maybe suddenly they get it, Alan.
Oh my God, that makes sense.
And they start looking at themselves and they begin to treat others.
They would want to be treated.
Now, there's two sides to this coin because Jesus said, you know, love your neighbor as yourself.
You remove yourself from the presence of people that are not treating you the way you're willing to treat them.
And so why would we allow ourselves to be treated less?
So we just remove ourselves from that person's presence.
But that is exactly what I'm saying.
So let's say that 60 or 70 people, and there's a lot more, I'm sure, that aren't listening to this broadcast that at least think about this and make an attempt to live that way even when it's some little thing you do that nobody's even around.
Like, remember I told you when I went grocery shopping and I didn't put that basket into that thing.
I just shoved it up against the snow bank.
I got in my car and I thought, that was really a rotten thing to do.
I could have taken that around and put it...
I just had to go around the snow bank.
And it's looking at ourselves, looking at not just what we're doing, Alan, but when we have these emotions going on,
anger, upset, fear,

want to get revenge on somebody who did something to us, take a look at ourselves.
Well, know thyself is always...
Keep and keep looking,
keep examining, keep questioning.
Why did I do that?
Why do I feel this way?
Where's it coming from?
You see what I'm saying?
And we just begin being that,
treating other people
as we would want other people to treat us.
You know what I think?
I think it would all start to collapse.
And I don't know what would happen to the monetary system,
but as you said yourself,
if enough people begin to understand it,
it would collapse of itself.
Yeah, it would.
It would take a tremendous re-evaluation of...
Of course it would.
We'd be reduced, oh my God,
to bartering, Alan.
Well, here's the choice right now.
I think Adolf Hitler did in Germany.
When you leave Eden,
and Eden's an allegory for the natural state,
there's only one path out of Eden.
And that's through science, you know.
I don't know what does that mean?
And it's through so-called altering our environment to change ourselves, or to suit ourselves.
And of course,
ultimately the sciences,
as they've always said in esoteric remasonry, will recreate that which was left in perfect.
Okay, you know what?
You just said a whole mouthful.
And I'm going to try to write it down.
Eden, the gate out of the Eden, is science.
The path is one direction, yeah.
Gate out of Eden.
Okay, you know what I'd like to do?
I'd like to pick this up next Wednesday.
Yeah.
Because I'm not understanding this,
and I really would like to.
Gate out of Eden is science.
Yeah, the path, the path out of Eden, there's only one path leads out of it.
The path.

Okay, and Eden is an allegory.

Okay.

And that has to do with something we were talking about.

Yeah, the natural, it's a natural state.

All right, oh good.

I've made the notes.

Actually, couldn't it?

But you'll lose it, though.

No, uh-uh.

Uh-uh, I got it right here on my little notepad.

I'm not going to lose it, because every time we say we're going to pick something up next week, or tomorrow when we used to do, you know, three days in a row,

we couldn't pick it up.

I would really like to pick this up, because you're saying that it relates to what we were talking about just now?

Yeah.

Okay, good.

Because we're out of time here.

And I want to wish our listeners, folks, just a happy new year.

I mean, that is so trite,

so I'm not going to say that.

But peace and joy and love, and maybe that sounds trite,

but I mean that from all of my heart, because I believe that that is our natural state.

Is this any better?
Roll away the dawn
Roll away the dawn and let me see
The land of the free
Has anything changed at all?
Sweet liberty
Sweet liberty is in our hands
Is part of the plan
Or is it a state of mind?
Never forget
You're listening to Jackie Petru and Sweet Liberty
And now, here's your host, Jackie Petru
Good evening, ladies and gentlemen.
Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty.
Thanks for being here.
And I'm glad to be here with you, our internet and satellite listeners.
Today is Wednesday.
It is the 16th of November in the year 2005.
And I am filling in for Darren Weeks this evening.
As you all know by now, Darren has stepped in and is broadcasting as Sweet Liberty Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday on the internet from WFAR, First Amendment Radio, and the satellite.
And I've been canning folks since the beginning of September.
I'm not quite here, but I'm almost finished yet.
It is delightful to be here with you this evening.
And guess who our guest is tonight?
Well, I'll tell you.
Right after, I share a spiritual message with you.
This is from Matthew 5, beginning with verse 14.
Jesus said,
Ye are the light of the world.
A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid and neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick and it gives light unto all that are in the house.
Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father, which is in heaven.
And Alan Watt, thank you for being with us tonight.
Alan?
Yes, sir.
Oh, can you hear me okay?
You're very, very low.
That's amazing.
It's almost inaudible.
Shall we try to reconnect Alan?
I think I'll try that.
Okay, well, I believe Nicholas is there.
And Nicholas, if you would play some music for just a minute.
Alan is having trouble hearing me. Let us try to reconnect.
Okay.
Well, wait a minute, Alan.
Okay, you're on.
Hello.
Jackie?

[illegible]

[illegible][illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Thank you.
Thank you.
Thank you.
Thank you.
Thank you.
Thank you.
Thank you.
Thank you.

and then you have the myriad of secret societies beneath them working within the structure of society and really guiding it, you know, and that's how it's all done.
So they run above and below, as they call it.
It's both sides of it. It's the open side that's open to the public and the underworld, which the public don't even know exists half the time.
And so, and China is no different.
Ancient China to present day China, India is exactly the same and so is the West.
So was the Greek civilization and the Egyptian.
Nothing has really changed.
Why change a technique that works so well?
Yeah, it's not broke, don't fix it.
Yeah.

When I mentioned the Chamber of Commerce,
I didn't carry it to the nth degree because there are local, of course, chambers of commerce within the little cities and towns and then there are the state chambers of commerce and then there's the national chamber of commerce and then there is the international chamber of commerce, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, same thing.
It's an international organization and they have what is called, I think, permanent, up, oh, something.
It's in the UN.
Yeah, permanent status there.
Observer status.
That's right.
I think that's what they call it.
And I think even there's an international one for mayors, town mayors.
Yes, there is.
So it's everywhere.
I mean, we are already global, you see, really.
When I called in here last night, he was talking about China and all of the goods that are being brought in and all of the containers, big crates and big huge cans and et cetera, barrels, and there are none of them being inspected.
You could hear his concern.
He said, we're getting set up for a takeover.
And I said, yes, it's been going on for a long time.
He said, the question is what can we do?
And Alan, what we can do, I mean, in my mind, and is what I said to Darren is exactly what he's doing, is informing people.

And the more people that wake up, the less, the harder it is for the plan to continue to succeed.
I don't think it's a matter of stopping it, to be honest with you.
I think it's what happens.
I didn't say stop it.
He said, what can we do about it?
It's a matter of what happens on the other side of the chaos that's coming.
We are coming through it.
There's no doubt it's gone too far ahead.
And it's those with knowledge who can change things on the other side once we come through, rather than allow them to start all over again or into the next phase of what they plan for their new civilization.
I'd like you to repeat what you just said.
Yes, we are going to go through the chaos.
Yes, we are going through the chaos now.
What did you say about the other side?
It's who knows on the other side when you come through those that have the knowledge of what went before who can change the beginning of the new society so they don't follow out their plans to bring forth their new civilization because it's one horror show after another.
And it's at the birth of something that people who understand what's happening can make a difference.
Once it's underway, it's very difficult to stop.
It's always at the birth of something.
And you said that they begin to actually fight amongst themselves which can bring them down too.
Yes, because they are hungry.
Joe Average has a hard time understanding the addiction to power that these people have.
And it truly is.
It's like any addict who must have his fix.
These people are so addicted to power and they can all cooperate and take their cuts.
As long as that throne, that world throne is not in sight but once it comes into sight, they all want that one seat and that's when you start to turn on each other.
And I always see when Titans fight, the little people take a lot of beating in the process.
So there will be a period of chaos and we are in the brink of it now.
We're into it in fact.
It's not too far off.
Did you say they all want the what?
That throne.
That single seat of power.
There's quite a lot of them so they will start to turn on each other.
And we will see it.
We'll hear different reasons for it and accidents and so on but it will start to happen.
There's no doubt about that.
These people are thoroughly, like any addict, they're thoroughly addicted to this thing called power and they want to go down in history with their names chiseled in stone.
So they will start to fall out, I would say, as they always seem to do.

And on another level of the challenge, what occurred to me, knowing that thoughts are things and that our energy is so...

We're out of time here.

We're out of time here.

I talked about this last night just briefly but we don't have time to do it.

Folks, thank you for being here with us tonight and Alan, thank you for being with us.

And it was very nice to be back with our listeners.

Darren will be back with you on Monday and I will be back from time to time to visit with you.

And this has been delightful.

God bless you ladies and gentlemen. Good night.

Night Alan.

Good night.

Good night.

You're listening to Jackie Petru and Sweet Liberty.

Today is Wednesday and it is the 14th of December in the year 2005 and it is good to be back with you again.

I told you this last week and for whatever reason this week it doesn't feel that way.

I actually felt like literally a guest on the broadcast and I have talked with Darren and I have told him that I would be taking each Wednesday night now and so we'll be visiting at least once a week this way and that's, for me it's lovely and I hope for you too.

Our topic tonight, let me share our spiritual message with you because this is very appropriate to our subject matter this evening.

This is from Matthew in the Bible.

This is from chapter 18 and they were talking about the children and Jesus said that whoso this is in verse 6 talking about the children whoso shall offend one of these little ones it was better for him that a milestone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea.

I want to do that again and I did leave a little a few words out because they're alleging that Jesus said that anyone whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me and I think that people would tend to take that literally and consider that a child who wasn't aware of a man named Jesus then he wasn't going to be saved or he wouldn't be wrapped in the love of that loving individual that we know is Jesus.

So I leave those words out because I know that he loved all children.

He said that whoever should offend one of these little ones it were better for him that the milestone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea and I couldn't think of a more emphatic I guess you might say way to say that and our guest this evening our co-host I probably should say is Alan White Alan thanks for being here tonight.

Yeah it's a pleasure.

Can you hear me okay?

Yeah I can.

You know this is interesting because your voice was a lot louder and it lost that volume again so it seems like I don't know maybe tricks are being played you know with the telephone Alan.

Well that generally is the case with me here.

Yeah I know it so therefore if you can really speak up and I'll tell you when the volume comes because usually we get it back again in a little bit don't we?

That's right.

Okay well we were talking today about the Sovietizing of the so-called educational system actually it's the Sovietization of the world isn't it Alan?

It's the whole world yeah that's what we're under now in fact and I think Lenin was quite correct with that he said that when the people and the politicians are debating social policies to do with healthcare, welfare, jobs and so on then they have effectively been Sovietized and sure enough every time that we get an election coming up here in Canada a show election you know and the present Prime Minister who's re-running to get back in has promised not that means much but the promises count but he's promised free daycare for everybody and then they interviewed lots of women in the streets to see what they think and well it's about time they did that you know they've been talking about it for years it's time they did that so in other words the people have been Sovietized when they expect the government to bring up their children for them you know that's a good example of Sovietization they don't see this government intrusion they only see it as a benefit to themselves by the government to take care of the children for them.

Yeah and they have no idea what is in store for their children.

Oh they have no idea about anything.

I know.

In fact most of them today who have children if you mentioned the Soviets they wouldn't know what you meant.

I know it.

You know and our communists or Marxist policies and they have no idea at all.

Well actually Soviet means council doesn't it?

It means supposedly means ruled by council and so a collection of councils ruling you know and that was the front of course that was placed to the people initially so that they would accept the Soviet policies but in reality it was never run by the people.

You'd have councils authorized councils by the government of course just like the NGOs that are registered with the United Nations they're authorized NGOs who will go along with the UN policies it was the same thing in the Soviet system in fact that's what we have with the duplication of the exact same system that the NGOs pretend to speak on behalf of the people so they get all the air time and all the media publicity.

Oh yeah.

But really no one ever stops and says well how can it be a democracy when these people aren't voted by the people to be in any position.

But you know of course people don't understand it when they join these organizations it's just like the Chamber of Commerce Alan and I have talked about this before I know the Chamber of Commerce is not just a local or state or nationwide it's worldwide and it is also international it is can you think about that this is when it really hit me.

About the NGOs because the UN says that what they're lacking for actually to have world government is the parliament of the people and the NGOs are I believe are considered that now because anybody any even small business owner as I was that joins the Chamber of Commerce and you just do it because everybody does it and it's whatever I did it when I had my business and so therefore every single member of the Chamber of Commerce when that international representative speaks at UN councils and things he's allegedly representing every single one of those people that's the voice of the people that's the true parliamentary government for the United Nations and the Soviet man I've quoted this book before the cogs in the wheel this was written by Mikhail Heller after quote perestroika in Russia occurred with Gorbachev the formation of Soviet man and basically it's a worldwide movement as Soviet man is a whole new according to them is a whole new species a biological species and they said that it had taken millions of years for for man to evolve I guess you would to homo sapiens and it took them only 60 years to do this and here's he quotes a trope from Lysenko he says that in our Soviet Union people are not born what are born our organisms we turn them into people tractor drivers engine drivers academicians scholars and so forth and and the author says Mikhail Heller says in the course of 70 years of building socialism the regime has succeeded in quote making and quote making people who have lost all interest in work because they're convinced that those who made them are obliged to guarantee their needs once they've adapted themselves to life in special Soviet conditions and isn't that's exactly what you were talking about when parents say oh yeah well it's about time you're giving us yeah you know free free daycare take our children and take care of them

yeah that's a Soviet mindset for governments there to to take over from everything that you do or start or whatever and uh free up your time so that you can go and work contain more taxes to the to the same Soviet system and if people understood that to them it is true that we are nothing but organisms as you've said so many times Alan they've they've given us our culture every culture sure and and you remember one night we were on the air and it occurred to me it's like the world is their petri dish yes and we are the organisms here on planet earth and they're culturing us as the way the scientists culture the organisms in petri dishes and Stalin is quoted here as saying of all the valuable forms of capital in the world the most valuable and the most decisive are people yeah yeah that's where all the labor comes from and it's it's changed through money systems it's energy really and time which you can then take from the people through taxation and uh it keeps the whole system together money is the key to everything you know everything and uh to their armies that enforce this system everywhere you couldn't have an army if all you had were a few tons of turnips to barter nobody would want to hang around that's right but you

you give them the money and you give them the prostitutes that they can they can they can hire and so on and you keep the army together you feed them well enough and that's what i've done for thousands of years yeah so that's that's the reality of it all it's money is the key to the whole artificial system i always thought it odd this is in genesis uh as the the rivers flew out of uh came out of Eden an allegorical form of course it said that outside there there was lots of gold and and i think it was onyx or something now why would a creator be caring about gold being outside there lots of gold right that tells you it's a man-made system it's not a creator made right and uh and that's the key to that and then when you realize that that's that so-called god in the old testament it's not creator no no he's a big banker he'll be caring about gold being and uh so yeah uh and and they have the coding as well in genesis for the two types of humans well actually one is human one isn't and um they have the first genesis one which is centers around in the beginning you need a man and woman and his same image created he then and that's the occult meaning in the town that the god is both male and female so he reproduced himself in the perfect sameness into man and woman male and female right second one but there's nobody to tell the soil so he creates Adam and then Eve and see we are not class class as man you see we see if you're if you're not one of the upper elite family lineages you marry in common etc you don't have your your mates picked for you through genealogical charts then you are not classed as man that's the big the occult meaning behind that that's why they asked Jesus that you are son of man so it's so alan is it different to say human and man um now human again has a double play on it because the the worker b comes from the the the root human comes from the same word is it's humus it's what humus the earth you know oh earth man and so he's not he was made of he wasn't made of of the pure sameness of the deity that's what it means and um worker bees of course hum so you have hum humus and human you know so it's from that species but it's not the total species not the same species so that's why in the bible it differentiates man and human yes because there are different times that man is used and different times i think that human is used that's right and that's why they say you have the two versions in genesis it's not a mistake it's the occult there's a terric message there that the ones who were born in the sameness of the deity uh man and woman that's all it says male and female created he them uh-huh was that a homophrodite yeah uh-huh and it also means that they had they were not workers you see they didn't say that he made them for a purpose uh-huh but then you find you find later that there's no one to tell the soil to work the soil so pure old adam gets made and and and that's the that's the real esoteric so the the ones who classify themselves as man or son of man uh belong to the higher order you see that's what it means isn't that always been like that isn't that what they attribute uh jesus to saying that he is the son of man that's right so what is that you have to because they were they were of a higher uh order of being supposedly in the esoteric they still believe that today with with the elite families who have their mates chosen from them from the same genealogical trees uh going way way back for thousands of years that they are superior type beings and they they have the right to call themselves man well did he read did jesus refer to the people as man i mean he did say you know that all who do my fathers will are my family my brothers my sisters my mother and i recall that you had said that and you know i have read in different books that he had studied uh you know the quote we it's called mystery religions but that you know all that time that we weren't given any information about where the heck he was from the time he was what 13 tell he started his quote ministry and um and you said that he was an adept and that he turned renegade on them and was actually revealing to the population anyone who had an eye to see and in order to hear he was revealing to them the truth that yeah he was giving up the mysteries you know that the the priesthood did not want people to know and basically is that we are spiritual beings with a tremendous creative ability and power within us yeah i have to get these dogs out of here they're wrestling and they'll make them be nervous i'm going to put them in the mud room um gosh there was another thought i had i got to get come on girls oh they're not even following me they know what i'm going to do well and you know what i'd like you to do uh if you would give our listeners your address your phone number you know in that first book that you wrote cutting through you you uh give evidence of the fact that it come on get up mariah out they be uh hermaphrodite yeah and so you do that while i'm doing this okay i'll keep them okay thank you okay yeah there are three of these books i've written and uh i go through the the ancient histories of of and religions and the esoteric religions which also always accompanied them to the present and the third one continues that and goes into the ancient money techniques and who used it and so on and how the people of countries even thousands of years ago um so these books are available for twenty five dollars each and preferably if you can pay in an international postal order from your post office has to be international can we detach it here and you send them to the twenty five dollars each there are three of them um you can either order one or the mail and the address is alan what w a t t and it's a l a n yeah and the the address is site forty one which is s i t e four one box four s there which is e s t a i r e i think freda stare with an e in the front uh ontario canada and the postal code is p for peter three for three for the trinity i guess p for elizabeth four n for norah one and then say that all again without the yeah so that's alan what site forty one box four s there ontario canada p three e four n one and my telephone number praying when i want to contact me is seven zero five six nine five zero four one six alan is there any particular time uh uh in the evening is there any limit at the time of you would prefer people not to call uh it could be dodgy around um around uh say three nine o'clock or so uh prefer between seven o'clock uh if they're going to call seven o'clock to say seven thirty eight yeah because your conversations sometimes get very involved yes uh uh okay and often everyone's stuck in different areas and levels and and you have to sort of figure out their mindset to get around all the barriers that have been set up there uh so that you can make things as easily understood as possible in the shortest time did you say i'm sorry did you say that it uh either has to be an international postal money order or uh a cash because you can accept cash but not a personal check and not a u.s postal money order or you wouldn't be able to uh use it yeah it's hard of that way yeah yeah okay well thank you for that uh there's something i would like to do i've got two places in this book that i would like to quote from tonight and for our listeners uh if you might be interested in this i believe that this this was published by um noff publishers i don't believe you'll find it in bookstores uh i found it at a big huge uh barn sale but i think you could find this book on abebooks.com it is titled cogs in the wheel and it is by mcale heller m-i-k-h-a-i-l heller h-e-l-l-e-r this is a gold mine in fact alan when i got the book and started reading it it was really the wrap-up for me of the understanding of what they're doing to our children in the uh so-called educational system and when i called uh uh charlotte issa beat and told her about it she did get a copy of the book she said it's a jewel a gold mine for people to read but let me quote here's one quote i want to share with our listeners and with you uh this is a speech dealing with the proposal for a new program and with the main directions to be taken by economic and social advance in the ussr up to the year 2000 gorbachev set out with admirable clarity the aims of the ruling party listen to what he said and see if that reflects what's happening in the u.s. today he said our party must have a strong social policy embracing every aspect of a man's life from the conditions in which he works and lives cares for his health and occupies his leisure time through his attitude to social classes and other nationalities and the author said to embrace every aspect of a man's life is to continue and develop on the threshold of the third millennium Stalin's dream of people as cobs who quote keep our great state machine in working order and that is a quote here on the first page this was part of the introduction as joseph Stalin is quoted as saying i drink to the simple people ordinary and modest to the cobs who keep our great state machine in motion and then krushev said someone must keep an eye on the cobs and gorbachev said our party well i just read it must have a strong social policy embracing every aspect of a man's life and remember when you were talking about this thing worldwide and i knew i had read it in here and i found it before we went on the air the soviet man uh as they call it the new man because it's a whole new biological species and here uh okay where am i okay in 1982 the french critic lewis marcorales expressed his amazement after seeing a soviet film at the venice film festival he said the protagonist and the director are like visitors from another planet and another era and that then quoting him and then the author says his astonishment was understandable but if he had looked more carefully now this book was written in the 80s alan published i think 83 or 87 something i don't know okay 1988 okay listen to what he says here he says if he had looked more carefully around his own country or italy or any other country of the non-soviet world he would have discovered in its people many of the qualities of soviet man or a readiness to acquire them it is remarked that wherever a soviet style regime is set up it immediately undertakes to create the new man that's capital n capital m it says when the north vietnamese numbs army entered saigon in 75 the quote formation of the new man a new type of people and a new mentality began immediately as the 1983 statutes of the institute for cultural relations with france in ho chi min city formerly saigon made clear said quote the only cultural and propaganda materials which can be imported kept and circulated by those which promote the creation of the new man in vietnam and in mozambique the new president announced we are waging a class war for the creation of the new man so so we've talked about this before uh but you know when you don't get details like that your quotes from people it's almost kind of a generic type thing to say that the soviet union was a huge huge laboratory uh for the making of the new biological species called homo sovieticus and now it's the blueprint that is being used all over the world to create their new man yeah it is and they're doing it they're doing it so well and so thoroughly with the children in these indoctrination centers aren't they alan yeah they are uh most of the soviet techniques actually didn't come from russia they came from britain you know okay and uh but the but they had the people in the soviet union uh were so at that time so oppressed oh that and so under the thumb is that it really was the perfect place for them to use those techniques wasn't it absolutely you had a you had a caged laboratory the right they were in a cage and that no one could could say anything or do anything without permission and uh and of course i think it was elmer rosevelt went to to russia on her tour and our first stop was to see pavlov or if you said if that was her hero because he basically uh mostly experimentation wasn't done just on animals it was humans and he implemented the results of experiments into the school system he he set up the school system there in in russia so there's all pavlovian techniques often doctriation but pavlov himself had had got a lot of his information from from england uh huh okay let's talk russia had gone over the virtual let's let's talk about this on the other side of the break yeah because we thought we're going to be taking a break here in just a few seconds folks we'll be back with you with alan watt right after this so stay with us and thanks for being here you're listening to the first amendment radio dot com worldwide freedom is never free we need your support today at first amendment radio dot com if you'd like to get a copy of this program there are a few ways that we can help you you may subscribe at first amendment radio dot com for only 45 dollars a month and you'll receive an mp3 cd weekly of all of our programs as a bonus we'll send you a password for our audio archives online that's a 15 dollar value or you may request any month of any program on one mp3 cd for a minimum donation of only 25 dollars or any single program on tape mp3 cd or cd for only 15 dollars you may do all of this online at first amendment radio dot com just follow the instructions to make a donation or subscribe you may also adopt an hour of your favorite program please don't forget that most of the programs on first amendment radio dot com our listeners supported don't do internet then call 559-781-3773 and we'll be honored to help you thank you from all of us here at first amendment radio dot com if you read the history books the most often asked questions of southerners was this why did you fight and the most often given answer is because you're here in other words the south did not invade the north the north invaded the south was it the civil war or war of federal aggression john weaver sets the record straight in this dvd series on the civil war from the old past christian history conference was there a war to set the slaves free or was it a war to enslave us all get this dvd and judge for yourself war of federal aggression get this dvd presentation for a donation of 25 dollars from first amendment radio dot com order online today at first amendment radio dot com call 559-7813-7773 the truth seems strange only because we've been indoctrinated with a fiction war of federal aggression get it today since the beginning of time kings have sought it nations have fought for it it has been traded it has been borrowed it has been purchased it has been stolen there's a reason for it to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity invest with the security of gold and silver call discount gold and silver trading at 1-800-375-4188 or visit discount gold and silver trading dot net listen to financial survival with your host melody cedar straw and regular guest world renowned economist robert chaplain right here on first amendment radio dot com at 4 p.m. eastern or 1 p.m. pacific time visit discount gold and silver trading dot net or call discount gold and silver trading at 1-800-375-4188 toll free 1-800-375-4188

pair it first on first amendment radio dot com and first amendment radio dot net around the world and on satellite okay folks we're back with you i i you know i've had people uh ask me if i had all of the words of the song uh sweet liberty and i somebody had sent it to me at one time but i i don't know where it is it's in there someplace in that studio of mine that'll probably take me five months to get in order uh and those words that we just heard were part of that song um the way that and i know i'm off the topic here but it's on my mind so i'll just share it with you um when i when we when i first went on radio it was dan druck and i and we called it the cd in the cdr information hour council on domestic relations and then when i went on bill cooper's network i i didn't have a name for the radio broadcast and i was on an hour before bill cooper so i called it the hour before the hour at the time and then when i went on republic radio they asked me uh what the name of the broadcast was i said i really don't have a name i've never been able to come up with anything that said what i feel and it was the engineer over at republic radio uh the old republic radio andy he called me back about 15 minutes after we had talked and he said how do you like sweet liberty and i said oh wow he says i even have a song for it and that's how this radio broadcast got its name it wasn't something that came from me but when andy gave that to me it just said exactly what i would want it to say sweet liberty and um and so i thought you might be interested in hearing that alan you were mentioning uh oh i was away from the mic uh from the phone during that break but i don't know if uh nicolas announced and so i want to make sure i do this again for any of our listeners who may be new listeners you've you've missed a lot folks i mean we've been 10 years on the air and now we're not on the air anymore not the way we were and and many of the broadcasts in the past years so have been done with alan although you know i have had other guests on nicolas at uh first amendment radio dot com uh which is of course from where we're broadcasting is offering to you the entire year of sweet liberty broadcast that that's for a week for 52 weeks for 120 dollars on a cd and that's actually less than a dollar an hour and so for any of you who are new listeners it might be a wonderful way for you to be able to kind of get up to speed as to what we've presented in the past and that's only one year but if you contact nicolas i think it's just i'll tell you alan i know i've told you this before but it makes me feel very relieved to know that those broadcasts have been made available to people because as you said i think last week or maybe on a phone conversation it has been more of a tutorial than you know the standard type you know news broadcasts and stuff like that yeah we went back from to the ancient times and and uh so like all the religions around them all the creations and what they had to do with anything and and brought us all up to the present stage yeah and you know it's just impossible to repeat it all yeah yeah it's uh yeah so you need to see me through you think for radio it's definitely unique yeah well i'm i'm sure that there was a reason why sweet liberty was a listener sponsored for seven full years actually about seven and a half years uh and it was because of the nature of the it certainly wasn't the wonderful shortwave reception that we got no uh because people were even sponsoring it when they would write and say i can't hear you and we had such a problem with wwcr in the reception um but yet they continued to sponsor it and i did a rough just a guesstimate over those uh years the cost to our listeners was right around probably two hundred and fifty thousand dollars that our listeners sponsored this broadcast so it was certainly worth it to uh enough people wasn't it alan yeah and you don't have the you see i don't think it's possible to to take on advertising um and and then speak truthfully about things because even the products in the advertising uh are related to some of the topics we ended up discussing i know so you you couldn't even be honest you see if you take on the advertisers that's the unfortunate reality of life everything comes with its own uncensorship package you might say yes and then when i did take on a sponsored north american urban spice they paid for one month's advertising and uh and literally cheated our listeners i would say because our listeners listen to me anywhere from three to five minutes a night talking about north american urban spice and their products and uh two thousand nine hundred dollars that uh cast ingram absolutely refused to pay and and asserted that he had never paid for advertising ever anywhere on any broadcast i had an eight hundred dollar check from them for that first month that's the only one i got so that was my wonderful experience with an advertiser that i actually thought was a company that had integrity and the individual who owns the company that it was a good product it's way overpriced but it's a good product or i would never have you know approached that yeah and i understand now that uh north american urban spice is a major uh sponsor of some of the broadcasts on uh statinels network yeah so anybody anybody who buys from them is paying probably four times i found this out uh you know from people calling me and even cast ingram himself admitted that theirs wasn't the only product you know and that was uh basically the oregano oil and forms of it yeah that were viable uh and it was quality but people who buy from him are buying from a a thief and a liar and they're paying much more for the product than they have to because you can get oregano oil in your house for food stores okay i i got us really off the track here and i didn't mean to do that you were talking about uh rose about elinor rose about going to russia yeah and pavlov yeah that was her hero uh she was always wanted to meet pavlov the guy that was breaking all the ground on on human conditioning techniques and uh that's when she mentioned that that the children on the way to school in the soviet system um uh don't have the spontaneity uh individual spontaneity that you've seen american children he says that they're so well behaved and well ordered in other words they're like robot well ordered and she thought this was just wonderful because that these are going to be the future citizens so if you make them into robots as children then you have good robots as adults you see yes and that's really what they're after in this this this uh system do you think he was kind of uh like uh fdr's hand or so to speak oh i am i'm sure that she had a lot of input there yeah of influence he wrote a book in 1938 titled this troubled world and then it here's a little quote that uh she made or that i have here she said our real ultimate objective must be a change in human nature yeah and when we have achieved uh majority of the people of this type then that we can hope for success yeah they've got to in other words take all of the the defense mechanisms out of every individual in order to rule them without any flak you see and and that's that's what they really have been after all this time is to get a uh massive of people with no real individuality uh no self-preservation mechanisms left working in that way you'll be a good domesticated chief you see and i believe that a lot of people alan even a lot of our listeners that we because we have talked so in the past about the educational the indoctrination and what they're doing to the children yeah and yet i know that so many of our listeners even though they hear it maybe they don't disbelieve that it doesn't really just really click with them when they put their children and these government schools they are handing them over to the enemy and they i think that they believe that they because the values that they're uh giving their children at home uh they believe that they're going to their children aren't going to be victims of this and what they don't understand is that the technique has been so long in the in the making and that that anything that they try to give their children at home is going to be wiped out of those little minds and in fact there have been people who have said i don't even recognize him as my son or my daughter they just can't figure out what's going on with their children and they have their children in those government schools yeah bethen russell got a british royal charter at the beginning of the 1900s to set up experimental schools where he really could do whatever he wished and he was uh initially being one of the the upper elite in britain um they initially wanted to go on with Plato's old plan and the soviet plan just one the same thing uh of uh taking children from their parents at birth rearing them in government nurseries basically and so so eventually children would never know who their parents were that had been their plan for a long centuries actually different russell's agenda was to test any other means that might be just as successful and so in these experimental schools they developed techniques and it's all 1901 you know um they developed techniques uh where he said we will no longer have to separate the children as their old ideal he said instead that if we can get the children at the age of two for at least four hours per day he said we can condition them so scientifically that even if you spend the rest of the day with the parents whatever moral indoctrination the parent tries to instill in that child uh what will simply not not take he said and britain russell was an advisor or i don't know is he dead now uh yeah okay well he was an advisor to UNESCO and UNESCO UNESCO is the UNESCO for our for our listeners uh UNESCO is the united nation educational scientific and cultural organization and they they it is actually referred to as the uh

what the the world school board what what do they call it well it's to create a common world culture yeah uh net through education and um i don't you remember the the the mk ultra experiments have been declassified now they took place in canada in the 1960s with the doctor you and camera um and the cia uh paid for all these experiments on on mental patients psychiatric patients on mind control well doctor camera and when he left there uh he went to work for UNESCO and he's also in charge of various other united nations children's organizations so it makes perfect sense when you follow these these guys these mind manipulators um here you was working and getting paid by the cia in collusion with the canadian government to do all kinds of of evil experiments on psychiatric patients um and he went straight into the united nations in UNESCO so so you see these Kaiser monsters and you just follow their their tracks where they go and you know that there's far too to do so and that the doors are open for them and and there's lots more guys like like Cameron involved with UNESCO because that was the whole idea to create a common type of of human being that would be passive have no individuality and and would have no real um defense mechanisms left uh they would be very obedient and passive and they would do they're told by the by the scientific elite who had run the world so this is an old old agenda Bertrand Russell also and you'll find that information and uh it was a book uh called um roads to freedom and the other one was education and the good life by Bertrand Russell and he tells you about his experimental schools and education and the good life and all the different techniques he had tried and of course they passed that on to the to the roads to freedom and what was the other one Alan education and the good life you know that's another one that people might be able to find at ABE books I don't think I've ever gone in there that I haven't been able to find a book uh out of print book that I've been looking for and it's amazing uh that they're so reasonably priced because the people that are selling them don't understand what treasures they have yeah and so ABE books dot com is a wonderful place to to look for these things education for the good life education and the good life and the good life isn't that sick the good life what they say if you freedom of slavery war is peace yeah and uh so yeah he wrote to freedom is wrote to slavery for for the people but freedom for the elite to run the show you know uh I'm seeing that it's 10 minutes before the hour and I uh we I just we used to do this on the air when we had four days and then three days we get into a conversation that's so important that you know you haven't completed it when the hour is up and I always wanted to continue at the very next day because you lose that continuity and since we're only going to be one hour a week uh I want to say right now that I would like to kick this up I mean unless something more important comes up I can't think of anything more important than what we're talking about right now because we're talking about the minds of the future oh yeah uh and that's what they're counting on I have another quote here I'd like to share this comes from uh uh

Stanford University they had a work titled international understanding and the preface in the book as states listen to this folks please listen to this few persons have appreciated the forcefulness of the agency which agencies which have long been engaged in educating toward international understanding and then they said in the forward uh to the report on their progress uh how it was being done they said the new world is now to be built and the builder of this new world must be education in such a task one would have to change human nature with a patient and gradual reshaping of the public mind to bring their influence to bear on school on churches literature on business on politics the building of the new world has indeed begun without us for the national educational association arc which is part of the international educational association was set up to do you give a uniform indoctrination and all the same topics with the same outcomes which are mainly emotional based most education now is emotive indoctrination so the emotions um fix in their minds the actual topic of conclusion of the topics um it's not a rational conclusion it's an emotional topic they're given skillfully and they'll remember that so whenever you mention a particular word their name will respond emotionally and if the logic will never ever kick in to actually dissect anything enough to find it a proper point of view it's a scientific technique once again you know well understood scientific practice and well implemented yes and that's what I hope that uh maybe our listeners will understand is that it is scientific uh you mentioned Pavlov earlier yeah uh is there be wrote a book called The Scinarian something and she was uh you know referring to bf skinner and she refers to the quote spinner box this man because he he did the same type of evidently work that Pavlov did with the mind conditioning in that he he built the box and put his own daughter in it alan which one and uh the woman I don't know all the details of it but I I did read that she wound up committing suicide at the age of 21 and so the methods that are being used in the schools today were uh brought forth by these monsters a man who could put his own child in a box and keep her there for uh uh evidently a very long period of time well so these people are psychopaths and they're chosen for that uh um you might call it a gift you might call it a gift uh their ability to be completely dispassionate about anything they cannot feel for others you see they cannot feel they don't feel anything alan do you think they see how people react they can copy it they can emulate it but they they feel nothing and they are chosen for these particular traits uh and they have psychological evaluations and that's how they pick these characters to do what they do um these are the same guys who who will dissect bodies and and uh tie down chimpanzees and have them hit on the head so many times by you know hydraulic pretzels or whatever and can we stand and watch this happening and write down the step by step process uh there's not an and and and uh you can be cannot possibly even say that they're really human you know now they are a separate species there's no doubt about that you know in fact they're the deviant creation as they call it it's the deviant creation that runs the world and and that's our problem is it the deviant creation that was referred to in the old testament uh yeah there's a play on that you have the worker bees in the ancient religion uh all of the ancient religions had the beehive as a symbol of the perfect system of the royalty attended by the bureaucracy priests you might see the drones and then you had the workers all below them but you also have this play on divi which means holy basically and what and an ant a wing a play on what uh it's a play on on holy diva divi or divi oh okay it's holy and um ant of course an ant is a wingless bee an ant is not a worker bees such it's a cleanup it comes up and cleans up after the bees have done all the work so there's a lot of the esoteric combined in the english language deliberately so because the english language was created to contain all the esoteric traditions of ancient time okay i've lost something here you've mentioned divi devi as meaning holy and what it how does that connect with the ants mm-hmm yeah how does that connect with ants uh a deviant a deviant deviant oh my god a holy oh my god this one yeah you didn't know i said well see you have to sell it out for me yeah and and people would think well everything's cool no nothing is thrown to them in the english language because it's a fairly recent language and and francis bacon spoke about the creation of the new language of the future which will be called english and prior to him saying that people in england spoke old saxon german so teams of of priests and his day actually put together the english language well the kings were ruled by the priests weren't they outlanded yeah and and they were the priesthood was always perfect yeah they're the ones who keep the genealogical charts decide who's marrying blue and all of that kind of stuff well not only that i understand in those days you know because there was a lot of fighting going on uh you know if a king died which of his offspring or bloodline was gonna you know take the throne and without that king being literally sanctified so to speak by the priesthood he was not considered uh king that's right so the king that they were going to sanctify had to be lenient and leaning toward whatever it was that the priesthood uh was doing and guess what we're out of our hour this happens all too often folks uh darin will be back with you on monday and she's staying here in america we value our liberty but there's a new movement quietly being pursued by politicians that will take away our precious freedoms it's been deceptively named the free trade area of the americas or ftaa proponents claim that their objective is to promote trade by removing barriers between the countries of north and south america in reality the ftaa is a raw power grab it will lead to a new government

What do you say, Alan?
I think it sounds good.
Oh, good. All right.
We have Alan Watt with us tonight.
Tonight is Wednesday.
It is the 7th of December in the year 2005.
And I guess they've been hashing over...
Okay, we're going to have to get past grandfather's time here.
I guess they've been hashing over Pearl Harbor, and probably I haven't been listening to the news,
but probably comparing it with 9-1-1,
because that's what Henry Kissinger said, probably within hours of 9-1-1,
of the Holocaust in New York.
They brought him out of a meeting.
He was in some other country, and they brought him out of a meeting and asked him what he thought about it.
And he said that it was the same thing that happened similar to Pearl Harbor, and it needs to be treated the way we treated Pearl Harbor.
And we knew, of course, immediately when he said that, he was talking about another war.
I want to share our spiritual message tonight, folks.
I got this in the mail from Jean.
Listen to this real closely, okay?
One evening, an old Cherokee told his grandson about a battle that goes on inside people.
He said,
my son, the battle is between two wolves inside us all.
One is evil.
It is anger, envy, jealousy, sorrow, regret, greed, arrogance, self-pity, guilt, resentment, inferiority, lies,
false pride, superiority, and ego.
The other is good.
It is a joy, peace, love, hope, serenity, humility, kindness, benevolence, empathy, generosity, truth, compassion, and faith.
And the grandson thought about it for a minute.
And then he asked his grandfather, well, which wolf wins, grandfather?
The old Cherokee simply replied, the one you feed.
And I think that is perfect.
Alan, thank you for being here with us tonight.
Yeah, it's a pleasure.
Did you like that?
Yeah, I think the grandfather would have to explain it a few times for the young boy to remember it all.
Yeah, I know.
I know, but I thought that was really a good way to put it, Alan.
So, what's new and what do you want to talk about this evening?
I think, well, rather than talk about the general news, just our downloading for the time being,
it's best to look at how we've arrived where we are at this very point and where it's gone from here.

And what's amazing me is how flippant so many people are today when it comes to their own privacy.

You say privacy, our word is privacy, right?

Yes.

Okay.

Yeah.

And so, they're so used to using their convenience cards.

They have different names for them at shops and stores and debit cards for all their shopping and so on.

And knowing that all of this stuff is being recorded on databases all over the planet, basically.

And so, people know, including governments, of course, which is the main...

And I tell that the real government is the one that we don't vote in.

The one that runs all the real supercomputers and so on and keeps all the data on everyone.

All that stuff is filed away.

So, they have profiles on all your habits, your purchases, that kind of thing.

And then people are going on the Internet and putting everything on email.

And they don't seem to mind.

That's what's surprising to me.

I mean, I can remember the days when people would have an uproar about some governmental intrusion into privacy.

And today, it's almost like it's the normal thing so they don't mind so much.

Well, they did it in spite and challenge.

You know, I mean...

They definitely have conditioned the public that it's an open book and everybody's got to have an open book and there's no such thing as your own personal space where you can roam around in your own little area.

This is the age when they wrote in revelations that everything that was hidden would be screened from the rooftops.

In a sense, they are.

They're opening everybody's books.

And of course, they're keeping their own.

The real controllers are keeping their own books closed to the public but they expect the public to be quite open to them.

And the public are acquiescing to this by silence and by using all of these devices which are losing all their freedoms by using them.

It's amazing to me how complacent they are about it all.

It stings me, to be honest.

Well, the people who know that it's going on...

Whenever I have a phone conversation with anybody

I just assume that the conversations are being at least taped.

And I've certainly had enough evidence of that.

Yeah, I know.

Yeah, with a personal situation.

It isn't that it doesn't bother me.

Sometimes I talk to them and say,

I hope that our listeners are learning something, whatever.
But I think what it is, Alan, is that people get a sense of what the hell are you going to do about it.
You know, you talk to your...
What I always remember is so many books were published around the 50s and 60s and 70s about the agenda by people involved in the agenda such as Arthur Kessler who wrote about his part for the United Nations working in the think tanks where he said his job was to find ways to target specific parts of the brain chemically and the part that he was particularly interested in was that part which creates individualism.
And he said this will be successful and the proof will be shown when the public's ability for self-preservation is gone.
Is he the one that wrote The Ghost and the Machine?
That's right, yeah.
He also wrote The Thirteenth Tribe.
He did and lots of other books.
Okay, the thing that I wonder about given that he's one of theirs is even how accurate is his Thirteenth Tribe book.
I don't know, he seems very...
Well, he admitted that he worked for Lenin.
He was an officer in the Russian Army and he was put in charge.
He admits quite openly and proudly almost that he was put in charge of part of the extermination of the Ukrainians when he starved them to death, millions of them.
Millions, yes.
And he admitted that he at the time, because he was full of the communist doctrine, believed that it had to be so because of historical necessity.
That's how they phrase this type of thing.
Historical necessity.
You mean the history that they're making?
That's right.
The history that they're making.
That reminds me of that statement that was made by an undisclosed advisor of George Bush, remember?
Yeah.
Okay, will you share that with our listeners?
Oh, yeah, I think it was in the Boston Globe.
Oh, it was all over the place, Alan, because when you told me you had heard it on the news,
I did a search just for the one phrase, we are an empire now.
Yeah, it says we are an empire now and this is a senior advisor to Bush.
Now these guys are more important than the front men that we see on television.
Right.
But they're unelected and someone trains them.
Non-elected.
It says we are an empire now and when we act, we create our own reality.
While you are studying that reality, judiciously as you will, we like to, again, creating other new realities which you can study too.
We'll act again.
Your history is actors and you, all of you, will believe just to study what we do.
And so in other words, this is what you can hear on the shortwave.
All they're doing is studying and discussing what we think the front men are doing.
Right, exactly.
Yeah.

It's all the debates going on about who's doing what, what legislators, what congressmen or senators are voting a certain way.

Yeah.

It's amazing to me the information that gets sent around by people that I feel really know better or at least...

Some people, yeah.

And I think part of the problem is we've been given superheroes, like Albert Pike said, whenever the public need leaders, we supply them and they make them into superheroes so they must have more financial backing and have more access to information than anyone else.

And when they see what we know, we follow them.

And, of course, even the shortwave has made sure of that.

And all they do, really, is discuss what they think the politicians are doing, what they're saying, and it's just an act.

It's all a front.

It's not the real government by any means.

And, in fact, Margaret Thatcher made a reference to that when she did the Massey Hall lecture in Canada about 1991.

And the title of the lecture was the New World Order.

And most of the members who went there were from the CFR and Royal Institute of International Affairs.

And she said all of us, all retired presidents and prime ministers of the British Commonwealth, have formed a super government.

And she said that we now know each other.

We've been in politics long enough.

We know all the leaders of state.

And she says we are another unelected government working behind the scenes.

And that's a fact.

That's what they do.

They never retire.

They never retire.

And there's a few generations of them.

So that's the reality of things.

The downloading nonsense that we're given on a daily basis is just a front to keep us chatting about nonsense.

Okay, so what should we chat about?

Well, that's what I'm saying, getting back to Kessler.

Kessler was so proud of his part, working for Lenin.

And somehow, of course, showing you that it's all a farce, even the Cold War, he came straight over from Communist Russia as a Russian officer and became a professor at New York.

And started teaching at New York at university there.

And then he started working for the United Nations.

This is during the Cold War.

And lo and behold, he comes from exterminating one bunch of people to finding ways and working with scientists for the United Nations in New York of ways of lobotomizing the general population to make them more passive and easily controlled.

And they said that was the first symptom of the fact it'd been successful, is when their ability for self-preservation is gone.

And getting back to the very beginning of what we're talking about, when there's no righteous indignation, if no antennas go up, as you're being corralled, then that part of your brain that is your self-preservation area has literally been destroyed.

That's the symptom of it.

So as I listen to you and listen as though I'm a listener of our conversation, then my question is, well, what do you suggest that people do?

Well, for those where it's already been destroyed, I don't think there's any backup system to restore it.

Well, yeah, restore. There's nothing to restore.

There's nothing to restore.

So all you can really do is work on those who know.

And for the younger people who've been brought up with this cashless stuff, they've never used money in their life.

And to them, it's quite normal, just pulling it out even for a candy bar, pulling out their card.

And they've been brought up with computers, and they know everything's being monitored.

So they're the real targets of it all.

So to speak to those, I hope they still have some righteous indignation and start to change their ways.

Because when they outlay out their whole life as an open book for tyrannical forces to monitor and master them, then they should really be worried, you know, of the kind of future they're going to be in.

Are you talking about people who use the Internet for research and send emails or information out?

Everything. They're banking on it, everything.

Thank you. Yeah. In other words, you're talking about more the people who are using it for all of those business processes.

Yeah. I mean, Brzezinski talked about the Internet before it was given to the public.

And he said that, and this was back in the 60s, and he said, a form of communication, international communication will be given to the public.

He said that we'll totally revolutionize our whole way of doing things.

And he said this will create a common culture amongst the public who will use it and adapt to it.

He said that in reality, it will give more control to the new governmental system coming into view.

So he was talking about the Internet. It had other functions pre-planned into it.

They knew how the public would respond to it and adapt so quickly because nothing on the planet is more adaptable than man.

And Plato said that thousands of years ago, so they knew that they noticed that.

And sure enough, it's so convenient, and that's how everything is sold to the public.

Everything is so convenient, it would become lazy.

And the next thing you know, you're putting all your information out there to be garnished by the ones who are monitoring all of this.

This is a world data recovery system. That's what it all is.

Yeah, you know, there are a few things that people can do, some things.

And I know that there's a lot more creativity out there than even that I'm going to mention here.

But for example, using a debit card.

A lot of people use debit cards. Every single purchase that they make is known.

And it builds their dossier. And for me, it's a principle that what I do is any of my bills that are public anyway, you know, like the light bills, electric, you know, and gas and phone, I go ahead and write a check for it.

But I take cash out of my checking account and all of my groceries and any shopping that I have to do, hardware, drugstore, whatever, at the health food store, I use cash because there's no trails that you're leaving.

And that's just one little thing, Alan, but it's something.

Yeah, and we've got to fight for it. You see, all the bigger things have already been taken from us, in a sense.

So we've got to start taking it back little by little.

Little by little, yes.

We have to regain our own privacy because it's a natural instinct to have that type of privacy.

It's a survival mechanism. And if it's not functioning, then something's wrong with the person.

They should realize that something is wrong with them.

Going back even further, we can go back to the 1950s, where you remember the next million years by Charles Dalton Darwin?

Yep.

The physicist?

Yep.

And grandson of Charles.

And he said, he said, we are now in the process of creating a new, he says, there have always been generations of slaves, he said.

Every empire is founded on slavery.

And he says, we are now in the process of creating a new, more sophisticated form of slavery.

And you see, this is what all of this is about.

It's total enslavement by a different means, where simply by changing the perception of what is happening, we lose the actual fact of what is happening.

And the fact is, everyone is being corralled into a system where every purchase, every move they make, everything they say will be monitored under many guises for the good of all, etc.

But it's always 1984.

They're going to bring us all to a place where we must all be politically correct, which will constantly be updated all the time, and things added to it, just like the Soviet system.

And we'll be in a prison within our own minds, if that is even left alone.

I remember, or was it Brave New World? In 1984, they had the Poles, with the Poles.

And those people evidently weren't every...

There's a plea on the proletariat.

Okay, but these people, they seem to live less restricted than those who were in the system.

In other words, they didn't have the microphones and cameras all over the place, and people seeing, watching everything they were doing.

They left them alone, for the most part.

And in Brave New World, they had what they called the savages, that didn't live in the system.

And remember, a woman was having a baby, and somebody in the system said, you mean she is actually, because the babies were what, test tube babies, what do you call them?

Oh yeah, they were artificially...

Yeah, but the woman was shocked because that savage was carrying her child.

Well, Alan, these books portray a future that they foresee, you know, according to their plan.

So do you think that they foresee that there will always be a segment of the population that will not succumb, and they will just leave them alone?

I think, it's a yes and a no there, that they're doing all they can to make it impossible, little by little, for individuals to opt in any other direction, but to join them.

That's what they're doing at the moment.

Well, there are still people that are home gardening.

You see, ultimately, they will bring in the cashless society completely.

They might leave some outlets for using cash, but gradually, even wither them down until you have no option.

They don't like to forbid things, they simply make it almost impossible to take any alternative.

That's generally what they do.

Well, and at the moment, they still have the option.

Yeah, well, they're using computers, and there are computer hackers.

Alan, their program could be destroyed.

I think it's important for us to see what they're seeing in the future and what they're planning for, but also to keep in mind that this plan has been underway for millennia, and they have never succeeded.

And I think it's important for us to keep this in our minds that just because it's what they have planned for us doesn't mean it's going to happen.

Yeah, but it also means that people have to take what action they can.

That's right.

And what's what is for the archival of doing within the present system to take back the little freedoms they've already given away.

Like growing your own food.

One thing.

You know, stop doing your banking on the Internet.

Because I kid you not, they've already got a refrigerator out that you can hook up to the Internet, and it literally takes the barcodes of everything you put inside that fridge.

Oh, give me a break.

I think it will warn you when you're low on something and it has the capacity to order all that stuff from the store.

Now you realize that...

So you mean then you walk in the grocery store and your groceries are waiting for you?

That's right.

And I'll tell you, if they ever raid your home, and I mean this, one day they'll raid your home, and they find a tin of beans there that was not on your list.

You haven't bought it.

You're frigid and order it.

They want to know where you got that.

Who gave this to you?

Because someone's using up the rations that was meant for them.

I are that, or there's an underground supply of black market.

And this is all scheduled to come down one day.

For our listeners that may be new listeners, in the website, in our website at www.sweetliberty.org, if you go into shadow government, I think it's in shadow government, you'll see an item titled, The New Order of Barbarians.

Or you could put it in the search engine.

And what Alan is talking about was discussed back in 1968 with a group of pediatric physicians in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

And Alan, there's so much happening today that takes me back to what Dr. Gaye told these doctors at that meeting.

And the one thing that right now really is popping out, just because I'm thinking about it, he said the way that they would separate the extended family would be that they would begin to transfer people in large corporations to different states.

And this would cause problems because if the spouse had a real good job and they needed both of the incomes, then one of them wouldn't be able, the one would have to travel and commute by air.

And he said initially it will make it very easy, it'll be very easy to travel, so they won't feel so separated.

But he said eventually air travel is going to become more and more and more difficult.

And look at it today Alan.

And then you see behind that there's so much more going on.

The extended family includes aunts, uncles, cousins, grandparents.

And the less that the people have of the family unit, the more they've lost really.

And I want to say this, I know you know this, but I don't think I've mentioned this on the air.

I believe that it's important for children to spend time with their grandparents.

And maybe that's because I'm a grandparent.

And I know that I have so much to offer the children, but they don't want that connection.

And when we discovered this, it was Effie when she was going to make a visit here.

She was senior and she was going to get the senior discount.

And they said well her return had to be within 30 days or she couldn't get the senior discount.

And when Effie told me that I said Effie why?

What do they care? How long you stay on a visit?

And I said you know what I think? Because maybe you're going to visit your family.

And if they can shorten your stay by restricting the time by the discount.

And she called every other airline and every single one of them had the policy, Alan.

Every single one of them.

These are subtle, very subtle little things.

But once that we have a broader picture of what they're up to, you begin to see.

Everything they do has a multiple, they kill a lot of birds with one stone.

Sure they do, yeah.

And it's true enough when you see something that's across the board the same format, you know it has to be arranged at the top.

Yep.

And that all those companies where somebody was present at meetings to get all that agenda put into them and format it and then implement it.

Yeah.

They didn't all arrive at the same conclusion independently.

Right, exactly.

Well and another example of that is the fact that no insurance company will cover their customers for Bud.

So it has to be the U.S. government, FEMA flood insurance.

Yes.

That's the national flood insurance.

That's what it is.

And you look at that and you say, well, so the insurance companies quit insuring people and it forces the issue.

Same thing, Alan, with the Malcom filling in people.

Okay.

It's got, for any of our listeners that might not know, there's mercury and it's constantly drifting into the brain.

Well now the insurance companies, at least we got a letter from our dentist that the insurance companies would not pay for the alternatives that they will only pay for Malcom fillings.

So if you're going to get fillings when you go to his office, you have to be ready to pay out of your pocket.

It's a conspiracy, Alan.

We have to take a break here.

I did hear the, I think.

Yep.

Okay.

So ladies and gentlemen, stay with us here with Alan Watt and we'll be back with you.

I'm not hearing any music.

Maybe.

Oh.

Okay.

Thank you.

Thank you.

Thank you.

Thank you.

Thank you.

Now listen to me.

The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.

I want you to know that a corporation is seasons.

Yeah.

Government takeover of the church.

This DVD is the most powerful tool we have in the world.

The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.

I want you to know that a corporation is seasons.

Yeah.

Government takeover of the church.

This DVD is the most powerful tool we have in the world.

I want you to know that the Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.

The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.

I want you to know that a corporation is seasons.

Yeah.

Government takeover of the church.

This DVD is the most powerful tool we have in the world.

The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.

I want you to know that a corporation is seasons.

The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.

I want you to know that a corporation is seasons.

Yeah.

Government takeover of the church.

This DVD is the most powerful tool we have for waking up those asleep in the pews.

The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.

the more so, under winter season, than when it is season.

[illegible]

The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.
The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.
The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.
The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.
The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.
The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.
The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.
The Bible says render under season, that which is seasons.

Take the Wednesday broadcast on a regular basis, and I told them today that I would do so.
And unless anything comes up, I'll be with you on Wednesday nights, and of course Darren on Monday and Tuesday nights, so it is good to be back with you.
I feel like a guest on this broadcast tonight, and I find that interesting that I feel that way.

But of course Darren is the one that is the host, has been the host since we went off the short way then, the Internet, since I did, on the 12th of August.
I wanted to say, I want to say, I'm going to say good morning to Xavier, if he's listening.
Xavier is one of our listeners in England.
He lives in London, and he had told me that we have no idea how many listeners that we have over there in England.
And Alan had mentioned this too.

We get calls from, he's gotten calls from people in Australia, and for all of our listeners who are not in the U.S. of A, thank you for being with us.
And I'll tell you Alan, what really amazes me about Xavier, and it gives me, he's the kind of people that give me hope.
He's 30 years old, and he has been in the system, and he has awakened Alan.
And you know, are you there?

Yeah.
Okay.
You said a long time ago, but I've never forgotten it, that it doesn't, it isn't going to take too many people waking up to this, to have the system collapse, because there aren't too many of them, and it appears that in every generation there are those holdouts, those people who are awake, or who are awake to me.
And that's, I hold on to that, knowing that with God, with Creator, all things are possible.
Yeah, well, it's a matter of having those people in communication, of some means or other, with each other, because often you know, when the people are not...

Alan, excuse me.

Yeah?
Your voice isn't as loud as it was before.
Are you not on a different phone or anything, are you?
No.
Okay.
Now, when the people are in a stupor, they're caused by the system, and they're downloading, as I call it.
The thinking processes are shaped for them in such a way that they get sort of bound up, almost like string tied around them.
Sometimes they just need somebody who understands things and can put simple little statements here that undoes all of this binding that we have.

Yes.
And those people have a gift you see to do so.
Yes, I know that.
I hear that in our conversations when I'm talking with Sabier, and he tries to share with his friends, and he runs into the same walls that we all run into, but little by little, he will meet people in his age group who are awake, and that's what's been their nemesis all these years.

Alan, in The Ghost in the Machine, was it the person's soul?
What was he referring to as The Ghost in the Machine?
Well, The Ghost in the Machine in this respect is the animating life force, which is your individuality.
You are the distinct individual entity as opposed to everyone else.
Well, maybe that would be the soul then.
Yeah, everything, yeah.
They call it the animating principle.
Well, that's fine.
So in that sense, you see, supposedly, in the occult, it is the animating principle.
Right.
So it's what makes you a distinct, unique you as opposed to everyone else.
Right.
And what they said they would do, even at the Loyola meeting they had for the World Science Meeting at Loyola University, was to do with brain chipping.
They said once this has occurred, there'll be no such thing as individuality.
That's what they're trying to destroy.
Yeah.
And as I said to you a long, long time ago, when we were talking about this, the one thing that they do not take into account is the spiritual nature of man.
Well, they do actually.
Hello?
I'm here.
Yeah, they do.
That's why they give us so many things that they call spiritual to Saka Zen, and it's always their agenda.
So they know that man is always seeking, always seeking.
So they tend to supply the...
Well, you're talking about the religions.
The religions, even the New Age religion.
I mean, at one time you could walk into major bookstores and you would see the usual standard religions there.
A big aisle, now it's a tiny little aisle for standard religions, and massive, a massive aisle or maybe more for all the New Age groups out there.
Oh, but isn't it amazing how much truth is in those New Age materials, Alan?
Well, that's what they give to suck you in, is the twist that twists your mind.
Right.
And that's the purpose of them.
They're not put out there to help you.
Right.
They're put out there by exposing, which is an obvious truth.
That's why you say, gee, I agree with this, and I agree with that.
They know the truth, since they've given us a fake reality for a long time.
They know what we want to hear, and they say it.
But then they bring in the twists, of course.
And before you know it, you're simply what you've walked into another maze of endless circles within circles.
And so once again, you've just been disabled, you might think.
Yeah.
You know, something I've noticed about these New Age books, with all the truth that they do present in them, they always talk about the New World Order.
But it's going to be benevolent, and it's going to be peace in the world.
And that's why so many people, the New World Order to them, because I can remember back in 1991, when Poppy Bush kept saying the New World Order and the World Order a thousand times, I thought, oh my God, they're actually saying it out loud now.

And I started talking to people, associates and friends, and just asking them, have you heard him talk about the New World Order?
Yeah?
What does it mean to you?
Well, that means that we're all going to hold hands around the world, and that there's going to be world peace.
So to them, the New World Order is a wonderful thing.
Yeah.
That's right.
And that's how they're spinning it.
Up?
In a sense, if they were successful, they would have their thousand years of peace, because a master of people will be unable to think for themselves.
That's what they call peace.
Yeah.
Absence of resistance to their program.
Yeah.
To their system.
That is their, yeah, their definition of peace.
Hi, Jackie.
Yes.
Alan's voice is much, much lower.
It is.
So if we could get him to speak louder or something, I don't know.
Okay.
Thank you.
Thanks, Nicholas.
Alan.
Yeah?
Oh, what a roll.
Talk again.
Okay.
I should really talk about the books for sale.
But suddenly your voice is right up there again.
Oh.
Well, I guess someone's playing with it.
I think so.
I think so.
Well, I do get this all the time, you know.
Yes.
Because your voice had faded, and now it's right back there again.
Thank you, Nicholas.
Okay.
Yeah, I should mention these three books.
Yes.
Because the last couple of shows, I haven't mentioned them.
Yes, you should.
So along this format of trying to...
The first two books are about the Masonic codes and so on,
that even the biggies haven't got in the books.
They're trying to take over by putting out their own books.
But I go through the history of Masonry, including the language that we use to solve encoded.

I was created that way.
And the third one, I go through the history of the money system, which is the beginning of this particular system, starting thousands of years ago, and how they took countries over through debt and hired armies and over through other countries that wouldn't come in.
So these books are called Cutting Through,
and there's three of them, one, two, and three.
They're $25 each.
Now, Alan.
Yeah?
Well, you're talking.
Pretend that you're writing this down.
In fact, I do as I write it down as I'm talking, and then people will be able to get it.
Yes.
So it's cutting through one, two, and three,
and they're $25 each.
And if you want them to send an international postal order from your post office, and it must be international, you can do Alan Watt, which is W-A-T-T.
And it's A-L-A-N.
Yep.
And it's site S-I-T-E-4-1,
box four S-Stare,
which is like Fred S-Stare with an E at the beginning,
E-S-T-A-I-R-E,
Ontario,
and the postal code is P for Peter,
three E for Elizabeth,
four N for Nora,
one.
So that's site 41,
box four S-Stare,
Ontario,
P for Peter,
three E for Elizabeth,
four N for Nora,
one.
And if there's any questions even on anything, you can give me a call.
And my phone number is 705-695-0416.
And I'll try and answer any questions that people have.
As long as not pumping me for information to write their own books with, because I get a lot of that.
Well, you know what just occurred to me, Alan?
You know, when we used to do this,
when we were on the shortwave,
we had to do this for our shortwave listeners.
All of our listeners tonight are on the internet.
Yeah.
Or the majority of them are half internet.
Some may be listening on satellite,
but they,

your books are advertised in our resources section.

Yeah.

With the entire address and everything.

So folks, if you didn't write it down and you're interested in getting Alan's books, and as Alan suggested, also urged actually that if you're only going to get one, get the first one first.

Because they're written in more or less an order where the second one plays off the first and et cetera.

And so you can go to the resources section at our website at sweetliberty.org and get all the information that Alan just gave you.

And there's something else,

while we're kind of doing a commercial here,

I've thought about this Alan in conversations with Savier.

Yeah.

He has downloaded all of the broadcasts that are in our archives and has listened to them.

He's been in the website,

started right from the beginning in the section,

How Wars Are Made Behind the Scenes, and reading because everything is in there chronologically.

It's amazing to me,

but what I got to thinking about,

we've had so many broadcasts together.

So much information that you've presented to our listeners.

And Nicholas at WFAR, First Amendment Radio, is offering the whole year of 2004 on a CD, a desk for $120.

And when I think about that,

what a wonderful, because we do have new listeners.

And we have covered so much Alan actually in several years, but for somebody to be able to have 150 hours, which I figured that's what it figures out to,

for $120, it's less than a dollar an hour for the broadcast.

And so, folks, if you are new,

if you haven't been a longtime listener,

I really hope that you will take advantage of the offer.

And if you want to call Nicholas,

I believe the number to contact him is 559-7813773, or you can contact him at the website, at First Amendment Radio dot com.

And I just think it's a wonderful opportunity, don't you Alan?

Yeah, we should tell the people too that this isn't for us, we don't get money from this.

I think that goes to the providers.

I guess I should talk with Nicholas about this, because he doesn't have them archived earlier, because we've been on WFAR for, I don't know, two or three years.

Time gets away from me, but he has earlier ones.

I'd like to know so that we can let our listeners know that they can get them.

And soon, 2005 will be available.

I just, I think it's great.

It's just, it's exciting to me to know Alan that what we've talked about and the information that you have shared with us over all this long time, that it's going to be available for other people.

Yeah.

And given that, you know, our shortwave audience was our really large audience, but it doesn't matter.
The numbers, I don't believe are important, because out of thousands there may be that one gem.

You know what I'm saying?

And I've always thought this about Sweet Liberty, about the broadcast.

I never advertised it.

And I wondered sometimes why I didn't, because I, you know,
I get emails, I'll be sure to listen to so-and-so tonight on such-and-such, and I never did that.

But I always just felt that people who were supposed to find this broadcast were going to find it.

Yes.

Yeah.

And it isn't a show.

It's not a show, no.

Not a show.

And it's not a program, because we're not programming.

I remember we'll call it deprogramming.

Yeah.

It's a deprogramming program, I don't know.

E-programming?

Yeah, yeah.

We'd have to get a new word for it, really.

But it certainly is a tutorial-type series.

Yes, it is.

Tutorial?

Uh-huh.

Uh-huh.

Yes, it is.

And it's a completely different way of looking at things from the conditioned way we've been trained to perceive things, see things.

You know, I can remember a long time ago when I very first got involved in this and began to wake up to it.

And there's some things you just know innately.

And I remember driving from Carlinville, Illinois, where I lived, to St. Louis one weekend to visit the children.

And oh my God.

Well, no, it wasn't.

Just one weekend.

Every time I drove in, there was highway repairs being done.

And it was always at the same spot.

And it was at a...

It didn't even matter if it was in the middle of the afternoon, it was a place where traffic would jam.

And when I talked to Nicole about it, she goes,
I just don't understand it, Mom.
What could be taking them so long?
I mean, why are they doing this?
I said, to cause irritation.
And she looked at me like I was nuts.
She says, oh, come on.
And I said, Nicole, it is to cause irritation.
And they are that subtle, aren't they, Alan?
Oh yes, they are subtle.
Yeah, they are.
But you know what?
Both of my girls today, they know it.
I mean, they see it, how long it takes.
And the traffic that people have to sit in in those cities.
Well, it's more than just that.
There's a Masonic function going on here.
Because every city is run Masonically.
And I don't care what they call the different branches of Freemasonry, they're all one.
And every year, the local councils give out their grants for road repairs and so on, even if they don't need to be done.
Yeah.
And that's part of the reason why they keep digging up the same roads and refilling them and digging them up and refilling them.
It's jobs for the boys, as it's called.
It's payoffs for the contractors who own these companies.
And it keeps their taxation system going as well.
They can always up the taxes and see they need more.
Because I've watched the same scenario in every place I've lived.
They always have a stretch of road.
They're always digging it up, filling it in, digging it up, filling it in.
And it's an ongoing process.
And it's all a Masonic con job.
That's what it is.
It's government contracts to the higher masons who own these contracting companies.
And this is the same worldwide.
That's amazing.
And that's why whenever these things go up for publication, the notices, they'll always say that certain bids or even the lowest bids will not necessarily be considered.
And you're darned to them because before it was even published that they've already picked their very high masonic companies that will get these jobs.
That's how it works.
That's how it works.
Jobs for the boys.
And Freemasonry is an incredible make work project.
It's always on the go.
I wasn't aware of that aspect of it.
Oh, yeah.

But they actually make jobs for them.

That's right.

That is right.

The big contractors are all high masons and there's big money handed out by governments, right down to local governments for all these jobs.

And they just, I'd watch the place in Sudbury.

It's quite near me.

And for the three years,
all they did is tear up the same piece of road right downtown and tear it up, fill it in, tear it up and fill it in and tear my kit and then tear it up again.

And it's just non-stop.

And that's your high masonic system at work.

That's what it's about.

Jobs for the boys.

And it's probably happening in all the little banana republics, all the little townships and counties all over this country.
I knew a guy who drove a truck in my old place where I lived.

That was rural as well.

And he was a member of the Orange Lodge.

He was always drunk and he's never stopped by the police because he's a mason, you see.

But he told me, he says,

oh yeah, it's non-stop.

We're never, we're never short of work, he said.

It is guaranteed by the brotherhood.

Guaranteed.

So yeah, I find this from different ones.

And it's good when they're drunk because they tell you more, you know.

It's a movie that Glenn Ford played in.

The Brotherhood.

The Brotherhood of the Bell.

The Brotherhood of the Bell.

Oh, The Brotherhood of the Bell, yes.

And what just occurred to me as you were talking is they get all, you know, all the jobs and they're very successful financially and et cetera, et cetera.

And one of these days, their due bill is called in.

Yes.

And that movie portrayed it perfectly, didn't it, Alan?

Yeah, it did.

It did.

What they didn't show you is the kickback system.

And this works from the federal level right down to the local.

For every contract that's given out there to a high mason, he must give a kickback to the person who gave him the contract.

Oh, okay.

Well, you know what this is, you know what I'm thinking about right now?
Remember I told you about that stupid sewer system they put in around here?

Yeah.

Well, it isn't a sewer system.

It is really just a chain of new septic tanks because there's no water, it's not a sewer.

This is in Jackson Center, which the population is probably, oh, jeez, Alan.
Well, Millerton, it would be the Millerton area, but Russ Draper is the owner of the hardware in Millerton.
I mean, we're talking a few hundred people, okay?
But they've got a hardware and they formed a sewer authority the township did.
And Russ Draper got on as head of the sewer authority and they shoved the system on people.
It's costing them $4,000 to connect.
And then they have to pay $50 a month.
That's per household, yeah.
And Russ Draper, I was just told this today.
Russ Draper, his hardware sold every single septic tank and every foot of sewer that went in.
He pushed this thing through in the face of terrible opposition.
We have to leave here.
We've just had our one-minute warning.
Folks, thanks for being here with us tonight.
And we will see you next Wednesday night.
And of course, Darren will be on Monday and Tuesday and be sure to tune in to Sweet Liberty and spend time.
Folks, spend time at the website because they're...
It's unlike most websites, there's not a one agenda.
It covers the entire web that we've been talking about.
And I think it's a wonderful place for you to be coming for them.
And Alan, thanks for being with us tonight.
It's a pleasure.
All right, good night, folks, and God bless you.
Thank you.

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
April 6, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you very much for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Wednesday the 6th of April in the year 2005 and I hope you're day was as lovely as our day was here today. It was 80 degrees here, just unreal. Alan Watt is with us tonight.

Let me begin with our spiritual message and we'll bring Alan up. This we did last night from John 18 verse 37 when Pilate asked Jesus, "Are you a king?" Jesus said, "You say that I'm a king. To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world that I should bear witness unto the truth. Everyone that is of the truth hears my voice."

It's pretty clear to me. Hello Alan Watt.

Alan: Hello.

Jackie: Thank you for being here tonight.

Alan: Yes, it's a pleasure.

Jackie: Yes, it's a pleasure.

Alan: It's pouring rain here.

Jackie: Oh my gosh, Alan. It's 80 degrees. I had every window in the house open and I went out and I spread a couple of bales of hay in the chicken's yard. It was muddy out there and I got all the hay off my perennials and got leaves out of the flower gardens and stuff. It was beautiful. It's just so exciting.

Alan: Well, it's the spring, eh?

Jackie: It is and it's amazing what a nice day can do for our energy level, isn't it?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Well gosh, Alan, you know we have to have these times, for me, the information, that stuff that we have learned and the lies that we have been told and that darkness that is in this world, it is so nice to have the break like this sometimes, isn't it?

Alan: It is.

Jackie: It's good for what ails you. It's good for the soul.

Alan: Yes. Unfortunately though, I watched them spraying all day yesterday until they turned the whole sky into just polymer mush and they're going after it big time.

Jackie: Today was sunny here. The skies were blue and the clouds were white and puffy.

Alan: That's the real thing.

Jackie: Oh it is. This has been a rare day. Yes, it's lovely. I've been printing out some stuff. You had mentioned this and I had gotten some information on it, Alan. These are the Top-Off they're calling it and I got this right from the U.S. government's website, U.S. Department of Homeland Security, Top Officials Three Exercise. Okay, that's what they're calling it, "Top Off Three". Top Officials Three Exercise, whatever that means, is a congressionally mandated exercise designed to strengthen the nation's capacity to prevent, prepare for, respond to and recover from large scale terrorist attacks involving weapons of mass destruction. Then it goes on and of course as we've talked about and I mentioned it last night to our listeners. It isn't just here in the U.S. It's in Canada. It's in the UK and the two states that are involved are New Jersey and Connecticut and they're underway between the fourth and the eighth of this month.

Alan: I hear too that they also had some British and some French aircraft and so on and military personnel over here, so it's international.

Jackie: That's what I said, Canada and the UK.

Alan: It's quite something but I did hear there is going Eskimo rebellion and that's probably what it's all about.

Jackie: Yeah, an Eskimo rebellion.

Alan: We set up communist Russia. We set up and financed communist China. We gave China – well, we didn't give it, but the boys that run us gave China all the industry, so who on earth is there anyway that's going to do all of this chaos?

Jackie: All we have to do is look at the Trading With the Enemy Act here in the U.S. and we see that according to the U.S. government incorporated that we the people in America are the enemy.

Alan: Yes, that's right. That makes sense. Because that's what the Soviets did. The Soviets really had no or the Bolsheviks had no real enemies once they had their borders and to contain people, and Lenin said it, to contain people and make them obedient you must have a reign of terror within and of course that's when they started looking within for terrorists. The same thing in the French Revolution until it got so carried away in the French Revolution that if you looked at someone the wrong way you were a terrorist and had your head lopped off, but this is the same thing. For them to maintain complete control in a global society under one government, they have to create this so-called terrorism within. You know the Goldstein of 1984. Who was Goldstein? Goldstein leads the terrorists. Where are they? They're everywhere and that's what they have to do. This is an old science and they're simply using the same techniques again and eventually they'll convince a lot of the general public after they've introduced the psychological testing that they're potential terrorists and they didn't know it. And the people will thank them for protecting them.

Jackie: Like they tell young children today that they're homosexuals and I recall this so clearly. It was on the news and they did this testing in school and a 14-year old boy, they told him he was homosexual and when they asked him how he felt about it, he said I don't know because I didn't know I was. But possibly that boy believed them, Alan.

Alan: Lots of them are doing it because they're being told – I mean you wouldn't believe how indoctrinated in sexuality we are prior to even puberty by adults with agendas and they tell them that if you haven't tried this there might be something wrong with you.

Jackie: Then we have the President's New Freedom Commission here. New freedom, don't you love that?

Alan: Oh, it's wonderful.

Jackie: And that's the commission that is going to do the screening across the nation – mental health screening and we know just like Winston Smith. We're mentally ill if we think for ourselves.

Alan: It's thought crime.

Jackie: It's dog training?

Alan: It's thought crime.

Jackie: Oh, thought crime.

Alan: And of course Winston when he was picked up and taken to the Ministry of Love, same thing. That's where they torture you. He met his next-door neighbor and his neighbor said, "don't come near me Winston" (of course he was a prisoner too). He said, "don't come near me Winston. I've just found out that I'm a thought criminal." He said, "I didn't know it myself but my daughter spotted it. Thank God she caught me in time before I did anything." And that's what it will come to here.

Jackie: Yes it is.

Alan: And people will thank them.

Jackie: For telling them that they're mentally ill?

Alan: Yes. You have these subconscious aggressions against different things and you might act on them and so we've caught you in time and here's the medical regime and here's the pills that you take and here's the office you check into every week for analysis. That will become the norm, only for a while until we get the brain chip out there, which they have. At the Loyola University Meeting that your tax money paid for, the geneticists and the biotech engineers who were there from all over the world said that they have this partial protoplasmic chip all ready to go and it will be inserted in to the brain and it will interface with your cerebral cortex. Basically, everyone will be hooked up to regional computers and you won't be able to imagine yourself as an individual anymore. It will be more like the beehive. In other words, it will be like the Borg in Star Trek. However, they're selling the idea, and they said that at that meeting, that all novels, cartoons, and movies will incorporate this in their story lines to make it a thing that the public will want; and sure enough, there's whole bunch of movies just been released to do with brain chips and applications and how wonderful it can be. That's how you program the public to accept things.

Jackie: I would like you to say again what you said about the chip because that can slide by somebody. This chip that actually blends with your own tissue, yes?

Alan: That's right. Your body will not reject it because it's made of some type of protoplasm which is the same as the human type and it was invented in Japan. Some of your listeners may remember maybe 10 years ago when I think it was Sony Corporation announced that they had created a form of computer composed primarily of protoplasmic brain type cells and silicon chips interfaced, they all work together, so this has been tried and tested. They have it all ready to go at the Loyola University meeting they said – and Newt Gingrich was there. He led off the meeting but they said all they have to do now is convince the public of the need to take it and of course they're going to use this fear of terrorism to advance it.

Jackie: Yes. While you're talking I'm going through my Homeland Security file because I've got that report, the CFR Phase III Report on National Homeland Security, and Alan, they said something in this. I couldn't believe it and it was towards the last of it, just exactly what you're talking about. I couldn't believe that they actually – well, you go ahead because I think I'm pretty close to where it is and this report by the way was done in what was it, Alan, 1998, 1999 and let me see. Oh, excuse me, the final draft came on the 31st of January 2001 but that was Phase III of it. This thing started sometime in 1998 or 1999 and then of course right after 9/11 out it came and then we got our Department of Homeland Security.

Alan: This was also planned way in advance and even in Canada here the most senior civil servant in Ottawa who helped draft up the negotiation books for the Free Trade Negotiations, which were the precursors of the NAFTA, she came out afterwards and told the public they're merging the entire continent starting in 2005 and that's exactly what they're doing.

Jackie: All of this has been going on while the mainstream media pushed Terri Schiavo. Here is a wrap-up if I could on their 14 points. They're just very short, all of them. We arrived at these 14 conclusions. Now listen to this. Listen to this. I know I'm away from the mike. Listen to their conclusion.

- "1. The United States will become increasingly vulnerable to hostile attacks on the American homeland and U.S. military superiority will not entirely protect us.*
- 2. Rapid advances in information and biotechnology will create new vulnerabilities for U.S. security.*
- 3. New technologies will divide the world as well as draw it together.*
- 4. The national security of all advanced states will be increasingly effective by the vulnerabilities of the evolving global economic infrastructure.*
- 5. Energy supplies will continue to have major strategic significance.*
- 6. All borders will be more porous. Some will bend and some will break.*
- 7. The sovereignty of states will come under pressure but will endure as the main principle of international political organization.*
- 8. The fragmentation and failure of some states will occur with destabilizing effects on entire regions.*
- 9. Foreign crisis will be replete with atrocities and the deliberate terror rising of civilian populations."*

Isn't that what we're doing over in Iraq today?

Alan: Oh, I'd say so.

Jackie: "Space will become a critical and competitive military environment." (And listen to this). "The essence of war will not change. U.S. intelligence will face more challenging adversaries and even excellent intelligence will not prevent all surprises."

So they warn us right up front that no matter how many of your liberties and freedoms that we take away, you're not safe, folks.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Well anyway. Oh here. "The United States will be called upon frequently to intervene militarily in time of uncertain alliances and with the prospect of fewer forward deployed forces." (And then here's another one). "The emerging security environment in the next quarter century will require different U.S. military and other national capabilities."

Here, listen to this. This is what I was looking for, I think.

"The commissions stressed on communicating the scale and pace of change has been borne out by extraordinary developments in science and technology in just the 18-month period since the Phase I Report appeared. The mapping of the humane genome was completed. A functioning quantum computing device was invented. Organic and inorganic material was mated at the molecular level for the first time."

Isn't that what we're talking about, Alan?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: "Basic mechanisms of the aging process have been understood at the genetic level. Anyone of these developments would have qualified as a breakthrough of the decade a quarter century ago but they all happened within the past year and a half."

Alan: Yes, what a joke.

Jackie: And there's just a couple of more here. It says: "This suggests the possible advent of period of change the scale of which will often astound us. The key factor driving change in America's national security environment over the next 25 years will be the acceleration of scientific discovery and its technological applications and the uneven human social and psychological capacity to harness them. Synergistic developments in information, technology, material science, biotechnology and nanotechnology will almost certainly transport (listen to this) transform human tools more dramatically and rapidly than any time in human history. While it is easy to underestimate the social implications of change on such a scale the need for human intellectual and social adaptation imposes limits to the pace of change. These limits are healthy for they allow and encourage the application (listen to this) of the human moral sense two choices of major import. We will surely have our hands full with such choices over the next quarter century. In that time we may witness the development of a capacity to guide or control evolution (listen, let me do that again). In that time, we may witness the development of a capacity to guide or control evolution by manipulating human DNA and the ability to join organic and inorganic material formed prospects are both sobering and contentious."

Wait, I missed a sentence. "The ability to join organic and inorganic material formed suggests that humans may evolve literally with their own machines. Such prospects are both sobering and contentious."

Alan: These inventions were made long ago.

Jackie: I want our listeners to know that this report – this Phase III Report, I'm pretty sure it is. They said it, to merge human and organic and inorganic.

Alan: That basically is the chip too. In other words, they're talking about the cyborg as well. Part human, part machine and of course I don't know if you noticed that movie they put out again, "Artificial Intelligence."

Jackie: That was sad.

Alan: It also is to leave the person with the subconscious question of what is human anyway. In other words, if a robot can adopt human qualities can we therefore classify them as the new humans; and before you know it, our minds have been made up for us primarily through all the fiction that we've watched.

Jackie: And not only that, but there will be possibly a compassion for these creatures that are being created.

Alan: Oh yes and the whole law industry for civil rights and all that.

Jackie: Oh yes. Well remember was it the "Millennium Man," was that it, with Robin Williams?

Alan: That's right. See they've already given us a scenario.

Jackie: Tell our listeners about that.

Alan: Yes, well that's the same idea that the guy starts off as a superior type robot and goes through his long, long life and eventually wants to become human because he's adopted all these qualities and then he goes to court to demand they have the same rights.

Jackie: And it was the world court and it was a three-man panel. Remember that?

Alan: Yes, so all of this drama is predictive programming. That's what they call it and our conclusions are given to us primarily through fiction in advance of the actual events so that we react to these events the same way as the characters in the movie. We accept it in other words and that's the Tavistock method. It's an old method.

Jackie: But they have such a slick way of presenting it, because if you recall when he was up there before the court to get his certificate of what, humanity – what was he trying to get?

Alan: To be a human being and a citizen.

Jackie: Yes and he was a total cyborg or whatever you call it, but then one of the judges says well I have an artificial heart and my father had an artificial gizzard or whatever, and basically you sat there and listened to that and you thought, yeah, sure.

Alan: That's how they program you.

Jackie: Exactly. Well I could see it though. That's one of the beauties of actually knowing. That chapter out of that book that I read to our listeners the last few nights, it's exactly what it talked about is knowing about the darkness. Knowing the darkness because other than that, how are you going to shed light into it, Alan?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: And you've been very much of a blessing for all of us to open our eyes, open our minds. It's not been easy at times. You know that, don't you?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Because there was that spell that I went through for I don't know how long where I thought I was in some other place and there was nothing that I looked at that looked real to me and it was such a confusing place to be, Alan, but somehow we settle in with that, don't we?

Alan: Yes, that's right.

Jackie: Sort of like an initiation.

Alan: Most people actually float through their lives through all the changes in almost a dreamlike state – just like they floated through the transfer of all industry to China. Most people sort of vaguely remember something about that but they're not quite sure, even though everything is made in China and it never dawned on them why was it a mandate for American and Canadian business to be moved to China? I mean this is coming from the top. They float through their lives and the changes and they accept that. Plato talked about this whole scenario 2,400 years ago and of course they were part of the Mystery Religion of his day and they talked about the perfect state, which was a prototype of the perfect world state, where they would create – the guardian class, that's the elite who run the whole show, would have this lesser elite of "technocrats" you might call them.

Jackie: Those would be the minions?

Alan: The technocrats would be the high bureaucrats and the scientists combined, and then they have the people below them that do all the work and they would breed these people just like they bred hybrid animals for specific tasks. They would mate them up with specific women, and for tall guys that would pick apples for instance and the small squat guys who would do mining, and they said this is the perfect society and the majority of the people in Plato's "Republic" were not called people. They were called ITS.

Jackie: ITS?

Alan: Yes, you're either a human being or you're an IT.

Jackie: Only you were a human being if you were part of the elite?

Alan: Yes and everyone else was an IT, and of course that's another way of using aristocracy and nobility and the commoners. The commoners are the ITS, you see, so nothing has changed.

Jackie: Maybe we're mankind and they're ITS.

Alan: Well, they're not an IT. They are an infection that shouldn't be here. They are THE infection. They are the deviants, a deviant species.

Jackie: When we say "they," are we talking about the royal Khazars?

Alan: It's all royalty across the planet in all countries. You'll find that the Japanese ones have connection with the British ones and so on going way, way back for thousands of years before even the Khazars.

Jackie: And their ancestors had red hair probably?

Alan: Some of them certainly did, we know that, even the ones going into China with some of the mummies of these red-haired people. Of course, this all stems really from what they called the Aryan race that came into India and also had links with Iran and other parts of the Middle East.

Jackie: Okay. I don't understand this Aryan race thing. We're going to take a 60 second break here. Well, that took 10 minutes but we don't do that often, have all these long commercials, and besides that, they're worthwhile, aren't they, Alan?

Alan: You know the people eventually won't need to use shortwave because they'll have the chip in their head and they'll have music playing all the time, elevator music.

Jackie: Or rap.

Alan: Well, it will be rap for the military because they've got to be aggressive. For the public it will be elevator music.

Jackie: I remember you saying that you saw a news thing when they were sending a shipload of America boys, young men, women, girls over to Iraq and they had war paint on their faces.

Alan: The guys had their shirts off and some of them had baggy pants on.

Jackie: And doing and rap music and dancing and you said that the thought that came into your mind was they're sending the barbarians over there.

Alan: Yes, we're sending the barbarians into one of the oldest civilizations in the world and this barbarian generation was deliberately created to do just this.

Jackie: Generation X.

Alan: They were dumbed down, given video games to kill, kill, kill. The state gave them whatever values they desired and their boss is their paymaster and they've got the most primitive form of music ever devised – scientifically devised and it works very well.

Jackie: The primitive music, the piercing of the body in all places, it takes us right back to the jungle to primitive man.

Alan: You always get that appearing when you have a generation for warfare. The pirates too, when they were big, they also pierced themselves and put rings and so on.

Jackie: More than just their ears?

Alan: Yes, and of course the pirates were all Masons anyway because that was the symbol of their flag.

Jackie: Well, wait a minute now. You're not talking about all of them onboard ship, but you're talking about the pirate captains, yes?

Alan: You also had them with the mates right down to the long-term crew. Eventually they'd join it as well. In fact if you ever see Gilbert & Sullivan's movie "The Pirates of Penzance," or the stage play or whatever, written in the late 1800's, you'll actually see a sort of mock ceremony onboard the pirate ship of the Masonic initiation.

Jackie: "The Pirates of Penzance"? Would you spell that?

Alan: It's P-E-N-Z-A-N-C-E, I think it is. That's just at the coast of Cornwall in England. That was one of their big bases, but you'll see the apprentice sailor with his shirt open, his breast exposed, one of his trouser legs rolled up and torn and I think wearing one shoe and so he's all ready for the initiation. Then they lay him on the Skull & Bones flag and they pulled him up three times, so that's him now a Master Mason you see.

Jackie: Just waiting for the wool to be pulled over his eyes?

Alan: Yes, and of course Gilbert & Sullivan were high Masons. We see these things all the time but the public don't know what they're really looking at and it's no different from the movies they churn out today. They're always mocking the public and programming them at the same time. Again, going back to Plato, he said, "we have the ability (meaning the aristocracy) since we give the people their culture; culture does not come from the bottom up. It comes from the top down." And he said, "We can change the culture and all the values in one generation and the people involved who lived through it won't even notice the change."

Jackie: Alan, this thought came to me while we were on the air one night. The biodiversity treaty treats humankind, mankind as organisms. In other words, we are no different than above or below. All organisms are the same including the lowest amoeba, and you were talking about this, how they culture us, and then it occurred to me in the pictures that I get in my mind that the world is their Petri dish. We are the organisms that are being cultured.

Alan: When the Phoenicians went into new lands they had a whole routine that they went through to entice the public down to the beach where they'll lay out presents and then go back into their boats and watch. They studied the public of a new nation, a new people and they watched their tribal habits and they called it "customs," and that's why you have customs ports at every port nowadays and that's what they did. By understanding the cultures you can interfere and take over the people and the Phoenicians ended up enslaving most of the little villages they took over and turned them into almost semi-automatic production facilities for different items.

Jackie: Like they are today.

Alan: Yes. This is an ancient technique and they had their international bankers went with them even as long ago as 2,500 BC.

Jackie: What were they using for "money" back then?

Alan: In the beginning they used gold and silver powder and they weighed it and ingots too. It was all done by weights. In fact in Sumer around 5,000 BC you had the standard weights which we still use today. What they were doing at that time was wherever they went to new countries, they introduced their money system where none had existed before because people bartered when they were free. Then they set up a branch office, a bank, introduced their gold and eventually it became of course coin and then told them to put their coin in the bank and they gave them clay facsimiles, just like paper money.

Jackie: That was back in that era?

Alan: Yes and once they done that they shipped the gold and silver back out of the country to the major religious temples in the Middle East and those were the banks.

Jackie: I've become real intrigued with the question about gold, gold more than silver. I got some information mailed to me by one of our listeners quite a while ago and it told about the use of gold for many – well, I shouldn't have even brought it up because I cannot recall, but it went far beyond using gold as "money" or a means of exchange or riches or wealth, but there's something to gold that's very important to them.

Alan: I know. There's a whole bunch of stuff out there put out by Gardner from one of the Masonic institutions in England. I mean I'm telling you the people on the internet who phone me swallow everything that's out there.

Jackie: Okay. Well, I'm not saying I swallowed it but maybe this is the same thing you're talking about. But what are you talking about?

Alan: The gold was simply – these guys had been into mining very early on. I've no doubt they learned it from long before Sumer, they had to of, and they had a monopoly on their mines and so they got metals that were fairly rare, had monopolies on them and forced that on the countries round about and overseas. As they were doing that, they were creating an international standard of weights and measures and a value system.

Jackie: But what made them valuable?

Alan: Because they forced it on as a means of exchange instead of having real goods to exchange with others. It's a method of control.

Jackie: In other words, they could have chosen anything. They could have chosen nickel?

Alan: I don't think they should have chosen anything at all. I think they should have left it.

Jackie: I didn't say they should. I said they could have.

Alan: You see this is what it is. Nature should have been left the way it was. That's the key to it.

Jackie: I understand that. All I'm saying is why they chose gold.

Alan: If it was something else that was as rare they would have used it. Sure they would have. Again, gold is often along the same vein as you'll find silver, it often turns into the gold further on in the same vein, so they had them both in the one mine. You'll find the Phoenicians--

Jackie: Silver turns into gold?

Alan: Silver will go alongside gold often.

Jackie: But it doesn't turn into gold?

Alan: There's a method – I mean even the white gold you see is a mixture of really the two. You see there's an in-between and the two distinct ones and you often also find lead also around the same area, but you'll find the Phoenicians had mines as far as Russia thousands of years ago. What they did was create wars because once they had taken a country over and introduced money, they would get the government, which they then owned, to create a standing army and then they could just use money to pay them. Any country who didn't go along and accept the same system, they would arm them because they also owned the best weapons of the day, no different from today, and they would invade that country, take it over and force the system on them. In those days they called it "civilization." Today they call it "democracy."

Jackie: You know Adolph Hitler was bartering. That was one of the things that drove him crazy because according to what I have read, Germany had no gold left after the Weimer Republic and they created a script, just like Abraham Lincoln did, but that they were actually bartering with other nations and they were bartering goods for goods and it drove them nuts. You know what really confirmed it for me? I've got a speech here by Cordele Hull. It was on Labor Day and it was when the U.S. – well, it was in 1941, Labor Day and he was talking about international trade and all this. He said if this present war is not won we will be reduced to barter and I knew that he was talking about Adolph Hitler's barter system and that was driving them absolutely nuts because there were no trade deficits and there were manufactured goods traded for food mostly.

Alan: Well, I still don't believe that – I think every people gets used you know. I really think they all get used. All the nations get used. Even if you think you're rebelling against them, they'll put their own men in at the top and guide you along the path.

Jackie: They put their spin on it too.

Alan: Because you'll find that Hitler did have Schacht who was his banker and Schacht was a member of the German and Dutch families that were big bankers. If you look at Roosevelt's wife, Eleanor Roosevelt, she did a genealogical chart of her husband in one of her books and you'll find that FDR was related to the Schacht family as well.

Jackie: When you say Schacht, how are you spelling it?

Alan: I think it's S-C-H-A-C-H-T.

Jackie: Oh, like shocked.

Alan: FDR was related to Hitler's banker and the Dutch families as well of the Schacht and Germans, so everything is a play and the public get used and the real theater of war is a theater. It's a theater you see and to make people believe it was all very real, real people must really die.

Jackie: Yes, but how many people were told by history in school that Adolph Hitler was bartering? You see, the things that are hidden, Alan, are the things that to me maybe slipped out of their hands, maybe somebody. I considered the same thing with Saddam Hussein, that maybe he was put in power by them. I don't know but I see the possibility that their minions got away with them. Look at JFK and I think he actually got to thinking that he was the president.

Alan: So did Reagan, that's why they shot him.

Jackie: Yes exactly, but you see they put him in and I understand at that time that there was in Chicago or Illinois specifically a lot of fraudulent votes to get JFK in, but he got in and then suddenly said what the hell is going on here and so he thought he was the president so they killed him. So I'm saying that some of this people slipped through their hands.

Alan: I think some of them also get carried away. I've no doubt Saddam did and no doubt Saddam never really looked at the end of the Cold War because his whole power structure was based on being an American ally during the whole thing.

Jackie: Well, because America – not America, we'll say the U.S. government Inc., they were playing with him, I believe.

Alan: They did finance him and they did give him weaponry.

Jackie: I know. That's what I'm saying, but Saddam Hussein was attempting to develop a Pan-Arab collation. Well, that's something that Israel and the U.S. government isn't going to stand for.

Alan: They've said that. They've said that publicly. Israel came out and said that the New American Century agenda that was drawn up by Wolfowitz and Perle and Rumsfeld and so on, back in the '90's, with the agenda attacking first of all Afghanistan, then Iraq, then Iran, then Syria. They said it was identical to their own. That's what Israel said; so yes, it's one in the same policy. However, in ancient times, what the historians call "spreading civilization," it was the same system there as it created empire after empire and spread civilization. They were standardizing a system across the world and today the U.S. is just completing that job and today they call it democracy.

Jackie: I think we ought to be really contemplating, really considering that we're going to be some of the ones that slip through their hands because everybody doesn't fall for it, do they, Alan?

Alan: No. They know that in every generation there are some who, as they say themselves, "slip through the net," the ones whose indoctrination doesn't take so well and they're clever enough to remain free thinkers and hide it through school. Today, of course, if you show it at school, they put you on drugs.

Jackie: You know what? For me if this broadcast does anything that it would be to open the eyes, open the minds, open the hearts of our listeners that they would be part of the one that slipped through the net, Alan, and you are part of this. You are so much a part of this of informing us and bringing us out of the Dark Ages, out of the forest.

Alan: People all claim that they want truth and I tell them – and most people want truth like buying a fast-food hamburger and they don't realize that they have to do a lot of work.

Jackie: Yes. We're out of our hour. You'll be back with us, won't you, Alan?

Alan: Oh yes.

Jackie: Thanks for being here.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
April 13, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is Wednesday and it is the 13th of April in the year 2005 and Alan Watt is with us this evening. I had friend stop by.

Our spiritual message tonight is the pray of Saint Francis of Assisi:

"Father, make me an instrument of your peace. Where there is hatred, let me sow love; Where there is injury, let me sow pardon; Where there is doubt, faith; Where there is despair let me sow hope; Where there is darkness, let me sow light; And where there is sadness, joy. Father grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console; To be understood as to understand; To be loved as to love; For it is in giving that we receive; It is in pardoning that we are pardoned; And it is in dying that we are born into eternal life."

Alan, thank you being here tonight.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: Always. How has your day been, besides the chemtrail spraying?

Alan: I got my truck stuck in the field.

Jackie: Oh no.

Alan: Yes. I was taking it out there to do some important stuff and it's just not dry enough.

Jackie: So did you get it out?

Alan: No, I spoke to it quietly and left it there.

Jackie: Oh okay. So do you think it's going to come in by itself now?

Alan: Well, I did tell it what would happen to it if it didn't.

Jackie: You know what? These things can happen because last summer when the children were here, Brandon got a real bad shock out on the porch and they were plugging in one of their players and instead of connecting the extension cord and then plugging it in. He had already plugged it in and I was in the house. They said his hair stood right up on end. It was a good one and it knocked out some fuses. Well, I got all the fuse things flipped back but my doorbell quit ringing and I thought well there's something in there. Something like a ballast and I thought well then maybe it's a ballast and I have to find the company and I was without a doorbell for I cannot tell you how long and then one day suddenly someone came up and rang the doorbell and it's working without doing anything to it. I like that. So maybe you'll find your truck up by the house in the morning.

Alan: Well, I did threaten it.

Jackie: But you did it quietly?

Alan: I did it quietly.

Jackie: Okay. Well Alan there's something that I would like you to address tonight. I don't know how to respond. I don't know that what I say or the way I say it or whatever it is that's lacking or maybe it isn't. Maybe it's just difficult. The one thing that initiated this is I got a call last night from a really nice man and I mean this sincerely and I know that it's with all of his heart the belief, but basically it was the same thing I get from people who are I guess it's Christian or Israel identity, but it isn't Yahweh or Jehovah that god of the Old Testament. The name is wrong. It's Yahweh; and Alan, what is the difference?

Alan: Well, to them it's everything really and that goes way, way back into the Middle East where if you knew the exact pronunciation of the entity or demon, then you would control it. That's where it all stems from and of course it's all nonsense because if you're talking to a creator I'm sure the creator is bright enough to know who you're talking to.

Jackie: What about the part in the Old Testament where it says if my people – does it say know my name or something about repent. I wished I knew it word for word. I don't if you know which one I'm referring to, but I think a lot of stuff is pinned onto that too. "If my people would say my name or know my name, call upon me, I will heal their land." So that's to make people think that we have to have a name for Creator?

Alan: That's pretty well it. It's nonsense. If you are speaking to a creator that's so dumb with a low IQ that if you get the name wrong and he doesn't hear you, then I think you're praying to the wrong entity because obviously anything that was a creator knows exactly who you mean.

Jackie: But this goes along with the fact that it wasn't the Jews that was the chosen, it was the white Anglo-Saxon and there's a lot of evidentially research that people have done in the bloodlines and people from back in that area and so what it comes down to this is. It comes down to believing that Creator would choose a special people and we're to rule the world. Rule the world. It says in there, Alan, that you are going to loan to nations and borrow from none and it also says to a special people that they cannot loan money and charge usury to their fellows but they have to charge usury to the stranger or the goyim. Well, how is this reconciled in people's minds or is there something that at least to plant a seed that would get them thinking, Alan?

Alan: Their thinking would have to overcome their conditioning. That's the problem and they've been so heavily steeped in this stuff from childhood that for many of them it's impossible to break that barrier.

Jackie: A lot of people who are Christian identity I don't think it's necessarily from childhood. It is what they've deduced from whoever – this came from British Israelism, didn't it? The Israel identity or Christian identity? What is British Israelism?

Alan: It began in the 1800's with one man who was a bit of a nutcase to begin with. In fact he ended up in a psychiatric hospital for the rest of his days.

Jackie: Do you know a name?

Alan: I can't quite remember the guy's name but he actually demanded that the king and queen of England dethrone themselves and put him in power because he believed that he was closer to the bloodline that was mentioned than they were, you see, so they locked him up. However, then the World Zionist federation realized this could be an aid in their plans and so they pushed it ever since and you'll find that the World Federalist Society--

Jackie: World Federalist or World Zionist?

Alan: World Federalist Society is the exact same address in every country as the World Zionist Society. It's one and the same outfit. They're using religion once again to verify the Old Testament and to bring Israel up to be the basically the capital of the planet.

Jackie: And going along with that, isn't it the second coming, the coming of Jesus, and I don't know if this is British Israelism or Israel identity but that Jesus is going to have his throne right there in Jerusalem.

Alan: It's all part of the plan and you see behind religions you've had people who conned everyone for thousands of years so they do certainly know the techniques to use and they could pull it off. They could certainly pull it off; but if you go into the Old Testament, Jehovah or Yahweh is a latecomer. He comes on the scene after the Elohim and the Elohim are the creators you might say, so definitely Yahweh was a local deity that was then pushed – in fact he was the volcano god and he was eventually pushed up to overtake everyone else, not by Jews but by the ruling governments of the day.

Jackie: The priesthood?

Alan: Yes and Constantine I'm sure had a few good chuckles at that one because he was steeped in all the mystery religions and even though he's given the accolades for bringing Christianity to the fore, he did not make Christianity the religion of Rome. He simply stopped the persecution of it and prior to doing that he created his own temple of the Mithraic Cult – he was a Mithraic disciple, a form of Masonry you might call it. He also created a church where you could go in, like all Caesars, and worship him in his own church, so he was worshipped as a god. He had insurance policies out with every mystery religion and so he used this religion, the Christian religion, to further the cause, which was again to lead eventually to world government.

Jackie: I've mentioned this on the air before because I don't really understand all of the writings that are attributed to things of Jesus but there are some that are so simple and that you just absolutely know is true. You know, how to live. Do unto others. That is it, Alan. As you sow, so shall you reap. I take that literally and for people to think that okay if I say a certain amount of hail Mary's or the priest or I pay enough, well the Lord knows that I'm a weak sinner and Jesus died for my sins so I'm okay because I repent and then you do it again and repent again and it really gives people a cop out. But far beyond that, the way I see it, the way it appears to me, is that it has created that separation – that perceived separation between each of us and our Creator.

Alan: Long before Christianity the mystery religions had always been around and they knew from time immemorial that man would always seek out his Creator. He had a yearning to be in touch with the all or whatever name they gave to it and then they exploited it. The priesthoods actually exploited this natural need you see and of course out of the need they create dogma, and from the dogma they make rules and laws and enslave the minds of the people.

Jackie: And if you don't buy into the dogma you're a heretic; and I remember saying that on the air. Actually it was sometime in '98 and why I remember that is because it was still daylight when I was doing the broadcast at the time. But I said I just want you all to know that I am a heretic, and by the definition in the dictionary, that I do not ascribe or subscribe to the religious doctrine and the religious dogma that we have been taught. I had somebody call me and say that's a terrible thing to say about yourself. In other words, it's terrible to be a heretic.

Alan: "Heretic" comes from "hearsay," and that's what they forbid the public to do, was listen to hearsay; and from "hearsay" you have "heresy." That's where it comes from, so you were forbidden to listen to any kind of hearsay or heresy and if you did then you were a heretic. It's a fantastic form of mind control to do with guilt-tripping and sin of course and it's been exploited and used by professionals for thousands upon thousands of years. It's all mind control, all of it.

Jackie: I remember when Rick, what was his name, Wiles, was actually on this hour on this shortwave frequency at 9 p.m. Eastern time and Lilly listened to him and taped the thing one day and called and let me hear it. This basically was his message because he used to do news and tell all the terrible things that were going on, but then he'd say but that's okay, I see what's going on out there, I know what's going on but it's okay because I know that it's the time Jesus is coming, see. Then he says come on Jesus and establish your throne in Jerusalem and I am going to be there right in the front row worshipping you and following you. It seems that the kingdom on earth is the message that has permeated throughout a lot of these religions, like the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Alan: Of course the history of the Witnesses was began by--

Jackie: Charles Taze Russell

Alan: And he's buried under a pyramid.

Jackie: "34 holy," I was at his pyramid. I have photographs of them, Alan.

Alan: Yes and it's right opposite the Masonic Lodge and of course the whole idea of the "Russellites," as they called themselves, was that the Gentiles had blown it with all their wars and the goal was to bring the time of the Jews to rule the world. That was part of the Russellite philosophy.

Jackie: Oh, you're kidding.

Alan: In fact Balfour who gave the Balfour Declaration said the same thing. If you read the whole declaration, and generally you'll see only part of it published, but if you read the whole thing he said the same thing that the Gentiles have blown their ability for salvation, were unable to handle freedom and therefore the Jews had the right to rule.

Jackie: I had never read the whole thing then because what I have that I was under the impression that this was the Balfour Declaration, basically it just said that a home there will be established for the Jews. However, it said something about that this would not encroach upon the people who are living there already, the Palestinians.

Alan: Well, they are nice liars.

Jackie: Yes I know that but that's all I've got.

Alan: I've got the whole thing and don't forget too, it was not a British government document. It was a personal letter to Baron Rothschild, so it was never debated in Parliament in Britain. This was a managed thing between Rothschild and Balfour; but that was the scheme of it all, was that "look, you Gentiles just can't handle it so it's only right that Jews take over." H.G. Wells who was also a front man for MI6 and who was given most of his material that he wrote his stories around, H.G. Wells also categorized the races that should be allowed to live and the ones that would have to be exterminated, long before Adolph Hitler came along. He said that the British Crown had decided that Jews because of their survival abilities and their ability to handle this economic system would be allowed to survive alongside the aristocracy of Britain.

Jackie: You're kidding.

Alan: No.

Jackie: So their ability to handle it. They're the ones that – well, the elite are the ones that created it, aren't they, way back in ancient times?

Alan: Oh yes, it's always been the elite of course. When you read into the books, H.G. Wells wrote the first set, it was a two-volume set called "The History of the World," and he lays out there the races that would have to be destroyed because they could not come into this new order, which was an economic system, and he said that the red man would have to be killed off by diseases and so would the blacks. He also had the Irish in there, by the way.

Jackie: Why the Irish?

Alan: Because the Irish have a temperamental streak where they don't like to go along with systems and the only ones that would be allowed to survive would be people who would conform to an economic system, and that's the key to everything is the economic system. We under law exist to serve the economic system and not the other way around. They wrote a lot of their agenda openly back in the early 1900's and put down in that agenda the races that would have to be eliminated.

Jackie: When you read enough different stuff you know that you keep seeing these connections. And in the Protocols of course their world court it looks like it's already built there in Israel but they say that their king despot of the blood of Zion is going to be the Pope of the world. Now I was sharing with our listeners last night a thing that I got on the different popes but there's something here that I didn't get to and I think it's part of our conversation now and I'd like to share it. He was talking about the scandals of the child molestation and he said:

"Notwithstanding the scandal and shock of the aforementioned, Rome carries on quietly with her program of world dominion. They lead the competition to establish the first one world system that has ever existed. Their ultimate goal is global religious syncretism, and to eventually wield control and authority over every individual on earth. The human solidarity goals of the Roman Church are identical to the goals and objectives of the United Nations. This is why they are such a perfect fit. Rome only gives the appearance of objecting to the UN agenda. At the 1996 World Food Summit in Rome, Cardinal Angelo Sodano pledged the holy sees support for the UN humanistic programs of action. Rome also has designs on Jerusalem."

Now this is where the connection comes in.

"For 46 years after Israel's rebirth the Vatican refused to acknowledge Israel's right to exist. But Rome wants to exert premier influence over Jerusalem, which will one day function as the capital of her World Church. In a 1993 letter to the Pope, Shimon Peres promised to internationalize Jerusalem granting the UN political control of the Old City and the Vatican hegemony over the holy sites within. This was confirmed by the Italian newspaper La Stampa. In March 1995 the Israeli radio station Arutz Sheva was leaked a cable from the Israeli Embassy in Rome, confirming the hand over of Jerusalem to the Vatican. The future Pope will establish his throne one day within the walls of the rebuilt Temple in Jerusalem. It is from here that he will rule his World Church."

That reminds me that the king despot of the blood of Zion is said that it will be the Pope of the World and it says and there's just another paragraph here.

"And this day may not be as far off as many believe. The cornerstones for the Third Temple have already been quarried by the Jewish group known as the Temple Mount Faithful. They are extremely well financed and organized. They have also produced priestly vestments in accordance with scriptural outlines and are presently attempting to breed a perfect red heifer in anticipation of the coming dedication ceremonies. Obviously, Rome and the Temple Mount Faithful are headed for a showdown."

I don't think so. Do you, Alan? I don't think there is going to be a showdown.

Alan: No, I wouldn't think so.

Jackie: Okay. Here's the last. "In a letter sent to the Vatican in January 2004, the Temple Mount Faithful demanded that Pope John Paul return the Temple Menorah and other vessels and treasures removed in 70AD by Titus and taken to Rome, where they are presently held within the Secret Vatican Archives." And that's the end of the article and this was written by some guy in Toronto, but I think there's a lot of truth in here except that there's going to be a show down. This last pope according to many sources his mother was a Jew. He went to Israel and apologized on behalf of all Christians for the terrible persecution of the Jews that have taken place over the last 2,000 years, so the guy was a Jew.

Alan: He also worked for I.G. Farben just prior to World War II.

Jackie: Yes. I understand that he became a Catholic in order to escape whatever and he became a cardinal and the next thing you know he's a pope. There's not going to be any showdown. Their puppets are being put in place right now.

Alan: Sure, the Catholic Church was always used for this. In fact if you look at some of the big names of Catholic popes, they were also world bankers in their own right.

Jackie: I was telling our listeners last night about this beautiful book I have written by David Yallop, I think his name was. It was titled "In God's Name" and it was about Pope John Paul I that was in only for 33 days and he was going to get rid of Marchinko the Vatican banker because he found out that they had laundered a billion, 900 and some million, dollars of bad bonds through the Vatican church. It was the night before when he handed these instructions to the Secretary of State, which he had actually inherited from the previous pope, and the author said that the guy begged the pope not to do this, evidentially knowing what was going to happen, and he said I want this done. Marchinko was some bishop or cardinal and the next morning he was found dead. He was poisoned.

Alan: He was going to make a speech that day, too, to ban freemasonry in the Vatican.

Jackie: Yes. What is it called? 32P... 3P... 22?

Alan: There's two 2's.

Jackie: P2 freemasonry. Yes, that was mentioned. We have to take our 60-second break here. This was a pope that could have done some real good. He was going to get rid of the birth control ban for Catholics and they got rid of him in 33 days. Okay folks, we'll be right back with Alan Watt.
Okay Alan, what were we talking about?

Alan: The fact is that organized religions have always been used for the purpose of control from the most ancient times.

Jackie: Oh yes, we were talking about Pope John Paul I.

Alan: If you really want to find mystery religion, you should look into the established churches because that's where it all began.

Jackie: You know the word pagan? Well, I looked it up one day. I got a whole bunch of dictionaries here and every time Chuck found one in an old bookstore from all different areas and I look up the word pagan in every single one of them, including 1828 whatever. Pagan, the word is connected with the word heathen and that is the person of the heath. Pagan really means rural folks, but what the dictionary said is that they were people who did not come into the organized church, the doctrine and the dogma of the church; and Alan, do you know that almost every single one of them, one of the definitions of a pagan was a gentile? Now that kind of confused me. Can you explain that?

Alan: Sure. All ancient peoples had meaning in life. They had meaning from life. They lived the meaning of life and it didn't matter really where their source of inspiration came from. They lived their life and life has to be meaningful. If you take away the meaningfulness of life, then you have robots and slaves and of course the organized religions were intended and set up to do exactly that. The ancient people had special sacred spots all over the world and it meant something to them. That's all important you see.

Jackie: Yes and it wasn't necessarily evil, was it, Alan?

Alan: No, not in the least. In fact, there was far less bloodletting with the so-called Pagani as there has been with established religion. Established religion has been a horror show.

Jackie: Alan, what about the people now, I guess I have thought of them as pagans who sacrificed their children? Like I remember reading in Hawaii they throw their babies into the ocean sacrificing them to the gods. Some of them when they built a building, the four corners, before they put those posts in an infant was thrown in there; did that come from the priesthood?

Alan: It came from Babylon. In fact, the archaeologists today who've worked steadily what was Babylon right into Jerusalem have found no sign of a Jehovah type worship. What they have found is that the same exact system of Babylon, where you kill children and often put them in an urn and you put them on each four corners to protect the inhabitants. All this rubbish and nonsense about a great Judaic people who worshipped this Jehovah is absolute rubbish. The truth is in the earth. The proof is there buried in the earth and in fact you can't tell Judaism apart from the Phoenicians who also did the same thing of killing first-born children and burying them in the four corners of the structure. You see in the ancient times, even in Rome, the emperor himself, to open up land for building purposes he would make the crossroads with the plows and he would plow an exact square and everywhere--

Jackie: Who did this?

Alan: The old Caesars.

Jackie: The Caesars themselves?

Alan: Yes. That was the law that they had to plow a square part of the land, with a plow, and wherever any structure went up then a human sacrifice was given so that the mother goddess would not be offended. That was their belief system and that was rampant – that same belief system is exactly the same as Babylon and Jerusalem and on and on you go.

Jackie: This Caesar, are you speaking of in Rome?

Alan: In Rome and their empire, wherever their empire extended to, it was the same system because there is only one mystery religion.

Jackie: You mean the Romans were doing baby sacrifices?

Alan: Yes and even today in the land of the so-called Phoenicians, which was the Holy Land basically-- Jackie: Okay. Tell me where that was?

Alan: That was the Holy Land. That was Jerusalem and round about Jerusalem.

Jackie: That was Phoenicia, huh?

Alan: Yes and the Greeks called the land of that area Phoenicia. South of them was the Edomites, but that land itself was the Phoenicians.

Jackie: Aren't the Edomites the ones the Jews supposedly are supposed to get rid of?

Alan: Well, you'll find they were not too happy with anybody else. Everybody was their enemy basically. However, what you find with the Phoenicians, and this is the key to it all, it's an economic system and the Phoenicians were the ones who lived in that area who always created an artificial island and that was their capital and from there they would spread their system of commerce all over the ancient world.

Jackie: You mean somewhere out in the ocean they would create an island?

Alan: Yes, a man-made island.

Jackie: How do you do that, Alan?

Alan: They poured millions and billions of tons of soil and stone and so on and then they built their island.

Jackie: In other words, sort of like a shoal or something that was already fairly not deep, fairly shallow?

Alan: That's what they did and they built it off of Joppa [Jaffa, Yafo] off the coast of Israel in the Mediterranean Sea and that was their capital. Then they moved eventually to Venice. Venice is a play on Phoenician – Venetian, Phoenician, same thing – and that was their capital of the world; Venice itself again was created by man, by the creation of an artificial city, and so the MO [modus operandi] you can trace down through history wherever they go.

Jackie: Yes and this gets so confusing because I read a fairly long piece about Venice. I think it was Venice where the Jesuits were supposed to be so powerful. Is that so, was it Venice?

Alan: They were definitely powerful because the Jesuits traveled even to ancient Japan. They created the warrior caste of Japan. It wasn't natural to that country. They actually gave them the Warrior Caste and they've done it wherever they've gone. If you say-- Jackie: Phoenician and Venetian.

Alan: It's the same thing, and the Phoenix bird dies every 500 years and it's recreated in its own image.

Jackie: And that would be a takeoff on the Phoenicians?

Alan: That's right. You'll find if you say "Jesus" and then take it into the French, you have "Je Suis," I Am. Jesuit is Je Suis, same thing, "I am." The whole thing is the mystery religion. All of it is the mystery religion.

Jackie: Now I have read that the one we know as Jesus but wasn't really his name.

Alan: Jesus is a Greek term because the initial writers of the gospel wrote primarily in Greek and they had no problem by saying 'Son of Zeus,' (Zeus, Iesus), because they were familiar with the son of Zeus, Hesus. The other name is Apollo of course and Jesus is the sun. He is the sun. If you look at the King James Bible and you get a proper King James Bible--

Jackie: You mean like the original one?

Alan: Yes. You'll find that the accolades they give to King James says "you are the SUN." King James is the SUN and then talks about the late queen Elizabeth I who is the Eastern Star. That's where the Eastern Star Lodge comes from. That's in all the original King James Bibles.

Jackie: All Masonic.

Alan: All Masonic. These guys have literally pulled the wool over everyone's eyes for thousands of years. You look at all the churches, they have a spire, which is the phallic symbol going right back to Egypt and it's called ON. The phallic symbol is called ON. It's in the English language today. We use ON for an erection; and you walk through the phallic symbol into the box and you walk through the vulva. That's why you have what they call a "Norman Arch," and you walk through it into the church into the box and it always faces to the East where the sun comes up.

Jackie: Is this in the Catholic Church mostly?

Alan: It's in all Christian churches.

Jackie: Are you saying then that all Christian churches that the entrance faces east?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Gosh, I never noticed that, Alan.

Alan: And the priest gets dressed up in his robe, which is a female dress, because he portrays the hermaphrodite, male and female in one, because in the beginning God created man and woman; "in his perfect image created them both," which means (and this is in the Talmud) that the god they're talking about is a hermaphrodite. It's male and female in one. They worship on Saturn's day, which is Saturday, and that's why they wear the black robe. When they wear the black robe they are also ultimate law. They're all law.

Jackie: Is that what the black robe means?

Alan: That's what it means. It's the law. That's why judges wear the black robe. They are the law. They are Saturn.

When they sit on that bench above the people and there's a bar in the way, they belong to the bar, they are speaking as gods. They are gods in the courtroom.

Jackie: In the courtroom. Well, how does law connect with black?

Alan: Again it's the ancient system that predated Judaism and all the rest of them.

Jackie: You mean that's what they did was wore black?

Alan: Yes and when they brought even Hebrews in for trial, this is how they said it: they held them by the "short and curlies." They held them by the you-know-what.

Jackie: The pubic hair?

Alan: By the B-A-L-L-S and if you lied they crushed it. The crushed your "manhood" and that's where the "short and curlies" comes from. This is all history. It is recorded history and we've been fooled for such a long, long time with all this nonsense that we have not allowed ourselves to live. These guys who run this system know exactly where they're taking us and what they're taking us to and they have decided that they want to eradicate that part of the mind, the brain, which allows you to think of yourself as an individual.

Jackie: Okay. What part of the brain is that?

Alan: It's your higher survival centers. Arthur Koestler worked for the United Nations. He wrote about it. He said we will have to lobotomize that part of the brain that gives them their individuality because they won't need it anymore since the state will be making all their decisions for them.

Jackie: Are we talking about in the pituitary area? Like a frontal lobotomy?

Alan: It includes that. They've been right up front with their agenda.

Jackie: Alan, was it Arthur Koestler who wrote--

Alan: "The Thirteenth Tribe."

Jackie: I know "The Thirteenth Tribe," but what about "The Ghost in the Machine?"

Alan: "The Ghost in the Machine" is what they refer to for your ability to know yourself as a distinct personality.

Jackie: Wasn't that a book?

Alan: "The Ghost in the Machine" was a book, yes.

Jackie: Was it Arthur Koestler who wrote that?

Alan: Yes. He worked for the United Nations on a way to eradicate what they called "a problem of individuality."

Jackie: So you know what had just occurred to me? These psychotropic drugs that they are putting everybody on, do you think that does something with that frontal lobe of the brain? Do you think that's the way of chemically lobotomizing people, Alan?

Alan: They are doing that. That's what the spraying in the sky is all about.

Jackie: Well yes, but besides the spraying in the sky, the psychotropic drugs that they're putting so many people on and so many children. Do you think that that is sort of like a chemical – I mean they actually get zombie-like in a sense.

Alan: When you put them on the drugs they've been put on, it actually shrinks the brain and what they're doing is eliminating all those people with leadership abilities who can convey what they understand and know and have learned to other people. They're eliminating them before they become a problem and this is not fantasia. It's been written about by the very people involved. It's just that no one reads these books.

Jackie: So "The Ghost in the Machine" would be the actual soul or spirit of the individual?

Alan: It's everything that makes you who you are. That's what they mean and they're doing it.

Jackie: I've always meant to get that book and I've never done it.

Alan: Arthur Koestler was quite candid about it. He believes in it of course. He worked for Stalin and then he came over to the University of New York and taught the same theories there.

Jackie: Koestler was a Russian Jew?

Alan: Yes and then he also spent the rest of his life working on methods to eradicate that part of the brain that makes you who you are; an individual.

Jackie: You know what just occurred to me, that people who live in cities that every opportunity that they get to leave the city and find a place, Alan, that is where the birds sing and the crickets – there aren't too many crickets around anymore that I know of, but the little peeper frogs and the whippoorwills and the morning doves and the mocking birds and just to get out and away from the artificiality of the city. When I had my business in Springfield, Illinois, I actually lived 50 miles from work but it was sub-development you know down the highway and off the highway and into from what they call the hard road and a beautiful 360 acres of woods and a little lake and to me it was just like heaven to be able to escape there, but there were people in Springfield when they had a long weekend they would go to St. Louis and I would go why are you going to St. Louis? Well, they're going to go to a game and I go why don't you go camping someplace? It just amazed me the people who already lived in the city wanted to go to a bigger city for a vacation and I really mean this folks. I truly mean this from the bottom of my heart, if you haven't done it, take a vacation. Take a weekend. Take your children, take yourselves. Get the hell out of the city and find a place where water runs, a little brook, a stream, a river, but go someplace where there aren't telephones. Buy a tent and go camping. Alan, how else are people ever going to be able to get in touch with themselves?

Alan: Well, their time is running out because the agenda is there. It's ongoing very quickly now and you will find that those who are dead already, that they are dead in the world and the few who are truly awake are often caught up in the confusion. There are very few people who are truly awake who've broken through all the confusion, but the agenda is going on right now. Seti, the Egyptian pharaoh Seti, was the one who put into effect the long-range plans to lobotomize the public and that's why you have "City."

Jackie: Alan, we're out of time. We're out of our hour, let me put it that way. Ladies and gentlemen, we'll be back with you Monday. Alan, thank you for being here.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
April 19, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for being here tonight. This is Tuesday. It is the 19th of April in the year 2005 and I hope that many of you are having a beautiful and delightful day as we've been having here in Millerton, Pennsylvania.

Our spiritual message this evening is from John 18. We do this a lot, yes. In verse 37 when Jesus was having a conversation with Pontius Pilate and Pilate asked him "are you a king" and Jesus said, "You say that I am a king. To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world that I should bear witness unto the truth. Everyone that is of the truth hears my voice."

And that's pretty cut and dried. Alan Watt, thank you for being here tonight with us again.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: You know it is very difficult when you're in a conversation that seems to be just rolling and moving fluidly, it's difficult to pick it up but I wrote down the words religiosity versus spirituality.

Alan: We know that religion means to "rebind" or to "retie" and since most religions, all religions really, have come from preexisting religions, the elite that rule them simply updated them and called them something else and rebound the people or retied the people to the new.

Jackie: Did you say it was the word ligio or legio?

Alan: Legio, yes.

Jackie: It's a Latin word meaning to bind?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: So RE-LIGION to rebind? In other words, the same game just under a new name?

Alan: Yes, so that's what religion is and religion also has always been used, with the hierarchy at the top symbolizing the god or the heavenly; and then all of his helpers and priests down to the lowest priest; and then all about them are the stars, the commoners, you see, the people, the masses; and so it was reconstruction of that which is above and bringing it below, as the Masons say, and that's what religion was made to do. That's why in fact they use the solar symbols in all of their religions including Christianity.

Now spirituality is a different thing all together. Without spirituality or humankind's natural feeling for knowledge that there's something much bigger working things out there and it's much, much bigger than themselves or any humans, the ones that rule this earthy plane use that need and then pervert it into their own use by dominating the people, often by terrifying them with visions of Hades for the Greeks and Hell eventually for the western Christians and sin of course, which is a big thing. Religion itself is used to dominate and control the public to keep a minority in absolute wealth and power and it hasn't changed today.

Jackie: Sometimes maybe a conversation like this, people who – I've talked to a couple of our listeners recently and we got into this conversation about whether or not we're a "Christian" and I said I thought I always was but I realize now I'm not. I never was. Not in the way that the "religion" of Christianity teaches or demands that we believe and yet it takes nothing away from what true Christianity could have been if it wasn't made into a religion.

Alan: That's right. You see, the Christianity in the Gospels is simply eternal truths. Eternal truth never changes. It's eternal. It can't mean something different in a different century or in a different millennium. These are eternal truths and obviously if people followed the eternal truths, without priesthoods or ministers, you would not have this economic system which we're all slaves to, run by the money men and the power brokers and the war makers. It could not exist if people could use their own natural humanity to each other and help each other out, and certainly it would also mean that you wouldn't have this high-tech society either. All the toys would be gone but we've been taught to equate progress--

Jackie: What do you mean all the toys would be gone, Alan?

Alan: All the toys that we take for granted today which we were told that would fulfill us basically. Every ad on television tells you to buy this latest gadget and you'll suddenly be smiling, and of course that doesn't happen. However, the big boys who run this system and who have a plan to conquer the whole planet and alter the planet through science, including everybody on the planet, they've conditioned the public to believe that all these toys are good for us; and of course the whole meaning of the allegory of Eden. Eden was the natural state. That's what it meant, the natural state of being; and once you leave the natural state of being, then you're on a road to using science to create something better (what you think is better), and yet it creates a dominant elite who control the system and who are in the process now of conditioning the public to accept chips in their head.

Jackie: You know I just pulled up some email and there was an article, I don't know who wrote it, about that within the next decade 75 percent of the people could be chipped and here are the ways that it could happen. First of all, all school children would have to be chipped. That's for their own good and if you're in the military you have to be chipped and if you're on social security or any type of government social programs you'd have to be chipped, you know for identification. If you work for a private company that has government contracts you'd have to be chipped; and I'm telling you, Alan, when you read this you see how actually, I'm afraid to say this, but how easily they could get people to buy in to doing this.

Alan: When they had the World Meeting of the geneticists and biologists and the electronics technicians who worked on the active chips at the Loyola University meeting two or three years ago, anybody who gets a hold of that should go through it carefully because all the top scientists were there and some of the politicians were there. It was headed off by Newt Gingrich and the U.S. Department of Commerce paid for it and yet the public weren't even told about it.

Jackie: Was this the one where you said that they said that they could combine human cells with computers?

Alan: Yes. I think it was Sony Corporation and even in some magazines and newspapers over the last few years Sony had created a form of protoplasm, human tissue in other words, combined it with chips and found that they could transmit through both without any problem. Now what it enables them to do is to create a chip, which they can, and this was all discussed at the Loyola University meeting, they have created the chip and part protoplasm will be inserted they said – now these guys didn't say we'd like to. They said this will be inserted in each individual's head.

Jackie: In the brain someplace?

Alan: In the brain and it will interface with the main cortex and it would be able to transmit to every part of your brain; make any part of your body move, for instance, and they said also that it will be run by a regional computer. There will be regional computers in every region, which will operate each person's mind for them, and one of them said--

Jackie: And I suppose that would be by programming, so they could take literally let's say a certain group of people and program them to be one way. They could let's say select out an individual and program that individual to do certain things?

Alan: Yes, specialized tasks and-- Jackie: I mean, Alan, could they go so far as to – I suppose this is speculation, but to have people either commit homicides or suicide?

Alan: Oh, absolutely. In fact one of the top scientists there said, "This will be the end of individuality as we have known it." He said, "It will no longer be possible for the individual to even perceive of themselves as being an individual." He said, "It will be more like the hive."

Jackie: That's pretty arrogant. Then when you look at just that thing I just shared with you all about the different reasons where they could justify and people would go along with it because their jobs are involved. It's the way they "make a living," that they would say okay, I have to do this.

Alan: The thing is they went through that whole scenario in fact at the Loyola University meeting the different techniques they would get the public to take the chip. They gave the time limit to have everybody chipped and they want a good majority to be chipped by the year 2012 and all of them to be chipped by the year 2019. They said that every kindergarten school, every novel writer would be given grants, film producers and so on, would be given grants to write these things into their scripts to make the children want them. Already they've churned out movies since that meeting about brain chips and showing you all the advantages they want you to believe you'll have, where you could be downloaded with information without having to study.

Jackie: You know probably one of the ways that they'll use it first, to give that first impression of how miraculous this is. A person who may be paralyzed and they could make this person be able to get up and walk and move, and people would be gasping in awe at this wonderful and marvelous invention.

Alan: It's so easy to do but especially when they convince youngsters that they're going to be the guy Neo on the Matrix, "I need a program right now for whatever, a helicopter," and it just programs the pilot's instructions right into your head. Of course, it won't be like that at all because, as they've said, the purpose is to eliminate individuality from the public. They said in their heads, because they are all linked to central computers, you'll hear vague whisperings of other people's thoughts and it will be more like the hive they said than a system of humanity. What it is actually is the Borg in the Star Trek series.

Jackie: Which one is the Borg?

Alan: The Borg is the cyborg type human with the implant and the brain chip run by a central computer.

Jackie: He's not one with the funny glasses?

Alan: Yes, they can have one eye as infrared or something, but that's the Borg are and they're laughing in our face because the Borg means "original Bee," you see.

Jackie: The original Bee. Now you're saying that the word Borg itself means the original Bee?

Alan: The original Bee and even in the Star Trek series the Borg craft or space ship is called the Hive. They put it all in front of our face through fiction, which programs us subliminally to be familiar with the idea, vaguely familiar with it, and we don't use our censor part of our brain when we're being entertained, so we don't critically analyze the outcome. When they present the actual thing to us, because it's vaguely familiar, we tend to go along with it; and that's called predictive programming from Tavistock Institute in England. However, these scientists did not hope to do anything. They said what they were going to do, so they've been given authority from the higher sources to do this and so that's where science and leaving Eden, which is the natural state, that's where it would always take you: to the same non-existence you might say.

Jackie: Yes. You could easily hear something like this and realize that the possibility is great that they could be successful and it would be real easy to say well I'll be out of there by then, but you think about all of the children, Alan.

Alan: I know and it's literally the end of human consciousness.

Jackie: Well, you know what? They're not going to be successful.

Alan: I know because there will be people who will resist taking it. Many will take it believing all the propaganda they're given that it's going to enhance them and so on, but once that main switch is thrown one day they'll all turn into little robots and that is the function of it. When you go back to some of the elite's writings in the past, such as "The Next Million Years" by Charles Galton Darwin, Darwin's grandson who was a physicist, he talked about this. He says we must get rid of the excess commoners on the planet and he says those that we retain we must eliminate that part of their brain which gives them their individuality, because it's individuality which gives problems to the elite you see. It's that resistance spark within the individual which makes him resist ultimate powers, so they want to get rid of that and then they'll have their utopia.

However, Darwin himself said, "we, however, being the dominant minority, must retain our survival instincts and therefore we will be left unaltered." In other words, it will destroy our individual survival instincts and Arthur Koestler, who worked on the same programs for the United Nations, in his book "The Ghost in the Machine" in the last chapter it says the exact same thing. "We must eliminate individuality from the average person. However, we, the dominant minority, must retain our survival instincts and therefore will remain unaltered." This has been along worked out plan. It's what they call utopia you see.

Jackie: But they say that they're the dominant minority.

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: But really aren't they minions?

Alan: They're the lower minions and if you go back as far as the plans given out by Plato in "The Republic" for this perfect world state of theirs, Plato talked about the high aristocracy being called 'The Guardians' and the guardians would be allowed to bring in some helpers from the lower class, who may see themselves as guardians but actually would not be, so they'd be a higher helper. Then if we jump from there to Zbigniew Brzezinski's book "Between Two Ages" and "The Technetronic Era," he goes into the same things about controlling each individual electronically, while the dominate elite will remain unaltered.

Jackie: You know what I think? When we succumb to the lies of organized religion we are losing our individuality, Alan.

Alan: That was the first attempt. You see the old method of controlling everyone was to have them all conditioned in the same way. That's a form of destroying individuality and that's why they had the mass for the masses.

Jackie: For example, as you talk sometimes I write down a word or a thought and this is going back in our conversation, but when you were talking about religion and that's exactly what they were meant to do, I wrote down the word contradiction and the word slavery, because for example in the gospel Jesus says very simply to do unto others or love your God with all you heart, mind, soul and strength. Love your neighbor as yourself. Well now anybody who calls themselves "a Christian" and then goes ahead and says it's okay to have slaves. It's okay, it's in the good book, God allowed it. Well, right there, Alan, I don't mean to say that in such a condescending derogatory way either, but right there when you see an absolute contradiction and you will accept both of them as true because it's in the "good book," Alan, you've lost your individuality or at least you're losing it. I don't care how strict a food regime a person follows and doesn't eat ham and goes through all the food stuff and that makes them an individual. No, it doesn't. It makes them different than other people but it certainly doesn't make them an individual.

Alan: No, and of course if you believe in the contradictions then you have doublethink as always there – the ability to hold two opposing opinions on the same topic in your head at the same time.

Jackie: That's true, both of them being true.

Alan: Of course, that again is like a robot that's going crazy because it's got conflicting dialogue.

Jackie: We have a call coming in. Shall we take it?

Alan: Sure.

Jackie: Hello. You're on the air.

Storm: I have a question for your guest.

Jackie: Sure. Who's calling?

Storm: Storm from New York. You're first name again, I'm sorry.

Jackie: It's Alan Watt.

Storm: All right, Alan. Here's what I want to ask you. I'm sure you're aware they changed the $20 bill twice. That's what I was planning on getting to in a minute. You're aware of the $20 bills.

Jackie: Yes he is.

Storm: Okay. There are two. They made one when Clinton was in office and then they redesigned it again. You know the money is counterfeit anyway but this is the point to cut to the chase. If you were to take your thumb and your back finger and press it over the left eye area of the face that was Grant's or--

Jackie: Your thumb or your what?

Storm: I say your middle finger. You know the middle finger that let's say people in college pick up the middle finger and give the finger to you. That finger and your thumb and you press – put the middle finger in the back, put your thumb in the front or vice versa and press part over a new $20 bill the one that has the different colors on it because there's two different versions you will feel the microchip that is over the left eye. And they don't have them on the 10s and they don't have it on the 5 and they don't have it on the 1--

Jackie: But it's on the 20.

Storm: On the 50 and possibly the new 100.

Jackie: So what was your question?

Storm: I'm asking if he has ever heard of that because if you were to get one but it has to be the one that the newest ones that look like they have cooking grease on them. They look even dirtier looking than the first new 20 or 50. They have a chip in it. You can feel when you press on the right eye.

Jackie: Okay, we heard that.

Storm: Right. You don't feel it. What they use that for is – what they do is if you are taking money outside the country or really can't take money outside--

Jackie: Storm, what you're talking about I believe most of our listeners and of course Alan is aware of. In other words -

Storm: Most people don't have the slightest idea.

Jackie: Okay, thank you Storm. Okay Alan, any comments there?

Alan: They've been using technology on the public very quietly for many, many years and they began to actually test active chips embedded in people in the 1960's and releasing the people who had no knowledge of these chips and then they followed them down through their lives and caused them to do odd things at times and followed up how they handled their incidences.

Jackie: But you're not saying that since, did you say the 1960's, that they were able to mesh – in other words, that technology that you were telling us about, that they're talking about, that they can now do, that they've been doing?

Alan: They've actually been doing but the chip that they implanted then was done on lots of servicemen who had minor operations while in the service and then released.

Jackie: And how do you know this Alan?

Alan: Because when you read the psychiatric reports from Britain for instance you find that schizophrenia has specific signs and symptoms and generally they were also a religious nature. Suddenly about 1960, long before computers, even the word computer became common to the people, they had patients suddenly coming in diagnosed as schizophrenia, having hallucinations and believing that they had a chip in their spine that was controlling them. The one thing they all had in common was they'd all had minor operations while in the military and that was hushed up.

Jackie: Now this was actually in a medical report, in a psychiatric report?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Did they allude to the fact that there was a chip in these people?

Alan: Of course they didn't and the psychiatrists didn't because the head psychiatrist would obviously be in the know. They had to be in the know but the thing was this was experimental models you might say and they could then treat this person, convince them that they had schizophrenia and give them medication, then release them back into society and then activate the chip again and make them do strange things. They have been definitely testing them but this new chip that they claim that they have--

Jackie: Excuse me. Did the medical report, the psychiatric report also report that each one of them had had surgery while they were in the military?

Alan: Yes, because they always have their backgrounds in all previous medical records. Now the thing is too, when you tie it in with the CIA's UFO deception, which they also plan to unleash on the public, and suddenly you have people claiming they've got chips in their hands or in their nasal passages, in their sinuses. Then you find out there are some surgeons who are taking these things out; they're removing them and they can't explain exactly what they are because they tend to almost move when you try to move them when you pick them up. They have this protoplasmic coating on them. Once again, I'm convinced it's the authorities that have been doing this, since it's the authorities who admitted they wanted to do it to the whole planet. When then discussed this at the Loyola University meetings, the scientists never said they would like to test this out. It was all taken a priori that they obviously had been tested out and worked. They said their only problem was now to convince the public to accept it and that's how far ahead they are.

Jackie: I remember you saying a long time ago that when they talk about a technology that they just discovered, they've had it for a long time; and what you're saying falls in line with that. We have to take our break. Alan Watt is our guest tonight and as usual the conversation it gets intense, Alan, is what it does and I wasn't – when you were talking about the people who came in that had schizophrenia and thought that they had chips—I'll hold that question. Hi, you're on the air.

Joe: Hello.

Jackie: Yes.

Joe: It's Joe.

Jackie: Hi Joe. Speak up, honey.

Joe: Can you hear me now?

Jackie: Heck yes, that's great.

Joe: You know talking about those implanted chips, I was listening to all this stuff today on the Oklahoma City bombing and that brought back from my mind that Timothy McVeigh always swore he had a chip in his buttocks.

Jackie: In his hip. He did, didn't he, Joe?

Joe: Yes, he always did and that guy William Cooper, you know that was killed and murdered in Arizona, he said that he run into him and somebody else. Actually I can't remember who the other guy was, but anyway they got into a conversation and McVeigh wanted him to feel it because he acted like well I know you don't believe me--

Jackie: Who? Cooper said he ran into McVeigh?

Joe: Yes. He said he run into him at a gun shop in [Sholoh] or whatever it was that he lived and he just said that McVeigh – a was a couple of Mid-East, what do you call them, an Arab looking fellow was with him and they – of course Cooper was well known and they had a real nice conversation.

Jackie: Speak up, Joe, please.

Joe: According to Cooper, McVeigh tried to get him to feel it and Cooper said I didn't want to and so they've been around. Nothing surprises me what they do, but anyway I just thought that was revealing.

Jackie: It sure does and that was 10 years ago. Okay Joe, thanks for your call. Yes he did, didn't he, Alan?

Alan: It was in the newspapers here that McVeigh complained that he did have one in that region.

Jackie: Yes, well it was in the newspapers here too and it was on the news.

Alan: It showed a clip of McVeigh in Gulf War I personally escorting Schwarzkopf around some of the bases.

Jackie: Oh, you're kidding?

Alan: No, and so he was in Special Forces. Andy [Ramage] who was in Special Forces in Britain in the Special Air Service, the SAS, wrote a book after Gulf War I talking about his own men being chipped under the eyebrow, so they definitely got chipped for Special Forces.

Jackie: And that was back in the '60's, Alan. Oh, I'm sorry. I was thinking of Vietnam.

Alan: The '90's. They certainly did a lot of experimenting in Vietnam; if anyone's ever seen "Jacob's Ladder" it's worth going to see.

Jackie: "Jacob's Ladder?"

Alan: Yes, the movie.

Jackie: What is it?

Alan: It's about some of the experiences of certain individuals who were tested with different things during the Vietnam era, where they actually thought they were in Vietnam but they were being tested elsewhere with different drugs and so on and actually killing each other. It's an interesting movie.

Jackie: "Jacob's Ladder" and they made a movie about this, and people will look at it and because it's a movie they won't believe that it's true.

Alan: They were trying to get the soldiers to become so primitively aggressive that they would kill everything and be ferocious, and they used U.S. troops and created two different sections and actually set them against each other. Then they dissected the people, the guys' brains even, to see what physical effect had done damage-wise to the brain.

Jackie: Did they say it had done damage?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: This is a little bit off the beaten path, in the same church a different pew, speaking of our military personnel. I hate saying that. The young men and women in America who go into wars. Lilly had heard that we know that they're bringing the recruiters right into the schools today, Alan, and she had heard and is going to try and do some research on it to make sure whether it is accurate or not that they're actually signing them up 14 years and older. Now of course somehow – you know that's a contractual agreement. They're not legally bound unless they really change the laws, that if you contract 12 and up or something that the contract is valid. But I wanted to say this for the sake of our listeners, for those of you who have children or know your friends' children, your relatives, try to check into it and see if this is happening and warn them not to allow their child to do that because it isn't the law anyway.

Alan: It's quite amazing that American psychiatry will protect children from pedophiles, the reason being that you cannot have consensual sex from a child under the age of I think it's 16 because they're too immature to make truly rational decisions, and yet they're trying to get them into the military where they can go and get killed at a younger age than that.

Jackie: Well, I know this is maybe a poor comparison or an example, but when you think about it there are some states now that don't even allow the young people to have driver's licenses until they're 18, and of course you could not go into a tavern and have a beer or have a glass of wine at dinner until you're 21 years old, but you can go in at the age of 17 and begin to kill and die in defense of the world order.

Alan: That's the reason for it because the military – which is a Masonic Order, by the way. Everything in the military is purely masonry, all the symbols and so on. It actually is a form of conditioning the mind and drilling out the individuality and creating the mass man, who will do what he'd told, the nearest thing to a robot; and children can't imagine themselves dying you see. Death is a strange thing to them. It happens to other people and they're always old and they're brought up with movies where the heroes never get killed because the bad guys can never shoot straight and all these movies have happy endings for the guys. They've been brought up purposely to do the killing and be slaughtered because older and wiser men wouldn't join the military you see. They know the political scams. They've lived and they understand things but youngsters don't and that's why the military always recruits the young for their wars and it's well understood as a science.

Jackie: And of course their lack of experience, meaning lack of wisdom really, their minds would be so malleable. They would be so susceptible to the brainwashing.

Alan: Sure. They go from being a nobody to getting this uniform and having all this accolade and you feel so proud of yourself, you see. This is how they do it and of course it's a different story if you come back wounded, it's your tough luck basically; but all these children think well somebody else might get it, but it won't be me. They can't imagine death.

Jackie: There's also that side of it that literally has turned them into barbarians, where it appears that many of them are killing with glee.

Alan: Yes they are.

Jackie: And they're celebrating it. They're videotaping it. They are so many reports and even the personally made videos that are being shown on, being available on the internet. I believe that in the past for the most part those who had to engage in war, the majority of them moaned or I should say mourned even when they had to shoot a so-called enemy and they grieved and they were guilty, but today it's different, isn't it, Alan?

Alan: Yes. They've been trained on military techniques on video games.

Jackie: Yes. Hi, you're on the air.

Lilly: Hi. It's me, Lilly. I sent you two emails about that, I found it under Google. If you put in Google search recruiting 14 year olds and I sent this to you anyway.

Jackie: All right, thank you honey.

Lilly: The thing is the parents have to sign in for it but the children are like 14 year old to 17 year old and then the parents get hounded by the children that please, please, please let me join up and then the parents or if they are in poor financial condition they then start getting money from the time they sign up from their future pay. Once they turn 18 then their future pay is deducted from what they would be getting in the future. It's something in the No Child Left Behind Act that's been [inaudible] before they get younger. But anyway, if you put it into Google you'll find it, recruiting 14 year olds.

Jackie: And the section of the No Child Left Behind Act, Lilly, can you find that and email it to me?

Lilly: I didn't get it down. It's in the email I sent you.

Jackie: Okay honey, thank you.

Lilly: The first email.

Jackie: Thank you, Lil. Did you get that, Alan?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: So they'll have the parents sign them up and you know I would really love to see that recruitment form because wouldn't you love to see what they're doing or saying or promising for the parents to actually register their 14-year old child and it could be a boy or a girl. Hello, you're on the air.

Myron: Good evening, Mrs. Patru and Mr. Watt.

Jackie: Hi.

Myron: Yes. I have a question for Mr. Watt. My name is Myron, I'm calling from Georgia. I'd like to ask Mr. Watt a question. I'd like to know if he knows someone by the name of Baron von Knigge? He was a partner with Adam Weishaupt in the Order of the Illuminati back in the 1700's and I was just wondering if Mr. Watt has any knowledge of research on this gentleman.

Jackie: Okay, and Myron, you have to hang up to hear the answer.

Myron: I will. Thank you. Have a good night.

Jackie: You too. Bye bye. Okay, Alan.

Alan: I know the name and I know that of course the Illuminati of Weishaupt did not originate with Weishaupt. It was simply the illuminati popping its head up in a period in time. That was all, but around Weishaupt, he had some scientists and so on who were working on human behavior and studying it intensely, long before Freud or any of these boys were around.

Jackie: And that Baron von Knigge.

Alan: He was one of them. What's interesting too is that when you read what Weishaupt claims, he said that at the end stage they would unleash the nihilists and the atheists.

Jackie: He said what, Alan?

Alan: That they would unleash the nihilists and the atheists in the biggest war for the world; and of course that was echoed by Lenin and before him [Buckarin] and it was also mentioned by Marx at one point. It was all the illuminati and what they've done is they've created the very generation of dumbed-down children. They've brought them up on violence and video games. The state has given them their values, not their parents, and they are unleashing the nihilists and the atheists and that's why they're over in Iraq killing with glee.

Jackie: Yes. We have a caller here. Hi, caller you're on the air.

Jeff: Hello.

Jackie: Oh, hi Jeff.

Jeff: How you doing?

Jackie: Fine.

Jeff: There is, from what I understand, a $16,000 bonus for anybody who enlists today. Sounds like selling your soul to the devil, doesn't it?

Jackie: You mean they get the $16,000 upfront?

Jeff: Yes and then they'll call when they're needed.

Jackie: Well that would certainly seal a contract, wouldn't it?

Jeff: Yes.

Jackie: If a parent was signing for minor – okay Jeff, did you hear that on the news or what?

Jeff: No. From a soldier.

Jackie: Okay, thanks. Anything else, Jeff?

Jeff: No. The reception is really terrible down here.

Jackie: Oh is it? I'm sorry to hear that. Okay thanks. Bye. Did you hear that, Alan?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: $16,000 bonus.

Alan: Just to finish off on Weishaupt, now most people know that the Bavarian authorities raided his lodges. Their lodges by the way went into Germany and they were called the Beenan Lodge or the Order of Bees and the symbol is the beehive, which is the same symbol George Washington in his Masonic regalia has down in the bottom of his painting. Anyway, Weishaupt when he was chased out he got refuge in the area of Germany of Saxe-Coburg. Now Saxe-Coburg is the old house of the Saxe-Coburg-Gotha royal family of Britain today; so why would the royal family not only give Adam Weishaupt refuge, they also gave him a lifelong pension and that's recorded history too. You see they're all tied in together. Weishaupt wasn't an independent agent.

Jackie: Did you say Saxe-Coburg, like C-O-B-E-R-G?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: And Saxe would be SACHS?

Alan: It's S-A-X-E they spelled it there.

Jackie: Oh, S-A-X-E.

Alan: But it's the same as Sachs. It doesn't matter how it's spelled.

Jackie: Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

Alan: Yes and that literally was the royal family that George and all those boys came from.

Jackie: Oh, that was their relatives?

Alan: Yes. Weishaupt and these guys were agents of a much higher power, just as Lenin was. Getting back to this whole discussion, we are living in the times where spiritual values better start to emerge in the individual because the war is going on right now and it's slow at the moment and yet it's also making great strides psychologically to condition people to accept all technologies and all technologies are just so wonderful you see. It's called progress, but once this technology comes to full fruition and implementation it's the end of conscious thought, which means it's the end of the human race's ability to contact their own 'creator,' if you like, and people better think about that.

Jackie: Well, the implications of that are endless.

Alan: Absolutely.

Jackie: It just takes my mind out there. If that happens to an individual and they leave this dimension, the physical, with that seed so to speak, it comes back with them, Alan, and something has to happen. If we took it out there in I would have to say the negative. In other words, if they were successful you would have people being born into it – being born into it and never ever, ever questioning.

Alan: They wouldn't have the ability to even to think up a question. If you cannot be who you are as an individual and know you are separate, although amongst others, that will be gone totally. As they said, it will be more like the beehive than a natural society of humanity. This is an ancient goal and you can trace the beehive symbol not only back to Egypt but back to the ancient Minoans.

Jackie: Yes and you know what? Love would be non-existent.

Alan: You couldn't have love because you need individual human qualities and experiences in order to come to the ability to have love and to exercise it, and if you can't even experience the fact that you are a distinct individual, then you'll be more like as they say a bee in a hive with a job to do. You could have no abstract thought of your own, no abstract imagination or creative abilities. The brain would simply be the conduit for your programming which is coming through the air from some giant computer and if they want you to come in for adjustments you couldn't stop yourself.

Your legs would start walking towards wherever it is.

Jackie: That's right. There would be no – what you were just talking about. I've got this book "Family of Light" here and it reminded me of a short passage under the "Family of Dark," it was that chapter. It was talking about the beings who feed off harm to others are feeding their energy fields through a limited channel and this energy it says is not freely flowing through them, so when they access energy they want a lot of it and usually of a violent nature. Those who create harm to others are starved energetically. Why? Because they do not have love and do not feel connected and are shut off from living. The walking living dead is what you are without love and that is the truth, isn't it, Alan?

Alan: Oh, it is the truth and unfortunately the ones who feed as you say off hate and anger are in charge of the world.

Jackie: Oh boy and they keep creating it, don't they?

Alan: It's the only thing they can do.

Jackie: They do not resonate. That's another passage in that same chapter in the "Family of Dark," that if we refuse to live in fear, to live in hatred, anxiety, greed, all of that type of energy, but in love, in compassion, empathy, that they can't exist because they do not resonate to that vibration, that energy of love; they cannot exist in that atmosphere.

Alan: In fact, they can't exist in this very system which they have created without it. They can't exist at all. Technically, even physically, they are useless creatures in a natural civilization. They're totally impracticable as far as taking care of themselves or doing anything useful but they thrive on this system which they have created. The more useless they are physically the higher up the tree they are as our dominant minority.

Jackie: The dominant minority. Here's highlighted a couple of sentences that I thought was really beautiful along what we're talking about. It says: "You have equated power with material consumption, collection and hoarding. You admire people who have vast mansions, caches of gold, jewels and trinkets to dazzle and befuddle the public. Is this really wealth and power? The real power lies in knowing the meaning of the song that the birds sing to be synchronized and harmonized by the sounds of nature, the tree frogs, the insects, the whippoorwills, the calls of the morning dove and the mocking bird or the nightingale with its sweet sound at dusk." That is perfect, Alan, because that's where it is truly at.

Alan: As I say, if you go into the Amazon those people would be called primitive and backwards and so on, because we come from this system, but they get up in the morning and they live a full day everyday and life is completely full of meaning for them, without knowing what Freud said or Einstein or anyone else. They have complete meaning in their whole existence, and as far as being in touch with their spirituality, they're so content and in touch with it that they have no high blood pressure or psychiatrists or anything else. They don't need it.

Jackie: And they don't know that they have over-happiness disorder.

Alan: Yes, that's right. They're called an "arrested civilization" by the demons that run this world.

Jackie: Well, it always does come down to each and every one of us as an individual and it is true that is the journey that we take by ourselves, Alan.

Alan: We do.

Jackie: Nobody can take it for us and we cannot take it for anybody else. We're out of our hour and once again just thank you so much for being here.

Alan: It's been a pleasure.

Jackie: Sometimes it would be nice if we had two or three, wouldn't it, Alan?

Alan: Right.

Jackie: Ladies and gentlemen, we'll be back with you tomorrow night and thank you for being here and God bless you.
Good night, Alan.

Alan: Good night.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
April 20, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for being here with us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is Wednesday. It is the 20th of April in the year 2005.

Today is Adolph Hitler's birthday and it is also my daughter Nicole's birthday and I used to think that was pretty ashamed. I've told her since I've found out some different things about Adolph Hitler that she could have done worse having her birthday on that same date. I hope you had a nice day today, ladies and gentlemen. We are definitely going to be talking about Codex Alimentaria and just in case – I know that we have thrown that name around. We're not talking about it tonight, but Codex Alimentaria is a plan to harmonize all the food values, vitamins et cetera and to totally control – it has a lot to do with the nutrition that today we have available for at least reasonable prices. What they intend to do with this is to make it so that it would be illegal to have unless it's a real low, low potency, something that would probably do us very little good, unless it was prescribed, and the pharmaceuticals will begin formulating the vitamins. Do you like that?

We will be talking barring any unforeseen events. We will be talking about this on Monday. I spoke with a gentleman today at the suggestion of Mildred, a lovely lady, one of our listeners and a great supporter of this broadcast I must say, and I did speak with him today and he is going to be here with us Monday evening and tonight Alan Watt is with us. Alan? Do you ever think ahead while you're talking?

Alan: Yes, I do.

Jackie: That's what I just did. Tonight Alan Watt is with us. Because I didn't have anything prepared for our spiritual message, I'll do this. This is Mother Theresa. It is a writing by Mother Theresa.

"People are unreasonable, illogical, and self-centered. Forgive them anyway. If you're kind, people may accuse you of selfish, ulterior motives. Be kind anyway. If you are successful, you'll win some false friends and some rue enemies. Succeed anyway. If you're honest and frank, people may cheat you. Be honest anyway. What you spent years building someone could destroy overnight. Build anyway. If you find serenity and happiness, people may be jealous. Be happy anyway. The good you do today people will often forget tomorrow. Do good anyway. Give the world the best you have and it may never be enough. Give the world the best you have anyway. You see in the final analysis it's between you and Creator. It was never between you and them anyway."

Alan, thanks for being here tonight.

Alan: Yes. It's a pleasure.

Jackie: You know last night when I said your voice sounded low, Mildred called. Well, no, it wasn't. It was Melvin, another one of our listeners, and he just saying how much he appreciated your coming on with us and the information, but he said it was real low at first, or maybe it was Mildred that said that, and then suddenly your voice got nice and loud and clear and it isn't very loud right now.

Alan: It's not? How's that now?

Jackie: I don't know, talk.

Alan: Is that better now?

Jackie: Maybe a little bit better. But when it comes through clear it's really wonderful. I mean you are clear. It's just kind of muted I guess. Alan? When we talked today earlier and I asked are you okay because I sensed that something was bothering you and what you've began talking about is your concern about what is happening and how fast it's happening today and how important it is that as many people as possible understand, and so that's why we've decided not to have a break like until next Monday and to have you back tonight. So whatever it is in your heart and on your mind that you want to share with our listeners, please do so.

Alan: I keep telling people that the stage we're at now, this particular stage, is the final battle for human consciousness or the elimination of it. One or the other because the big boys are on a roll and they've written about it for centuries as to what they wanted to do and they are now in the process of doing it. It's like the drugs you were talking about or the vitamins. They're standardizing everything you see across the world.

Jackie: They call it harmonizing.

Alan: Yes and what it really is is standardizing and since they are knights and all the rest of it, a knight has a standard and they put that standard in the ground and everything around them from horizon to horizon is now under their standard or it's standardized.

Jackie: Would you like to expand on that? What did you say, knights of the standard?

Alan: All of these high Masonic knights, they use knightly emblems and words that we use commonly and we don't think even where they came from.

Jackie: But they do use the word harmonizing?

Alan: Oh yes.

Jackie: And you are right. They are standardizing it, aren't they?

Alan: They are and even when they were signing the North American agreement, this amalgamation, on the 23rd, as they were doing that, they quipped on the newsreel that even pizza from the north of Canada to the south of Mexico will come under these laws and all the ingredients will be standardized so you get the exact same pizza from north to south.

Jackie: Oh no. Are you serious?

Alan: I'm serious. I've got this on tape.

Jackie: You said that every pizza is going to taste the same?

Alan: Well, I don't know if it will taste the same but it certainly has the same ingredients in it and it will be the same with everything else. They're going the whole way to standardize everything. It's obsessional compulsion going to the tenth degree and eventually of course they plan to standardize each individual human being, because the chipping is only one part of the process and the next race of slaves that they want will be cloned and they'll be all standardized too. This is how – I wouldn't say insane because they have written about it copiously, but this is how diabolical this whole thing is and we're right on the brink now literally to retain consciousness and that essence which we call humanity is fighting for its life and most people don't even know it. As long as they can come home after working and turn on the television and watch their favorite programs to the very last day, as long the Seinfeld repeats come on or whatever they watch, they'll think everything is okay. This literally is a fight for--

Jackie: And then there are many of them who think it's wonderful what's happening because it's the sign that Jesus is coming back and he's going to have his kingdom. The seat of his kingdom will be Jerusalem, and my gosh, Alan, there are so many people that actually believe that it's wonderful what's happening because it is that time. Now if a person would read the Protocols and hear what the plan was, regardless who the heck's plan it was, it was laid out this perfectly a hundred years ago. I mean I do understand and our listeners I'm sure get it that it isn't a hundred year old plan. I mean actually in writing how they're going to do it and when you read the Protocols it's right on target and they say that Jerusalem will be their headquarters and their king despot of the blood of Zion will have his quarters there and he will be the pope of the world. Then we find out that Rome has evidentially made plans, and I didn't know this, Alan, to actually move the Vatican to Jerusalem. So do you think a whole bunch of Catholic "Christians" will be cheering and say "look, it's the end, it's the time"?

Alan: You have to understand that in all the traditional religions have within them the same mystery religion that really runs the show and it's the same with the word "Zion." People don't even know what it means and it's the hermaphroditic deity. That's what it means.

Jackie: Zion?

Alan: Yes, and the mountains that they used to worship where the moon passed over the top was called Mt. Sin and that's where SIN comes from. SIN or ZIN, it doesn't matter. Then you have ON, which is the phallic symbol of the male deity or the obelisk which it passes over and of course the pyramid of Cheops, or Khufu as it's called in Egyptian, is the uncapped pyramid. It's the top of an obelisk. That's what it represents and over it passes the moon god SIN. When you take the first two letters, which is typical of high occult masonry, modern and ancient, you end up with ZI and then ON, Zion. That's what it means. That's what it means to the high masons. It's the completion of the male and female in one because behind all the religions, whether it's Hindu or any of the others, they're all, even ancient Greeks, their god was male and female.

Jackie: I remember in Genesis where it says, male and female made he them.

Alan: Yes, and of course if you go into the Talmud they also talk about that. It doesn't mean they made male and female one and one. It can also mean he made a bunch of male and female-- Jackie: Hermaphrodites.

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: That's kind of how that's said, isn't it, because I remember when I read that I thought it was worded funny. Male and female made he them.

Alan: If you look at the exact wording in the Greek and you have Imagio, which is the image. It means the perfect likeness, sameness in fact.

Jackie: So in other words "the architect," what would you call it? I mean a cloned body, is that what we're talking about, by a hermaphrodite?

Alan: An exact duplicate of that particular deity and that's the symbol behind even occult Judaism and Catholicism and all the rest of them is a hermaphroditic figure. That's why you have two creations or beginnings of species. Not the first beginnings. They talk about regenerating the planet, which means to repopulate, but you have two beginnings where the deity creates male and female and then later on you look and it says there's no one to till the soil so he creates Adam and Eve. What they're talking about there is those that were made in the same image of the gods, if you like, the human gods, man and woman, are the upper elite group who will control the world; whereas the Adam and Eve types are the workers you see. It's a system that they're describing more than anything else, wrapped up in a story. It's a system.

Jackie: Well, what is their ultimate plan, Alan? I mean at least as you understand it?

Alan: The ultimate plan has been laid out and spoken of by many of them such as Aldous Huxley. He went into the fact that science – and that's what they mean in freemasonry when you read them talking about the law of nature and following nature and by dissecting nature. In other words, everything that works in the world of physics and biology et cetera and chemistry; once you understand it all, you can then take the original material and the world which was left imperfect by the Creator (according to masonry) and reshape it into their own perfection. Everything is to be recreated in their own perfection. Huxley was well into this. Lord Bertrand Russell also talked about the need to do this and Charles Galton Darwin also said exactly the same thing. He says already in the 1950's, Galton Darwin said, in his book, "The Next Million Years," we already have too many of the working and lower classes which will be become unnecessary in the future.

Jackie: Well sure, they already are with all the computers and robotized machinery.

Alan: He says we can't allow them to simply proliferate and procreate and reproduce themselves because eventually they'll be too many for them to be controlled by the establishment. None of these authors ever talk about government or democracy, never, because government and democracy is nothing but a front; an absolute front and always has been a front for what we call The Establishment behind it. Whenever you hear the speeches or read the books by these people, they simply give the agenda and they don't even bother to pay lip service to this Punch and Judy show we call politics. They've written about it, what they would have to do and sure enough every year the United Nations since about the 1950's, since the polio vaccine came out in the 1950's, they tell you every year what the male sperm count is in the Western world and they go through the countries. Now they never give a comment. They simply give the statistics as though it's quite natural. Last year they said that the male sperm count in the west was down 75 percent of what it was in 1950. Now that should mean a crisis level if it was some sort of strange natural occurring phenomena like a disease; but if they don't comment on it, it tells you right away this is part of the agenda.

Jackie: I know but there's still a lot of children being born.

Alan: There are, but the fact is if you look at the population, especially the white population, it isn't just that they aren't having so many children. It's the fact that the males are becoming almost sterile and what sperm left is too weak to reproduce, so there are other reasons behind this, but this all began with the inoculations. When you mentioned the Protocols they did mention in there that they would kill off people and so on by inoculations. It isn't science fiction of the past we're discussing. It's the laying out of an agenda which is being fulfilled and they've almost reached their goal. Aldous Huxley thought it was just fantastic that they could eventually manipulate the DNA and clone different kinds of people for the task to have to perform—minus that part of the brain that gave them their higher intellect or self-awareness as an individual. That would be cloned out you see.

Then you jump back 2,500 years from when he said it and you have Plato talking about the exact same thing in "The Republic" and Plato belonged to the mystery religions. He was part of the Greek aristocracy and he said, "we the aristocracy are descended from the gods." You connect that once more with the same God created man and woman and later created Adam and Eve and you're back to the same thing again. There's an upper elite group who literally have been running the world for many thousands of years and they have sham governments as fronts, always, in every country and the agenda has never faltered and no part of the agenda has ever faltered regardless of what political party in power. We are literally at the stage where in 50 years or less, maybe 40 or 30 even, and according to that Loyola University meeting, they hope to have the chipping completed by about 2018. Well, that's the end of individual consciousness for the general population.

Jackie: I thought 2012 was their magic number.

Alan: No, they want to start it around then. They want to start it then and have--

Jackie: Start what the chipping?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: You said they started that back in the '60's.

Alan: That's when they were experimenting. They want to have the whole population chipped. Now they're going for everyone you see. The experimenting is over. They have the one that works best and they said that at that meeting and now the only problem they have is to convince the general population to accept it. When they were testing them out on people, these subjects didn't even know they were being tested out on; it was done covertly. They've laid their agenda right out and they're going full steam ahead with it.

Jackie: So people knowing this, what do you think?

Alan: I think it should be the prime preoccupation of their life from now on to literally—they better—train themselves very, very quickly that they are in the battle for their lives and train themselves not to get distracted or even switch off for a little while to have the relaxation that they're used to or the programming they're used to from TV. They better start dedicating themselves 100 percent to combating this because it's coming fast. In fact, Canada just announced that they're having next year a fake general killer flu alert and they're going to have a massive testing of how the hospitals will react across the whole country next year. In that blurb from the CBC they also mentioned that in the future with the chip implant they'll be able to track down the actual carriers no matter where they go in the world very quickly and so here's another plus you see pushing for the chip. In two or three years time with the propaganda that's coming out, Joe Public, I'm afraid to say it, will actually look upon this and believe this is all for his benefit and will be looking forward to it, never knowing there's a completely different intention behind it because Joe won't know who he is once that switch is thrown. He will be controlled by a computer. He literally will be remote controlled so he won't have the ability to even know he's an individual.

Jackie: What can Joe do knowing about this?

Alan: He has to start telling everyone he knows. It's like that quote you read by Mother Theresa. It doesn't matter what they think of you while you're doing it. Do it anyway because it has to be brought out. Everyone has got to at least know the truth behind this and that's the only way they can combat the propaganda that's pushing for it and they better also instruct their children in it too very quickly.

Jackie: You know this conversation it can just take us everywhere because you know the thought that enters my mind? Unless people have seed – at least the natural seed as we know natural today, because maybe it all has been genetically modified in times gone by, but the kind of food that is being purchased and brought home and eaten from the grocery store with all of the junk that's in it, Alan, and I mean you think about it. I read this a couple of three years ago. They have carrots that you can get a hepatitis B vaccine from and we have no idea what types of vaccines are being – I mean some of these plants are actually growing that vaccine or whatever. It's out of this world, but what good does it do knowing about this when you are eating meat that is irradiated? When you are eating food that has all kinds of preservatives and additives and chemicals and probably vaccines and God only knows what in it. What good is it going to do to know it, Alan?

Alan: They'll have to spend extra money and try and get organic produce.

Jackie: You know it is possible, even if you live in an apartment, you can actually grow vegetables in containers. I don't know.

Alan: But here's the kicker too, you see, there's something else that was talked about recently and I kid you not. It's the banning of home gardens.

Jackie: Oh yes. That came up a couple of years ago.

Alan: It came up again from the United Nations. Of course their spin on it is that the additives that people use in the soil and herbicides are destroying Mother Nature et cetera and therefore they want to stop all home gardening and hope to start this program in two years. I mean they're going the whole way and people better understand this very quickly because it's coming to a place near you. They better get up and get off that chair and throw that TV out the window and go to the meetings where they're supposed to be discussing this because they will go through formalities, and they better stand up and say no damn way.

Jackie: And bring your own documentation and handouts.

Alan: The fact is you can't leave that meeting until you've got your way because we're in a battle now for our lives. That's what we're in and there are people at the top that quite calmly discussed the elimination remember of over three-quarters of the human race in the next 20, 30 years and they mean it.

Jackie: I know they do mean it. I know that. And you know when we get into these types of conversations and it's like we're swimming in it as we're discussing it and always what comes back to my mind is that there is nothing more important right now than to get our own house in order and I'm talking about our own spiritual house.

Alan: That's right. Everyone's disconnected, or, if they're plugged in at all, it's to a regular church which isn't speaking out about the very things we're talking about because they're part of the agenda, the control agenda. I mean why aren't the churches speaking out about this and telling their flock the sheep what to eat or what grass to eat here? They're saying nothing about it because they're part of the control and organized religion has always been used for that very purpose.

Jackie: Yes, and Passover is coming up and there will be a whole, whole, whole slew of Christian Zionists or whatever in God's name they call themselves that will be taking the Seder meal in the synagogue with the Talmudists. We have to take a break here.

Alan: The time is getting so short as to where the world is going and how were all just going along, like the Pied Piper's followers, in a trance, being entertained to death and the entertainment is actually our programming. If we look at the movies they're churning out and have been since the Loyola meeting to do with chipping the brain, where they said that all novels and movies would start to contain stories about this and point out all the plusses. You simply take the Matrix movie as an example and you have Neo, who is the new man to come. His name means "new" and of course Anderson comes from Andros, which is the Greek word for man. He is the new son of man, and how does he get in and out of the Matrix? He plugs himself into it from the back of his head and he has all these amazing powers and the children think that this is fantastic and of course the whole idea is to make people believe you will have super powers. Now I'm well aware that there are people who will want to escape from the world and plug themselves in like the Lawnmower Man and that is up to them, but for those who are beginning to wake up, I think they should start shaking themselves awake very fast and learning fast and dedicating themselves to fighting this because once it's happened, that's it. It's game over. There's no second chance. It literally will be the end of consciousness as you know it. A good book to read on that is "The Ghost in the Machine," and here's another problem with modern society. Most people who are on the internet tell me they cannot read a book anymore. They just simply can't go through a book because they're getting bits and bites and that's their new language is little bits of things.

Jackie: What do you mean by that, Alan, people who are on the internet?

Alan: I get them phoning me up and they'll ask me where do I find this information or that information. I'll tell them well you go to your library; I'll give them the names of the books to look up. Most of these types of books are available at the library or can be gotten through inter-library loans. As soon as I mention a book, they tell me that right out that they can't read a book anymore.

Jackie: How do you respond to that?

Alan: Well, I say why bother phoning me for information with a clarification that they'll only look into it if it's on the internet. Now the internet is designed to be fast-paced and to recondition the minds to think in short bits and bites, and people who use the internet a lot, I've noticed, they don't read anything right through. They get bits and bites of it and this is again intentional. Zbigniew Brzezinski talked about giving it to the people back in the 1960's and what its real function would be. It's a preparatory phase of conditioning the mind to actually to the binary code, because the whole computer system runs on zeros and ones, ones and zeros, and hence the high number 10 in Masonry. It's conditioning the actual minds to be nearer to a computer's logic than a human logic and they don't realize this.

Jackie: There are whole books on the internet.

Alan: Yes, but they can't ready anything right through. Now, anyway, getting back to "The Ghost in the Machine," for those who can't be bothered to read the whole book, just read the last chapter and that's by a man employed initially by Stalin as an officer. He helped in the starvation of millions of Ukrainians and he tells you in his own writing in that book that he was so conditioned in believing in the communist system that what he was doing was part of "historical necessity." That's the term they use when they have to eliminate vast populations.

Jackie: You mean that's what he was told and he believed it?

Alan: Yes. Now you think after he tells you this that obviously he'd changed his mind.

Jackie: That's what I was going to ask.

Alan: But that's the big shocker when you find out that, no, he came over to New York worked for the United Nations. He taught in universities there and he worked for the UN think tanks on ways to literally lobotomize that part of the brain, the higher intellect, and that's why it's called "The Ghost in the Machine." It's that illusive part that is your spiritual connection with the body, you might say, that makes you you and his job was to try different techniques. He said there were other think tanks and they had regular meetings and the other think tanks were employing other means of trying to achieve the same ends, and he worked for about 20 years on this very problem. In the last chapter of the book he goes through not only what they decided on doing and he does mention, by the way, dumbing the people down through altering the food, adding chemicals to the water and so on to make them more accepting of the next phase, and he also rationalizes the reasons for having to do this to bring world peace. Utopia to these elitists is going to be a hell for everyone else if they get their way and these people are deadly, deadly serious.

Jackie: You know, Alan, utopia for them is whoever is left of the underlings will be so drugged or maybe they won't even need to be drugged by then, but I don't know if there's any truth to what their plan is if you're reading like "This Perfect Day" or "1984," those. They have the drugs. Anybody who suddenly felt some type of emotion reached in their pocket and took out a soma and took the pill to get those emotions gone. Well, think about this. If this is true, I don't know, but it has been reported in newspaper reports that they're finding high quantities of Prozac and all these psychotropic drugs. Evidentially, what the body doesn't absorb is being excreted and it is not being filtered out; it's in the drinking water, Alan.

Alan: It's been in the drinking water because they're also spraying it along with other chemicals in these trails above our heads.

Jackie: You're assuming that.

Alan: No. Rumsfeld said it right after 9/11 on television; he was asked what their plans were if there was another major crisis in a city where the people began to panic and he said, "we already have chemicals to spray over entire cities containing Prozac and Valium; aerosolized Prozac and Valium." Now if he said that then it doesn't take much to come up with the equation that they're already do it and of course because it's being found in the drinking water is simply diverting reality of where it's coming from. Because the people today, many people are beginning to lose their short-term memory and I've talked to many people who complained of it and yet they feel sort of happy as though they're tranquilized and that's what's happening. It makes perfect sense as we go through these massive world changes and societal changes, the biggest changes that have ever happened since the Industrial Revolution began and all the people were moved into the cities. We're going through the biggest changes society has seen for hundreds of years.

Jackie: Hundreds of years?

Alan: Yes and it makes perfect sense to drug down the people as you bring them through it. It makes perfect sense, but Rumsfeld admitted that.

Jackie: Do you feel tranquilized?

Alan: Not so much. Occasionally I'll get bouts of being tired, but what I've also noticed is those who are really, really awake prior to this don't seem to be affected the same way and I think it's because they're so used to studying that their mind sort of compensates, because as you study you must memorize and so on. It keeps your mind alert.

Jackie: Do you suppose there could be something to it, those who are more spiritually conscious or connected, aware of the connection?

Alan: I think so.

Jackie: Maybe so, Alan.

Alan: There's no doubt about it. I've done my own sort of unofficial surveys and that's what I come up with all the time. As I say, you must always be able to jump from where you are into the mind of the controllers and you can only do it by studying them and their writings. It makes perfect sense to drug the people as you're bringing them through such incredible changes, leading ultimately to the extinction of individual consciousness. You would have to drug them and make them happy.

Jackie: Or not necessarily happy, just emotionless. Happiness is an emotion, Alan, and unless they're giving a happy pill, I would think that it would be just an emotionless that they wouldn't feel much of anything.

Alan: Well, they don't, you see. They don't even respond much – I mean they can sit there and eat their dinners and watch Iraqis blown up by mistake, whole villages, and it doesn't bother them. If you can't cry for every catastrophe that's occurred on this planet to all the different people, if you can't cry for them, there's something wrong with you.

Jackie: Well, if we did that we would be crying all the time.

Alan: We should be crying all the time.

Jackie: I mean the sorrow or the compassion that you feel.

Alan: It's the empathy and when you lose empathy then you're emotionally stunted. Something has happened to you and that means that if all those around you are the same, well, who's going to cry for you when they come for you? No one will, so we better wake up fast and really see what's going on here and try to become as human as possible, and by that, I mean use the humaneness within you. Use it with others fast and for others fast, regardless of what they think of you because the time is really getting short now. When you watch how much spraying they're doing almost all over the planet right now on a daily basis – we're watching clouds that have come out of science fiction movies but they're right above our head and it's no movie and this is happening daily now. These clouds are becoming the new norm to most people who can't remember what the old clouds look like. They have gone the whole way. They have tampered with the food. They have altered them for vaccinations, but it's done to such a micro level that they can also create drugs within the food as well, just like soma was opium and we know where opium comes from. It comes from a plant. They're simply doing the same thing again.

Jackie: That's why they called George Bush's father Poppy.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Not because he was his papa, but because of his opium dealings. We have a call here. Hi, you're on the air. Who are we talking to?

Myron: Yes. Good evening. This is Myron from Georgia.

Jackie: Hi Myron.

Myron: Yes, I called in last night also. I'll be very brief as possible. I want to state that I received Mr. Watt's booklets and I thoroughly enjoyed them. Very, very informative. I'd like to say something. I've done my own personal research on freemasonry and I went to the local library within my town as well and I came across a book. It's an autobiography of Albert Pike and the name of the book was "The Man Beyond the Monument" and the author's name is Jim Tresner. Within the book he states that Albert Pike made a remark, and if I may, may I share my brief remarks of what Albert Pike had stated?

Jackie: Yes do Myron.

Myron: It states on page 76 of his book was a remark made by Albert Pike is this.

"To the ancients, this light was an outflowing from the Deity. To us, as to them, it is the apt symbol of truth and knowledge. Masonry is a march and a struggle toward the Light. For the individual as well as the nation, Light is Virtue, Manliness, Intelligence, Liberty. Tyranny over the soul or body, is darkness. Masonry to the Masonic Brethren is a search after, and a journeying toward Light. The Masonic Light is Truth. It is the inculcation of truth by means of symbols and instructions. Teaching a pure morality by its lessons and lectures, it is also a great system of philosophy and of political and of religious truth concealed by symbols." Thank you, ma'am.

Jackie: Thank you, Myron. Alan, now I've said this before so often because what he was reading didn't sound terrible. Tyranny over the souls of man is darkness. How do you explain this?

Alan: Because on the lower levels that's exactly the propaganda they do put out and you must remember even the word "man" does not refer to ordinary people in their religion. The profane are not really men and women. In fact the profane are subhuman and of course when you really – well, read Albert Pike's own book, not by someone else. Read Albert Pike's "Morals and Dogma" and he tells you that freemasonry is a religion and he tells you again, he says, "make no mistake. Lucifer is God," and unfortunately so is Adonai.

Jackie: He says that in "Morals and Dogma"?

Alan: It's in "Morals and Dogma". Make no mistake, he says, "Lucifer is God." Lucifer is the light you see he's talking about.

Jackie: In the Masonic rituals, I actually have this in Chapter 16 and 17 of the book, they say to the freemasons when they get up high enough the lost word is Jehovah. That's in one of the initiations or the part – so Lucifer and Jehovah are the Masonic gods?

Alan: They're two sides of the same coin.

Jackie: Well of course. I mean Lucifer – the reason I'm saying this is because of the call I received from a listener who said that referring to Jehovah as Lucifer is blasphemy, well but it isn't Jehovah it's Yahweh, and that I was being put on an altar, that he would take me if I was wrong or take her if she was wrong. Now this is not a cruel lady. What she is saying she means it with all of her heart and soul because she believes with all her heart and soul that Yahweh, or however they do it, that is creator and that is the god Jehovah but it's using his name wrong. You see the whole thing is so twisted.

Alan: When you cut through the chase of freemasonry, most people don't get beyond the third degree and they're quite happy as a Master Mason, you see, but "life begins at 40" and that's what it means, the 40th degree is when they start to tell you what the real truth is.

Jackie: There was a Masonic song and it was sung to the tune of "God Save the King," which is the same tune of, what is it, "Oh Beautiful for Spacious Skies," or whatever, well right in that song the lyric are Jehovah, Jove, Oh Lord.

Alan: That's right and Rudyard Kipling also wrote it and he said, "Jehovah, Jove, by George." It's a big joke to them because ultimately in freemasonry the high masons are taught the truth. As they come in the Grand Master sits in the East you see where the sun rises--

Jackie: Yes and you know what they say?

Alan: And they go round the altar and the secret is that you have become a god.

Jackie: They're building temples and tabernacles in the soul of man and nations, and when they ask which way are you traveling from Babylon to Jerusalem. This is up somewhere around the 16th or something like that level but it deals with Jerusalem and the temple and the avenging of Hiram Abiff and it all goes--

Alan: Hiram Abiff is not a person. It's a symbol of the higher self, the godhood within man, and the three unworthy craftsman that they talk about they often call it the JUWES; like Jack the Ripper used. It's desire, thought and action. That's what they stand for. Desire, thought and action used impulsively will kill the higher god within you and you become the low profane. That's what it means. It's all allegory you see.

Jackie: I know but you know there is so many people who say I am a Christian and worship and adore Yahweh, Jehovah, Jove, Lucifer and they don't even realize they're doing it, Alan.

Alan: That's how far mind control can take you and really it's also a choice for them and you can't really do anything about it. The time has come where you have to concentrate on people who do want it. Those who are worshipping the traditional religions, on the one hand, they're preaching the terror of the last days, the ETs, extraterrestrial or end times; they have a joke for that one. On the other hand, after they've terrified their flock, they say: "but don't worry, God is in control" – so who's doing it?

Jackie: Yes and Jesus said that the kingdom of God is within you.

Alan: Exactly.

Jackie: And if that isn't the most outward of our expression, and I know I'm not saying that mine is, but that would be our desire to be an expression of our creator.

Alan: Remember Albert Pike was also a member of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry (SRFM) and if you speak it, you see, that's another one of their little tricks, if you speak it you have Seraphim. Seraphim are the highest order of angels beneath the Cherubim, and the Scottish Rite calls themselves the Order of the Perfection. When you're perfect, a Perfecti, you are now a god on earth; but of course they can't publicize that at the bottom.

Jackie: One of the degrees is called the Knights of Kadosh or something like that. In my researching I find that the first Jewish synagogue or temple or whatever, was the temple or the whatever, Kadosh, and there we are in one of those degrees of freemasonry.

Alan: It was also a battle place.

Jackie: Okay. We've got a call here. Go ahead caller. Who's there?

Kate: Hi Jackie. This is Kate.

Jackie: Yes Kate.

Kate: I want to know from Alan, you know the Catholic Church years ago have been taken over by the Jewish masons--

Jackie: Yes, we've only got a couple of minutes, honey, so be quick.

Kate: What I want to know is this other pope that died or they killed him, why did he always hit the ground when he got off the plane?

Jackie: Alan?

Alan: I think he was afraid of flying, or maybe he was just kissing his own property, but the fact is the mystery religions has been always present within all organized religions. It's behind it.

Jackie: We're out of time.

Alan: Okay.

Jackie: Ladies and gentlemen, we'll be back Monday. Thank you, Alan.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
April 27, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Wednesday. It is the last night of our broadcast week of course and our guest again this evening is Alan Watt. Alan, thanks for being here tonight.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: Let me do this and as you know, I was just a little bit behind tonight when you called. What I would like to do first of all from Matthew 25, Jesus said:

"For I was hungry and you gave me meat. I was thirsty and you gave me drink. I was a stranger and you took me in naked and you clothed me. I was sick and you visited me. I was in prison and you came unto me; inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

I like that. That's pretty. That's so real, isn't it, Alan?

Alan: It is, yes, and there's no money involved.

Jackie: Well I know but what I mean is that it is true. Let me put it that way: that what we do to one or for one, it's to all or for all.

Alan: That's right. It's natural humanity.

Jackie: That's what I mean. What I would appreciate if you would do – I know we talked about it last night, but let our listeners know again this evening. Folks, today is Wednesday it is the 27th of April in the year 2005. Maybe I gave the date, I don't think I did. Today is Chuck's birthday, his birthday in this third dimensional world, and I just wanted to remember him to you, folks. Alan, if you will, tell our listeners about the books.

Alan: My books go through freemasonry, the banking system of ancient times up to the present, how countries were taken over and empires built up and then destroyed as the money powers moved on. I also go into how these bankers created the world religions and helped to dominate the peoples they took over in foreign countries by imposing these religions, installing priesthoods, generally from the Middle East, and setting up churches in each country, which also served as a branch of their banking system. Therefore, the gold that was lent to these countries ended up underneath these churches for so-called "safe keeping." It's an interesting read, each one of them, and the secret society that was on the go 5,000 BC is still on the go today and that's why nothing really changes. [See www.cuttingthroughthematrix.com for ordering information.] It's the same system of debt creation, which gives power to private bankers over the countries and obviously then it gives the bankers the right to dictate policies of those countries, just like Alan Greenspan does.

In Canada we have the Bank of Canada, which is not a Canadian bank, it's actually a board of men who were picked by the international bankers who liaised with the Canadian government. They've pulled this trick in every country and really only 12 families or so are the international families which lend to every country, and technically they lend nothing, but they want repayment in real goods or gold and that's how it is up until the present system.

Jackie: And they never print enough money to pay the usury that's charged.

Alan: That's correct and they must always keep a country in debt. Even in ancient times when they would take over a country by force, often, because they employed armies of countries they'd already conquered, they would install what they called a tyrant or dictator and he was well-paid for his function and he would immediately start massive public works and projects and build mausoleums and so on. Of course, this was borrowed from the bankers and they created the debt system, which was based also on compound interest, meaning you could never get away from the debt. You couldn't pay it off, so the bankers ended up having complete control over the country through the front man who was the tyrant or dictator. Later on, of course, they gave us democracy, so you have a bunch tyrants basically fronting for the bankers and it's all the same system. They're all Masons of high degree, pre-picked before the public even see them up for election and they vowed complete obedience to the organization they serve, which is not the people you see. It's an ancient system. It's well documented in some books in fact and even many of the ancient Greeks especially wrote about these bankers and how they operated and how they had been taking over the countries 2,000 BC by the same techniques.

Jackie: And they wrote about it in Genesis.

Alan: That's why they put Genesis together, the "Gene of Isis," because it contains their mystery religion and of course religion dominates the mind. That's what its function was meant to do. It limits your scope of thinking.

Jackie: I received a call from a listener last night and he is a long-time listener but he was really thrilled to hear you mention the CIA behind many of the shortwave alternative broadcasts, but he said, "to be honest with you, I had quit listening for a while when you had Alan on and he said that Jesus was the same as Jupiter." And I said no he didn't and he was convinced and I said, "no, you misunderstood what he told us," and I looked it up of course. I didn't carry this on in the conversation but you can search and find it in so many places that Jehovah, Jupiter, Jove, are all one and the same.

Alan: That's right. Rudyard Kipling even wrote a little poem on it, and it ended with "Jehovah, Jupiter, Jove, by George." That's how it ended; he was a high mason too, so they all know. Of course it's a mystery religion and it's been around for thousands and thousands of years and they've controlled all other established religions. They certainly took them over from the beginning. You can see even in the New Testament where you have obviously a person who was doing extraordinary things such as taking bankers out of the temple, standing up to the priesthoods of his day and decrying them for what they were, which again was front men for other powers, so you can see there was a real person there. Where it comes to the addition of the old mystery religion which Rome put on it, you can see the 12 disciples and Jesus as the sun, so they added on the old mystery religion on top of the real character you might say.

Jackie: The real individual, the real person? I'm sorry. You go right ahead, Alan.

Alan: It's easy to discern a real person and what a real person is doing, as opposed to the standard sun and the 12 disciples, or the sun and the 12 signs of the zodiac, which had preceded the idea for thousands of years. In the Egyptian times it was 10 signs of the zodiac and they changed two of the signs. One was a hippo and one was an alligator, although the hippo was more important to the sign at the time.

Jackie: Why? What did it mean?

Alan: It's the only animal which can fart through its mouth.

Jackie: Are you serious?

Alan: Yes. It's a fact.

Jackie: Is that a joke?

Alan: It's true. It's a pretty formidable animal and you don't want to face it anyway.

Jackie: Well, wouldn't we call that a burp?

Alan: Not really. This literally was from the other end. It came right through its mouth.

Jackie: Oh my, my. But that's why it was so important?

Alan: It's because it could also swim underwater and on land, and of course they like the symbol of the Nile bringing the life to the area and onto the land and so the hippo could signify that or symbolize that. It could swim into the water and come onto the land.

Jackie: One of the thoughts that I have had – you know you have shown us how they have used the astrological wheel, all of that, as part of their mystery religion. Well, Alan, they don't do that for fun. My thought is well and I don't know. You may not agree with this and that's okay, but I find that there – for example, if an individual has an astrological chart drawn up the person who draws up the chart, the astrologer, if it's a good one, doesn't have to know anything about the individual and like a natal chart. Of course it doesn't mean your life is mapped out but it seems to me that there is relevance in understanding the energy from the different planets and how they play upon us at certain times and it's just too accurate in too many ways for too many people for there not to be some merit to it; but maybe that's why in the Old Testament they tell you not to go to astrologers, because I think Christians think that it's sinful et cetera, et cetera, but I would like your comments on that. I mean why – for example, the number 13. I thought about this and of course they gave us Jesus and his 12 disciples. Were there 12 disciples? I don't know but I thought to myself – in fact I've said it. One time I was talking to a group and somebody was talking about the number 13 and I said well the energy, the color, each color has its own – would we call it a vibration or frequency, and the tuned and musical tones, the notes, everything really is quite beautiful the way everything kind of meshes and joins together. But I thought well maybe there's something about the number 13 the energy of it that is powerful. So we're told that it's an unlucky number and they won't put a thirteenth floor on a building et cetera, et cetera. And Jesus, what was it, his 33rd year, did he begin or was he crucified?

Alan: Crucified.

Jackie: Okay, so they use these numbers and they use the astrological signs and dates, and I wonder if that has to do with what they call their windows of opportunity.

Alan: They definitely use the solar chart as a timetable because it's a clock and it's a clock which deals in hundreds and thousands of years, and their plans are ancient, but they say themselves the plan came down or came to them around 4,500 BC. That's when the plan to take the entire planet over and how it would be done was supposedly drawn up. That's why you see two dates on Masonic temples, the date it was built, in modern numbers and times, and they had the other one with AL on it (Anno Lucifer), the fall of Lucifer. They have that date plus the 4,500 years tacked on to it.

Jackie: Didn't you say this plan is much older than even that?

Alan: I believe so. In fact I think that plan is only one phase of a much older plan.

Jackie: In other words, maybe it was the tweaking. Maybe they tweaked it.

Alan: Or revised it.

Jackie: Or revised it. It was like that Rabbi Ricorn said at some funeral. This is a quote allegedly. I wasn't there so I can't say for a fact, but what he said in this, it was at a eulogy, I believe, a friends funeral, he said we get together every 100 years to take a look at where we are and to plan out the next 100. You know, Alan, I thought my goodness, because when you read the Protocols and you see how everything is falling right into place and according to the way they laid it out. Then you think well that was 100 years ago, but we know they say in the Protocols it is said this plan that we have had underway for 2,000, 25-whatever-hundred years. Well, it makes sense that every 100 years or so-- Alan: It's no different from any corporation. They literally plan ahead 100 years.

Jackie: Boy, do they plan.

Alan: Even the World Council of Churches plans ahead in 100 years and of course David Rockefeller started that up.

Jackie: Getting back to the astrological thing, if they are the keepers of the truth, of the mysteries and it is so important to them, I guess what I am saying is that it makes some sense to me that there is something to it and they don't want people to know.

Alan: It's not that at all actually.

Jackie: What is it?

Alan: They wanted people to believe exactly what you've said, that there's strange powers and so on, that's the exoteric, but they kept the esoteric meanings to themselves. Pythagoras of course was the first one to write about this in the Greek language.

Jackie: Write about what?

Alan: This particular – you were talking about colors, tones, astrological signs and so on. In fact the name "tone" comes from Pythagoras and the tone of a color or the tone of a sound comes from Pythagoras and the weight ton all comes from that as well.

Jackie: But I'm talking about a type of energy or frequency.

Alan: That's what they talk about.

Jackie: Now maybe all of this is a lie. In a book that I read "Tuning the Human Instruments," and this was written I think back in the '70's, that they were experimenting in Russia using let's say vitamin E. There's a certain energy frequency from vitamin C and that they were literally using those frequencies to—how would you say it? Not inject, because they're not using needles, but that energy, that frequency that vitamin E makes up that literally people were able to have those vitamins. Am I making any sense? Are you understanding what I'm saying?

Alan: I've not quite got the end part.

Jackie: In other words, why do you say they want you to think that a color has a certain frequency or a tone has a certain frequency?

Alan: What Pythagoras did – and remember he had been trained in Egypt and went back and taught in Crotona, which was a Greek outpost, and he started his own school up. He, like many afterwards, he recruited young aristocrats who had to pass tests to get in and they had to also have a vow of silence for the first three or four years, just like the later Essenes, because that was a later edition of the mystery religion. Then he selected certain ones to go into the real mysteries and he also taught females and gave them a great education and they became so desirable amongst the nobility, and the female's job was to go out basically and help to subtly take over the mind of the nobility that she married and change their political persuasions and so on, so it was a form of control.

Now for the general population, which they called the profane, the people who are uneducated, they gave out the stories of magic, mysticism, again that these were real powers in the sky et cetera, the constellations and the planets. However, for themselves they used it all as allegories for other things, which was to do primarily with the aspects of their plan for the future and the time clock. That's why George Bush, Sr. after he mentioned the New World Order looked up and he said, "everything is going to the heavenly plan." He was talking about Aquarius, the Age of Aquarius that we are in now.

Jackie: Fine. That's what I'm saying. It means something to them.

Alan: It's nothing more than a timepiece for them because it's been used before.

Jackie: But they have their windows of opportunity. I've heard them say it.

Alan: Yes, and they must through them, but that's why all the early symbols of Christianity was never the cross. You'll always find it inscribed as the fish, for the Age of Pisces, so the Age of Christ was to take us through the Age of Pisces. That's why it's written, and of course it's tampered with, but it's written that Jesus tells them to go and find a man carrying a picture of water, signifying the end of his reign.

Jackie: The age of Pisces?

Alan: That's right and so Aquarius is the carrier of the water. Now the water itself is a feminine symbol, so that's when women must rise to the top to be used, not for their own purposes, but to be used by those behind the Grand Plan. It's working very successfully as you see the destruction of everything that was in order to make way for that which is to come. This is an incredible – you can't really read about it in five minutes. You'd have to read and study the Egyptian Book of the Dead and you'd have to study many of the inscriptions that were left by the scribes of Egypt and cursive shorthand, which they had as well as the hieroglyphics, and you compare that with Babylon, what's been dug up there and their inscriptions, and then you'll find it's the same mystery religion in every empire that ever existed down through time.

Jackie: And is that where the Cabbalistic--

Alan: The Cabbalism was literally taken from Babylon. It didn't originate in Jerusalem and the Cabbala was added to the-- Jackie: The mysteries?

Alan: Yes. That's why it has the 10 fruits on the trees of the Tree of Life, because at that time when Babylon created the Cabbala there were only 10 signs of the zodiac you see. So it's a very, very in depth mystery religion and you have to study it intensely to understand the different languages and miss nothing. If you miss anything at all, you can miss the most amazing things.

Jackie: Okay, the "Egyptian Book of the Dead," is that available in English?

Alan: Yes. You can get translations.

Jackie: Are there translations that are real and translations that are lies?

Alan: You'll get different translations. You have to go back to either Beardsen who was the initial historian--

Jackie: How do you spell that?

Alan: B-E-A-R-D-S-E-N, I think it is.

Jackie: Would that book be available?

Alan: It should be through libraries.

Jackie: I would just buy the "Egyptian Book of the Dead?"

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: And do you have a first name for this Beardsen guy?

Alan: Oh no. He's always just called Beardsen and also you can get E.A. Wallis Budge, who was another translator in the early part of the 1900's.

Jackie: But let me ask you this: Are they the same translation?

Alan: They're pretty similar because you must remember from the hieroglyphs and you're talking a different language into another language, you have to often--

Jackie: Substitute words.

Alan: Substitute and almost unfortunately destroy some of the meanings, or else use more than just one word to translate one word. You might use a phrase occasionally to try and get the whole meaning of it there.

Jackie: Well, let me ask you this: Have you read both Beardsen and Budge's "Egyptian Book of the Dead?"

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: If you were going to recommend one, which one would it be?

Alan: Budge's is cheaper and it's just as good really.

Jackie: E.A. Wallis Budge. Thank you, because you see I'm still not really following what you're saying. You're saying they want us to think that there is some importance to the astrological signs and times and ages, but there really isn't, but they use it for their own plan.

Alan: No. They want you to think that there's a magic quality to it.

Jackie: I don't understand. What do you mean magic quality?

Alan: That there's forces and powers you can get from the stars or the planets.

Jackie: When I was saying what I was saying, I wasn't talking about forces or powers. I was talking about influence of the particular planets at particular times et cetera and you know that I am not a fool. I know that I have been naïve. I know I've come out of a lot of ignorance and I've got a long way to go. I have had an astrological chart drawn up and the person that did it did not know me from Adam; and it was me, the natal chart that was drawn up. And I had one drawn on the girls and maybe our listeners are going to think I'm cuckoo and New Age and all that, but the reason I did is because I saw how very much the chart that was drawn up on me was me and there are influences that maybe can be helpful throughout our life, and I don't mean using that to live by. I don't mean that at all but there is something to it. That's what I'm saying. I don't know what it is to it, but if these guys use it – and you know what, we've got to take our break first. We're back. Alan, thanks. Okay, well, I don't know. Maybe we ought to just get off the subject because it just isn't making sense, what I'm not doing and it isn't because I don't want to understand. I'm just not understanding what you're saying. They use this and yet--

Alan: They used it for their own plan's time-clock, you see, and every symbol and every planet is a symbol of part of their action, like Mars is a God of War, for instance, that type of thing; so when that would come into the appendancy, that means that they would use that time for their war.

Jackie: The wars have been going on forever.

Alan: Oh, I know, but the big ones at certain times, the really big ones, the big changes, that's really what they mean by that.

Jackie: So in other words, it isn't a particular really more effective for them. It isn't more that they can influence people more at that particular time. It's just the timeframe that they use?

Alan: That's it, yes, and as I say, they planned it such a long time ago. I don't think it's the first time it's happened and the Hindus say that we go through these phases you might say of birth, living and then destruction. These are called "ages" and of course in the legends of all peoples we have these world disaster periods, floods and earthquakes and so on. Even in Sumer, in the Sumerian tablets, they claim that prior to their coming into existence, their city, there had been catastrophes on the earth where old continents had sunk and new ones had arisen from the sea.

Jackie: That they created?

Alan: It's possible. If you go into the writings of Tacitus, who wrote for Nero, he talked to the Druids in Britain and they claim that they had records of three previous ages, maybe 125,000 years apart, and that the survivors and the high priests of course, always the nobility--

Jackie: They do survive, don't they?

Alan: Yes. They tunneled into mountains and took provisions in to live for long periods; and that tallies with the records of Greece, where their priesthood tunneled into Mt. Parnassus and claimed the same thing that they survived the disasters.

Jackie: We'll take a call. Do you have more you want to say on that, Alan?

Alan: That also tallies with the story of the Ark, because there's no Ark as such, it's allegory, but the mountain Ararat that it lies upon is riddled with tunnels.

Jackie: There we are. We have a call. Okay, you're on the air. Who are we talking to?

Myron: Yes. Good evening Ms.--

Jackie: Oh, is it Myron?

Myron: Yes it is. How are you?

Jackie: I'm fine.

Myron: Good evening Mr. Watt.

Alan: Good evening.

Jackie: Okay, go ahead.

Myron: Last night I heard you mention Passover and I was wondering if Mr. Watt could explain this teaching of the Passover that many ministers teach out of the Old Testament and what is the symbolism or the meaning of this Passover that's really being talked about?

Jackie: Okay, good question, Myron.

Myron: Yes, thank you.

Jackie: Give him just a minute to get his radio turned up, Alan. Okay, Passover.

Alan: That was a fairly recent invention because the historian Josephus, who lived in the 1st century AD, claims that the Passover was a fairly new institution and it hadn't actually grounded itself with any historical past.

Jackie: Wasn't the Old Testament already written then?

Alan: I doubt it.

Jackie: It was the first century AD?

Alan: Yes, I don't think the Old Testament was all written at all.

Jackie: Not all written but weren't those first five books already put into--

Alan: That's the first five books of Moses. The thing is, as Josephus said, there was no – it was hazy as to why it came into existence. It was a festival time and sometime it had been equated with a festival of lights, which they usually had at these times, but, as far as a bloody sacrifice type thing, that wasn't part of it at that time in his day.

Jackie: Hanukkah as they call their festival of lights, but I'm reminded of Velikovsky's book and you had mentioned him so often and World's in Collision and oh my goodness, Alan. That book and the "Earth in Upheaval," I couldn't put them down when I got started reading. This is another thing. I'm glad Myron brought this up because I was thinking of that because it doesn't jive with Velikovsky's book, as far as at least that one "Cataclysm" and I think it was supposed to be around 3,600 years ago when the comet came around and did all the damage et cetera, but he talks in there about what the rabbis actually said about that time because it wasn't something the way the story was written in Exodus. It was a worldwide conflagration.

Alan: In fact, the Babylonian priests wrote more about it than anybody because they were the main scientists of their day and astronomers. After it was over they were called into Egypt because they had to reset the world calendar because the time of the earth's spinning had changed.

Jackie: The sun was even coming up from a different place.

Alan: Yes and when it settled down.

Jackie: And they had to find out where the seasons were.

Alan: They had to reset the calendar.

Jackie: Well, here's the thing, that in Velikovsky's book, he said that – well, you know in the Old Testament version in Exodus that the sun was gone for three days and the darkness was terrible. Well, on the other side of the earth, historical writings say that the sun stayed in the sky for three days and the rivers running red with blood. It was happening all over the world because of some stuff that was coming out of the tail of that comet--

Alan: It was raining fire.

Jackie: They said that too, but the red – Velikovsky mentions this in his book from many different sources and it was almost a water soluble type of a mineral and it did stink and--

Alan: And it also burned up the cattle and it was red hot.

Jackie: Therefore these rabbis and it was a compendium I think of what the rabbis basically said, that the so-called Exodus – people were leaving because they were looking for food. They were looking for water and that if there were – if they were not Hyksos, if they were whatever his chosen people were, that 49 out of 50 of them died and it wasn't just them leaving.

Alan: No, no. Everybody was running.

Jackie: Everybody was on the move.

Alan: Also the peoples of the sea were coming in from another direction hoping to get away from it too.

Jackie: Right. Therefore what the Pharisees, scribes, whoever wrote all of this, they just took a historical event and wound it into--

Alan: A myth.

Jackie: The private little story about the chosen people.

Alan: It's a myth.

Jackie: Yes, a myth and that Jehovah brought all these curses down on the pharaoh's people because pharaoh wouldn't let his people go because Jehovah had hardened his heart so he could--

Alan: Well, that's fine. Jehovah was more honest because he also played the devil you see.

Jackie: You know this seems awful stupid to me and I don't mean to offend anybody but this is supposed to be our loving Creator and he says well I want you to go get my people. You tell the pharaoh to let them go but I'm not going to let them. I know he's not going to let them go because I'm going to harden his heart so they won't and then I'll bring all these plagues down and I can prove to the world that I'm the Lord God almighty.

Alan: Really, he's playing solitaire with himself.

Jackie: I don't mean to joke about it because I know to some people this is very hurtful, but, gee, all we have to do is take a look at it and say wait a minute. It depends upon our concept. Of course I don't know that any of us have truly the concept of Creator, but we can know what it isn't, Alan.

Alan: Well, that's it and in the Talmud they're more upfront with that, that no one can actually know or figure out the mind of a creator.

Jackie: Do they actually say that?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Okay, so then who do they say Jehovah was?

Alan: That's another deity. They even have another story of Moses. In the Talmud it's different from the one in the Old Testament.

Jackie: Do they?

Alan: Moses was actually a full Egyptian, Ramoses; it means child, Child of RA.

Jackie: Son of RA.

Alan: So he left and he wanted to take over the pharaoh's job and he went to Ethiopia and builds himself up there, recruited an army and went to attack Egypt, so there's a whole different story told in the Talmud.

Jackie: Okay, Myron's actual question was: Is their symbology there?

Alan: There's astronomical symbologies and also agricultural symbology. It's a pass-over from death into life for spring and planting, the crops and so on. It's all nature and pantheistic, really, and it's a time for planting and also for seed. It symbolizes the death lying through the winter comes to life again, the resurrection.

Jackie: Like Easter?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Just like Easter. Okay. All right, that makes sense. Freemasonry, for anybody who's a freemason who might be listening or who knows one, I'd like to share, if I may, Alan – this is a part that I had forgotten all about. They suck them in and they stroke them and groom them and they mention some place in here it will be the people in high offices and it will be the judges and the administrators and you mentioned I think last night the captains, the police forces. All of them and there they are and they say oh well we might spare them or some of them but the others we'll kill.

Alan: There's one thing that Masons do allow the public to know through a rumor, and that's if you join it you get unmerited favor and help with your career and promotion and so on. They make sure they get people who really are almost corrupt anyway who will join it for those very reasons. They also tell you you can bypass petty bureaucracy and get tax relief and so on, if you join. That's the bait.

Jackie: Tax relief?

Alan: They get different assessments.

Jackie: These local and county and city officials and state legislators, do you think that every time they raise taxes, property taxes et cetera, do you think their's get raised?

Alan: No, they don't and neither do lawyers because lawyers help with the real estate scams and so they are automatically are exempted from land taxes.

Jackie: And these people think they're going to be exempt from all the evil they're doing?

Alan: What they don't realize is you see most people on this planet, at the moment, at this stage that we're at right now, are expendable and it's coming to the stage where they'll try and fulfill the promise to wipe out over three quarters of the population. There will be an awful lot of people wiped out, good and bad, if they get their way and they're ready for it now. We know this because they've been prepping us for years with coming plagues and all this stuff, at the very time when we know that we can splice genes and join anything to anything, even viruses to bacterium, which is the flesh-eating disease. It's the first one in history that was created, two different species joined together. They're ready to unleash a lot of stuff on the public and these will not be race-specific. These will spread right through--

Jackie: Not race specific, right. There was an article in a newsletter just recently that said that the scientists somewhere have been given permission to create a mouse with a human brain.

Alan: They've done more than that. They've done all of these – whenever they tell you they're doing something, this is the old stuff. They were doing genetic modifications in the 1920's.

Jackie: And if the mouse starts acting like a human being then they're going to make them quit.

Alan: Well, he might become maybe a Christian mouse. So there you go. There'll be a whole new set of lawyers to deal with all of this.

Jackie: One of the things I don't think that we've discussed and maybe our listeners, a lot of them, know about it, but maybe they don't, was that terrible flu virus that they shipped. Would you talk about that? Will you mention the plague?

Alan: In the papers about a week ago, supposedly the CDC had sent out thousands of vials of 1950's version of the flu to laboratories all over the world and also one shipment with Ebola. Now, I don't know if they really did this or if it's a scare to the public, because it seems an incredible thing that they'd do, but certainly it's having an effect on the public of terrifying them and getting them ready for a coming plague.

Jackie: Well, it will terrify them if they read the article. However, I remember the article that I read that somebody had emailed on the internet. They said that most of these have been mailed from the U.S. and their concern is that some of the labs haven't received theirs yet.

Alan: They said in fact, in the last document about it, they said that my goodness the ones that had not been destroyed was in Lebanon but they were in the process of destroying it. In other words, psychologically they were attaching it to terrorism.

Jackie: Sure and not only that, but it will be a good excuse or justification – well, what brought it to my mind was when you said the plagues that they are readying. This could be a prelude to it. You know this sounds like such a downer. You can't not talk about it, Alan.

Alan: You cannot face truth unless you look at the dark side, you see, and that's the problem with people. They're egosyntonic. They've been trained that way. They want to only look at the things that make them feel good and because of that they're wide open to whatever it is going to happen. That is a choice because maturity takes a person, and truly seeking truth, takes a person to look at all sides of everything and you must be prepared to look at the blackest black you've ever looked at—the void.

Jackie: That was in the chapter of the Family of Dark which I shared with our listeners a few weeks ago and that's what they actually said, that in order truly to be in light, if you would, enlightened or aware, you have to know the depths of the evil, the darkness.

Alan: We've got to get out of this Disney World where people are really responsible at the top and are there because they're good and decent and just people. The opposite is true. The corrupt people are at the top and it's only the corrupt people who can get to the top in this particular system we live in.

Jackie: Before we go off the air tonight because we won't be back until Monday, a thought that occurred to me that I would like to share with our listeners is in knowing this it doesn't mean that we have to dwell on it every moment of our lives, folks. We share the information with those who want to know and there are times – there are precious moments and those precious moments are times that we spend with our loved ones, with our children, with our friends, times of being quiet and seeking a self-awareness. In other words, we don't have to swim in this sea of darkness. That's what I'm trying to say, Alan, because I wouldn't be able to live.

Alan: Most people couldn't and that's what I say. Those who think that they can't face it shouldn't even look at it. They should continue the way they are and what makes them happy, but those who are looking for truth have no option but to look at the dark side.

Jackie: Yes, I understand, but do you understand what I just said?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: That we don't have to swim in it. In other words, we know it. It's there and once we know it, we cannot un-know it, but, in other words, if it is all we dwell in – well, maybe I'm only speaking for myself. It would be unbearable and I just wanted to say that because there are precious moments and there are times even when you say some silly thing to lighten up the conversation. In a sense, that's a precious moment. Okay, that's what I mean because that's what I mean because I don't want to leave the broadcast tonight on just a note of hopeless, helplessness, evil, darkness, because it isn't all evil and darkness. Like you said, there are good people and there is love in this world and really it all begins with us.

Alan: It begins with the individuals who must look at everything and who have gone through the darkness and come out again and they know that it's evil and they know that they must fight it, you see. It's not an occasional fight. You know you're going to fight this thing with everything you've got.

Jackie: Yes, exactly. We're out of our hour tonight. Once again, thank you so much, and ladies and gentlemen, we will be back with you Monday and thank you for being here and Creator bless you all tonight. Good night, Alan.

Alan: Good night.

(Transcribed by Linda)

August 1st, 2005
Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru

cuttingthroughthematrix.com

alternate sites:

cuttingthroughthematrix.net , .us , .ca

alanwattcuttingthroughthematrix.ca

European site includes all audios & downloadable TRANSCRIPTS in European languages for print up:

alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

mirror site:

cuttingthrough.jenkness.com

Information for purchasing Alan's books, CDs, DVDs and DONATIONS:

Canada and America: PayPal, Cash, personal checks &
for the US, INTERNATIONAL postal money orders / for Canada, INTERNAL postal money orders
(America: Postal Money orders - Stress the INTERNATIONAL pink one, not the green internal one.)

Outside the Americas: PayPal, Cash, Western Union and Money Gram
(Money Gram is cheaper; even cheaper is a Money Gram check – in Canadian dollars:
mail via the postal services worldwide.)

PayPal Orders: USE THE DONATE BUTTON ON THE WEBSITE – AND –
Send a separate email along with the donation (list your order, name and address)

Click the link below for your location (ordering info):

USA

Canada

Europe/Scandinavian

All Other Countries

Jackie Patru: Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Let me get my record button going here. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is Monday, and it is the first day of August, in the year 2005. And I hope you had a lovely weekend, folks. A nice weekend, or peaceful, or fun, pleasant, loving. I hope you had a nice weekend. And Alan Watt is with us, this evening. I was looking for something that I wanted to share with you tonight, and I'm not finding it. I apologize for this. Oh, here we are. This is what I wanted to do tonight. This is Saint Francis of Assisi's Prayer, for our spiritual message. "Father, make me an instrument of your peace. Where there is hatred, let me so love. Where there is injury, let me so pardon. Where there is doubt, faith. Where there is despair let me sow hope. Where there is darkness, let me sow light. And where there is sadness, let me sow joy. Father, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console, to be understood as to understand, to be loved as to love, for it is in giving that we receive. It is in pardoning that we are pardoned and it is in dying that we are born into eternal life." And dying, you know, well of course, dying is what we call leaving this physical body. Death. And maybe dying is also, it just occurred to me as I was reading this, folks, maybe it also means giving up the old, if you would, the lies. Maybe it means the rebirth, if you would, right here in this physical world of coming into the truth, coming out of the lies. I don't know. It's just a thought I had. Alan, thanks for being with us tonight.

Alan Watt: Yeah, it's a pleasure.

Jackie: Yeah, cold and all.

Alan: Cold and all. Yeah.

Jackie: Well, you're sounding a whole lot better. Alan has been kind of down with a cold, and he was kind enough to come on with us this evening, folks. Alan, I have a letter here from a listener. I'm not going to read the entire letter, but I wanted to address this, and probably you'll have some relevant comments to make. And first, I want to thank our listener, who sent this to me, because I know that it was sent out of kindness, out of the goodness of your heart. It mentions a book, and the listener said that they heard the week before or two weeks before, and found out about the founding of America, Alan, and the Revolution and all that, and he said that I sounded despondent. And so, he sent pages of a book, or she, because the individual just said, concerned citizen. But the book is called Oashpe. Evidently it's published by the theosophical society. And it says that America's history is in this book. 25,000 years of history. And according to this book, America was ordered by the ordained, or ordered by the creator to bring liberty and light to the world. And that America was to be used to bring the, I'm not sure, it's handwritten, I don't know if it's Cosman or Coman Era in, but according to this book, Oashpe, Thomas Paine is the father of the American Revolution, and that seven of the founding fathers were graded 80 in the angelic realms, and it shows George Washington was under the guardianship of 1000 angels. And when I read this, it reminded me of me some years back, because I had read a book, I think it was called Climb the Highest Mountain, and I cannot remember the group that put it out. But there was a section in the book, it was about the White Brotherhood, Alan. And there was a section in the book about the Constitution, and how they were present, and how the Constitution was divinely inspired and as I told you recently, not too long ago in a conversation, I believed that that was true. And I believed that there could have been whatever we would call them, higher beings, there guiding our wonderful founders. And I would like to say, once again, thank you to our listener who sent this, and I want you to know that I did feel that way at one time, but there's enough evidence, there's just too much evidence. George Washington was an illuminist. He was a, was he a member of the Grand Orient, do you know, Alan?

Alan: He was a member of the Beenan Orden, which was the Illuminati Order; they use the beehive as their symbol. And every Illuminati Lodge was styled after the beehive. In all the Masonic paintings, the official Masonic paintings of Washington, you'll find the symbol of the beehive generally down towards the bottom of the portrait.

Jackie: You've got that photograph in one of your books. Is that the first book?

Alan: I think so, yeah.

Jackie: It's a photograph of a painting of George Washington, and there it is, the beehive down in the corner. Thomas Paine?

Alan: Well, Thomas Paine is a pain alright. You've got to remember, a lot of these guys adopted names of previous famous people, or else they were direct descendants of people, because one of the founders of the Knight Templar, his last name was Payen, which of course, put it into the English and you've got Paine.

Jackie: Payen, what language was that, Payen?

Alan: From the French. One of the nine knights, as they say, the nine knights who founded the Templars, one of them was Hugh de Payen. And so, it's no coincidence that you end up with a Payen, or a Paine, who was a world revolutionary, because once he was finished, he came from England after trying to get revolutions going there.

Jackie: Thomas Paine did?

Alan: Yeah, and he went to the U.S., and then he went over to France afterwards too.

Jackie: Probably he went over there with Lafayette.

Alan: Oh, he did. He was part of the Revolutionary in France, and he eventually got locked up by the guys who were leading the Revolution. It took a lot of pull from the US to get him free.

Jackie: Why'd they lock him up?

Alan: These were international revolutionaries.

Jackie: Well, why would they lock him up if they were the guys that were behind the revolution?

Alan: Because he thought it was getting out of control with the killing, or the bloodlust. He thought they would kill off the nobles, but they started to start to chop off the heads of ordinary people once they'd finished with the nobles, and he interjected to try and stop that. And that wasn't part of the agenda, obviously, and so they locked him up as well. And I think he also didn't agree with the end of the revolution. It was supposed to continue into other countries, and cause world revolution. That's also what he objected to, was basically they made it localized, just in France.

Jackie: So, in other words, then it sounds like the possibility that Thomas Paine actually believed in the revolution, because, you know, Alan, this is the thing that makes them seem so right, is that the feudal system under the monarchies. The people were enslaved, and of course, what we read is that the revolution is what got rid of the monarchies, and gave the people the democracies and all that. But is it a possibility that Thomas Paine actually thought it would be a good thing for the people?

Alan: It could very well be so. It's difficult to tell with a lot of these guys, because in a sense they're all politicians. They say one thing to the public, but they also do the opposite. It's difficult to say if he truly believed in this world revolution or he knew there was to be another plan that took over once it was completed. It's really hard to tell right now. I also know that the world revolutionaries were being trained from the 1500s onwards. It's like John Wilkes Booth, that shot Lincoln, John Wilkes Booth, he was named John Wilkes after a famous revolutionary of England, who kept getting locked up in the Tower of London for trying to cause revolutions in England. So his father named him after this revolutionary. So this is in the family type of thing. These guys were literally being taught and reared from childbirth to be revolutionaries. And of course it continued.

Jackie: So then they did believe in it.

Alan: And even then though, you see, to the ordinary working Joe who was basically illiterate, it was no different from the Communist, in fact, the Communist Party took over from the World Revolutionary Party. It was one and the same thing. And the guys at the bottom were given a different spiel about what the outcome was to be from the guys in the upper management level of the revolution. It was to be a scientific social revolution, where an upper elite would eventually run the lives of everyone at the bottom. Of course the working man was told something completely different. But they need the ordinary people to support them, the mob as they called them, to get them behind them and to fight for them. And that's what they did in Russia too, for the Soviet Union.

Jackie: Yes, and under those systems, the systems under which the people lived then, you know, you could understand the people wanting to be out from under it.

Alan: Sure, and they really thought they were going to make themselves free. But just as we saw what happened in the Soviet Union, if we jump back to the French Revolution, we see the emergence of a much, much deeper and long, you know, something that was planned out long before, obviously, because they had population reduction, population control, whole departments set up for this. They started to kill off people in the rural areas, because they wanted a certain figure in every region as they called it. And they were sinking people by the boatloads, just because they lived on this part of the land, and they wanted a fixed population, vastly reduced from what it was. And these were ordinary people they were killing, just peasants.

Jackie: Just to reduce the population.

Alan: That's always been part of this agenda. And it was the same in the Soviet Union. The Soviets slaughtered so many millions that no one can actually put a definite figure on it. It's over 60 million anyway, well over. And also, it was standard in the Soviet Union.

Jackie: When we say 60 million people, oh, 60 million people were slaughtered, a person has to stop and literally think about that. You think about, I thought about this. I thought about, Alan, I'm saying this for our listeners, to really get it folks, what he just said. For example, New York City, how many people are in New York, about, do you know Alan?

Alan: Oh, I have no idea what it would be now.

Jackie: We'll say 14 million maybe.

Alan: Yeah, in the greater.

Jackie: Yeah, in the greater, we'll say 15 million. Okay, we're talking 50 million. And I think about, okay, picture a city, let's say with the population of New York in it, and going into that city and every single individual in that city is dead. It brings the numbers into some sense of reality, because that's so far out to imagine that they could have killed 50, 60 million people. That is just almost beyond our ability to conceive of that.

Alan: And yet that was all part of a long-laid strategy, a plan, because Lenin, who obviously was tutored from childbirth for his particular coming role, started the Reign of Terror, exactly what they did in the Revolutionary France, the same technique. When you have no external enemy, no immediate external enemy, to control the public, you must create a terror within. And that's what the Soviet Union did. They started to pick up ordinary citizens, next-door neighbors, anybody would do. In fact Lenin sent out gangs of henchmen, and he told them, Trotsky talked about this in his book called "My Life" and Lenin ordered these gangs just to go into rural areas, and take a dozen men from each little place, hang them from the trees, and leave them there to rot. He said that will strike terror into the peasantry and they'll do what they're told. This is what you're dealing with with these great heroes, you know. You're dealing with absolutely ruthless sociopaths, and they look upon the ordinary people, the champions of the working man, eh. These people look upon the ordinary people as the lowest scum that walks the planet. That's what Communist followers can never get through their heads. It's a Scientific Socialism, based on Darwinism, which is the right of the fittest to survive and rule those who are less equipped to survive. That's the whole doctrine, really, of Communism.

Jackie: And they create the situation, or the environment, where those that are, you know, less able to survive, that's why they're less able to survive.

Alan: Yes, indeed.

Jackie: Because of the conditions. They create those conditions.

Alan: Yes. It's almost like someone having a cow and breaking the legs of that cow, and then being disgusted that the cow can't get up. That's what you find with the elite.

Jackie: That's a wonderful analogy.

Alan: They cause the problem, and then they despise the people who are sick or starving and unemployed and all the rest of it. So that's typical of how they rationalize everything they do. They always blame the victim rather than blame themselves, and that's psychopathic behavior.

Jackie: Well, you know, getting back to the American Revolution, it would be different if there wasn't so much evidence to point otherwise, the possibility, because it all made sense to us as we were growing up, and oh, this was the war for independence, you know, from Britain, but it's George Washington who was so big a part of that who was, he had Royal Blood, I understand. He was an illuminist.

Alan: He was trained by the British army.

Jackie: Yeah. And they knew exactly what America was being founded for, to do exactly what it's doing today.

Alan: And they put up that big obelisk in his honor. It wasn't a Christian cross. It wasn't anything to do with Christianity. It was an Egyptian obelisk they put up there for him.

Jackie: Right, exactly. And what's his name, Thomas Jefferson.

Alan: And Thomas Jefferson was an admitted illuminist. In fact, Thomas Jefferson in his own memoirs writes about Thomas Malthus whom he corresponded with. And Thomas Malthus was the guy who came out with the economic policy for killing off the excess population, due to economic reasons and how to feed them and starve them so they'd be too weak to run off on a plantation, that type of stuff.

Jackie: And you know, there's always these wonderful quotations you can find like the one that George Washington, I think it was his speech when he left office at the end of his presidential term and said, you know, to beware of tangling alliances with other nations and all of that. They had the American people in debt to Great Britain, right after the Revolutionary War, with the Peace Treaty. And even in the Constitution, all the debts owed to other nations have to be paid. And it was the banksters. And George Washington was the one that signed the first Bank of America in, what was it, a twenty-year thing that they had?

Alan: That's right. So, sure, I mean it's a serpent as they say, they always use their symbols in everything, and the Bank of America, BOA, is a boa, like a boa constrictor, you know. Put a Z on the end of it and you've got Boaz, you know, almost.

Jackie: Now, who was Boaz?

Alan: That's the Masonic Towers. There's always Twin Towers, the male and female, Jachin and Boaz. Boa, Boaz means also the serpent. And that's why boa is a boa constrictor. It's a serpent. So, the Bank of America has the clue right in it. These guys don't make any mistakes.

Jackie: No. Well, let's be careful, because they mean what they're saying, in other words. But I don't, I don't buy it that they don't ever make mistakes.

Alan: They literally created the language. The language we use is theirs. And that's what I mean by attention to detail. They don't come out with any abbreviations without there being another meaning behind it. Everything is like that.

Jackie: In other words, that's not a coincidence.

Alan: No, it's not.

Jackie: Right, they know what they're doing.

Alan: And of course then they brought Jacob Schiff over just in time for the American Civil War, and Schiff was doing the same deal. He was even involved in the ownership of the companies that made the uniforms for both the North and the South all through the Civil War. One of them you just simply dyed blue, the other one was gray, but they were identical otherwise. So it's just one scam after another, but the people keep falling for it. That's the problem. We never learn, you know. Think of the money too that was also borrowed for all the wars since the American Revolution. There's trillions and trillions supposedly in debt, although it's all bogus, and we know it's bogus, but as long as everybody believes in it, it goes on. And I can remember when the US owed one trillion dollars. And at that time they said if you put dollars end to end, it would stretch around the moon and back. And I don't know how many trillions of dollars the US owes now. So you can't pay this off, ever, and it's not intended to be paid off, obviously. How can you pay it off when your industry has gone overseas?

Jackie: Well, it couldn't be paid off anyway, because it's debt. It's loaned into circulation. It's a debt to begin with. And then they never print enough of these paper dollars and fives and whatever. They never print enough to have it in circulation to pay off the interest.

Alan: And also, a debt, if you are a debtor, you see, you are in slavery. If you are borrowing money, and you owe money, technically, even by the Old Testament rules, which are the Masonic rules, you are a slave. And everyone now flashes the cards for everything that they want.

Jackie: No, not everyone.

Alan: Well, the vast majority.

Jackie: The vast majority, yes.

Alan: The vast majority do that. It's a normal way of life now. In fact, they did studies recently, and they found that, I think, 70% of Americans and Canadians now are using the debtor cards and so on, and they don't handle cash at all.

Jackie: The debit cards, yeah. I would venture to say that the majority of our listeners on Sweet Liberty are not of that ilk that you were talking about. Because I get many, many of the donations that come in from money orders or cash. And because so many of our, I believe a lot of our listeners don't even have checking accounts. I have one. You know, to pay. I pay my public bills with it. You know, like the gas and electric and phone. But that's all I do. Everything else I do, I just do it cash. And it's just a principle. It's none of their business where I'm spending my money.

Alan: They also admitted now that they're issuing the same ID cards, it's to be used in the States, they're issuing it now in Britain. And they've also admitted it's now also to be used for your banking, as well. So it is to be part of the cashless society.

Jackie: Didn't they bring that out right after that? Wasn't it recent that they brought it out?

Alan: Yeah, they did.

Jackie: Right after that bombing.

Alan: Right after the fortunate bombings that happened right at the right time, when Blair was about to get tossed out of Parliament for all his lies, these friends, these terrorists, just helped him out there, you know. It's amazing how they always come to their. I noticed that with George Bush too, each time that he was plummeting in the polls, Bin Laden just magically would send out another video saying 'We hate America.' And Bush would come out and make his speech, and be the strong man, and suddenly his polls would go up again. It's such a pantomime, you know.

Jackie: Well, I'll tell you, Valentine, she's the lady that has, and I haven't mentioned this in a while, so I should. She did some really awesome stuff, you know, on these videos, these alleged videos by Osama Bin Laden, and she put each of them side by side by side, and every single one of them were different people Alan. She did an email of that thing, and it was just amazing.

Alan: Yeah, as I say, isn't it amazing that it's always when they need something to happen that something always does?

Jackie: Well, remember Clinton. Where did he go bomb? Right around the Lewinsky scandal.

Alan: Yeah, that's right. I remember that too.

Jackie: Yeah. Sudan?

Alan: He was dropping the cruise missiles over Iraq, every so often.

Jackie: Well, they were doing that ever since the first Iraq war.

Alan: Oh, yeah. I know.

Jackie: They were doing bi-weekly bombing runs. They had that country just absolutely blasted away before even the second Gulf War started, the Iraq War started.

Alan: As I say, the revolution goes on, and what we're living through now, is simply the next phase of the revolution, which is into the society, which they've written well about, in detail, in many publications, that's to be run by the experts and there will be no private rights of any kind for the ordinary people. And they want a very controlled population, right down to the exact number that they actually need for any particular job. Eventually, in the future they said that no one would be allowed to have a child unless they have a function for that child. So this is the next part of the same ancient revolution that's just ongoing, which they call scientific Socialism. It's run by Fascists at the top, of course, but it's a Socialistic, Communistic Bureaucracy System that's used to control all of the people.

(Commercial Break)

Jackie: I received a letter from a new listener, Alan. And this is the gentleman that had called you. He had sent a donation. He said he had been a listener for approximately two months, and he said, "I find your program quite an eye-opening, myth-busting experience." "I admire your courage to put this kind of repressed information out before the whole world. Count me as a person that your show is in the process of 'waking up'." He said, "I've sent for Alan's Book I. Last evening I spoke to him, via phone, to elaborate on some points I've heard him make on your show. He's a fascinating as well as enlightening person. Thank you for having such a guest, as well as the access." And that's from Bill in New York. And Bill, thank you. I appreciated that. It's nice. I always enjoy hearing from our listeners. And it's nice to know that we have new listeners coming in, that are waking up, Alan. Because there could be no other reason for doing this broadcast if it wasn't just to. And sometimes it does seem like a downer. I would like to do a broadcast one time, that's uplifting. You know what I mean? But it isn't the truth. Well, it isn't very. It is uplifting to know the truth, but the truth can hurt. And I do know that. And I think there's enough research and resourced information there that you will understand why I no longer buy into the America, the land of the free and the home of the brave that never was, from the beginning. It just never was. And I'm going to let Alan give you the information now on how you can get his books. Alan, go ahead, please.

Alan: Yes. There are three of them. They're called Cutting Through, One, Two, and Three. [See ordering information on transcript.] And I'll send them out just as soon as I can. And they go through a lot of the history of Freemasonry, pre-Freemasonry, and I go back thousands of years to show you how the money system was taking over countries, 2,000-3,000 BC, and how the armies were formed once they had the money system in circulation, and then they used one army to simply go and force the same system on the neighboring country, or the neighboring tribe, and this has gone on right up to the present time.

Jackie: Yeah, that's what's so mind blowing, to realize that it just goes back and back and back. And it's the same thing as like when you were telling about Sumer. At least 6,000 years ago. And the guy who wrote the book, what was it called, Alan? On Sumer. What was the name of the book?

Alan: The book on Sumer was Life Begins at Sumer, and they have a blurb there. It was written on slate by, they think it might have been a student, because they had a tremendous school system, 5,000 BC for the bureaucrats, these guys who become the priests, specialized priests in different areas, even real estate ones, and other ones went into law, and this guy said, I looked from the east to the west horizons and I see nothing but government buildings. And they taxed the people for everything, he said, when they'd bring in the fish, they were taxed for catching the fish. They were taxed when they sell the fish. He said, and even when the relatives come to the grave sites to put offerings on the graves, they come and they take the death duties, the death taxes. They take the food from the graves. And this was all government officials, 5000BC.

Jackie: And you're saying that this book was initially written back then?

Alan: Oh, no. I mean the translations.

Jackie: You said it was written on slate. Oh, he found all the information on slate.

Alan: They've dug up so much writing from Sumer, it's just amazing.

Jackie: And they've been able to interpret the language or to, what do you call it?

Alan: Oh, yeah. They have it down to a fine art, and it's nothing like the one that Zechariah Sitchin invented. They've dug up the remains of old schools where children at five years old and six years old who had been taught geometry and so on and trigonometry. This is common. So, man is far, far older than they'd have us believe, and they had advanced systems thousands of years ago. I'm sure Sumer simply was a sort of revamped system, a new system of a new age of its day, but there's no doubt that the knowledge came from a much earlier civilization. And they do talk about it in the tablets of Sumer, that at one time there were advanced civilizations and tremendous earthquakes hit the whole planet, and some of the continents sunk beneath the waves and took the cities with them, and new continents arouse out of the sea. So, man is far, far, far older than they'd have us believe. Of course, they don't want us to understand or even know that, because science has always been so far advanced from what the public will ever, ever know about. The gimmick is to make the people believe through the publications that they give us that they're just working on this, and they're looking forward to improving that one day, or inventing something. This stuff has all been done long ago. That's why it's called re-search.

Jackie: yeah, like hydrogen cars.

Alan: Yeah. Research.

Jackie: I read an article from California, some guy that had a hydrogen car, to use, I think it was from, oh, what the heck, oh, I can't remember. Demler, Dambler. He said it cost a million dollars to build that car. He was able to use it, so that he could experience it and then write about it. It was in, maybe The Chronicle, one of the California papers. But, Alan, what hogwash. They say, oh, that technology is about ten years down the road.

Alan: I know. No, you see, it was never intended that the American public drive forever. They only gave you that transportation during the industrial era. China is now having their industrial era, so they're putting down roads, they're giving them cheap cars and cheap gasoline.

Jackie: And do you know that the automobiles that are being manufactured and sent to China have none of the emission controls on them?

Alan: No, they don't need them, and they're pretty well hogwash anyway.

Jackie: Yeah, right. They're trading off the air. They're trading off the air pollution.

Alan: That's right. You pay a fee for it. It was never intended. Once America had finished its job, which it hasn't quite done yet. It's got to force the last of the remaining Moslem countries into the same system of democracy as they call it, with a central banking system, their debt system, and their paid politicians for front people. That's the last job that the US has to do. And as it's doing it and finishing it off, they're dismantling America back home. That's what they're doing.

Jackie: Yeah, do you want to hear something? This came right from the US EPA, Environmental Protection Agency's website, that there is a partnership between the US and Israel to monitor the quality of drinking water, Alan.

Alan: Well, actually, in 1967 the UN had its first water meeting in Israel. And it was in the newspapers at the time, and they said that water would be one of the prime moneys of the future. It would be actually used like money. And that Israel was heavily involved in the planning for the future shortages of water. So, I'm not surprised, you know. That was in the newspapers at that time.

Jackie: Yeah, well, US and Israel partnership.

Alan: They have partnerships across the world though, with just about everybody else, with one deal or another. And it's not a country either, you see. We keep falling into this trap of believing there's a country there or a country even here. There's always a handful of people that run every country, including Israel, you know.

Jackie: I suppose. I don't know if Israel is a corporation or not. But the US is actually, literally incorporated.

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: And do you think Canada is, is Canada a corporation?

Alan: All British Commonwealth countries are. That was where it first came from, was England.

Jackie: And, you know, comment on this. You know, George W Bush the President appointed Wolfowitz to be the head of the World Bank. How is it that the US President is in that position to appoint head of the World Bank?

Alan: Well, he's told what to do.

Jackie: That's not the point.

Alan: It's just to fool the public.

Jackie: What, like the World Bank is under the authority of the US?

Alan: That's what I'm saying. It's to fool the public. The public must believe their government is real.

Jackie: Well, you know, it occurred to me, and it just occurred to me today, that maybe the World Bankers, the International Bankers own the US corporation now. Maybe they own the corporation now. Maybe they own the corporation, Alan.

Alan: I wouldn't be surprised at all.

Jackie: Because, otherwise, how could you, okay. I mean it's just there has to be an explanation how the US President appoints the head of the World Bank.

Alan: Well of course it's nonsense. The President is only a front man. The Prime Minister of Britain is only a front man. And that's well understood in Britain.

Jackie: Well, I know that. I know they're front men. I know they're puppets. The point is, there has to be some legality here. You know, they got this twisted, you know, legal system. The Treasurer, the Secretary of the Treasury is the Governor of the International Monetary Fund, Alan. And I've got the newspaper article that says it. I mean, I know newspapers lie too, but sometimes they print the truth.

Alan: They have to fool the public to make them believe their government is real and powerful.

Jackie: But what does that tell us about the US government inc? If we aren't a closely held corporation by the international bankers. It, I should say, not we, but we are the, what do you call it, the assets.

Alan: That's right. We are. We're supposed to keep paying off the debt, and your children's children and so on, for evermore, you know. So that is true. We are all collateral for the debt.

Jackie: Collateral, yes.

Alan: And that's no different from the feudal system. That's what you were. You served the lord. You had no rights whatsoever, because you were born into slavery as a slave. Only they called it serf. They changed the English language a little bit, and called them serfs, because slavery was a bit too upfront, you know. So they hid it behind the term serf, but yeah, you own nothing. You gave 60% of all your produce to the lord. And what was left had to feed you, your animals and your helpers, you know. And when you work out the income taxes today and the hidden taxes, the average person is paying about the same amount of money in taxes. So serfdom or feudalism is still here.

Jackie: Oh, I bet lots more today.

Alan: It's actually more in Britain, actually, and Canada. So this con game has gone on forever. And it was Charles Galton Darwin that said in his book, The Next Million Years, and that's quite a boast for the illuminati, he said himself that there has always existed a form of slavery, and we are simply creating a more sophisticated form of slavery, where the slave will never realize that he is actually a slave.

Jackie: The perfect slave believes he's free.

Alan: That's right. So they give you brass bands, and you wave flags and stuff, and you know, you get parades. And you're allowed to buy your auto to get to work to pay for that clapboard house that you put up there and pay the taxes on it. So we're just a more efficient form of slave, where we don't really need to be guarded all the time. We even buy our own clothes out of what's left over. And our work boots, you know. So, yeah, it is a more sophisticated form of slavery.

Jackie: And you have to have a license to do everything.

Alan: Well, everything is a privilege, you see, in a democracy.

Jackie: Well, and the definition of a license, their own definition, is, it gives you the right to do something that would otherwise be illegal.

Alan: Yeah, that's why it's a lie on your senses. It's lie-sense.

Jackie: Lie-sense. Yeah. It's a lie on your senses. Wow, yes.

Alan: Because, yeah, sure. That's exactly what it is. You pay a fee, you pay money, then you can do it.

Jackie: So, it would be illegal to fish, see. I mean, basically that's what they're saying. You have to get a license to fish. And so they're giving you permission with this license to do something that other, so, they just make every, they make living illegal.

Alan: Oh sure they do. In fact, it's no different from the Soviet Union, where you cannot do something during the course of your day, if they want to they can get you because you'll break one law or another just walking up the road, you know. And that's what it's come down to. Most of the laws are on the books in case they ever want to pull you in. Anybody, that is, in. That's why they don't take laws off the books. No, we're living in a prison. It's just that you don't see the bars until you try to walk out of that prison without permission. Then people appear out of nowhere that you never saw before with strange badges in plainclothes and you find out, my God, there's another world out there that I knew nothing about.

Jackie: That's right. Goethe, was that, that there's none more hopelessly enslaved than he who believes he's free.

Alan: Yes. But sure, I mean, how can you be free, when you're born as an asset, basically, to pay off a debt?

Jackie: And you have to get a certificate of your birth.

Alan: Even Thomas Jefferson, who was a member of the Illuminati, and this is the amazing thing. The Illuminati spoke openly, because they knew the public would take it one way, where they could take it themselves another way, the same statement. But he did say that a generation born into paying off a debt incurred by a previous generation, are therefore born into slavery. And he said that it's possible, you know, in a different system, he said, for every generation to write off the debt of a previous generation. And he talked about that. So, they knew all this stuff. They knew it all, at that particular time. They were well aware of it all.

Jackie: And just because he said it, and he's quoted it, people think that he said it as a warning.

Alan: They always give you a legal warning. And it's like Benjamin Franklin, saying, what have we got? Well, a republic, if you can keep it. That's the same tongue in cheek. It's man speaks with a forked tongue, you know. He's giving two different statements, depending on whose point of view you take it from, the Illuminati's or the man in the street. In other words, Franklin knew darn well from the beginning that you'd never keep it. It wasn't intended that you would keep it. Because you never really had it.

Jackie: Right, exactly. Thomas Jefferson made a statement about revolution, that something about every twenty years, that maybe there needs to be a revolution.

Alan: That's to clear out the ones at the top, because they become lazy, corrupt, and they start immediately to try and get their offspring into the same positions. And Jefferson admitted that, that as soon as they had the older guys beginning to retire from government, they were already getting their offspring in. Benjamin Franklin tried to get his son, his son was called Temple, by the way. He tried to get him into a government position, but he was unsuccessful. Other members did get their offspring into position. So you end up with these hereditary oligarchies, basically. And it's no different today. I mean, you get Bush #1, Bush 2, Bush 3, you know, it goes on and on and on. And they're all intermarried, so it doesn't matter what name they use. If you go back in their histories, you'll find they're all cousins. So, yeah, you're voting in an oligarchy.

Jackie: Well, yes. Just a reminder, that evidently Bush and Kerry were third cousins.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Both members of Skull and Bones.

Alan: And the royalty of Europe.

Jackie: And the royalty of Europe, yes.

Alan: And that was published by Burke's Peerage, which is the Queen's official genealogist. So, it's true. These guys are all related to royalty and I really don't understand why people keep falling for it and voting for people who promise them things, but never, never live up to it.

Jackie: Well, basically it comes down to this, it doesn't matter who you vote for today. I mean, it never did anyway, because they always gave us our choices to let us think we had a choice. And I found that out fairly early on. But today, with the way they can skew the votes, it doesn't matter who you vote for. Even if there was somebody decent running, whoever they want in office is going to get in office. Period.

Alan: It's arranged before the fact, you know, for the public.

Jackie: Well, yeah. I mean, Bush didn't win the first one. He didn't win the second one. Not that I would want Gore. I mean, that's not the point. But evidently they felt that GW would be able to suck in more people, and I think they were right. I can't tell you how many people that I've heard make statements such as, thank God we have a Christian, a president who's a Christian. And many, many people really believe it, that God told him to go to war to Iraq.

Alan: Yes. Well, I have no time for people who follow, anyway. In fact, that's one of the Illuminati's most powerful assets, is the fact that people are so willing to be organized into camps to follow, and all you have to do is put your guy in at the top of the camp. So, rather than persuade a few million people, you've got one guy in charge of them all, and he does all the talking, you know. That's the secret about creating groups. And you've always got followers, which are easy to take over, by putting in your own man. That's what they've done for thousand of years. The same nonsense, you know. So, it's the 87% of the population, who are followers, and unfortunately, they're always with us, as followers. And that's the way it is. They've done studies on this at universities for the last hundred years. And they find it consistent that 87% of the public in any country don't care who's in charge, as long as they can carry on with their lifestyle as it is at the moment.

Jackie: Well, then, as their lifestyle continues to change, they still want their lifestyle as it is. No matter how terrible it's become.

Alan: They adapt so quickly, and that's why they used the term that man was made out of malleable clay, as early as Egypt. Made on the potter's wheel. And, of course, that was copied into the Old Testament. What they meant by that was, man was the most adaptable creature on the planet. He adapts so quickly to every circumstance that's thrust upon him. And as Zbigniew Brzezinski said, when he was asked what he thought of the ordinary people, wouldn't they rebel if the US ever, you know, clamped down and took their rights away, Brzezinski said, he said, what do I think of the people? He said, well, put it this way, you can beat them, you can starve them to death, and do they rebel? He says, no, they just turn round and eat their dead. So that's what we're dealing with here. These people understand the human nature. They know that people will put up with tremendous hardships, horrible hardships, before they'll do anything about it. And often, when they do something about it, their backs are against the wall, they're unorganized, and it's too late for them. And they know this too. That's why they give us false leaders to follow, on every side of every thing. So, they understand this, perfectly well.

Jackie: Yes, they do. We're out of our hour. And I thank you very much for being with us here tonight, Alan.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: Yes. And ladies and gentlemen, we'll be back with you, tomorrow night. I still don't have my printer working, and there are, there are a few things that I have been wanting to share with you, but I can't get them printed out. And Alan is very gracious, always, to come on with us, and add so much. Well, just basically without, I don't know what I'd be doing right now, Alan. Thanks a lot. Alright, folks. We'll see you tomorrow night.

Alan's Materials Available for Purchase and Ordering Information:

BOOKS "Cutting Through"

Volumes 1, 2, 3

& "Waiting for the Miracle....."

Also available in Spanish or Portuguese translation: "Esperando el Milagro....."
(Español) & "Esperando um Milagre....." (Português)

Ancient Religions and

CDs

History MP3 CDs:
Part 1 (1998) and Part 2
(1998-2000)

&

Blurbs and 'Cutting Through the Matrix' Shows on MP3 CDs (Up to 50 Hours per Disc)

DVDs

"Reality Check Part 1" & "Reality Check Part 2 - Wisdom, Esoterica and ...TIME"

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" (Solo)
August 2, 2005

Dialogue Copyrighted Alan Watt – August 2, 2005 (Exempting Music and Literary Quotes)

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Good evening ladies and gentlemen. This is Alan Watt standing in for Jackie's who's suffering from some battle fatigue right now and I hope to take you through an hour of various types of information.

Today is the 2nd of August, 2005 and as most of you probably know by now, I live up here in Canada, further north from Toronto, and our temperatures hit 110 degrees today and it stayed in the 90s right until about 8:00 p.m. While this was happening of course they were spraying the skies with their beautiful new trails, which they've been laying for some years now and perhaps those who watch more consistently will notice the different types which they've been creating in the last year or so, which are different from the first chemtrails that we used to see.

They're becoming rather artistic with it and today along with all the usual little fluff balls with the curly tails they're creating, there was actually a three-legged swastika, like a nebula and of course the three-legged swastika is the symbol for the Isle of Man, where a lot of the wealthy rich of Britain do their banking, so I thought that was quite a coincidence to watch this being made above your head.

Another thing too that people are noticing – people who wear glasses or sunglasses are having to clean them much more often than they used to because of an oily film keeps developing on the glass, and this is from the polymer, which gives you that hazy look in the sky when they're spraying, it's from the polymer coming down to ground level. They're really laying it on now with advanced science and as we're all well aware, there's no one in the regular media going to go anywhere near this subject. They won't touch it with a barge poll, so they've all got their standing orders they're out the door and probably so is there pension too if anyone tries to inform the media.

The media being what it is, mind you, hand-picked in the first place, individually it's no hard job to get them to comply because they're a bunch of prostitutes as far as I'm concerned. They've been selling the people down the river for many, many years and they're all for of course this whole New World Order, and amongst the journalistic class you'll find they believe themselves they're part of the elite because they are really the fourth estate. They're an essential part of government and always have been and they give the public the view they're supposed to believe in on all topics.

They give us our diversions – our topics of conversation. They dish it out to us everyday, right down to trivialities which don't affect anybody, but they will not touch any of the main subjects like the Bilderberger meetings or the main CFR meetings, which is coupled with the Royal Institute of International Affairs which was set up back in the late 1800's in Britain to bring in a world government based on the English style of democracy which is under royalty. We must never forget that, that the top of Britain, being a model for the world for this particular system, you still have the monarchy and the aristocracy and all of the relatives of the monarchy basically – we called it "the establishment" in Britain. They run the show and they tell Parliament what to do and any politician who's really clawing to get up there – and that's basically a criterion to be a politician, you want to climb up there, they do what they're told by the establishment and put the bills through that they're told to put through.

Really, we live in a world which is almost like the movie the "MATRIX," where although the Matrix took place in a sort of Internet system – an Internet reality, this is the reality here. We're living through it and we can't unplug our heads from the actual Internet once we feel tired. We've got to play this game everyday and those who are aware of what's been going on and following what's going on, I'm sure everyone's feeling a form of fatigue simply by understanding the horror show which we're living in today. Those who have done the research themselves and the studying, I'm sure, can't help but come to that conclusion that we are living in a nightmare because those behind all of this wrote about their whole plan centuries ago. In the 18th century and into the 19th century there's quite a few of the mouthpieces that put out books detailing the agenda and even time tables.

Lenin talked about it coming in at the end of the millennium and into the new, that's when the big changes would take place in the West, and he said that in about 1915. This is an old, old time we're living through.

Charles Galton Darwin who spoke on behalf of the elite in his book "The Next Million Years" talked about the necessity in a post-industrial Western society of depopulating all of the 'useless eaters,' you might say, to borrow a phrase from Bertrand Russell. They believed that everyone exists for their economic system. That's what our function is and of course today we are living not only in a post-industrial era – the industries have been moved off to China, we're post-technological as well and even all the computer industries basically are farmed out to the Far East as well.

We really only have one function left and apart from consuming all the goods that are brought in from the Far East, we are supposed to be the world's policemen and force the rest of the world—the Muslim countries—into the same system that we live under.

We are economic units in a very sophisticated system, which did not evolve by itself. It was planned this way. Every part was planned in minute detail.

The public's response to every part of the plan has been worked out like a battle plan in advance and psychologists and sociologists helped put all this together to give us our news and how we should cope with our news and what we should think about our news; it's all done for us. Whereas we ourselves have to sit back and be downloaded and then just parrot what we're told. That's how simple this Skinnerian system really is.

It's not difficult when you realize that thousands of think tanks are employed full-time to plan your thoughts for the future and what you're going to experience in the future and in fact down to how you'll react to those experiences in the future, so we are in the Matrix as I say and we can't get unplugged so easily.

One of the problems we have at the moment of course is the barrage of even shortwave news, which goes on incessantly about the minute details and you get a blow by blow account of what they are doing to us – the big THEY, you see, and what countries are doing the saber rattling towards America such as China and so on. That's all nonsense because the boys who own the West also own lock, stock and barrel China and no one in China acts on his own.

They take orders from the same elite, the global elite who set them up in business and financed them; apart from us of course, because we did finance the moving of industry under the GATT Treaty, we paid for factories to move from Canada, the States and Europe to China and we paid for the transportation of all tooling and machinery. We also signed treaties that we would pay all losses that those firms would incur during the first five years of operation.

Canada gave them two or three Can Do nuclear reactors and they gave them the reactors. At the time John Chrétien was the prime minister and he came back from China with his big jumbo jet full of businessmen, not ordinary businessmen obviously but corporate leaders, which the taxpayers funded once again. He said, oh, we'll have jobs, jobs, jobs; but what he didn't say was the jobs are all in China. He said, we've got a good deal with selling these nuclear reactors to China; and they mentioned the figures in the billions but then about four months later in the Toronto Sun, half way through the paper in between sports and sex and everything else, there was one paragraph that said, "an update on the Can Do Reactors to China," and that was China would not have to begin payment back to Canada for 25 years; and if they still felt they couldn't make the payments, it would be postponed for another 25 years.

Now Canada doesn't have billions to throw around and what they didn't say was Mr. Chrétien borrowed from the World Bank the money to loan to China. The taxpayers of Canada were the guarantors for that loan, so we pay off the whole loan and that's how these scams all work you see.

They don't even bother as the Communists supposedly did, they didn't even bother to steal your money quietly; they had to lie about it too, and of course we have great liars in the West as politicians. No matter how much respect they've been trying to gain for themselves through propaganda and the media building them up to be a holier than thou and astute upright men.

It's amazing how our forefathers understood that politicians were basically liars. That's what they do. They're very good liars and many of them are lawyers as well and I'm sure it's no coincidence that LIAR and LAWYER sound very much alike you know. These guys have sold us all out for their own personal ends and gain and they also get superior medical treatment.

I think it was four or five years ago – maybe six years ago an odd thing happened in the Western countries where the politicians murmured about a deal being made that they and their relatives would be TREATED FOR LIFE at very top military establishments. That was another perk that got added to it all and of course I wondered why in this great democracy, where we're all supposedly treated equally, that the general population has to wait in sort of factory queues to get in to see a doctor; because that's what we have in Canada basically. You might have to schedule an appointment two months in advance and by that time you're either dead or cured, one of the two.

We live in a fantasy land where our thoughts are dished out to us by experts. Our topics of conversation are doled out to us and they understand human nature. They've always understood human nature.

MAN HAS BEEN THE MOST PERFECTLY STUDIED CREATURE ON THIS PLANET and the creatures who do the studying of course have been here for thousands of years too; and since knowledge is power, knowledge is never lost. It's put into places called ARCHIVES.

For the public you get public libraries and of course that's all AUTHORIZED public libraries. Every book in there is authorized for your consumption, but YOU WILL NEVER SEE or get access to the REAL ARCHIVES where the REAL INFORMATION is kept.

When I was at school in Scotland, I can remember getting this vague history of Scotland and how it tried to stop the Normans from coming in and it was successful to a great extent, except the nobles began to intermarry with them and they took over the lordships through marriage. Scotland fought the Romans before that - could not defeat.

The Normans couldn't come in either with an army because they were being defeated as well, so they simply used money, bribery and inter-marriage to take over Scotland. However, trying to get the history of Scotland from our schools was a difficult task. What I found out later was that since Scotland was a colony of England then technically they didn't want any bad news being given to the Scots, like what happened in Scotland in the 1800's when they cleared the highlands in the 1700's and 1800's. They put off millions of people into rickety old boats to go to the new world or Australia or wherever they were sending them and they were being forced off at the point of the gun. Many of the boats sank just off the coast and the relatives on the shoreline could watch their relatives dying and drowning.

ALL OF HISTORY WAS WIPED OUT OF THE HISTORY BOOKS BY A DECREE FROM LONDON so that the Scots would never be upset about London and the way its run its country. This is the type of whitewashing we've had throughout history and it goes along with the plans and the format set out by John Dewey, who said himself that all conflicts, past conflicts between nations, when it comes to the defeated nations, they would basically be wiped off the records so no one will know.

However, I was very lucky in that I had an adult reference library and reference books went back to 1500's and they had documentation from even the newspapers in the 1600's and 1700's, and so I found out I was being taught nothing but lies in school as far as history went. There I am, at night, going to the libraries and studying up on what really happened and what really happened was a horror show.

People visit Scotland today and they look around the highlands and see it's so beautiful, this empty barren countryside and hills and mountains and so on, and what they fail to realize is if the highlanders hadn't been kicked off their land, it wouldn't be so bare and barren as it is today. That was the technique used by London, which really was an ancient Middle Eastern technique that had been used in ages past, where they in the times of Nero and Caesar and so on they moved people around the world at will. Anyone who caused them trouble they simply moved them off their land and put them into another country. That was standard operating procedure and this was going on right up to the present time.

We find the U.S. went into Somalia. The next thing we know, there are documentaries on the CBC television in Canada and they're showing you these high rises built to house the Somalians who left Somalia and the Canadian government (our taxpayers) flew them all in and supported them. This idea of kicking people off their land is not new.

In present day Iraq, the U.S. is still attacking various towns. They have a rotation schedule where they go in and bomb it and strafe it and cause terror, and a lot of people are moving away. That's the point of it all. They want them to move.

When we look at this technique of getting people to move who are obstinate and no one likes leaving the country they've been born into, we have to look at the U.N. agenda. Anyone – everyone can move from the rural areas in every country and move into these habitat areas as they call them – human habitat areas.

These artificial compounds you might call them too, where you see in their own website – I haven't checked it but I've had good documentation sent to me on the subject, and THEY SAID THERE'LL BE NO PRIVATE PROPERTY.

There will be NO OWNERSHIP OF VEHICLES either, automobiles. Public transportation only and of course your life from BIRTH TO DEATH will be watched and observed and regulated by EXPERTS, you see, NGO experts, and they have experts for everything and that goes right back to the format of Bertrand Russell.

Lord Bertrand Russell who experimented with school children back in the early 1900's long before Skinner and he brought in the FREE LOVE thing too. That was another mandate which they knew they'd have to use. Bertrand Russell pushed this FREE LOVE AND NO MARRIAGE, just go from one partner to the next, and he was encouraging the children in these special controlled schools that he'd set up to do this very thing. Then they studied the psychological effects on the children who went through all of this and they followed their lives right through their entire lives.

They tried to implement the same program in the 1920's, "the roaring 20's," by making booze cans naughty but nice, you see. Taboo but nice. The very thing that teenagers flock to. THEY brought in the mini skirt at that time.

THEY brought in booze and sex, just do it, and these sort of dance songs to go with it; but because of all the pregnancies that occurred from it, they had to start building like crazy Boy's Towns and Girl's Towns all over the place to accommodate the offspring. They didn't have all the abortion clinics to take care of the fallout you see. They didn't have the medical facilities to take care of all the venereal disease, which also skyrocketed in the 1920's, and so they went back to their desks again and drew up the plans and then THEY worked hard to get the PILL.

That was a prime priority and they thought well better than just booze we'll bring out drugs – hallucinogenic drugs like LSD, which if you just speak LSD, you've got LUCID, and lucid is clear and is ANOTHER NAME FOR LUCIFER, which is just a little joke that they throw in there; but they brought out the drugs in the '60's with the rock and roll.

They called it a revolution in music, a revolution in sex and they had the abortion clinics ready, the private ones that you could pay for, and they also had the street medical facilities where you could walk in and get shots for any venereal disease that you might have picked up.

These guys don't give up. They never alter their agenda, by the way. They simply take it back to the drawing board and try to iron out any problems that they have. When we realize how old this agenda is and that it happened long before—it was on the go long before you were born, long before FDR. You go back into the days of Sumer. The RABBIS themselves talk about THE AGENDA beginning around 4,500 BC.

AN AGENDA WHICH WAS TO TAKE OVER THE ENTIRE PLANET UNDER ONE GOVERNMENT, ONE RULE WITH AN ELITE TO RULE IT and every facet of humanity to be run by experts. They don't like this untidy method of people being individualistic and deciding what they want to work at or what they want to do for themselves and going off and maybe building a place here or there. It's just too untidy for them you see.

We're dealing with CONTROL FREAKS and these control freaks just don't let up. They can't let up. That's their nature. They want it to be under their control and they'll decide where you live, how we live and what we say and everything else and what we do. This again was all experimented with within the Soviet Union where they did have school-to-work.

You were tested at the age of five and six for any special qualities or any areas of study and then they said okay you're going to be an engineer and you're going to be a laborer and you're going to be a plumber, and you were only taught what you had to be taught to make you a plumber or an engineer. You didn't get any extra curriculum or any extra history or geography or science. It was irrelevant to the controllers.

All you had to know was how to do your job when you left school and that is the same idea that's coming here. It's too untidy you see to have people being taught all these different things and then deciding what they want to do. Why not save the bucks, train them in one area only and you have a dumb stupid population who don't know very much except how to fix taps, perhaps, or make a technical drawing on something. That society is a very easily managed society because they're kept in ignorance of all the other generalities and studies.

Therefore, from a controlled pre-point of view that would be perfection you see and we know where it's going from there. We know that Arthur Koestler or "Kaus-ler" depending on how you pronounce it, which is K-O-E-S-T-L-E-R, he worked for Stalin as an officer and he helped starve the people in the Ukraine. He talks about it in a book which he wrote called, "The Ghost in the Machine," and "The Ghost in the Machine" by the way is the illusive part that psychiatrists that can't pin down. It's you. It's the essence which is you. The real you.

It's illusive to these characters and so Arthur Koestler came from his communist country as a communist officer and he went over and taught in universities in the United States in New York. He was attached to the United Nations and he worked in think tanks – global think tanks where different groups of scientists had their specialty all working from their own area of expertise on the same subject. The subject was: how do we remove that part of the brain in individuals that gives them their personal identity? It lets them know that you are you, distinct from other people. His expertise was in the psychological approach coupled with drugs and he also worked with surgeons who were doing various kinds of lobotomies and so on, when they were pretending that was a cure for depression.

They had lots of people to experiment on and many people came back to the U.S. from abroad in the military in World War II and they were having pre-frontal lobotomies – actual post-orbital. It's behind the eye and this was supposed to be a treatment for the battle fatigue and the shock they'd gone through. Meanwhile of course they all got studied for the rest of their lives to see how it affected their personality. Koestler had all this information and he was trying to find new ways for the near future in how to do the same thing.

HOW DO WE DESTROY THAT PART OF THE PERSON THAT MAKES THEM AN INDIVIDUAL? because individuals you see are very problematic. They take whims and fancies. They go through fads. They're just not controllable you see. People who are sovereign individuals want to do their own thing and the elite just can't have that. It's just too messy and too untidy for their system.

Koestler worked with other surgeons, with chemists and so on, and they found ways that they could target a specific area of the brain and knock it out, basically. You might call it a chemical castration of the brain. They didn't want to destroy your higher abilities of mathematics and passing on information and so on. What they wanted to do was to stop the individual analyzing abilities on particular topics. In other words, you could repeat stuff but you couldn't think of it yourself.

Now the break's coming up, so I'll be back shortly in just about three minutes and I'll see you on the other side.

My name is Alan Watt and I have three books for sale. I go through a lot of the history of the last few thousand years in this agenda. I go through freemasonry and I don't begin with the usual nonsense that it all started with the guilds – the tradesmen guilds in the Middle Ages. No, that was only a small part of it. It's been here for thousands of years and secret societies are well documented in Ancient Rome. If you want one or all the books, [see www.cuttingthroughthetmatrix.com for ordering information].

You can contact me if you have something to talk about; I don't like "preachers" because I don't need to be "saved." I always say that Jesus saves but I'm not sure what bank he uses; and since people today have no idea what it really means, although they've been told by the World Council of Churches that they think they know what it means, they're just whistling in the dark and so are most of their followers.

Religion is one of the prime means of mind control. Yes, it gives comfort because it designed it to do so, but it doesn't give you answers to anything and it also tells you to obey government. That obviously was tacked in there by the priests who took over in Rome.

It's so odd that they're following a man who was killed for his viewpoints and for speaking out freely against the corruption of his age and spoke out against the priesthoods who ran the religion – he spoke out against the bankers who were in cahoots with the priests, as they always are, and they killed him for it, you see. In the New Testament somewhere in Paul somebody added, "obey government because it's put there by God."

Well, if you believe that, then don't decry Adolf Hitler because he was elected into government. Don't decry Bonaparte Napoleon when he took over. Don't decry Lenin. In other words, every tyrant that was put in under your own philosophy was put there by God, so that's your problem and you'll have to deal with that yourselves, especially when you're following someone who definitely spoke out against it. That's your doublethink of today.

Now getting back to Arthur Koestler working the think tanks for the United Nations, he did say that they were successful by different means, by chemicals and I've no doubt they used sodium fluoride, which is in the tap water in the cities. It's in the toothpaste. It was used in the Soviet Union and it was also used by Nazi Germany because they knew the affects of it. It slowed down the brain. It slowed your intellect, but Koestler also talked about more efficient biochemical means where they could actually attach organisms if they want to, like viruses or bacterium, to specific hormones which go straight to your brain and attack that vital area.

Once again, this part of the brain they want to knock out is you. It's who you are. It's what gives your ability to perceive yourself as a distinct independent individual, distinct from others, but that's a nuisance you see to the controlling elite. They have to use massive media and propaganda to keep each individual happy today.

They've got all these services out there and they put sports on for people to keep them occupied or movies with sex or violence and all this kind of stuff, but the fact is: if they could possibly destroy that part of the brain, they wouldn't need all of this anymore. Maybe that's the right way to go because we wouldn't need the media anymore either.

I wonder if they've thought of that, what happens to them when they're no longer required? What happens to all the sports commentators too, and all the networks when they're no longer required? Because under that last meeting that was held – World Meeting of Scientists, sponsored and paid for by the U.S. Department of Commerce and headed off or kicked off by Newt Gingrich, which didn't appear in the newspapers, these characters, these scientists have a chip ready to implant in the brain. Lo and behold, the main scientist from Japan said, IT WILL BE THE END OF INDIVIDUALITY AS WE KNOW IT.

It will be more like the beehive in fact he said because everyone will be interlinked with a regional computer, which will direct them as one would direct a robot. They won't need media to keep people happy because people will be quite dumb and happy as their program tells them to be. They won't need the sports. They won't even need politicians eventually. I wonder if they've thought what they're going to do or what their function would be in such a future, because POLITICIANS OUTSIDE OF THEIR JOB ARE THE MOST USELESS CREATURES YOU'LL EVER MEET.

The men don't know anything about fixing anything or how anything works. All they do is sit and scheme and their job is to get other people to work for them. That's what politicians do. THEY'RE PSYCHOPATHIC PERSONALITIES.

They have no function in any other system than this one.

As I say, Arthur Koestler wrote about it in "The Ghost in the Machine" and that book is definitely, definitely worth a read and in the last chapter he goes through the whole agenda and he thinks it's just wonderful that they'll have peace on the planet.

There'll be this strange utopia for THE ELITE, WHO WILL NOT by the way TAKE A CHIP or HAVE THEIR MIND ALTERED IN ANY WAY because they have to GUIDE THE PLANET. As he said, and as Charles Galton Darwin said, and as a scientist at the Loyola University meeting said, he said that only the elite will need their faculties because they will be guiding the ship. In other words, their ability for self-survival, self-preservation will be functioning; whereas the masses will not because the masses will have all their problems taken care of for them by the state.

This Borg mentality that they showed us in the Star Trek movies, the original "Bee," that's what Borg stands for, by the way, we're the 'worker bee,' and they lived in square space ships because they were the ashlar – the Masonic ashlar, they were squared. They were not natural. They were part cyborg and everyone was connected to a central computer, just like they talked about at the meeting at Loyola University and they have the technology to do this.

At that meeting they said the only problem they have at the moment is convincing the public to accept it. That's the only problem. They have everything ready to go. It's been tried and tested over many years on unsuspecting people and they want to go ahead with the beginning in 2009 and hopefully they said they'd have it completed by 2018 or 2019. Politics, by the way, wasn't mentioned once at this meeting – this meeting which churned out 600 pages of their agenda and was totally ignored by the media, although many of the media guys were present.

They said that they will promote this from kindergarten. They'll promote it as a positive thing in school. They'll promote it through all novels, all magazines, all fiction writings and the movies.

Now these guys didn't say we would like it to be promoted. No, they said it's going to be promoted and that's how things really work you see in this matrix that we live in.

They didn't mention politics because they're well aware that politics is a sideshow for the public. Many years ago they found out that the PUBLIC WOULD REBEL and OVERTHROW TOTAL CORRUPTION so they came up with this thing called DEMOCRACY, where if you think you can change the system every four years, you go ahead and vote. Then after the next four years, well, we'll vote for someone else. That stops them from having all these problems, as they fill their pockets with our money at the top and as they make us work for less money or devalue the money or rob us from our taxes et cetera and hand it out to their corporate buddies and foreign shores.

If you wonder why Africa is poor, read the agendas. Read the great economist John Stewart Mill who wrote about it in the 1800's that the BLACK MAN was to be basically ERADICATED because he would not fit in to the Western economic system. He said some will survive and his own words were because they can mimic the white man, but those who couldn't mimic the white man were to be eradicated. We see AIDS decimating Africa, absolutely, and we know too it was definitely small pox – the free small pox shots the UN went around and gave them all and tried to blame on the failure to change needles from one person to the next, which was a nice cover story because the AIDS virus is well documented, including the funding to create this thing which could destroy a person's auto-immune system, and so a common cold would turn into chronic bronchitis or pneumonia and kill you. That's how it works.

THIS IS A HORROR SHOW WE DO LIVE IN and those people who are on the air and who are genuine (and not all of them are), understand this and have to live with this knowledge everyday. They're not off chasing UFO's like Art Bell or worried if NASA can make it with the next space drama, as a tile comes off and all this nonsense. No, this is to suck you in and support NASA, which does nothing really except put up satellites up there which work in conjunction with HAARP and to spy on you. That's NASA's main job. That's what it does you know.

Those on the shortwave who know what's happening have to live with the knowledge everyday. They have to cope with the reality and the bleakness because we're going through a bleak period right now. Everyone who's aware is sensing something coming quickly – "something wicked this way comes," as they used to say. We know there is more and more restrictions especially in rural areas with what you can and cannot do and they're passing laws all the time.

We know that gasoline's been pushed up and Mr. Rumsfeld at least on the media up in Canada announced that gasoline might double. He said it's going from $70 a barrel to $140 a barrel and that was a trial balloon. They do this once in a while to test out the public reaction as they do their quiet polls all over the place. As long as the media doesn't follow it up – and they don't, and the public is trained only to think about what the media tells them to think about, so if the media seems concerned about something, then so are the public.

Zbigniew Brzezinski documented all of this in "Between Two Ages," one of his books, in the Technetronic Era. The Technetronic Era is the era we live in and it's an era where they used advanced secret technology. Advanced secret from the public, but really old technology, such as the HAARP program coupled with satellites and so on, to once again do their favorite little act, which is to try and control the minds of the public.

HAARP is beaming out now 24 hours of every single day. They step up the power when they really go to town and spray the skies non-stop and this has a tremendous effect on our weather. They can either cause thunderstorms or they can spray over thunderstorms and dissipate them. That's why there's a drought in many areas, so they can do both.

This is OLD TECHNOLOGY going back to TESLA, at least Tesla, although I doubt it, to be honest with you, because if you read about the ETRUSCANS who were the ones WHO BUILT ALL OF THE SUBTERRANEAN TUNNELS UNDER ROME PRIOR TO ROME and the Etruscans were also the people who had tremendous engineering.

They taught the Romans how to build. That's where they got all their ideas and engineering skills for the aqueducts everywhere they went, because wherever you go the first thing you must do is steal the water you see and that's what the Romans did.

The Etruscans used to be called in to Rome on high, high festival days, which were just like today. They're all linked to sunrise, sunset or stars appearing – certain stars or the moon and which are still used in all high occult masonry today; and the Etruscans FAVORITE TRICK was to CALL DOWN FIRE FROM HEAVEN.

Those of you who think that something new was put into Revelations, where the great beast would call down fire from heaven, should think again because the Etruscans were doing this 2,000 BC right up into the time of Jesus, so it's not a new trick. It was never explained how they did it, but they certainly could do it.

They could literally conjure up fire and bring it down from heaven to earth on demand, and I would call that a definitely advanced science.

Science is the most secretive thing because it gives you power – it gives the holder power and you never share knowledge, which is power. It's no surprise to me that many technologies are being used today which are completely unknown of by the public who read the Popular Mechanics or Popular Science and they tell you, oh, we're just working on this and one day we hope to be able to do, yadda-yadda-ya, when in reality that's all part of the matrix. Whatever they tell you they're working on, the higher level of science and there's THREE LEVELS OF SCIENCE you see.

There's THREE LEVELS OF MEDICINE too, from professorship down is the lowest level. That's the whole matrix, the low level you see from professorship down. Whatever they give you as being the latest is really antique and what they really have is so far advanced that it's beyond what we're even given as science fiction.

The CIA had little hand-held gadgets back in the 1950's which were like mini-HAARP's and they could literally pulse into your brain voices, commands, and so on, and it worked—these little machines worked on line of sight. Dr. Nick Begich displayed a whole bunch of these antique little mind control gizmos from the CIA on Wendy Mesley show here in Canada about four years ago. He had about three benches full of them and this technology of course could also be – and here's the kicker, just like the Star Trek stun gun or the phaser gun – you could also set it to match the automatic beat of the heart. In other words, you could stop the heart if you wanted to; and we wondered why people had sudden fatal heart attacks years ago and just odd coincidences, and of course we could never have done that because we didn't have the technology, did we? That's why they get away with it. They never tell you what they're really using at the time.

Now Nick Begich also took this stuff over the European Union Parliament because some of the members they were having these strange weird attacks just before they got up to speak in Parliament and he displayed it and demonstrated this stuff and he said there are people here who are using it on you. This is old technology—antique technology. Well, if it was a size of TV remote converter or a packet of cigarettes back in the 1950's, you can imagine how small it is today. If you ever get strange thoughts or strange craziness or feel terribly nauseated and you happen to be speaking out about things, well maybe it's not so paranoid after all to wonder if maybe someone's targeting you because you certainly could be.

Now the whole problem comes back down to what do we do about all of this. There are no groups you can join. Groups are immediately infiltrated or else they're set up in advance by the controllers and all you can get back to is number one. When you understand that you're simply living in a long, long succession of this plan, you're lifetime's a little blip in one part of it, then you stop panicking.

Your government is NOT BEING TAKEN OVER as you live. It NEVER WAS your government in the first place. It wasn't your father's or your grandfather's either. It was a system that was cleverly designed up long ago to give the impressions that people are really enemies and countries were really enemies and had us all fighting each other while the elite benefited from it.

IT KEPT THE POPULATION DOWN.

They made tremendous fortunes through war and they just happened to always own all the manufacturing processes, but that of course must be a coincidence too – so stop panicking. You're not being taken over as you live. THIS HAS BEEN GOING ON FOR THOUSANDS OF YEARS and you can take comfort in the fact too that there's been a long, long lineage of people with the knowledge of what is happening, who don't belong to this elite controlling group, who go on down through the ages with the knowledge and helping to pass it on to other people. That's why we know so much today.

Just like you start off with an avalanche—an avalanche of course is this NEW UPCOMING WORLD ORDER OF TOTAL CONTROL, if they get their way—you also have had many small snowballs being rolled along the ground and getting larger and larger and larger as time goes on, as we go on through this tremendous journey here through time and space. You must always keep in mind that eventually a critical mass is met and the critical mass does not depend on vast armies of people. It depends on the right quality of people with the right self-knowledge of who they are in the great scheme of things and who are totally honest about themselves, which is always the beginning of enlightenment, and you also come in contact of others of your own kind.

The knowledge itself doesn't stay with you. Each time you speak it, anywhere, they know themselves we basically broadcast—people actually broadcast you know when they have a eureka moment, something suddenly strikes them and you'll find that people across the planet are being hit with the same thing at the same time. This is something which is at the moment outside of their control, but they do recognize it. They know about it.

Arnold Toynbee who was the Rhode Scholar and a globalist for the elite, he ran the scholarship programs I should say. Professor Arnold Toynbee made a speech about it and he said, "when a thought is put out there, it's well understood that people pick it up all over the planet." So when your heart is pure and your as pure as you can possibly be, you don't want to stop things as they are and have some vague pretense past come back again, like "lets live in the Victorian Age" or something.

No, you're honest about the whole system and you know the whole system is unnatural, then you can broadcast as I say, others pick it up and it's like putting a series of batteries together. The voltage increases tremendously with each person who wakes up and starts to really come alive and think.

Well, that's been a pretty brief hour and I've rambled on a bit here trying to get a lot in and nothing is prepared, but I hope for you it's been of interest and I guess Jackie will be back tomorrow night to talk to you about other things. Thank you and good night.

(Transcribed by Linda)

August 3rd, 2005
Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru

cuttingthroughthematrix.com

alternate sites:

cuttingthroughthematrix.net , .us , .ca

alanwattcuttingthroughthematrix.ca

European site includes all audios & downloadable TRANSCRIPTS in European languages for print up:

alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

mirror site:

cuttingthrough.jenknness.com

Information for purchasing Alan's books, CDs, DVDs and DONATIONS:

Canada and America: PayPal, Cash, personal checks &
for the US, INTERNATIONAL postal money orders / for Canada, INTERNAL postal money orders
(America: Postal Money orders - Stress the INTERNATIONAL pink one, not the green internal one.)

Outside the Americas: PayPal, Cash, Western Union and Money Gram
(Money Gram is cheaper; even cheaper is a Money Gram check – in Canadian dollars:
mail via the postal services worldwide.)

PayPal Orders: USE THE DONATE BUTTON ON THE WEBSITE – AND –
Send a separate email along with the donation (list your order, name and address)

Click the link below for your location (ordering info):

USA

Canada

Europe/Scandinavian

All Other Countries

Jackie Patru: Good evening, ladies and gentlemen, thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Wednesday, and it is the 3rd of August, in the year 2005. And I am glad to be back with you this evening. And I want to thank Alan Watt for going it alone last night. And Alan is with us, this evening. I've got information that I've been wanting to share with you. Folks, I haven't been able to. I have a new printer on the way. And so, perhaps next week we might give Alan a bit of a break, and I'll be sharing with you some information I've kind of been storing up, and I haven't been able to do it, because I haven't been able to get it out of my printer. So, anyway, I got to thinking. It's so easy to label my tapes today, because basically it says, Alan Watt. But the difficult thing to do is to put on that label a topic, because Alan and I have a tendency to let it flow, and let it go the way it goes.

"Fear of the will of God is one of the strangest beliefs the human mind has ever made." I don't know that any of us, we each have our own, if you would, limited concept of Creator. And it certainly, for me, it is a limited concept. But there is one thing that I am very clear, is that Creator, the energy, the force, that we are of, is benevolent, and I do know that. And to me, the most beautiful proof if you would, of that, is the law, the universal law, of for every action there is a reaction. What we sow we are allowed to reap. So there isn't punishment being meted out by some gray-haired long-bearded guy sitting up on a cloud someplace pointing his finger and saying you ticked me off. But the fact that we are allowed to reap what we sow. To me that is a beautiful perfect justice. And my experience has been, when I'm able to let go, when I'm able to get out of my own way, and let it unfold without my feeling like I have to know the outcome, etc, etc. Those are to me, awesome, like miracles happen. And I see that as the love with which the universe or creation took place. Alan, thanks for being here tonight.

Alan Watt: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: I guess, you know, if people buy into the Old Testament Jehovah God, it would be very difficult not to have

"fear of God".

Alan: Well, that's just it. Religion has always been used, orthodox religion has always been used to make the public obedient really to the system. And of course the system exhibited terror to the public, with public hangings and executions and in Britain of course, we had disembowelment and hanging, drawing, and quartering as they called it. And these were laid on to strike fear into the public to make them obey. And when they knew that the system was basically complete, all around them, the only thing they could turn to was spiritual comfort, and of course, that's why the authorized churches have always been in cahoots with the ruling government. And that's how it's always operated. So one gave you the physical terror, and the threat of physical terror, while the other one told you how to escape basically in your mind by staying on your knees, you know. And that's a form of control. Gorbachev in one of his books mentions the fact that he himself is an atheist, but he says, we are creating a religion based on earth worship for the people. Because religion has always been essential to governments. So these guys understand the function of religion. They understand, as well, I am sure, the techniques of creating religions, new ones, with their political purposes in mind. And I'm sure this knowledge must be really ancient, because they know exactly what format, what sequence to use, just like mathematics, and the public behave accordingly. So, yeah, that's right from Gorbachev himself, and I think his book was called, Towards a New Civilization, so you can see it for yourself. So there's an admitted atheist helping to create a religion for the public to follow. And this earth-based religion, of course, is hand in glove with the political agenda, where the public will have no rights on the earth's surface. They'll have to do what they're told. They'll be organized by officials in every capacity. And this is the new civilization that he's referring to in his book. And so you can see why earth worship would be the ideal religion to push right now, for the type of society they envisage for the near future. And so, not only will we be breaking a taboo by ignoring the government decrees, you'd also be breaking the religious taboos. And you'll find that the majority of the public will have no sympathy for the people who break that type of rule.

Jackie: Give me an example of what you're saying here, breaking a taboo of the Earth worship.

Alan: Well, you can see it all around. The United Nations has no intention of allowing people for much longer to live on the land. They've done their best to put the farmers out, beginning in the 1940s. That's when they started to hand out grants to farmers. That was the bait. Then the government had a foot in the door and a say in what happened on the farm. And it's gone on since then. And farmers have been losing everything, as other countries are set up to do the farming for the whole world. In Marxism, which is only the left hand you might say of the capitalism, or the same bird, in the Communist ideology the state would be in control of all land and there would be no private property. Of course, in the Soviet System, the bureaucrats got the big dachas in the country, and they were flown in there to spend their holidays and so on in privacy with their servants. And Joe Blow was given a trip to the crowded Baltic holiday resorts for the people. This is the type of future they envisage for the people on planet earth, basically. Every area will have its function. China is the manufacturer. The CFR put out books in the 1930s that China would be the sole manufacturer for the world, which it's become in the last ten, fifteen years. And so nothing happens by chance, nothing evolves by itself, everything is planned way ahead, like a business plan. In fact the whole world is nothing but one big business plan, and it's run by think tanks.

Jackie: Yeah, and the governments are all corporations.

Alan: And, of course, Professor Carroll Quigley, who also was the historian for the CFR. I don't think people realize that he was the official historian for a few years. He had access to the Royal Institute of International Affairs and the CFR's records, and he gave a parallel view of history, the real force behind history, beginning around the time of the establishment of the British East India Company, and the United Kingdom as they called it, around the 1600s. And he said that this group has been behind everything that's happened in the world. They've planned wars in advance to change civilization. He says war is created to change society. You can get more social change, meaning more governmental control in minute areas of life in five years of war than you can in fifty years of peace. And of course, we've noticed that after every war, your society has changed more and more, till more power is in government hands. And now we see the corporate merger, as Carroll Quigley said. He said, the future will be a society where the new feudal overlords will be corporate business leaders in conjunction with governments. So, he laid it all on the line. He gave the history of the wars, what was behind it, the forces that manipulated the wars to get us to where we are, to get people to give up their sovereignty. And he laid out the road map that he simply copied from the CFR's records. And this is real. It's all happening.

Jackie: And then he died, yes?

Alan: And then he died after disclosing some stuff on audio tapes to some of his students. He thought it was going to be kept private, but he let too much out of the bag, you know. The main plates were destroyed by MacMillan and Company, so that they couldn't publish other books, but some people have managed to bypass that and copy those books. Tragedy and Hope is the book.

Jackie: Well, it's twenty-five years the copyright runs out. So that would be when they would be able to do it. When was that book done? Do you recall?

Alan: I think it was in the 60s that he put that out, the late 60s, but MacMillan bought it over, as soon as the first publication came out, and then they destroyed the plates, because this stuff was not supposed to be allowed out to the public. Carroll Quigley believed in that system, that's why he was one of their men, but he also thought that the public would accept the fact that the new way was a managed way, where there was no individual rights and freedoms.

Jackie: He had to have been a real drone, I mean, to have believed in it so intensely and fervently, that he believed that the general public would accept this and say, oh, this is wonderful. There had to be something wrong with the man. Are you there? Seems that we've lost Alan Watt, folks. Either that or he's talking and I can't hear him. Probably, what I should do, if Nicholas happens to be, wait a minute, I might have some music. No, I can't. There we go. Thank you, Nicholas. I'm going to go off the air, folks. Hello?

Caller: Yes, I'd like to ask Alan a question.

Jackie: Hold on, honey. We have to get him back on the line. I'm going to go off air for a minute.

Folks, we're back on the air. And I want to thank Nicholas. Nicholas, thank you so much for being there and stepping in, and holding this place open while we got Alan back on the line. Alan, are you with me?

Alan: I think so.

Jackie: Oh, good. So, you, we just got disconnected, period.

Alan: I know, and every time I called, it kept saying all lines are busy, try again.

Jackie: All circuits are busy?

Alan: Yeah.

Jackie: Well, then, I guess we must be on a topic that isn't their favorite subject.

Alan: It's very probably so, yeah. It spoils the illusion that the media keeps giving us. And we don't talk about sports, you know.

Jackie: No, we don't talk about sports, do we? So, I'd like, I don't remember exactly. We were talking about Carroll Quigley and that, oh, you had said that you know, after he had evidently done a speech leaked to some of his students, and it was on a....

Alan: It was a private talk in a restaurant. And one of his students recorded him, you know. And in it, he actually cautioned them. He talked about Freemasonry. And he talked about the dollar bill, the pyramid and so on. He says, this is very old, he says, 6,000 years old, this symbol. And then he said, but don't talk to anybody about this, it will spoil, it will cut short your career. That's what he told them on the tape. And I have the tape.

Jackie: Alan, is there a way that you could get a copy made of that tape so we could play it for our listeners?

Alan: Sure, yeah.

Jackie: Oh, my Gosh, that would be wonderful. Alright.

Alan: And he was the official historian and he really spilled the beans by using their records. He had the records there at Pratt House, I think they call it in New York. And that's where the records were kept. And interestingly enough, the man who introduced him to the record-keeping department for the Royal Institute of International Affairs and the CFR, now this is the same organization, was a guy called Zimmerman. And Zimmerman was the guy who belonged to the British Communist Party, who was Winston Churchill's main advisor during World War II. It's the weirdest setup, and of course, most books will tell you that Winston Churchill hated Communism with a passion. And yet, someone told him to take Zimmerman on as his main advisor. So, Zimmerman was in the record-keeping department for the Royal Institute and CFR, and he gave the job over eventually to Carroll Quigley. So, it's from the horse's mouth.

Jackie: Carroll Quigley was from England?

Alan: Oh, no. He was American. And he taught at Georgetown University. He was the guy who put Bill Clinton's name forward for the Rhodes Scholarship. Of course, the Rhodes Foundation is to create international leaders from all countries to go back home and push the same agenda for world government. That's why it was set up by Rhodes and Rothschild. That's all documented stuff. In fact, even Quigley goes into that in some detail.

Jackie: In his book or on his tape?

Alan: In the book. Because Cecil Rhodes, he was basically taught in Oxford University. And he had a mentor as well at the University who was pushing for World Government. And then, of course, he and Rothschild and a few other ones got together with that other big diamond company, De Beers, part of the Boer family, B-O-E-R, also were members of that round table they set up. And their goal was to take over the wealth and the riches of the world. That was their strategy, and Cecil was sent off to South Africa where he fomented wars, supposedly by attacking South Africa, having South Africa retaliate. And then Cecil says, well, British subjects are being attacked outside of South Africa. And then Britain sent in the troops. So that started the Boer War. That was all planned way in advance. And they've done this all over the planet.

Jackie: Alan, we have a caller on the line, and if we can go back to this, the Boer War. Let's see what his question is. Go ahead, caller.

Caller: Yes, last night I was listening to Alan, and he was talking about the Etruscans and their ability to call down fire upon their enemies. And I would like to know, how in the world did an advanced civilization like that ever become defeated by the Romans if they had such an ability to do such a thing?

Jackie: Alan, Alan Watt, did you hear that question?

Alan: How were they conquered by the Romans?

Jackie: He said, yeah, if they had the ability to call down fire on their enemies, how could they have been conquered by the Romans.

Alan: Because the ones who had the knowledge...

Jackie: Whoa, wait, whoa. He's going to get off the line so he can hear.

Caller: I want to hear the answer, but I have to get off the phone, okay?

Jackie: Right. Bye, Alan. Bye. Our caller's name is Alan. He wanted to get off the line so he could hear your answer.

Alan: Well, it's no different from today. A small elite keep the power and the knowledge and they can call themselves anything, depending on which country they live in. And when they move out of that country, and perhaps become part of the Roman nobility, they don't care what happens to the rest of the ordinary Etruscans, if you understand what I'm saying.

Jackie: In other words, the leaders of the Etruscans were the same leaders of the Romans.

Alan: That's correct. In fact, the Etruscans gave their name to the present day area of Tuscany, and many of their tombs have been unearthed, and these are amazing tombs, similar to the Egyptian style in many ways. And they had vast amounts of wealth. These were the elite families, not the ordinary Etruscans. And really, Rome itself, we know that the elite that ran the Grecian lands moved into Rome, and they became the Roman nobility. And right towards the end of Rome, the nobility, the higher nobility of Rome still spoke Greek amongst themselves. So, you get confused with nationalities, and this is the con game that's played on all of us. These people who understand tribal psychology use it all the time. That's why they give us tribal emblems and we react automatically when the flags go up and the trumpets sound the right tunes and so on. So, but you must remember that the elite in all ages have been internationalists, and wherever they happen to live at that period of time.

Jackie: Well, guess what. It sounds to me like Alan and I have just been disconnected again, folks. And I guess we're going to try it again. Nicholas, if you would play some music, I'll disconnect and see if Alan can get back with us. Don't know what's going on. We'll be back folks. Thanks, Nicholas.

Have I got you Alan?

Alan: I think so.

Jackie: Okay, folks. Nicholas, thank you again. This is crazy. Alan did get back with me, and then I tried to dial into the station and I got a circuit busy message. But then, when I tried again we were able to get back with you. This, I don't know what's so special about tonight, Alan.

Alan: Well, I think we're just getting the heat turned up, that's all.

Jackie: Getting the heat turned up because we've covered some very sensitive topics on this broadcast. Okay, well, you were, okay, what I was hearing you say, and I was thinking about this and putting it into my memory banks for future, is that all down through the ages, the leaders of nations have been the elite, and they are never of the bloodline of the people of the countries that they're ruling.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Or tribes or whatever, even before countries were countries.

Alan: In fact, they established countries.

Jackie: Yes, they established the borders. The bounds.

Alan: And of course, they take many covers. If they're born there the public will think they are one of us and they've given the appropriate name of the country you live in. They'll adopt all kinds of religions, the main religion of the country. It's irrelevant to them. And they are the dominant minority.

Jackie: And then change the religion, though.

Alan: They change as they go along, and it's just like changing uniforms or coats to them.

Jackie: Yes, now we're at our break time.

And Alan Watt is with us, of course. And we've been disconnected a couple of times tonight. Before we go further, Alan, why don't you give them your address, let them know how they can get your books, and then I have a question I want to ask you about this religion thing.

Alan: Okay. I have three books, dealing with the history of where we have been and where we are, where we're going.

Jackie: Where they would like us to go.

Alan: Well, they're actually doing it. They're getting us from this field to the next field you might say. [Ordering information on transcript.] I go into it in detail. I show you the Masonic links to it. I show you the early, what would be called Masonic links, far earlier than the guilds were created in the Middle Ages, which is the usual cover they give this whole movement. And I go back into ancient times to show you that they had the similar movements on the go when Rome and Greece was at the height of their power. And I show you how the money was introduced into countries, first in the way of gold, which they measured and weighed, and silver. Silver was more plentiful, actually. And around 800BC, they actually started minting the first coins, which kind of throws out the story of the Old Testament, where I think it was Abraham paid for so many shekels for a tomb for his wife. It couldn't have happened, unless it happened around 800BC, because that's when the first minted coins came out. Before that, they simply cut strips from a bracelet you wound around your arm like a wire, and they weighed it on the spot. And the international money traders who were also the international merchants would go from country to country and first get the public used to accepting their wares through trade for other goods, and then they started to introduce their money in and say, well, we won't accept anything except money. And once those countries accepted their money, they naturally took over the system, which they had just installed.

Jackie: I'm back, Alan. And I have been for a while. I didn't want to interrupt. You know, we had Roger, Monday, on with us. I should call Roger. Haven't talked with him in ages, but he explained to us the situation here in the US, in America, very early on, where they forced the rural people into coinage, by taxing them and they didn't have anything to pay the taxes with, because it had to be paid with their particular coinage.

Alan: That's right. I've actually spoken to people whose fathers had to get jobs, regular jobs, rather than barter and trade or do work for goods. And they had to go out and get regular jobs just to earn the money to pay the taxes. So they were covering their bases by forcing everybody into their system.

Jackie: Now, what about that section, I wonder, of the Constitution, that says no state can accept anything other than gold or silver coins as legal tender in payment of debt.

Alan: No. In fact, I've got a book by Webster, which was written in the 1800s, and I believe in there he even goes through a lot of the various agreements that had been arrived at by the states towards the federal government. And part of the exchange for joining the federation of the US was for each state to give up so much of its land in payment of that fee. And that's in Webster's own speeches.

Jackie: But what does that have to do with the fact that it's still in the Constitution that no state can accept?

Alan: Well, it just shows you that politicians are liars, and it doesn't matter what they write down, they do something different.

Jackie: Yeah. Right, exactly.

Alan: You see, that's as simple as that.

Jackie: Because if anybody tried to enforce that, well, that's a whole other subject.

Alan: And who's going to try that, you know.

Jackie: Well, what's his name, Tupper Saussy. Remember we talked about that. And I do understand now, because, see, that was when I got ticked off at you one of the times I got ticked off at you. Because I had read his book, Miracle on Main Street, and that's exactly what he was promoting in the book. And evidently there were some people in certain towns and maybe one particularly, but they were literally handing in the IOUs, and saying as soon as there's legal tender, I'll pay the taxes, I'll pay this fine, I'll pay this license fee, and accept this as my promissory note. And then Tupper Saussy went to prison. And I thought that was a great idea. See, the one thing that you made very clear, but I didn't get it at the time, is that gold, they control the gold, as you said. You know. I remember saying, well, it's better than nothing isn't it? And you said, no, because you cannot get out of the system by using their system.

Alan: That's right. It's a total system. And the reason it's total is because it's such an ancient plan. It's worked on throughout every generation. It's intergenerational. And they have thousands of think tanks, dealing with thousands of their problems. And they come up with the solutions of how to get everybody under their thumb, in their system, and obeying their system.

Jackie: You know, I have a thought though, that some of these types of things, like what Tupper Saussy was promoting, maybe those have been the little holdbacks, or the things that have kept at least, I don't know, in other words, Alan, they have been working on this plan for millennia, and it looks today like they're very, very, very close, although you said they've been very close before, and it's just never happened.

Alan: Well, they do get to a stage, every so many thousands, you see, this is thousands of years old. And, as I say, even the rabbis admit that this part of the plan, this stage of the plan came down as they call it, about 4,600 or 4,500 BC.

Jackie: This stage that we're in right now.

Alan: Yes. And so it was tried before.

Jackie: But what happened? Did they say what happened?

Alan: It's in lots of literature, which is all Aramaic primarily; there's some Greek literature on it. There's a lot of literature from India, that's got much more ancient, extensive histories. They claim that we have gone through these major disasters as they call it, often brought about by man himself, meaning the elite, of course, who, just when they're ready to declare themselves gods to the public, something steps in and knocks them down. But along with that, the tradition is that you must have enough people who are totally aware of the situation, of the history of the whole agenda, and who also know that we cannot go through what we're going through and want to bring the same system back.

Jackie: Oh, yeah. Like "Take America Back".

Alan: Whatever comes out of this will not be the way it was. And how can it be the way it was, when you're already a slave? Why would you want to go back into a slave system?

Jackie: Exactly. Why would we want to go back? We talked a little bit earlier today, and I know I mentioned this to you. For our listeners, I'll say it again. You get, like I got an email today. And it was this America First, Take Back America and all this. And it was some Doctor, and I just wrote to him, and I said, actually, there's nothing to take back, because it never was ours in the first place. And I remember the statement that was attributed to Woodrow Wilson, when he was President. And he said that the Constitution was based on the Hebrew Parliament. What's the Hebrew Parliament, Alan, if it isn't the Sanhedrin?

Alan: Well, it must be a big secret, I guess.

Jackie: Well, maybe that's the Sanhedrin.

Alan: Well, it's more than even the Sanhedrin. It's another organization that doesn't even mean that it's even Hebrew. These characters are very good at using names to cast the guilt from themselves to other people. All the time they do this. And of course, there's no such thing as a Jewish Parliament, really. The Sanhedrin was more of....

Jackie: No, they specifically said Hebrew, and this was in a book that was written in 1944 by this guy named Fink, titled America and Israel. And he was the one that quoted, and maybe he just misquoted Wilson?

Alan: It's very possible, because even in the supposed, which I don't think existed, the Hebrew Society, there was no parliament as such.

Jackie: Yeah. Well, that's why when I read that, the Hebrew Parliament, I was thinking of the Talmudic Sanhedrin. That's the thought that came into my mind. But, it is, and it isn't easy, and yet for us to yearn for what was in the past, Alan, what we're yearning for is the dream that we were in.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: About what we were told, this wonderful country, America, the Land of the Free, the Home of the Brave, and...

Alan: And John Wayne.

Jackie: Yeah, John Wayne. Oh, yeah. And our "sacred founders." When we discover that behind the scenes stuff, then we have to give it up, and just understand. I mean, we can each in our own mind have a vision, if you would, of what this world would be like, if, let's say it were created by our creator. But it will unfold, somehow or the other, but there is nothing to go back to.

Alan: No. That was what Lenin talked about quite a lot. And he studied under the best bankers on the planet, so he knew his stuff. And he said that there are a thousand directions that societies can go, thousands of different ways of living, but the public must not be made to realize this. They must think that the one they're born into is the only natural evolution there could possibly be. And that's the whole trick to this. You're born into it. Your parents don't know. They've swallowed the world as it was presented to them.

Jackie: Grandparents don't know. Great-grandparents don't know.

Alan: And you swallow the world as it's been presented to you, and yet you're terrified of losing that system because it's the only one you know. It's the only one you know.

Jackie: Maybe that's where that phase comes in, as I was talking about at the beginning of the broadcast. That the true, the real, real, reality of creation is love. It is benevolent. And maybe there's something to be said literally for getting out of the way, as I was talking about then, getting out of the way, and wanting only Creator's Will be done. Because there is only one will. You know, ultimately, and that would be Creator's Will, but we get in the way of that, Alan.

Alan: It is true enough, you see, people who have been raised to believe in a certain deity and a certain way of living, and rules and regulations, and laws, have never thought about how they would be if they were born into a society where that particular deity didn't exist. In other words, how would you behave if you hadn't been given all that religion? How would you be? How would society be? And of course, those who are terrified of any kind of change, will say, well, it would be horrific, you see.

Jackie: Right. It would be horrific.

Alan: So those people love Socialism. They love the idea that experts are taking care of them, or at least they think that they are, and they're comfortable in it. And those people are the dead. And of course, in the mystery religion, which has always been with us, that was the real meaning when Jesus said let the dead bury their dead. They are not alive. When they die it's as though they had never existed, because they change nothing in their life.

Jackie: Well, they never lived.

Alan: And so, born again, literally meant that you literally had an astounding experience, where you saw everything as it really, really was. That's what born again meant. You saw it all. You relearned how the world was, the meanings behind everything you'd taken for granted, and you saw the reasons for it being indoctrinated into you. And that's what born again used to mean. Today it means a happy high that you suddenly get in religion. And you go off every Sunday and wave your arms about, and go into a sort of trancic stupor of happiness. And so you get your fix every Sunday. That's been a recent manipulation, that whole movement. Because, as I say, at one time, born again literally meant, your eyes were totally opened, and you had to relearn everything all over again.

Jackie: In other words, the statement that's attributed to Jesus in the New Testament, that he said, "Seek ye the truth. Ye shall know the truth and the truth will make you free."

Alan: And that's the key to it, because if you had to seek the truth in his day, it tells you the same system was operating back then.

Jackie: Of course, of course. And, you know, when we get into conversations like this, I wish it was Monday, or I wish we had three hours. Because this is taking us in a place that, I think is so. There was a question that I wanted to ask you. And I think it is along the same lines that we're talking. The ancient, okay, in The Golden Bough, when you read The Golden Bough, you see, you know, I had in my own mind, in my own o-pi-n-ion, if you would, or vision, or picture of, oh, those pagans. They had open sex in fields, and it was just nothing but a sexual orgy. Well, you realize that these people were so natural, and they, I don't believe that they worshiped the earth, but they knew that that was their life source. But they had all these gods. You know, brother sun, and mother moon, and father this, and mother sea and all that. Well, my question that I have in my mind, was this given to them by some priesthood, or were they just being natural?

Alan: I think they were probably being more natural, because we view things entirely differently when we're indoctrinated with scientific explanations for things. So, some of the things that are perfectly natural in human nature, which creates mystery. Mystery is an essential part of human nature. Mystery goes hand and hand with comfort and belonging. And when you see a hilltop, it might be magical to you, because you have a tremendous, wonderful feeling there. And so that is perfectly, perfectly natural. It doesn't mean that you end up worshiping the mountain. It simply means that for you, that's a magical place.

Jackie: Well, remember when we were talking, I don't know how many broadcasts ago, about the hermaphrodites and about women, today, who have given up, literally, the most precious function that the female has in this world. Number one it's nurturing, but the procreation. You know, it takes the male seed, but right now as we are, and they knew it then, that it was the woman who kept the clans going, who procreated. And women were revered for that.

Alan: That's right. Mind you, you can do an awful lot in a good society without any lawyers you see. It's the lawyers and the business and the system that creates the strife, as they manipulate the system for their own ends. But there's no doubt that women are the main target really, because they understand male and female. They understand both psychologies, and they target so much of the New Age Philosophy that Gorbachev was talking about, about creating and bringing to the main religion of the world. They understand the female is more in tune with flowers, plants, and so on, through her natural nature. And they're manipulating that for their own ends, against the best wishes of the people. So they know how to do that with the woman. And with the guy at the moment, I mean....

Jackie: But what they've done with the woman is masculinized her, Alan.

Alan: That's what Carl Jung said. He said, it's all over, he said, when the female loses her eros. And he said that in the '50s, when he watched American women emulate the males in their dress, in the way that they walked to try to match their strides, and then try to copy their body language, then of course they started to talk like men, as well. And they knew darn well that man does not want to marry a competitor, you see. And that's what they created. Naturally, that's why no marriages pretty well, on the whole anyway, work anymore. You don't marry to get into competition with somebody. You marry somebody for their difference.

Jackie: Well, you know, okay. Here's a thought. I want to get this in before this broadcast is over, because, you know, when you read Paul, in the Old Testament, women are to be seen and not heard, and etc. And the male is the godhead of the home and etc. But in marriage, a true marriage, even though the male has the superior strength, the female has nurturing, and as you said, the understanding of herbs and flowers, etc. In a true relationship, on an emotional or mental level, wouldn't it be that there would be a partnership, so to speak?

Alan: It should be, but one of the male specialties is survival capabilities. And to have survival capabilities, his instincts will take over, and the woman must follow.

Jackie: Yeah, well, if it comes down to survival.

Alan: But the government has overpassed the male by giving us media stars to follow, like Dr. Phil and so on.

Jackie: Then you're saying that women don't have that survival instinct.

Alan: Not the same. No.

Jackie: Not the same.

Alan: Not the same. Women will go for security and that's why they go for....

Jackie: God, we're out of time, oh jeez, we're out of this hour. Oh, Alan. Alright, ladies and gentlemen, we'll be back with you Monday. And I don't know. Maybe we would. I don't know, if we could pick this conversation up again, but I would like to consider it. Alan, thank you.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: This was lovely, tonight. Thank you. Good Night, ladies and gentlemen.

Alan's Materials Available for Purchase and Ordering Information:

- | | | |
|---|---|---|
| BOOKS "Cutting Through"
Volumes 1, 2, 3 | & | "Waiting for the Miracle....."
Also available in Spanish or Portuguese translation: "Esperando el Milagro....."
(Español) & "Esperando um Milagre....." (Português) |
| Ancient Religions and
CDs History MP3 CDs:
Part 1 (1998) and Part 2
(1998-2000) | & | Blurbs and 'Cutting Through the Matrix' Shows on MP3 CDs (Up to 50
Hours per Disc) |
| DVDs "Reality Check Part 1" & "Reality Check Part 2 - Wisdom, Esoterica and ...TIME" | | |

August 8th 2005
Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru

cuttingthroughthematrix.com

alternate sites:

cuttingthroughthematrix.net , .us , .ca

alanwattcuttingthroughthematrix.ca

European site includes all audios & downloadable TRANSCRIPTS in European languages for print up:

alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

mirror site:

cuttingthrough.jenkness.com

Information for purchasing Alan's books, CDs, DVDs and DONATIONS:

Canada and America: PayPal, Cash, personal checks &
for the US, INTERNATIONAL postal money orders / for Canada, INTERNAL postal money orders
(America: Postal Money orders - Stress the INTERNATIONAL pink one, not the green internal one.)

Outside the Americas: PayPal, Cash, Western Union and Money Gram
(Money Gram is cheaper; even cheaper is a Money Gram check – in Canadian dollars:
mail via the postal services worldwide.)

PayPal Orders: USE THE DONATE BUTTON ON THE WEBSITE – AND –
Send a separate email along with the donation (list your order, name and address)

Click the link below for your location (ordering info):

USA

Canada

Europe/Scandinavian

All Other Countries

Jackie Patru: Good Evening, ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for being with us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Monday. It is the 8th of August in the year 2005. Hope you had a nice weekend, and I'm glad you're back, and I'm glad to be back with you. I'm going to begin here tonight with our spiritual message. This is from "Writings by the Essential Alan Watts", that's W-A-T-T-S, and this is a short one. It's on faith. He says, "Faith is a state of openness, or trust. To have faith is like when you trust yourself to the water. You don't grab hold of the water when you swim, because if you do, you'll become stiff and tight, and you'll sink. You have to relax. And the attitude of faith is the very opposite of clinging and holding on. In other words a person who's a fanatic in matters of religion, and clings to certain ideas about the nature of God and the Universe, becomes the person who has no faith at all. Instead they're holding tight. But the attitude of faith is to let go and become open to truth, whatever it might turn out to be." Whatever it might turn out to be, folks. I like that. And Alan Watt, the essential Alan Watt is with us tonight. Not Alan Watts. Alan, thanks for being here.

Alan Watt: It's a pleasure, yeah.

Jackie: You know this Alan Watts?

Alan: Yeah.

Jackie: You do?

Alan: He may be a relative, actually.

Jackie: Yeah, well, I wondered.

Alan: Yeah, a branch of the family did end up in California in the late 1800s. And they spawned quite a few Watts. They added the S to it, because the ones who registered them were used to the English spelling. Of course, the original one was just W-A-T-T.

Jackie: Some of his writings are, because somebody emailed me. I think it was email, shoot, I don't know, maybe they mailed them to me. Anyway, I found his writings quite intriguing. And so, I don't know if I should say this or not, but I, well, we're on this subject. I remember, a long time ago, you said you had a black sheep in your family.

Alan: Yes, indeed, yeah.

Jackie: It wasn't him? Yeah, right?

Alan: No, no.

Jackie: You want to talk about it or no?

Alan: It doesn't really matter.

Jackie: Okay. You never did tell me about it either, come to think of it. Well, Alan. Thanks for being here tonight.

Alan: Yeah, as I say, it's a pleasure.

Jackie: We were in such a fascinating conversation last Wednesday, when we ran out of our hour. And I always so dread when that happens, because sometimes the conversation itself really just takes a turn that you wish you had another hour or two, and we didn't and it's really difficult to pick it up, isn't it. We were talking actually about, you know, the hermaphrodites and stuff like that. And then we got talking about man and woman and you were talking about, you know the fact that, in fact maybe you could expand on this a little bit more. Maybe it doesn't need expanding upon, but the fact that women have been really targeted to help push through, if you would, the plan for world dominion, because of their emotionalism, and what?

Alan: Well, I always say that on this subject, there's no one, there's nothing on the planet been so thoroughly observed nature-wise than man and woman. And the ancients knew perfectly well the differences of the male and the female natures, and they also knew how to exploit either one of them.

Jackie: Would you repeat that, Alan?

Alan: Yeah, the ancients. When you read the ancients' writings on the difference between male and female, they knew both natures perfectly well. They knew all the natural tribal aspects of both. Which all our natural survival comes from, really our survival needs and mechanisms, comes from tribalism. But they also knew the distinct difference between the male and the female, and by knowing the differences they could exploit either one, whenever it suited them. And every government in what we call civilization, meaning the birth of priesthoods and writing, and money, altogether, you'll find they've always exploited either the male or the female for particular goals, politically. And what they knew in ancient times was that in tribalism, most of the women lived in the middle of the village, where it was secure....

Jackie: So the men could protect them?

Alan: They didn't have to worry about enemies or anything, or predators coming through, because the men were on the perimeter. The men were always off hunting, too. So, the men took the protective role on. And that's what's claimed, that's where the reason for women's ability to communicate much more easily than the male came from. Because they had a relaxed atmosphere and there was no tension. They felt secure. So, the female looks for security above all other things. And because she needs security, when the Catholic Church came into Europe on the heels of the Normans, the Norman invasion, these strange people who came across, with this system of money, kings and queens, aristocracy, and backed up by a Church, the Catholic Church, as they were destroying the tribal system, they made it mandatory that one man and one woman would mate for life. And so, a form of breeding program took over, where they kept the genealogies of the workers.

Jackie: It wasn't like that back in the tribal, in the more ancient?

Alan: No. There was no external priesthood who came in, or foreign priesthood who came in. In fact, Tacitus, who was the historian for Nero, he recorded how the people in Britain lived, in the tribes. And he said that if a male and female did choose to live together, it was not mandatory, but if a male and female did choose to live together, she would come in, or he would come into her place, and live for up to six months. And if they decided mutually that it wasn't working, he would then leave, and there was no discrimination from the rest of the tribe, or fallout of any kind. It was perfectly accepted as a natural way, rather than go through all the nonsense of, you know. So, that was the way that they lived.

Jackie: That was in those tribes in Britain.

Alan: And throughout Europe, too.

Jackie: Yeah, I suppose there were variations.

Alan: Yeah, as I say, most of the women, and they knew, you see, that sexuality, they called the woman the gateway to the sexual experience, because, really, the power for yes or no, is in the hands of the woman. She can entice a man over, allow him to know that she's interested, and just as easily, she can put him off, or just look away. And so, the women, they weren't what we would normally today call promiscuous, but they certainly could pick any partner at any time they wanted to. And the children were brought up communally in the center of the tribe, by all the women.

Jackie: It takes a village.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: You know, in a sense, Alan, that stupid book, you know, that allegedly was written by Hillary Clinton, when you think about it, it really is a wonderful opportunity for children to live in a community like that. You know, when I was married to Nick Patru, and we lived in a Chicago suburb, in Palatine, and it was a real trenchant mix of people, people who had been, a lot of them were in positions in large corporations. In fact, one family was from England, that got actually transferred over here. So, most of us were away from our extended family. And it sort of became that neighborhood, there were probably ten or twelve families, and we did so many fun things together. We lived at the end of a block that you know wasn't completely developed, and we'd get a permit, and have a big block party in the summer, and games for the children. And I can remember when Nicole came up, well, I thought she was missing. It was evening, just dusk. And we were all standing out, you know, a few of us standing out talking, and suddenly I looked around. Nicole was a little girl, and I didn't see her. And I ran in the house, and she wasn't in the house. And she was playing with the little girl next door, the McIntyres, the people from England, and I ran over there, and they weren't there. And I, of course, really got panicked, but I'm going to tell you, that within a matter of five minutes I was getting calls from people three blocks away, saying, okay, we're out, we're looking. And it was just, it was like ants out there. It turned out kind of humorous, because when I went into our house, evidently they had been over to the McIntyres, and then they walked from there over back to our house, and I missed them both ways. And, we found them sitting watching television in the family room. But it was so cool that everybody came forth like that. And when children were some place playing, wherever they were playing, the parents there were keeping their eyes on the children. And I loved it. It really was that kind of a feeling, where people cared about others, and about all the children, not just their own. Something that I thought about. You said something last week that sparked a thought in my mind, when you mentioned that the men are more survival. They have a stronger survival instinct, did you say?

Alan: No.

Jackie: Okay, what did you say?

Alan: In a natural setting, the man's survival instincts were supreme, because he could sense the coming danger. He knew how to handle various outside threats, and suchlike. And of course, when the priesthoods came in with the system they brought with them, backed by military force, and destroyed the tribal system, what they did then, was elevate the king, the queen, the nobility, the priests as well, over the head of the husband, because the women crave security. And they would promise them peace and security, and all this kind of thing. And so, the husband, even though it was mandatory that he marry this woman, he was second rate in a sense. He didn't have the authority that he used to have. And we see this in modern times more so, because the television, which is a programmer, that's why they're called programs, it programs the public on what to think and the topics, on what they should dwell upon and so on. It gives you your opinion, really. They go over the heads of all the husbands and have since the days of Donahue, especially, where they put on all these programs, one hour specials, psychological roller coasters, really, which brought you from a starting point to a finishing conclusion on every topic they introduced, done expertly, with psychologists helping the show. And women were being downloaded with all this information. The husbands had no idea. And this was all to help with the so-called sexual revolution. And women eventually, once again, they've replaced their husband from the position he once held, and they've replaced him with guys like Dr. Phil. So when Dr. Phil says something, it must be true. And if old Harry, sitting over there, says something, well, who is he. He's not on television. That's how simply this technique works. So, the people who manipulate the sides understand this. Now, when it comes to personal, individual, survival, the woman will outstrip the male. And all studies have shown this. That whereas men, if they ever leave a wife, will do it spontaneously, or through an argument or something, whereas the woman will, the guy is the last to know when the woman leaves. And she'll have planned it probably at least months ago, every step. And so, women will always survive in order to simply be happy or to choose the way they want to live, or what they want to do, but it's methodical, and it's for themselves personally. Not necessarily even for children. It's for their own personal.

Jackie: How do you know that? How do you know that, what you're saying?

Alan: Because it's in all the modern psychological studies, and sociological studies.

Jackie: Well, wasn't what's his name, oh God, that pervert, Kinsey, wasn't he put up there as a great...

Alan: Leader, yeah.

Jackie: Okay, well. I guess, okay. Maybe I'm relating what you're saying to myself personally. But, if a woman has children, I mean, for the most part, her first thought is going to be how am I going to be able to take care of myself and the children. I don't think that women in general make these plans or these moves with only their selves in mind.

Alan: Well, you'll find if you read the modern sociological studies, and it's all for social workers, and it comes from social workers.

Jackie: But how do we know those statistics are real, Alan?

Alan: You can check them. In fact, you can phone up personal social workers you know and they will tell you that's exactly what they experience, over and over.

Jackie: The women care more about themselves than they do their children?

Alan: When it comes to the crunch, for their own, what they've decided is happiness, they will plan their own exit, as I say, long in advance. It's not spontaneous. And I'm not talking about abuse situations or anything like that, where it is, it might be spontaneous. I'm talking about personal survival for their own personal happiness, or a change of mind over something, career-wise or whatever. That is the general trend that's verified over and over. So, that is what happens.

Jackie: You know what I've noticed. And this is going back quite a ways, through my past, with friends and I'm talking about even after high school, when my friends began getting married, and we were getting married and wanting to raise families, etc, something that I noticed is that a lot of times, a woman won't even leave a bad situation unless she has another mate to fall back on. I've seen that happen a lot.

Alan: That's common as well. But today, with all the massive money that's been put into shelters for women, and their children. And every township even has homes that are kept vacant and are on a rotating schedule as more come in.

Jackie: Yeah, but aren't those for abused women, for the most part?

Alan: Well, they can claim any kind of abuse, mental abuse, and they don't even have to hear another side of it. It's mandatory now. But for males out there, there is nothing. There's nothing at all.

Jackie: Well, let me tell you what Joseph Biden said. Boy, Alan, when he said this, this stuck with me. It was when they were working on the crime bill. And that would have been probably some time back in '93 or '94 or somewhere around there, when I was a C-SPAN junkie. He was talking about this crime bill. And he was telling about some of the new laws that were going to be in place. For example, if a woman was beat by her husband, she didn't have to report him, but if somebody else reported him, that was a crime against the state. And the man would be picked up. And he said, we, with this bill, we are going to empower women like they have never been empowered before. And they certainly did it, didn't they, Alan?

Alan: They did it. And now, it's customary for lawyers...

Jackie: Like you said, a woman can make an accusation.

Alan: And they've found this through many studies, it's customary for lawyers now to advise all women who come to them to state that their husbands were sexually abusing their children. That's now common practice.

Jackie: I was just going to say that. All a woman has to do is make an accusation, and she could do it out of nothing but spite. Maybe find out her husband has a lover or something, and she makes an accusation, that man is going to go through hell.

Alan: Yes. So, yeah, the people at the top use marriage, in fact, they created marriage as we know it, to serve a certain era, for their own ends, not for the people's ends. They had to get a certain stock, a hardy stock built up, to go through an industrial era. And that's when the frenzy of activity through science began, was in the 1500s. And nothing much happened from the Norman invasion right up into the 1500s. And when they knew they had to by the year 2000 have gone through an industrial and a technological era, then that's when they started the marriage program, big time. And keeping genealogies, all kept by churches, births, deaths, etc. And the priests, generally, up until the Protestant Revolution, were the matchmakers. They decided who married whom. And when the priest suggested to you that your daughter should marry this guy over there, that wasn't a suggestion. That was basically an order. So, they were mating up people to be hardy stock, to go through the industrial era, which they had to get through, to build up the sciences, which they had to acquire. They knew where they were going with it all.

Jackie: I wonder if this conversation right now would sound like something out of this world to a new listener.

Alan: If he's a new listener, he's going to have to accept that or go further.

Jackie: Yeah, well. Yes. I just wanted to say this though, because it just entered my mind, that if you are a new listener, you should not reject out of hand what you're hearing, because if you are a new listener, you've missed hours and hours and hours. And if you haven't read Alan's books, and the confirmation that I've received over the years, that well, ha, actually, I don't know of anything that I have found refuted yet, Alan. But I do remember, you know, when we first began to do broadcasts together, I don't know how many times I would say to our listeners, just because Alan says this doesn't mean it's so, because I don't know that it is. And so, I invited them to listen and consider, but to do their homework. And that was when finally, you know, we talked about, and you decided it would be very helpful when you wrote that first book, to confirm for people, from ancient or old books and writings and etc. But, I didn't disbelieve you, but I didn't necessarily believe you. You understand what I'm saying. And now, as we're talking, this seems so natural to me, what we're talking about, and so not matter of fact, but that I know it's so. I know that it is so, what the planning. It's been a science for a long, long time, hasn't it, Alan?

Alan: Oh, absolutely. And it was used in the Middle East thousands of years before the marriage system even, for control purposes, where the king or the state would rule over the public, rather than have a tribe living there independently and all working together. So, yeah, they displaced the tribe and then they become the substitute leaders, and they have total control over everyone, but they still use tribal techniques. That's why they give you national symbols, which is drummed into you that that's yours, and you will respond to those things as soon as you see them, and national anthems. These are all tribal things, you see.

Jackie: Like a flag.

Alan: A flag and brass bands and tunes. All that kind of thing. And every country is given their own national anthem. And they hear that and they cry and all this stuff. And someone points the way to war, and they all just rush off. This is just basic tribal conditioning, which is being used.

Jackie: And you know what I find interesting. The, I think it's England's, it's God Save the Queen, or God Save the King. That tune is the same exact tune that we sing, America, oh Beautiful for Spacious Skies, I think that's the one. Okay. And then, when I was doing a search on the internet for when we were talking about quite a while ago, Jehovah, Jove, Jupiter, Zeus, Zeus-Pater. Well, okay, I found a song, an old Masonic song, and it was sung to the tune of America. And it was about Jehovah, Jove, Creator of All, Jehovah, Jove, is exactly what it said.

Alan: The same, the same By George, that's how it ends.

Jackie: Jehovah, Jove, our Lord.

Alan: Sure, this is an amazing dual reality. We're given one reality, while the other ones that run this show, laugh up their sleeves when they live in the other reality. And that's just the way it is. We are perfectly dumbed down, cattle, basically, for their purposes. We serve their purpose. And now, with the UN Charter, and the whole globalistic push, they've simply put it into writing, that we are, our duty is to serve the state, the world state. That's what they're talking about.

Jackie: You know, I made a little note here when you were talking about marriage. How they pushed marriage for their own. Well, I don't know how it is in other states, but I have, right from the law books, here, in Pennsylvania, that in marriage there are three parties. The husband, the wife, and the state.

Alan: And the state.

Jackie: Of necessity.

Alan: That's why you have a license.

Jackie: Alan, when I saw that, I thought, oh, my God. And then you think about it. The State can either yes or no, whether you can even get a marriage license, okay? And then, it's up to the State, the judges, the courts, to either okay or deny a divorce. And then they get in the middle of all the, you know, little details of who gets what, and who and etc. And it's all decided by the State.

Alan: That's right. So, yeah, they run the whole show. And we really don't have the freedoms we thought we had. We have freedom within their system to follow the rules within their system. But, if you try to walk to the edge of that system, suddenly you'll find that it's a different world altogether. Because people will appear from odd places, and put you right back into that system or else. So, yeah, we are economic units who supply the energy, just like the batteries in the Matrix, for the elitists' purposes. That's our function. And under the UN Charter, we are economic units, and our duty, as I say, is to serve the World State. Now even a citizen, the term citizen, legally means, you're born into a system with pre-existing duties. How can you be free if you're born into a system where there are pre-existing duties, you see. That's not freedom at all. You're born, in other words, with a purpose, to serve them.

Jackie: You know, when you mentioned the word unit. I had a friend from when I lived in Collinville, Illinois. He was in a high position, a management position in an insurance company. And I was talking to him about some of this stuff, a long time ago, when I very first started. And he smiled at me, and he said, you know what they call the insurance agents, and I said, no, and they were something like, not economic units, but it was something unit. That they were actually referred to as units. He said, you're not going to like this, but he got it, Alan. Folks, we're going to take a break here.

(Commercial Break)

Jackie: We're back. I made a couple of notes here, Alan, thoughts that I had when you were talking about these economic units. And I wrote, you know, as you were talking, capital, The Herd, and Chattel. That is the root of that world. And then the chattel in those days were their cattle. And they were actually, their value or their wealth was determined by how many head of cattle they had.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: And that was their capital.

Alan: Yes, and that's why, when Margaret Thatcher was in, she brought back what they called the head tax.

Jackie: Head, oh, we have head tax here.

Alan: They just count the heads. And if you go back to Plato, Plato had the order, the ruling elites with the dominant minority running the show called The Guardians. They were the perpetual guardians of their system. That's what they meant by that. Then they'd have the helpers of the Guardians.

Jackie: Say that again.

Alan: Plato, 2300 years ago, wrote The Republic. And that was his vision of a future World State, run by the elite, for the elite, in perpetuity. And it had always been going, actually before he was born, and he got it all from Egypt, where he studied. He gave the system out there. He said that there's a guardian class. The Guardians, again, are split up into sections. They have the absolute top or creme-de-le-creme of the Guardian class.

Jackie: Who, okay, as an example, in today's world.

Alan: But getting back to it, you have to understand what he said first, before you can get back to today.

Jackie: Okay, I just wanted, and then, you'll give us an example.

Alan: Yeah, because he said that at the top, and this is a Masonic coding, by the way, the Lazy Boy, LaZy Boy, la in French, of course, the male-female hermaphrodite, that's what they mean by that, Z Boy, and the Z is connected, as above so below. And the Y, again, is the male, primarily male form, or mentality, the Y chromosome. So boy, the Lazy Boy doesn't do any work. So at the top, the ones who run the show do no work. And so, below them, they have what they call the Fat Man. The Fat Man goes round all the higher lodges and picks up all the data on everyone. That's his job. That's why you had Fat Man and Little Boy for the Atomic Bombs they dropped on Japan. It was all Masonic coding. When they dropped them on the 33rd degree parallel.

Jackie: What was Little Boy?

Alan: Yeah, 33rd degree parallel, Hiroshima. 33 degrees.

Jackie: Yeah, but what was Little Boy? That wasn't Lazy Boy, was it?

Alan: It was a form of it, yeah.

Jackie: Okay, Fat Boy and Little Boy.

Alan: And Little Boy. Fat Man and Little Boy.

Jackie: Fat Man and Little Boy.

Alan: And of course, in the Batman, you have Batman and Robin, who's a little boy. Because in the ancient philosophers, who helped set this system up, always had their little boy. Anyway, the top Guardian class, and then the dominant minority, that would be the ones who were shown to the public as being in charge of affairs, the actual workers on a higher level, there you could definitely point to the guys like Kissinger, who has always been involved behind the scenes in politics, and obviously takes his orders from a higher source, not presidents.

Jackie: Yeah. Would Rockefellers and them be?

Alan: Rockefeller too, no doubt about it. They said in the 1700s that they would dominate the world by what they called philanthropy, philanthropic methods. Meaning, if they could give the big money to create charitable organizations with what would appear to have good social values, then they would eventually end up making the social values and the policies, which they have done. All policies now have their champions, and the NGOs are all funded by the big philanthropic organizations. And the Rockefeller foundation is now in charge also of a couple of other ones. Like the Morgan Trust was one of them they took over. Like the Morgan Bank. And so they have these charitable trusts, where they can choose which NGOs they will finance.

Jackie: And they are tax free.

Alan: And they also, every university, in the States, the US and in Canada, gets funding from these philanthropic organizations. And Rockefeller funds every university in Canada. But along with the funding comes little requests, not to talk about certain subjects, you see.

Jackie: We have a call. Shall we take it?

Alan: Yeah.

Jackie: Hi, you're on the air.

Caller: Hi, yes. Hello. I just have a question for Alan, and then I'll hang up, so I can hear him. I want to know the play of, the position of, I'm sure he may have heard of it, of the place called the Bank for International Settlements. There was a woman on I think Joyce Riley and Dave von Kleist show and gave a website, I think it's womansgroup.org. And she said that was.

Jackie: That was Joan Veon.

Caller: Right, right. And she said that every month, all these big banks, the banks that run the Bank of England, the Federal Reserve, they all, they have chairmen, the chairman's appointed by directors of the board, that Greenspan is the chairman and the other bank is the Bank of England, they all have to report once they actually go there physically. I mean, it could be done on the phone or the internet, but they go there physically, once a month, to the Bank of International Settlements.

Jackie: What is your question, Storm?

Caller: And also, if the Bank of International Settlements has a website, or something, if he could, you know, find out.

Jackie: Okay. What is your question, Storm?

Caller: Well, what I want to know is, that bank, is that the top bank that runs these other banks. And this woman, she was talking about Sith and Lucifer and all that. Is that really true about this Lucifer stuff? Because, as far as I know, what Cooper....

Jackie: Okay, just state your question, honey.

Caller: Oh, okay. Well, I want to know if he could elaborate on that, on the Bank of International Settlements, who runs it. Because I know, you know, the Federal Reserve is run by Rockefeller, and.

Jackie: Okay, okay. Thank you. Okay, thanks Storm.

Caller: Okay, bye.

Jackie: Sorry about that, Alan.

Alan: Yeah. It's just a sidetrack, that.

Jackie: Yeah, it was a sidetrack, wasn't it?

Alan: Yeah. To get us off in a whole bunch of stuff they can find on the Internet themselves. The International Monetary Fund is the big boy. The rest of it is just the compartments of the legal system.

Jackie: IMF is the big bank, the big one. And isn't it interesting that the Secretary of the Treasury of the US is the governor of the International Monetary Fund.

Alan: Yeah, well. Everything is connected.

Jackie: I know, Alan. But, you know what, you know that. But when it can be connected for others.

Alan: Well, if they've been listening to Joyce and Dave, I'm sure they know it all. And Joan Veon just happens to get into all these meetings. Maurice Strong, who was the second in command at the UN, and in charge of the World Bank, put there by Rockefeller, knows her by first name.

Jackie: According to her?

Alan: Yeah. Now, you can't get near that guy with all his bodyguards, you know, unless you're really in there. And I understand her job is international investments.

Jackie: Yeah, it's an international women's group, is what it's called.

Alan: Yeah, of investment companies. And what they do is they go there, and they find out where the US is going to plunk more money, which country, and then they tell all their members, you're guaranteed this is going to be a winner, because the US is financing it. This is a con game. It's a con game. So, their job is to go round and make sure you're terrified by what's coming. They have no answers for you, but they make their living on it. A very good living, by the way. In fact, Veon couldn't survive in the lifestyle she must live, without the World Bank and the UN. International investments. That's all I have to say on that.

Jackie: Okay, thank you, Alan.

Alan: So, if we get back to Plato and the Republic.

Jackie: Okay, yes, and you were explaining, or giving us some examples of the dominant minority. And that would include the Rothschilds also.

Alan: Yeah. Those that are visible to the public in high social managerial positions.

Jackie: Okay. And today, who would be the Fat Man?

Alan: The Fat Man is a collector who goes round. They also call him the Grey Man. And the Grey Man is the person who goes between the ones who are never seen by the public and brings the policies to the presidents, the advisors to presidents. So the Grey Men take that position as well, on a higher level.

Jackie: They're the advisors.

Alan: On lower levels, on high Masonic organizations, the Fat Man, as they call him, goes round and gets all the info.

Jackie: We have another call here. Hello.

Caller: No, very quickly. I wanted him to elaborate on Benjamin Creme and this Lord Maitreya business. Who is the Maitreya? Is he real? Or is this something fake? A representation, or what? If he could just elaborate on that. He was on the George Noory Show and...

Jackie: Well....

Caller: I know. But what's funny is, when they give themselves away. George Noory played Van Halen's Running with the Devil, before he put him on. And I said, what the hell is this?

Jackie: Okay. Thanks, Storm.

Caller: Okay.

Alan: These are just distractions we're getting here.

Jackie: Yeah, do you want to....

Alan: Benjamin Creme's name tells you all you have to know if you understand Freemasonry.

Jackie: Well, tell us.

Alan: Ben is son of, in Hebrew.

Jackie: Son of.

Alan: And jamin is from James, I am. If you take the y and put the I there from the Latin to the Aramaic. I am the son of crem. Crem is fire. I am the son of fire. It's Masonic. That's all you have to know.

Jackie: Son of fire. Well, what does that connote?

Alan: It tells you that it's another Masonic sideshow.

Jackie: Oh, okay. The Maitreya, is that the same thing?

Alan: Everyone who has seen the light, or broken through into the real world, is called, traditionally, everyone, a Maitreya. So, you can call yourself one, if you want.

Jackie: Oh, okay. Thanks. (Laughter)

Alan: Yeah. That's Hindu philosophy. And anyone who has broken through is a Maitreya.

Jackie: Okay. I'd like to go back. This is for our listeners. Of course, this whole conversation is for our listeners. But when we were talking about the economic units, the herd, the cattle.

Alan: And Plato, by the way, I should say this, when we're on that word, unit. He said that the Guardian class, the helpers, the military group that would interbreed with male and female warriors, in the final days of this system, which we have today, and all the ones beneath that were raw material. All the common people were raw material, and they were called not people, but its. And Unit is the French, Un is one. That's what it means in French. The UN means one. So you have one it. So, you are a one it, a unit. That's from Plato, right up to today. Hasn't changed. It's all coding.

Jackie: I wanted any of our newer listeners, in case that you have any doubts about this portion of our conversation, there is an article by Cindy Weatherly, Are Your Children Human Capital? and underneath that article is an executive order that was signed by Bill Clinton, and it basically was a commission that was to study capital, and it includes in the executive order, that they will study all kinds of capital and including human capital. And then they were supposed to report, and part of the report was on the depreciation of capital. Alan, how do you depreciate human capital?

Alan: If you depreciate them then you simply either breed more, so their value is less, really. Many hands make light work, as they say in China. Or you can go the other way, and you can start the culling of them.

Jackie: That's what I was thinking. The depreciation of capital.

Alan: Of course the men in the West are becoming sterile with every yearly UN report on male sperm count. Last year, the sperm count was down 75% in the average Western male, aged 25, compared to 1950 levels. So, he's almost sterile. He's only got 25% of live sperm, as opposed to his father or grandfather.

Jackie: You know where I was with that? When people are no longer "on the tax rolls" they're considered useless eaters.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: And I was thinking about that as the "depreciation of human capital." That when you become a useless eater, you need to be sent elsewhere. But yet on the other hand, what you're saying is the depreciation of human capital could be the reduction of the numbers.

Alan: Absolutely.

Jackie: Oh, Alan. I got. I hadn't thought about it that way. Wow.

Alan: Yeah. And I should tell them too, maybe, about the three books I've got.

Jackie: I think you should.

Alan: Because I go through Freemasonry from ancient times, long before the guilds, all the nonsense they tell you, oh, they began in the Middle Ages with the guilds. No, they were on the go thousands of years ago, much higher orders of course. The guys in the Blue Lodge are at the bottom of the heap. They don't know there's anything above them. I go through the history. The monetary history as well. The history of commerce from thousands of years ago. The introduction of money. How the money boys took over the ancient countries one by one, by forming standing armies, which they then sent off to invade other countries. And, so I show you that nothing has changed. And today, the US and Canada and Britain, are simply finishing off the task of bringing the Muslim countries, who don't allow usury, they're bringing them into this system called democracy, with a centralized bank, a debt system, and a bunch front people we call politicians, who were chosen by the elite above them. [See ordering information on transcript.] And I sent a stack out just this morning. So, they'll be getting them soon. So, I'll have to get another bunch printed up, if I can.

Jackie: Okay, good. So, people who have ordered whatever books they've ordered, they're in the mail.

Alan: They're on their way.

Jackie: That's great. You, Alan, you were mentioning in your books, you know, about the democracy. And I've been, oh, my goodness. I've been in JINSA's website. That's the Jewish Institute of National Security Affairs. And they had a press release welcoming John Bolton as the, they call it now, the permanent, this is the way they said it, anyway, the permanent representative of the US to the United Nations. And I recall, and the reason I recall it, is because I bolded it, when I pasted it in, that he was bringing the understanding that democracy is a higher form of government. Now, what does that mean, Alan?

Alan: Well, it does mean, it's more governed from on high, meaning the people who really run the show anyway.

Jackie: Democracy.

Alan: I mean, people in Britain have known for centuries that democracy is simply the facade for the public. And they call it the establishment, are the ones who really rule the country. And no one bucks the establishment. And these are the ones, the old aristocracies, that have always run the country. Politics and democracy are simply a pantomime for the public, to believe in and get involved in. But it's a pantomime none the less.

Jackie: Well, basically, they say that democracy is mob rule.

Alan: But it's not.

Jackie: Yeah, exactly. It's elite rule, isn't it?

Alan: It's elite rule, and they simply use the majority. They use the majority to bring in new forms of whatever. They'll say, "well, what's your problem. Everyone else has accepted this."

Jackie: That's right.

Alan: That's the idea.

Jackie: They get the majority to go along with them.

Alan: Because they know that 87% of the public in all ages, in all countries, will always go along with any agenda they're told to go along with.

Jackie: 87%.

Alan: And therefore, for the ones who hold out, they'll say, "well, what's wrong with you. Everyone else have accepted their ID card, you know." That's how it works. That's why they love the term, democracy. But it's certainly not mob rule, because the mob truly have no real say in anything.

Jackie: Well, no they don't. But they think they do. That's the whole point.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: That's what's so slick about this plan, Alan. It appears that the people, it's the people who want this, and really, the people, the majority of the people, have been so mind controlled, that they want whatever they're told they want. That's it. They say whatever they're told to think.

Alan: Exactly.

Jackie: And they say, this is what I think.

Alan: Well, Brzezinski said in the '70s in one of his books. And he should know, since his speciality was mind control on a mass scale, with psychotronic warfare. He said, shortly the public will be unable to come to a conclusion by themselves. They'll simply come to the conclusion they're given by the media on the previous night's news. And that will be their topics of conversation at work the next day. So, they understand all of this, you know. And strangely enough, even Madame Blavatsky knew this was coming. Because she announced a way of manipulating the minds of everyone was available in the 1800s. And she was afraid this would be used for all the wrong purposes by a few of the elite.

Jackie: Well, what do you mean she was afraid that it would be misused?

Alan: Well, Blavatsky herself was a stooge. You see, all people who come out as a front are often, not that she was well meaning, but many of them are well meaning stooges, who have been told part of the plan, but not the whole thing. And they've been told there would be a utopia, etc. But she did know that there was talk in her day of using this technology on the minds of the public. Alexander Graham Bell's father was using forms of mind impulse, or vibrational impulse to get into the heads of the deaf people by bursting, very controlled bursts of sound waves, which would hit the skulls of people, and they could maybe hear the messages. You'd hear it inside your head. That technology from the 1800s is way, way so advanced now today.

Jackie: Oh, my God.

Alan: And the CIA admit they were using this stuff, back as early as the 1950s.

Jackie: Okay, I want to get back to Blavatsky. Are you saying that she saw this, she saw the potential and thought it could be good?

Alan: She saw it, but she also had, I guess, a little bit of warning that maybe the plan that she'd been told about wasn't the whole plan, and that there was more to all of this. She had to have, because the doors were opened up for her wherever she went, but she didn't know the whole plan, I'm sure. She was more of an actress than anything else, you know, who was playing a role.

Jackie: We'll take a call. You're on the air.

Caller: Yeah, I was going to say, if anybody is interested, you can get H.P. Blavatsky's book from Kessingers.net. And also, there's another author too. Have you ever head of, well, I'm sure you've heard of him, Manley P. Hall, The Theosophical Research Society. But Lucifer Magazine, it's surprising. I didn't think that Kessinger still published those old magazines.

Jackie: Oh, My God. You know, I've always wanted to see those.

Caller: Oh, they do. That's what I don't understand, it's so crazy about this. If Alan is listening to me, he may answer. I don't understand. Why do they have all the stuff so open?

Jackie: It isn't open.

Caller: You know what, I don't care.

Jackie: Kessingers is not open. Thanks, Storm.

Caller: Oh, yes it is. Anybody can get it. You don't have to be a Mason or belong to secret lodges or anything to order it.

Alan: The reason it's given to the public is that they want a lot of public support. A lot of people read this stuff, and it's formulated in a way that there's a lot of things you can agree about, what they're saying.

Jackie: There are. Yes, Alan.

Alan: You just simply don't, you miss the fact though that there's little twists in it. And before you know it, they've got you where they want you. Your mind has followed their story, into their conclusion. And that's how simple it works.

Jackie: And even if it isn't their plan, that they're talking about it, like it's benevolent, and it could be, but it isn't.

Alan: It's not, no. They will never ever give the...

Jackie: Oh, thank you, oh man. You have just, you know what, that, that's the razor's edge, Alan.

Alan: It is. And also, don't forget....

Jackie: Wait a minute. We're out of time. Well, I'm not going to say that. We're out of our hour. Will you come back tomorrow night?

Alan: Sure, I will.

Jackie: I want to pick this up right here. Okay, oh, thanks. Folks, we'll be back with you tomorrow night with Alan Watt, and thanks for being here. I'm glad you are. And God Bless you folks

Alan's Materials Available for Purchase and Ordering Information:

BOOKS "Cutting Through" & "Waiting for the Miracle....."
Volumes 1, 2, 3 Also available in Spanish or Portuguese translation: "Esperando el Milagro....."
(Español) & "Esperando um Milagre....." (Português)

CDs Ancient Religions and History MP3 CDs:
Part 1 (1998) and Part 2 (1998-2000) & Blurbs and 'Cutting Through the Matrix' Shows on MP3 CDs (Up to 50 Hours per Disc)

DVDs "Reality Check Part 1" & "Reality Check Part 2 - Wisdom, Esoterica and ...TIME"

August 10th, 2005
Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru

cuttingthroughthematrix.com

alternate sites:

cuttingthroughthematrix.net , .us , .ca

alanwattcuttingthroughthematrix.ca

European site includes all audios & downloadable TRANSCRIPTS in European languages for print up:

alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

mirror site:

cuttingthrough.jenkness.com

Information for purchasing Alan's books, CDs, DVDs and DONATIONS:

Canada and America: PayPal, Cash, personal checks &
for the US, INTERNATIONAL postal money orders / for Canada, INTERNAL postal money orders
(America: Postal Money orders - Stress the INTERNATIONAL pink one, not the green internal one.)

Outside the Americas: PayPal, Cash, Western Union and Money Gram
(Money Gram is cheaper; even cheaper is a Money Gram check – in Canadian dollars:
mail via the postal services worldwide.)

PayPal Orders: USE THE DONATE BUTTON ON THE WEBSITE – AND –
Send a separate email along with the donation (list your order, name and address)

Click the link below for your location (ordering info):

USA

Canada

Europe/Scandinavian

All Other Countries

Jackie: Well, good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Wednesday. It is the last day of our broadcast week. It is the 10th of August, in the year 2005. And Alan is with us, Alan Watt is with us again this evening folks. And if you were not listening last night, there is a possibility that Alan is not going to be able to continue his work, unless there's some help coming forth, and maybe Alan, we could mention it just briefly for our listeners who weren't tuned in last night. But I, folks, I think it behooves all of us, to extremely appreciate and listen, and to what has been offered, what has been presented. Alan Watt, I said this a long, long time ago, he brought us out of the Dark Ages, and into the beginning, coming into the light, if you would, of the truth. And I would really regret if we wouldn't be able to have him on, or if you, those of you, many of you I know, who've had conversations with Alan wouldn't be able to get a hold of him.

[Technical difficulties at radio station]

Jackie: Well, what I wanted to talk, remember last night, when I said there was a subject I'd like us to address, you to address. What I, and I know that we touched on it. (Phone rings) Yes.

Caller: Hello, Jackie. Yeah, this is Jim again. You're on.

Jackie: Thanks very much, Jim. Bye. Alright, we're on the air now, for our shortwave listeners. Folks, I'm sorry for that mix-up. No, I'm sure WWCR is sorry, because it wasn't us. But Alan, what I would like you to address tonight is the Israel identity, Christian identity. And I know that you've said, well, it's all part of the thing, and all that. But there are a lot of people I don't think who understand what that entails, where did it come from, and all of that. Would you be willing to kind of expand on that?

Alan: I don't really like talking about it. I'll tell you why.

Jackie: Why?

Alan: We've done it before.

Jackie: But not to any length.

Alan: And also, it's like going back to kindergarten. And if people can't understand the basics of what's happening in their lives at this precise moment, they don't stand much of a chance of what's rushing down upon them. It's almost like trying to start right back at scratch, square one, to bring them up to date, and there's no time. All we need to know is that Christian identity has royal approval. It's chartered by the British royalty. It's part of the British Empire movement to convince the public that Britain, or London, put it this way. See, we get confused with terms of nations. These aren't nations. These are capital cities with elites living in them. And so, London, really, about 200 families in London run the British Empire. And, of course, they use every psychological means to do so. And there's nothing better than appealing to people's ego, telling them they're superior or special, and using religion to back it up. That's an ancient technique that's been used for thousands and thousands of years in all empires, and all the British Israel movement is another one towards that global agenda. And the idiots that follow it I have no time for, to be honest with you. I think they're petty little elitists. Even the poor ones. There's nothing worse than looking at someone who's poor, but believing they're superior because God told them so. And looking down their noses at other people. It's a snobbish thing. It has snob appeal. And it also, as I say, furthers the whole movement of globalism, which will not end up with a utopia for the people. It's going to be hell for the people, but a utopia for a small group of elitists who've used them all. And it's chartered, as I say, all of these movements that are interlinked, even, I might even say the latter one, who was just on the show, in your time space. It's all part of the same thing, whether they try to deny it or not. They're all part of the same grouping, of elitists, you know. And that God has made them superior, and it's their right to rule the world, us against you. But it has royal charter approval, and that tells you all you really need to know.

Jackie: You're saying that British Israelism has royal charter approval.

Alan: It's registered, it's chartered by the British royalty, like the banks are chartered in Britain by the royalty.

Jackie: And this is where the whole Israel or Christian Identity movement came from?

Alan: Yeah. I mean, it started off with a nutcase, back in the 1800s, who was eventually locked up by the royalty as being insane, because, well, he thought, since we're all the children of Israel, then I've traced my lineage back to David, so I've got more right to sit on that throne than you do. So, Queen Victoria had him locked up in an insane asylum, but then her advisors thought, "you know, this is a good idea. If we can con the people of the Commonwealth to believe that they are the real people of Israel, then they'll go forward with our agenda for globalism, and say that it's God's work." And that's been used ever since. And of course, they use racism, they use everything to justify it. And they have the white Anglo-Saxons at the top, and Germanics. And then they have a category, a sliding category, right down to the dark-skinned people. And you're graded like eggs, you know. Grade A, B, C or D. And if you're a D or C, then tough luck, because you're not supposed to hang around in the near future. So, this is the whole nonsense with this movement. It's a snobbish, elitist-run, political agenda, using religion for the idiots that actually follow it. But then, followers are always pretty well idiots, and they're always used. And it's going to simply end up with globalism. And at the end, they better pray to their deity for help, being so special, because I don't think they're going to get much, when it all comes down, unless they belong to the inner circles of the elite, which very few of them do.

Jackie: I guess I always have that hope in my heart, that there will be people that will hear and suddenly see, you know, the idiocy of it, because it is idiocy. It's beyond my comprehension. And I just always think, maybe there's somebody out there or some out there who suddenly will get it, Alan.

Alan: Well, I'll tell you, as I say, we're all going round in this big whirlpool right now. And there are thousands of organizations and religions all fighting each other, all fighting petty differences, each one given to the people, each one of those religions given to the people, like tailor-made suits, and they bought them. And they're all fighting each other, as they go round and round and round in this whirlpool, and they can't even see, as they fight each other, the big drain hole at the bottom that they're all getting sucked into. And that's all intentional. When you create chaos, or an age of chaos, you use every group that you have created to fight each other and keep the confusion going. And that's where they all are right now. They're going down that big sink hole, because every day there are laws added upon laws, and Joe Public is too busy with his petty little hobby or his favorite topic, which is generally himself or his religion, to see what's really happening. And to deprogram people who've chosen this is too strenuous a task, and there's no time left. It took centuries and centuries to build up this technique of deprogramming people, and right now, we're at a stage where we don't have the time to go after individuals and do it for them. We're running out of time, very fast. You know, I was watching traffic today, as tourists were just going north, and I thought, you know, not one single one of these vehicles will have an occupant who's even aware, or is even thinking that this lifestyle will end eventually. They truly believe that this is going to go on forever.

Jackie: And they're going to be able to afford the gas to take their trips.

Alan: Even as they're scraping to do so now, yeah. That's right.

Jackie: Yeah, and you said Rumsfeld had made the statement, maybe we didn't hear it here. I've not seen it or heard it, but that, here in the States, that they're going to be actually doubling the present cost of gas.

Alan: Yes, and that was the same speech that he said that they might use tactical nuclear weapons on Iran.

Jackie: They're real crazies, aren't they?

Alan: No, they're not crazy. They planned this a long, long, probably before I was born.

Jackie: You don't think that's crazy, Alan?

Alan: Yeah, it's crazy with an intellect. So, sure. They know what they're doing, because they plan it so far ahead. And I have no doubt something will happen this October, because that's when Mars will be the closest it's been for thousands of years.

Jackie: Oh, the warring planet.

Alan: And of course, the Red October was the revolution for Bolshevism. And red is their color, by the way. That's why the British army had the red headband round the officers' hats. Wherever you see the color red, that's their color.

Jackie: They had red coats too, didn't they?

Alan: Yeah, but nowadays they still have the red band around their hats. And so, by the way, do the Chinese officers, you'll notice. Because the capitalists in London created the communists. That's why. That's why you had Red Square. Gene Roddenberry is the red berry, you know, of the Star Trek episodes.

Jackie: Roddenberry. Rodden, Red.

Alan: Their color is red, and it's been red for thousands of years. The mystery religion. That's their color. And they run all religions. That's why the symbols, all of the symbols that the British Israel Movement used were all taken from the mystery religion. And the idiots that follow it, don't even know that. Even their logo, which is the Templar type cross, which means the sun, the S-U-N, is superimposed over the Saint Andrew's cross, which is the X, and of course, that's the illumined man. That's the symbol of the illumined man. They don't even know that. They're very ignorant people. They only know what they've been told. And it doesn't occur to them to investigate it themselves.

Jackie: Oh, you know what. Some of these people have, of course somebody probably taught them, but I read a thing the other day. In fact, I put it in a file, because it was amazing how this individual went through the "scriptures" and of course, they never talk about some of those statements that don't make any sense at all, that the special and chosen people are going to loan to nations and borrow from none.

Alan: Well, the main thing that the British Israel are always quoting is that the promise given to Abraham and so on was that his seed would be as, you know, the stars of the sky, and the sands and so on. And of course, they say, "well, it can't be the Jews, because there's not enough of them, so therefore the British Empire was the biggest one in the world. So, it must be us." That's the con game that they go with. That's what they play by.

Jackie: Oh, they go through a lot more than that.

Alan: But that's what they play at. That's how they keep trying to justify this pathetic movement. And by the way, the British Israel movement is the World Federalists Association. It's one in the same thing. They're both chartered under the two names. It's the same organization. They used to call themselves the world parliamentarians. And now it's the World Federalist Association. And they get massive funding from all the foundations and Rockefellers and so on, to make everybody, all these gofers, work towards globalism. And these gofers think it's going to be a Utopia for them because they're God's chosen people, all these British people, extract, or Germanic and all this stuff, and they're all slated for extinction, once their job is over. That's the traditional way of things. Those that run this system are cost effective. They don't believe in useless eaters. So, once the job is over, there will be no North America, as you know it, or Britain. Britain has already changed so much so that you wouldn't know what country it was. You might think it was from India.

Jackie: In other words, and we were talking about that earlier, or in another conversation, that for the time being, although Canada and the US and Mexico have been merged, they're still playing the game with passports and stuff like that at the borders.

Alan: Yes, but you see, the idea of that is to bring in the universal identity card. They're already advertising on radio and television that you can get a quick pass, a quick pass, a pre-screened pass through your border with this new ID card that you apply for.

Jackie: Oh, my, you're kidding.

Alan: No.

Jackie: And it's the same one that England is putting out now.

Alan: Same company that manufacturers them. It's the same card.

Jackie: And it's the same card that will be the Real ID.

Alan: And your bank card.

Jackie: They call it here in the US; and do they have a name? Are they using it in Canada now too?

Alan: They're going to start issuing it with the next licenses I think, this coming year. So, as you get your license renewed, your driving license, you'll get the card instead. But you'll have to go in and get fingerprinted and eye-scanned.

Jackie: Well, I'll tell you what. I read the bill myself, and what they have done is they said, they laid it out, you know, what requirements are going to be, the identification requirements in order to get this ID card. But it also says that the Secretary of Homeland Security can add any other requirements that he feels are necessary.

Alan: Yeah. It's wide open.

Jackie: So, it's a Czar. It's a Totalitarian. Yeah, and I wanted our listeners to think about this. I know that I did say it earlier when we talked about this, Alan. But it isn't just, you know one of the things that it said in the bill, is that the States are not mandated, you know, to implement it. However, any state that doesn't, nobody in that state will be able to board a commercial airliner.

Alan: That's right. The same in Canada, that was announced.

Jackie: That's right. Well that's because the federal government has control over the air transportation.

Alan: The powers of the air.

Jackie: But what I want, with the first thing that came to my mind are the federal highways, because the States have been very, very busy turning their highways over to the federal government. And I talked to a rep in Illinois about this, and he said, well, it's because that way, they have to maintain them. And I said, yeah, but they take all the taxes out of the states to "maintain them". And he admitted that they use the road taxes to blackmail the states into passing particular bills. But the point is, there are federal highways. The main thoroughfares where people do their traveling are federal highways today. And if you don't, and this, they call the Real ID, Federal Identification. And it has to meet federal specs. And, so therefore, my thought is, if you're on one of those federal highways when this thing has been fully implemented, and you don't have a Real ID, you're gone.

Alan: Yeah, or if your vehicle is not up to what they call federal standards, which are international standards.

Jackie: It will no longer be the state that makes those, well, they don't much anyway, they're all, but, I mean, at least at the present time, it's, how do you call it, if a state decided, like Alabama. It's been some time, but when the EPA mandated the MTBE to go in the gas, Alabama state legislature just passed a bill and said, no, we're not going to do it, and they didn't. But see, the other states go along. Same thing in Arizona, when they said that ozone is no longer usable. And for our listeners who may not know this, Dupont was the company that produced ozone, and about three years before their 25-year patent ran out, that's when they began to talk about global warming, folks. And the hole in the ozone layer. And that we've got to quit using this Freon, because Freon was doing it. Well, it was Dupont that patented the new coolant, which, there's reports on it, Alan, that it just tears heck out of the equipment. And it's nowhere near as effective.

Alan: It is effective. It's so much effective that it keeps breaking down. And they're guaranteed after-sales parts. That's where the big profits are.

Jackie: Yeah, exactly. And much more expensive. But, Arizona, and I've got the bill, actual bill, the state of Arizona, or Arizona state passed a law and said that we find that there is no harm from ozone from all of the, there is no hole in the ozone layer, etc, etc. And so, in Arizona, we will manufacture and we will sell and we will use ozone. Now, I don't know if they've retracted it since then, but it was a bill, and I actually saw the bill signed. I mean, I got an actual photocopy of the original bill. So, what I'm saying, long story short, is that there were certain states that did certain things at certain times, and they got away with it, because they could. But, with this real ID thing, they really got slick with it, didn't they?

Alan: Well, all must become one.

Jackie: They didn't have to, the states aren't mandated to use it. They don't have to. We can't mandate to the states.

Alan: Yeah, so all they do is the big companies say that it's impossible to make a special different gasoline for you, so, if we do, it's going to cost you twice as much, and they cave in and they go along with it. You can't fight, you can't fight the corporations. This is the system. It's like Carroll Quigley said. The corporations will be the new feudal overlords, and that's what they are, you know. They're dictating our public policies to the people. And they're doing it via governments, which they already own, and in fact, most of the politicians have worked for these corporations, and then, when they leave politics, they go back into those corporations. So, yeah, this is the ping-pong. They used to call it fascism at one time, but that's gone out of vogue. But it's the same thing, you know. They dictate their policies to us, yeah.

Jackie: Well, like Rumsfeld was on the board of the Searle company that manufactured Aspartame.

Alan: That's right. That was me that first came out with that.

Jackie: Well, they tried forever to get it through, and they knew it just wasn't passing, it wasn't being approved, because how dangerous, and it's a killer.

Alan: And he's a director on the board of Searle. And he's the guy also, Searle is just a part of the company of Monsanto. And they are the ones, a company which is a drug manufacturer which specializes in psychotropic drugs for psychiatric illness, is hand-in-glove with your main food producer, that should ring alarms in everybody. It really should. And if it doesn't, well, I'm sorry for those people.

Jackie: Monsanto. Searle?

Alan: Searle is part of Monsanto.

Jackie: Okay. And folks, in case you wanted to do some research...

(Commercial Break)

Jackie: Alright, we're back with you folks, with Alan Watt. The volume was turned down a little bit, and I did not hear the warning, so we were talking into the commercial. And what I was saying, in case any of you want to do some research on this, Alan had told me about the company Searle, and I read it, and saw it, regarding aspartame, and wasn't pronouncing correctly, so I wasn't connecting the dots. But that company is spelled Searle. And as Alan just told us, it is part of the Monsanto Company. And Searle is a pharmaceutical, Alan. Well, how did a pharmaceutical produce aspartame?

Alan: Well, aspartame is a chemical. And they're all offshoots of the chemical industry, the pharmaceutical industry, in fact, the whole pharmaceutical industry is an offshoot of the chemical companies. So, sure, what they can't use as drugs they'll call something else and try and sell it for any other purpose, as they do with the aluminum oxide that they put in as fluoride, you know. That was aluminum waste. So they found a purpose for it through ALCAN, the Bronfmans in Canada, when they owned it. And that started the ball rolling for nice strong healthy teeth, you know. So, sure, aspartame was basically some byproduct of some experiments within Searle company. And, as I say, this company specializes in pharmaceutical drugs which deal with psychiatric problems. And aspartame is a very good, in fact, it's very similar to cocaine in a sense. It makes the people hyper. And it can also cause seizures in a lot of people. So, once they come off this, you'll find that the hyperness goes away and so do the seizures. It's a very potent drug.

Jackie: Oh, it causes cancer tumors, brain tumors, and all kinds of things. It's totally destructive.

Alan: But Rumsfeld, he's always been a main salesman for the big chemical companies. In fact, the CBC television after 9/11 showed when the US was selling the various chemical weaponry to Iraq, back in the 70s, it was Mr. Rumsfeld they showed you shaking hands with Saddam Hussein. He was over there to sell them all these weapons. And when he's not selling lethal weapons openly, he's flogging other weaponry through your food or your drink. This is what you have at the top of your government. We have tyrants at the moment.

Jackie: What is your prime minister's name?

Alan: Oh, at the moment, it's Mr. Martin.

Jackie: I knew, I remembered the Paul. I couldn't remember his last name.

Alan: And his father owned the main Canadian, they still call it the steamship company, that does international cargo trading. So they made their money off governmental projects where the taxpayers paid for cargoes of grain or food or whatever to other countries. All the boys at the top are interlinked through the same very, very high Masonic organizations, way above, way above your 33 degrees.

Jackie: You know, Alan, I know, because we could just keep repeating and repeating and repeating, and it's coming to the point where people hear it, and if they don't do their own research, if they don't believe it, and they don't do their own research so they can see that it's so, then it is too late. And this is way off topic, and maybe it isn't. I was talking to Amber today, and she was telling me that she made character council. This is a twelve-year-old girl, okay. I said, well, what is character council? Well, we teach character. I said, are you telling me that they have twelve-year-old children teaching character? I said, at twelve years old you're building your character. Don't you think that's a pretty big responsibility, honey? That you're going to be teaching other people character and what does it mean? And then she said, well, we just get together and we plan dances and stuff. And I said, well, like student council? Yeah, it used to be student council, and now it's character council. So, I looked it up on the internet. It's a damn international not-for-profit organization. International, and they named all the states that are character states. They named the cities within the states, the counties within the states, and they named the countries that are, that are....

Alan: Promoting it.

Jackie: Promoting it, Alan. Now, folks, let me say this. If you have children in school, by hook or by crook, any way that you can, if you, it sounds stupid to say if you love your child, but isn't that part of what loving is, or the main thing when a child is a child, Alan, is protecting those children?

Alan: It's supposed to be, yeah.

Jackie: And they have to be taken out of the schools, because, you'll lose them, unless it doesn't matter to you. You will lose them. They will lose their minds, because their minds are being stolen. And I just wanted to say this about that.

Alan: Well, see, you're not going to stop this, because this all part of a....

Jackie: I didn't say stopping it. I'm talking about people who are listening to this broadcast right now, Alan.

Alan: Yeah, but what I'm trying to say, Jackie, is that people have been saying the same thing for a hundred years. Because when Bertrand Russell brought his first book out on this very subject, he was part of the experimenters for these schools. And he brought it out in 1905. Of course, the media went into action. There were still some people who had a voice in those days, and they said the same thing, that this was an attempt, it was more than an attempt, it was a plan. And Bertrand Russell said it, he said, if we can get the children for even four hours a day, he said, away from their parents in kindergarten, he said, we can indoctrinate them with the new values for the world. And he said the parental input will be of no effect, because we are using scientific, socialistic, indoctrination techniques. So this was known for a hundred years. And people have been bashing at this for a hundred years. And then, at the same time, you know yourself that most people are so dependent on this only system that they've been given – there's no alternative to it – that they either can't afford private schooling, or they're run off their feet trying just to pay their home and their car and all the rest of it. So they're trapped within the system. And the law says you must send your child to school, one way or another.

Jackie: No, the law does not say that.

Alan: Well, teach them, regardless. But the fact is, you know that they've made it almost impossible for the average person to teach themselves, teach the children themselves. So, you're up against a monster that goes over the future like generals over a battle plan. And they look at all the possible conflicts, the repercussions, and they literally plug every hole. And that's where we are with this.

Jackie: No child left behind.

Alan: In the Communist system, in the Soviet system, the whole Soviet Bolshevik system was planned at least a hundred years before they took over, because they knew exactly how to set up the system they had in mind. There was no debating about it. They went into action immediately. And they had children in the Young Communist movement doing exactly the same thing, and that was going around the schools and so on, twelve year olds, ones who were specially hand-picked, and it was just political correctness. It was the new agenda of the day. And they were basically parroting what they'd been told. They had little gold stars or red stars for saying the right things, and of course, that was being promoted. You can call it whatever you want, it's the same program. It's the same program, under a thousand names. So, you're under attack from a thousand directions right now. And your eyes cannot be everywhere at once. And that's what I'm saying. That's where we are right now, in the whirlpool. And you can't even keep up with what's happening.

Jackie: I know.

Alan: So, the international system has been established, you know. It's actually been here for a long time. And they simply kept the borders there and the pretense of nations, so they could keep taxing you. That's basically it. And the US is simply finishing off the last vestige of a different type of system in the Middle East. And once that's done, well the British Israel and the Identity movements and all the other gofers will have no jobs to do. They'll be equal down to the peasant of China. That's where they'll be.

Jackie: Oh, the peasants of China are doing well today.

Alan: Yeah, because now the new catchphrase they're using on the media is that gee, we must compete with China. Well, that's a race to the bottom. And that's what's being promoted right now. And anybody with any part of gray matter left in their brains that still has a spark in it, must know that if we try and compete with labor in China, our standard of living is obviously going to plummet. And that's exactly what is planned. That's exactly what is planned.

Jackie: China, I read about a magnificent, whatever we would call it, where the elite go to vacation now. And when I read that, it gave me chills, because you can see how China is being promoted to be, what? I just guess the destroyer?

Alan: Well, they have to, according to the 1937 minutes of the meetings they held in Melbourne, Australia, for the Royal Institute of International Affairs and the CFR, and I have their books. They said, in 1937, China would be the sole manufacturer of all goods for the planet. And when they said that, China was a third world nation. That's how far back they had this planned for China. They even talked about the coming war with Germany, and that they must save the Soviet system by all costs. They didn't explain why. Escott Reid from Toronto, who helped draw up the charter for the UN with Alger Hiss, the Communist, so this Canadian, Escott Reid, put his own memoirs out. And I have the book from 1937, where his kin even said, we are here to discuss a global system, a World Government. This was all discussed in 1937, in Melbourne, Australia. And I have a list of all the politicians from America, from the US, from Canada, from all over the world who attended it, because their names are all in the back of the book. We are simply living through a script written long, long ago. And in that same book, in the 1937 one, they even had the immigration quotas from China, right up until the year 2000 and just after, that they would need to be the middlemen for the trade goods, for smoothing out the trade difficulties between China and North America. They had the quotas of immigrants they would need, for the West Coast of Canada, like Vancouver. So, that's how detailed they make their plans. And when you find this stuff, and you go through, and you check up what they've done, they tally exactly. They know exactly where. The world is just one big business program. That's all it is. It's a business agenda, and we are the business. The business means buzz. We are the bees, you know. And of course, that's what we're here for.

Jackie: We are the economic units.

Alan: Yeah. We're living a script, a business plan, and we're going through it. And, as we go through the Age of Chaos, which they said they'd bring on, there's no better way than to bring all of this, this whole brand new way of living that will emerge out of the other side. That's what they keep telling us. A completely different way of living, as they bring us into the vortex, and to bring us through it, or the ones who will come through it, they have everybody fighting everybody else on petty nonsense from a previous age. This has been done before. And they're doing exactly the same thing again. The intellects way above the politicians are way beyond people that you've met in your daily life. These are real intellects here. We can't dismiss that. These are not politicians above the ones that we generally see. These are the rulers. And these people have minds almost like computers. And they have no compassion, whatsoever. And I mean no compassion on an individual or even a national or even a global scale. They will do whatever it takes, as they keep telling us, the end justifies the means. In other words, if they need part of this agenda rushed through, they'll do whatever it takes to make it so. And the Twin Towers was nothing to them. These are the same characters that brought on Pearl Harbor and World War II.

Jackie: And sunk the Maine.

Alan: Yeah. And meanwhile, everybody is fighting everybody else over religion, or the race issue, and all the other stuff that they know so well. They're old tunes they can keep playing over and over. And everyone has been programmed to dance to these tunes when it plays, and they do. And they can't see beyond it all. And this is the time now when you must see beyond it all, if there's going to be any survival for anybody at all. Because we're going through it.

Jackie: What about people, well, look at even with yourself, Alan, as you were talking about last night. You're not sure you're even going to be able to survive the winter.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: And there are people, so you're not in the city. But, of course, they're making it nearly impossible for people to live in the country, because of the increase in gas.

Alan: And taxes.

Jackie: To get you to the store. The property taxes are increasing.

Alan: Environmental laws.

Jackie: Well, yes. And it goes on and on. And then we have people who are in the cities and do not have the means to leave the cities, as much as they would desire and want to do it. So, you know, it comes back down to making the time, to be like parents with their families, Alan. With their families. They have to work. They have to work to be able to pay the bills. But, instead, maybe, of parents sloughing the children off to a babysitter, so they can go. Maybe the most important thing that people can do today is to be together, and really, just cherish the time, every precious moment, and give to your children, not $80 tennis shoes and trips to Six Flags and Disney World, because that isn't really what children want anyway, Alan.

Alan: No, that's what the system wants.

Jackie: That isn't what they want at all. They want their parents to look at them and see them. They want their parents to hear them when they talk. Not just listen, but really hear them.

Alan: Well, what they need is direction. And children who don't get direction from their parents will take it as they did in the Communist system, in the Young Communist movement. They'll take it from the leaders. The Hitler Youth were the same, because children need direction. And if they can't get it from their parents, the state or the system will give it to them instead. That's traditional. That's been used for thousands of years. Again, it's another tune, and they know how to play it, and we know how to dance.

Jackie: Well, you mentioned Bertrand Russell. And I've done this before, but I'll do it again. The statement that he made, he was a, maybe still is, I don't know, but at this time a UNESCO advisor. He said, "it may be hoped that in time anybody will be able to persuade anybody of anything, if he can catch the patient young, and is provided by the state with money and equipment."

Alan: Well, the two main books, and anybody who wants them and can read it all today, apart from a glowing tube in front of their face, they can order them. And it's Roads to Freedom, is the one book, that gives you the global agenda with adults and children, and Education and the Good Life, is the one about the whole education program that they have used right up until the present time. And that's got it all in there. All of it.

Jackie: Well, there's one more sentence here that I want to do, for our listeners. He said, when the technique has been perfected, every government that has been in control of education for a generation will be able to control its subjects securely without the need of armies or policemen.

Alan: Yeah, once you all have a brain chip, there's no problem. I mean, that's what the function of all this is.

Jackie: Roads to Freedom and Education and the Good Life.

Alan: Yeah, the whole scientific technique. He put out another book, it was on science, basically, and he laid the whole thing down, to do with scientific techniques, including the same stuff as Aldous Huxley was on about, the brain chip and so on, and how they could use all this to control everybody. And once that happened, the people had no individuality in them, then they'd have their utopia. But they, the elite themselves, would not change themselves. That's what they said, because they must retain their survival capabilities, but the public won't need them anymore, since the state will be making all their decisions for them.

Jackie: What do you say to a person who calls you and says, I'm not sure what to do, I'm beginning to see the light and it's very frightening. What do you say to them, Alan?

Alan: It depends who they are.

Jackie: Well, okay. What would you say to me?

Alan: Again, it's not something you sum up in a couple of minutes. You go through the whole person. You've got to get the persona and the person. You've got to break down all the different parts of that person, and then give a response that's suitable to that individual person. You can't give the same talk to every individual. You must tailor-make truth to jump over the hurdles that that person has in their particular individual mind. And everyone has a different response to things, and they have different hurdles or walls in their mind, so you must literally tailor-make it for the individual, so that they can jump those walls themselves. And it must be done by themselves. You can show them how, but it must be done by them. That's why it takes a lot of work for every single one. But I should mention the three books before we go off the air. They're called Cutting Through 1, 2, & 3. And I go through the ancient Freemasonry system, prior to the guild movements of the Middle Ages, and right up to the present day. I give you a lot of the Masonic coding that's used. It's all through your language; in fact they created your language for you. And the third one goes through the history of this, as well as the history of the money system which they brought in thousands of years ago, and how they used it to implement their system, which they call civilization. That's what they mean by it. It's their system. And how they control nations one by one, through takeovers, financial or through using warfare. [See ordering information on transcript.] But that's what I'm saying. You can't just give a pat answer for a mass of people, because everyone has their own particular walls and variations of them, in their mind. And you have to literally go through dozens of them with each one. And you must be able to see into that person, in order to do so. And that takes a lot of work.

Jackie: And you've done that with people?

Alan: Yes, and as I say, it's a lot of work. And it can take years sometimes, on a one to one basis with many, many different people, but individually, one on one, to get them right up and out of it.

Jackie: And then what happens when they get out of it, Alan?

Alan: Then it's a whole new journey from there on. And again, you don't hand that truth to everybody either. You just don't hand out truth. Most people can't handle the truth. Some things are very, very, very precious. And most people are so stuck in what they want themselves that they can't handle the truth. And that's what they mean, they trample it underfoot, because they don't see it for what it is. So you don't hand it to them until they're ready for it.

Jackie: Well, we've sure been doing enough of it.

Alan: We've done an awful lot. More so, I'd say, than any other program. And we certainly don't do it as a business. That's for sure.

Jackie: That's for sure. And folks, we're out of our week.

Alan's Materials Available for Purchase and Ordering Information:

- | | | | |
|------------------------------|--|---|--|
| BOOKS | "Cutting Through"
Volumes 1, 2, 3 | & | "Waiting for the Miracle....."
Also available in Spanish or Portuguese translation: "Esperando el Milagro....." (Español) & "Esperando um Milagre....." (Português) |
| CDs | Ancient Religions and History MP3 CDs:
Part 1 (1998) and Part 2
(1998-2000) | & | Blurbs and 'Cutting Through the Matrix' Shows on MP3 CDs (Up to 50
Hours per Disc) |
| DVDs | "Reality Check Part 1" & "Reality Check Part 2 - Wisdom, Esoterica and ...TIME" | | |

August 15th, 2005
Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru

cuttingthroughthematrix.com

alternate sites:

cuttingthroughthematrix.net , .us , .ca

alanwattcuttingthroughthematrix.ca

European site includes all audios & downloadable TRANSCRIPTS in European languages for print up:

alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

mirror site:

cuttingthrough.jenkness.com

Information for purchasing Alan's books, CDs, DVDs and DONATIONS:

Canada and America: PayPal, Cash, personal checks &
for the US, INTERNATIONAL postal money orders / for Canada, INTERNAL postal money orders
(America: Postal Money orders - Stress the INTERNATIONAL pink one, not the green internal one.)

Outside the Americas: PayPal, Cash, Western Union and Money Gram
(Money Gram is cheaper; even cheaper is a Money Gram check – in Canadian dollars:
mail via the postal services worldwide.)

PayPal Orders: USE THE DONATE BUTTON ON THE WEBSITE – AND –
Send a separate email along with the donation (list your order, name and address)

Click the link below for your location (ordering info):

USA

Canada

Europe/Scandinavian

All Other Countries

Jackie Patru: Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Tonight is Monday, and it is the 15th of August, in the year 2005. And I'm glad that you're with us tonight. I hope you had a lovely weekend, ladies and gentlemen. Actually, it's more than a weekend now, isn't it? You get, I get, we get, from Thursday until Monday, or we have until from Thursday until Monday. So, three nights a week, and it is a possibility that we're going to be cutting back to two nights a week. I don't know if, I don't know if it is for the broadcast.

[Technical difficulties at radio station]

I'll tell you what. For our internet listeners, if you would just begin, and I can take another phone line, and call WWCR and see what's up.

Alan: Oh, okay.

Jackie: Okay, thank you. This is Alan Watt, folks.

Alan: Yep, once again, we've got a mix up at the shortwave station, where they're playing another broadcaster's tape. We don't know why, maybe it's God intervening, who knows, because that's what he goes on about is Old Jehovah and how the British are really the Jews, you see. But what I should say, to start off today, is that I have three books for sale, because I'm filling in for Jackie, while she straightens out the short wave station. And these books go through Freemasonry, from ancient times, not just from the usual guilds they talk about in the Middle Ages, because the secret brotherhoods have been here as long as money has been here, in all of its different forms. And I also go through how the money boys took over even the ancient world, and how they created nations, and had wars going on between them, while they profited from loaning to all the countries, which they'd helped to create, and they sold them all the weaponry, too. No different from today. And how they benefited from keeping the people in debt, which ensured that they kept running the system. No different at all from today. [See ordering information on transcript.] And I'll get them out to you as soon as I can.

Now, I don't know what's happening with the short wave station, but that's the second time that Pastor Pete, with his British Israel, has been on, when we should be on. And I think, yeah, he's still on the shortwave. So I guess there's a debate going on whether they should flick the switch or not, but we'll find out pretty soon.

Jackie: Nicholas, if you're available, would you please come on the line. I had a call from one of our listeners. I gave her four numbers that I have, to call, to possibly get a hold of somebody at WWCR. But if Nicholas, if you're listening, if you would please come on the line with us, if you would please get a hold of them, and let them know that they're doing it again. Alan, my, my. Well, we do have internet listeners right now, so we're not going to act like we're not on the air at all. But this appears to me to be intentional.

Alan: Well, Pastor Peters last week boasted that he now has 400 hours with WWCR, so I guess the muscle has been put into motion.

Jackie: The muscle has been put into motion. I just want you to know that I don't know how it is for our listeners, but your volume is down so low I can barely hear you. I can hear you, but I can barely hear you.

Alan: Yeah, you're down. You're down too.

Jackie: Am I? Okay. Nicholas, WFAR, Nicholas, if you're there, will you please come on the line here and let me know if you can get a hold of WWCR. One of our listeners called in, as I told you, and she's trying the numbers that I would have been trying, Alan.

[Technical difficulties at radio station]

Jackie: Well, there we are folks. Well, now we just talked to an engineer at WWCR, and what he's saying is, is that the satellite feed that they're getting is really great. So I'm hoping that you can hear us tonight, ladies and gentlemen. What I'm going to do, and I will do this tomorrow night, is have a number for you to call. If you're listening on shortwave, and the program before you is good, and the one after you is good, and this one is not, it would be time for you to call WWCR and see if you can find out what the problem is, because what we've discovered is that sometimes people go, if you have a shortwave radio that can go from 5.070 up to 072, 073, 074, sometimes, they catch it clearly almost at 5.075 or below. But if you're not getting it in good, then tune it down or tune it up, so that you can hear it. Because, what's happening folks, according to the letters that I get from our listeners, you can hear us. And I understand, if you can't hear the broadcast. Those of you who have hung in here, through thick and thin, you're to be so deeply commended, that you're still here, because it's a wonder, it's a miracle that we haven't lost all of our listeners. Alan, Alan Watt is with us tonight. And Melody said that your volume is very low.

Alan: So is yours. When you're on the phone here with me, I can hardly hear you at all.

Jackie: Yeah, well, evidently, the volume was low coming into WWCR, and I don't know how it is. If Eleanor is listening, Eleanor White. Eleanor is a, she monitors for us, and lets us know, because sometimes when your volume is low to me, in my headset, Eleanor calls in, and says, don't worry about it, Alan is coming in loud and clear. But Melody said tonight, from WFAR that your volume was low. (Phone rings) Oh, here we go. Hi, you're on the air. Thanks for calling.

Caller: Hey, I can hear you, and Alan sounds real good.

Jackie: Oh, thanks, Mel.

Caller: Okay, alright.

Jackie: Okay, bye, honey.

Alan: Now, we can't hear each other.

Jackie: Yeah, we can't hear each other, but they can hear us.

Alan: But I know on the shortwave, there's over-modulation there, because your voice is muffled on the shortwave.

Jackie: Right now? My voice is muffled?

Alan: Yeah, it's not as clear as it should be. In fact, I tuned up to 5074, and it was clearer there.

Jackie: At 5074. Well, then, we would ask Jason, I guess, who is our engineer tonight, to please make a check, Jason, and if we're over-modulating here, do what needs to be done. Because I'm not over-modulating, Alan. If they're getting it crisp and clear from the satellite, which is where we're broadcasting from, if the shortwave is over-modulated, once again, it's coming from WWCR.

Alan: Well, that's that old Wicker Man up to his tricks.

[Technical difficulties at radio station]

Alan: I can hear you now, you're clear on my phone.

Jackie: Okay, well, that's good. Thank you, whoever is responsible.

Alan: That's because I said we should join the British Israel Movement.

Jackie: The British Israel Movement. That would probably be our...

Alan: Then God's on our side, you see.

Jackie: That would, oh, then God's on our side. Yahweh is on our side.

Alan: The big boss.

Jackie: You know what, okay, what I was going to say, when we came on the air tonight, is that it has become more than that you're a guest on this broadcast. It's as though you've become a co-host here, Alan. And, folks, the reason, well, it's not that I have to give a reason, but I ask Alan to come on. We get into conversations. And for those of you, and I know there are many of you who so appreciate the information that we have received from Alan and the broadcasts that Alan and I have done together, because my questions, evidently, are important to you, which is what I get from my correspondence from you, that our interchange has been very much of an opening for many of you. And so, therefore, Alan is with us again, tonight. And I appreciate it very much. And Alan, thank you for being here.

Alan: It's a pleasure, when we can be heard.

Jackie: When we can be heard. When I can hear you.

Alan: Maybe it's a gimmick to make people listen more intently.

Jackie: Well, I'll tell you what. I want to say again what I said at the beginning of the broadcast. Well, you see, our sponsorship has dropped off. However, I know that our listenership has dropped off. Because, even the people who send donations for sponsoring the broadcast tell me the frustration that they experience. I was talking to a gentleman from Michigan, recently. He said he was outside working, I think working on his boat or something. He had the broadcast on prior to Sweet Liberty. He said it was crystal clear. And then, Sweet Liberty came on, and there was very little of it that he could pick up, and right after Sweet Liberty it cleared up again. And the best suggestion that I had for him, was to call WWCR, because, I've tried. And I get angry response from management. I've had the phone hung up on my ear. In fact, one time the phone was hung up, I called back, because I thought it was rude, so rude. Sometimes I just ignore it, but I wanted to speak with him, and then I was told that he was taking a walk. And the person that I talked to, I said, I just had the phone hung up on me, and I would like to finish this conversation. And, Alan, what I'm told is this. If you don't like it, if you think that we are sabotaging the broadcast, go someplace else.

Alan: Well that's a Christian message.

Jackie: It's a Christian message, yes.

Alan: Well, sure. I mean, it's a business. And all media is propaganda, I don't care who runs it. Because an all-seeing eye did not miss a hole in its net, you know, and it never did. And the CIA started up the shortwave back in the 50s, using Christian radio, and I doubt they've ever let it go, especially nowadays, because they need it. They need the confusion, to keep this age of chaos running along, you know. Now, of course, they have their superstars, because the public have been trained to look for superstars, like the general television, your Doctor Phil or Oprah, or whatever, and Albert Pike said we always give the people their leaders, so they must present superstars, who are professional talkers. And of course, they have staff there to help them with their spiel, as they say. And of course, it's a Wizard of Oz type thing, where, behind the curtain, there's a little guy making all this noise. But behind the little guy, you've got a whole staff of people punching up things on his screens, where he sounds terribly informed.

Jackie: You know what? This is, I think, in fact, I know what I wanted us to discuss tonight, but, because you explained it, you explained it more in depth to me, because when you first mentioned it, I didn't get what you were saying, but you went through the process. Would you do that, Alan? For example, you know, we don't have to name names, but, let's say a broadcaster, when people call in, no matter what they're talking about, the broadcaster seems to have in-depth information about it, as they know everything about everything.

Alan: Well, it's history, because in every century, they give you heroes to follow. They always call them geniuses. And they give you ridiculous stories about them, be they composers or scientists or whatever. But they make up these.

Jackie: Alan, can you hold just for one moment. We have a call coming in. Hello?

Caller: Oh, hello. I just wanted to let you know that here in the upper peninsula of Michigan, I listen to you every time you're on, and it is over-modulated or something, all the time.

Jackie: All the time.

Caller: Maybe one time was very clear.

Jackie: Over-modulated, and it isn't over-modulated coming in.

Caller: It sounds like you're talking in a pillowcase.

Jackie: In other words, what, I want our listeners, if they can hear me, to hear this. Because we were told by Jason, the engineer, at WWCR, that the feed that they were getting from the satellite was very crisp and very clear. And so, what our shortwave listeners are getting, from the shortwave station, is over-modulation.

Alan: You're plus-forty here, that's the end of the scale.

Caller: And my shortwave is 5070.

Jackie: Okay, thank you so much. Please don't go away, honey, okay.

Caller: Oh, no. I love your, whatever you're talking about.

Jackie: Thank you. Who are we talking to?

Caller: Mary Jane in upper Michigan.

Jackie: Do you know that I'm a Michigander? Yes?

Caller: I do.

Jackie: Oh. From Flint, Michigan.

Caller: Oh, that's way down there. I'm way up.

Jackie: Yes. My summers were spent up at Bear Lake, near Grayling.

Caller: Oh, okay. I'm way over up, Lake Superior, up in the upper peninsula, over Lake Michigan, over the Mackinaw straits.

Jackie: Thanks for listening, honey. Thank you for calling. Bye-bye. Okay, Alan, now. You know, I'm not a, what do you call, technician, but it makes sense to me that if the satellite feed coming from WFAR is crisp and clear, and if the reception that our shortwave listeners are getting is over-modulation, it makes sense that it has to be coming from the shortwave transmitter.

Alan: Well, yeah. Sure. And plus-forty, that's the end of the scale. It's right on the right-hand side. You can't go any further with the signal strength. It's over-modulated.

Jackie: Oh, you've got. You're monitoring it there? Alright, folks.

Alan: That's as high as it goes.

Jackie: We're going to be back. Alan, we're at the half hour here. We'll be back right after this. Folks, don't go away. Alan, maybe they can hear you. If they can't understand. Why would I be over-modulated and not you?

(Commercial Break)

Jackie: Alan is with us, Alan Watt, and from what I'm gathering, our listeners, Alan, would you explain once again what you said, why it is that you wouldn't be over-modulated, but I am? And I want our listeners to know, by the way, that you and I are, what should I say, we're both on the same phone line. Folks, Alan calls me. And then I conference us in together. So, he's not calling from another phone. He's not calling from a separate phone line into the station. And if it is coming in loud and clear from the satellite, it would follow that our shortwave listeners should be getting loud and clear from both Alan and I. And would you explain what you said, how that could happen, Alan?

Alan: Yes. Every studio, whether it's a radio or a music studio, has graphic equalizers.

Jackie: And you were in the music industry or business.

Alan: Yeah, years ago.

Jackie: So, you know what you're talking about.

Alan: And when you want to phase out a particular tone, or a pitch, say, or bring it up, even, you can do either, just by adjusting the slides, and you have a whole battery of slides, sometimes 48 of them, and you can literally phase out any instrument or vocal sound, or any singer in a choir, with a different voice. You can phase them in, or phase them out. And of course, male and female being different, it's much easier to adjust that way.

Jackie: So, let me ask you this. It doesn't mean that there's somebody sitting there working at these slides, but if they just get their frequencies or whatever tuned into my voice, they can literally obliterate it.

Alan: Or, once again, boost it to such an extent that it would become muffled. They can boost it. They can actually bring it up, as well, and make it muffled. You know, any sound can be distorted by over-amplification or modulation. So you can do the same thing with a graphic equalizer. You can literally bring any sound up, as well as down, you can bring it up and over-modulate it, until it's distorted.

Jackie: So, let me ask you this. If I could talk higher or lower, would that foil the?

Alan: No, because you're still within a certain frequency range, as opposed to me. Mine would be different. I mean, I've seen it done with orchestras, where you can bring in a violin, just by sliding the switch, or you can phase it out, or you can bring up, say a trombone, even. So you can, there's a whole range of spectrum with sound. So they also do that. They use similar equipment for spying on people at long ranges with boom microphones. And they can literally phase out the surrounding noise from cars and automobiles and buses and things.

Jackie: I've seen that on movies a long time ago.

Alan: Yeah. This is old technology.

Jackie: We have a caller here. Hi, you're on the air.

Caller: Hi Jackie. This is Kate. I called WWCR and talked to Jason. And I said, are you trying to sabotage Jackie? And he said, oh, no, we wouldn't do that. But, as I've been listening to you, week after week, you are very muffled. And I think Alan has a point there. And I don't know what the reason is, other than Alan brought out another good point, that we have superstars on the shortwave, that to me have taken over, and I feel like I have no free speech.

Jackie: And you have no free listening, Kate.

Caller: No, but all of a sudden, we are religious? Is this the main theme of the shortwave, to lead you into the abyss of religious propaganda?

Alan: That's pretty well it.

Caller: I resent that. There's too many horrible things out there, that we should have freedom of speech. And I've noticed that on other programs, certain people are jammed constantly until the King comes on. So, I don't know where we go from here.

Jackie: Well, who is the king, honey?

Caller: You don't know who the king of shortwave is? We've got a king and queen.

Jackie: Well, I don't know who you're talking about, would you tell me?

Caller: Well, we have Miss Nightingale, right?

Jackie: I don't know who Miss Nightingale is.

Caller: Florence Nightingale.

Jackie: It's okay, Kate. Until we're off the air, we have freedom of speech here, so just say what you're...

Alan: Well, the listeners do.

Caller: Well, you know, the continuation of Joyce Reilly....Pastor Stair, and Mr. Pete Peters. You see?

Jackie: And they all come in very clear?

Caller: Oh, yes.

Jackie: Alright, thank you.

Caller: If we can't express what we feel, we the people, and we have to adhere to the kings, and especially Georgina, you know, Bush.

Jackie: Thanks, Kate.

Alan: Well that's how it is. They know, you see, they've trained the public. And let's be honest. Everybody has been brought up in an artificial system, and yet, we've taken it all for granted as being normal, simply because everyone else thinks it's normal. But there's nothing normal in it. It's a designed system, scientifically designed, as Charles Galton Darwin said, in The Next Million Years, he said, we're just creating a more sophisticated form of slavery. And they've trained the public since television was invented, to go for the superstars. You follow your stars, the wandering stars. They've used the same expression back in ancient Greece, when they brought in the traveling players that gave them their culture, and changed their culture, with the authority, of course, of the elite. And it hasn't changed until today. So they bring out these people in every, every generation to lead the people around in circles and take over as the main voice, and say that they're fighting the New World Order on their own, single handed, in between making movies and going to the gym and being on countless radio stations and television stations every day, I mean, "that's a super-man, and I want to follow him," you see, "and I couldn't do that."

Jackie: I was looking at a bio of one of the kings that Kate was talking about. He's been evidently mentioned in the Wall Street Journal. He's been on CNBC or ABC, it's what you're saying, Alan, is when we see these people mentioned on mainstream.

Alan: It makes it more legitimate in our minds.

Jackie: We had better damn know that they're part of the program.

Alan: Well, of course, absolutely. That's why they were thrust out in front for the people to follow. And they've done this over and over. They always give us the superstars, whether it's Oprah Winfrey on regular media or Dr. Phil that tells us how to behave, or one on shortwave. It's the same technique. It's by the same people at the top. And, as I say, they always give you someone who's been trained to do exactly what they're doing, and I should also say, that the purpose of psychological warfare, which is counter-intelligence, by the way. Psychological warfare has an intent, and the intent is to overwhelm the public, or the enemy – and which the public, they are the enemy, you see – with so much negative, terrifying information, in a machine-gun fashion, or a shotgun fashion, they scatter it at you, until you can't duck out of the way anymore. And when that's all you see coming at you, all you do eventually is mentally collapse, because, what they're telling you is, this system is so awesome and powerful, and King Kong is growing three miles a day above you, that there's nothing you can do about it. And that's the purpose of psychological warfare.

Jackie: Alan, would you compare that, to what you just said, to what you and I have discussed on the air? Because sometimes...

Alan: I'll cut to the chase here.

Jackie: Please do, please do.

Alan: Because, what it is, the difference is, that you see, people go into shortwave looking for an alternate view on things, alternate information. And so they tune out the regular media. Now, when you start to get people reading the AP Wires, and what's on the regular media, and even giving you more than you get on the regular media, they're doing a better job than the regular media. So, rather than get away from it, they're actually giving you more of it. It's a day-by-day blow of what's been done to you. And that's its purpose. That is its technique. They read the AP Wires and Reuters stuff, and international stuff. And now, people obviously in the staff are pushing this up on his boards, so he can parrot it off.

Jackie: You know what. You were talking about that, and we had to take our break. But you took me behind the scenes in a conversation that we had. And then I saw it. Would you continue what you were explaining. Explain this to our listeners. In other words, well, what I remembered you saying, is that somebody calls in, and they say, okay, what are you calling about, and the people say what they're calling about. Or there's a particular conversation going on, and there are people, a team, that do a search, bring up information, put it on the screen for the broadcaster, and that broadcaster....

Alan: Sounds like a genius. He's got all facts and figures. He can throw dates, names, times out at you. And of course, the person, the people who are listening say, "my God, I couldn't keep up with all this. This guy is a genius." And what we do, you see, if we think someone is a genius, is we put our own discernment to the side and we parrot them, we follow them. That's how you create a leader, you see, behind the scenes. That's how you do it. This is an old technique. And it's being used today.

Jackie: Isn't Noel, you know, he's very, because he's got that different accent, but doesn't he do kind of the same thing?

Alan: Well, his whole business is selling gold and silver and so on. Now, from Rhodesia, who created Rhodesia? Cecil Rhodes created Rhodesia. And he was sent there by the Rothschilds, to take over the diamonds and the gold and silver of Africa. And who comes out of Rhodesia, amongst all the real, genuine people, who got thrown out of there, were the gold merchants. And here they are flogging the same stuff here, under the pretense that you'll need this to survive. And I can tell you, if you have to try and trade gold, even today, in a hurry, go and try it, and see how fast you can sell your gold or silver. Because you'll have a hard time doing it. It's a con game. And their technique is always to throw all the fear at you, of what's coming. I noticed too, there's a doctor going all around the place, all the shortwave stations, giving this spiel about the coming avian flu. And after terrifying the listeners for half an hour, then they come out with the solution. And the solution is, the doctor has all these antidotes and herbs and stuff that you can take for it, so if you send to his company, he'll send them to you. And they split the loot. That's how the whole thing works. It's fear-based techniques selling. You see, every ad is fear based. Every single ad. They couldn't make a market outside of the shortwave fear-based radio, because the people are all asleep. So, what do you do? You make the market. You go where the market is, and people are terrified on shortwave because of the traditional hype, and they sell all the products they can't sell anywhere else. That's how it's done. It's like the back pages of magazines, you know, where they sell all this stuff about your balding hair and just splash this stuff on and it grows back, and you don't need Viagra anymore, you know. It's the same rubbish, that stays always hidden in the back pages of cheap magazines. It's the same stuff that's sold on the shortwave. It's the same old. It's all fear-based selling, and you're listening to an hour of advertising, and you think it's a show. You think it's a show.

Jackie: It is a show, Alan.

Alan: Yeah. They think it's informative.

Jackie: It is a show. That's why we don't call Sweet Liberty a show.

Alan: I mean, if I wanted to and I was a real crook, I could do the same as certain; yeah, Miss Nightingale is a good term. Mind you, old Flo Nightingale in the history books was labeled as a psychopath. The real Florence Nightingale was labeled as a hysterical psychopath, you know. Because she used to get hysterical blindness and have tantrums and seizures if she didn't get her way.

Jackie: And who was Florence Nightingale? Was she the nurse?

Alan: No, she wasn't a nurse. No. She was from an aristocratic family.

Jackie: But who were we told she was?

Alan: Oh, the lady with the lamp, you know, on the occasional visit round the hospitals, which they had to set up, because all these British were coming back from all these wars with no limbs. And they were dumped on the street where they died with infections and so on. So, it was a sort of cover, where the British government put out a pittance to set up field hospitals for the first time. Before that they didn't bother because you could always recruit more peasants. But it was becoming so highly visible with the British Empire taking all the countries over, that there was a massive fallout dumped on the streets of Bristol and all the other ports where they were discarded. And there was no pension, either, for these soldiers, so they just lay there and rotted and died. So they brought up a few hospitals, stuck old Flo at the top of it, and made up a myth about her being so compassionate and all the rest of it, you know. That's the reality. But getting back to what I'm saying. The one on the shortwave. If I wanted to be like that, and make a killing on money, I've got lots of clay around here. I've got lakes all over the place. And you could probably eat this clay as well, because they're selling it on that show, you know. And this thing will literally, will literally cure you of every disease, you know. It will suck every toxin out of your body. It will grow your hair back. And men will get erections, and women will get back their monthly cycle. So, I mean, it's just a wonderful thing. So, I could do all that rubbish if I was a con man, but I'm not, you see. I'm not. But that's what feeds, unfortunately, the shortwave business.

Jackie: Well, obviously, I'm not either, Alan.

Alan: Yeah. It's a business.

Jackie: You should say, we're not.

Alan: I mean, what person, apart from psychopathic people, can take advantage of terror and fear, use it for their spiel before they go and sell you their stuff, after terrifying the life out of you? "Oh, but here's the antidote." But they do it every day. Every day. And because the public think they're being informed a little bit, no you're not, you're being conned. You're being conned all the time, over and over. And, you see, there's so much money to be made in misery. That's the health profession....

Jackie: Misery and fear.

Alan: Especially misery. Because people in pain, and I know what I'm talking about, because I'm in it. But they'll generally spend their last penny, that they don't even have, on some bag of grass or something that they chew, that's supposed to have miracle cures, simply because the propaganda says so, you know. You'll do anything to get rid of pain, and when traditional medicine fails you, yeah, you'll go through all this massive array of shark cartilage and all the rest of the rubbish they sell out there. And there's been millionaires made off the shortwave from selling all this stuff. And for five years they'll try the shark cartilage, and then they'll jump to the next thing, and then the next thing, and then the next thing, because every five years they've got a whole bunch of new listeners.

Jackie: Yeah, you don't hear anything about shark cartilage anymore.

Alan: No. Well, you know the reason why they were flogging the shark cartilage for arthritis? Do you know the reason for it?

Jackie: Because they found that sharks never got arthritis?

Alan: Sharks don't have skeletons.

Jackie: No, but is that why they were saying it?

Alan: They said they don't get arthritis, because they don't have any skeletons. They have no bones. They're all cartilage. That's why they don't get arthritis, but they didn't tell the public that. And they took millions from the suckers who fed into all this stuff.

Jackie: Well, and to call them suckers.

Alan: It's suckers, because....

Jackie: I know, Alan, but...

Alan: And you have to admit when you've been one. If you don't admit it, you'll do it again with the next con that comes along. And there's lots of them out there. There's lots and lots and lots of these cons out there. And these people make a fortune. We're a world of schmucks, you see. We've all been trained to be schmucks, and listen to the professional people. I've had two professions, and qualified in one, and that was medicine, and I walked out of it, when I saw the corruption in it. I would not do it. I will not do anything that's corrupt. But if I was, you know, a man of the world, or joined the Freemasons, and they would say, well, look, you've got to take advantage of the profane, those that are unenlightened. Yeah, I could have done that, but it's not my nature.

Alan's Materials Available for Purchase and Ordering Information:

BOOKS "Cutting Through" & "Waiting for the Miracle....."
Volumes 1, 2, 3 Also available in Spanish or Portuguese translation: "Esperando el Milagro....."
(Español) & "Esperando um Milagre....." (Português)

Ancient Religions and
CDs History MP3 CDs: & Blurbs and 'Cutting Through the Matrix' Shows on MP3 CDs (Up to 50 Part 1 (1998) and Part 2 Hours per Disc)
(1998-2000)

DVDs "Reality Check Part 1" & "Reality Check Part 2 - Wisdom, Esoterica and ...TIME"

August 16th, 2005
Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru

cuttingthroughthematrix.com

alternate sites:

cuttingthroughthematrix.net , .us , .ca

alanwattcuttingthroughthematrix.ca

European site includes all audios & downloadable TRANSCRIPTS in European languages for print up:

alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

mirror site:

cuttingthrough.jenkness.com

Information for purchasing Alan's books, CDs, DVDs and DONATIONS:

Canada and America: PayPal, Cash, personal checks &
for the US, INTERNATIONAL postal money orders / for Canada, INTERNAL postal money orders
(America: Postal Money orders - Stress the INTERNATIONAL pink one, not the green internal one.)

Outside the Americas: PayPal, Cash, Western Union and Money Gram
(Money Gram is cheaper; even cheaper is a Money Gram check – in Canadian dollars:
mail via the postal services worldwide.)

PayPal Orders: USE THE DONATE BUTTON ON THE WEBSITE – AND –
Send a separate email along with the donation (list your order, name and address)

Click the link below for your location (ordering info):

USA

Canada

Europe/Scandinavian

All Other Countries

Jackie: ... I wanted to let our listeners know, Alan, I don't know if you've been hearing this or not, but that Bush and Cheney and his gang have been indicted by a grand jury in Chicago. Well, that's not the truth.

Alan: No. I'm not surprised. All these rumors that go around all the time, it's just distraction.

Jackie: Right, well, this, I believe there is a grand jury sitting in Chicago, and it has something to do with Daly, the Mayor. But I've gotten two or three or four of them on the internet, and I received one today, and this woman said, this is a hoax. It isn't true. Because she had called, and wanted to know when they were going to make the announcement, and they said, there has been no indictment, because there's been no grand jury sitting for that purpose. And I got one just before we went on air, and evidently, one of the superstars interviewed, oh, I know who it was, Tom Flocko, today. And they said it was confirmed, that you could take it to the bank, basically, that this grand jury in Chicago had indicted Bush and Cheney and the gang. And so, I wanted our listeners to know, that the information I've got, is that that is not true. So, don't take it to the bank, folks.

Alan: There is no complaint department for any of this.

Jackie: No, there isn't. We were talking about that, yesterday, with the gas prices. Now, I got an email today, and evidently, there's a group of truckers that are protesting the high gas prices. Of course, it will, any independent truckers that are left.

Alan: Yes, there's very few.

Jackie: Will be, yes, will be going down the tubes on this one. And that was a comment that I made to you. I said, my God, everybody is complaining, but we complain to each other. Because, what do you do about it, who do you talk to? And like you said, in this system, there is no complaint department. You've got the corporations, that are controlling, and you've got bureaucrats that are not answerable to the public.

Alan: Yes. And that's what Carroll Quigley said, in Tragedy and Hope, that the new system would be basically a new feudal system, run by international corporations, with members jumping in and out of governments and back to the corporations. Which is exactly what we've had for many years. So, yeah, there's no complaint department for the spraying in the skies, or for anything else that's happened. There truly is no complaint department here.

Jackie: Well, as far as those chemtrails, I've talked to several people, who when the planes are flying in their area, they'll call the airport, or they'll call if there's a military base close by, an air force base, or whatever. And there the planes are, spreading their joy around the sky, and they're just told, that according to our radars there's no air traffic out there.

Alan: Well, you're seeing things. That's it. They're all told the same stories, and fob the public off with silly answers, because they can't admit. See, they've gone too far now that they can't trace back their steps. They're into the killing phase. That's what's happening. And they can't go back and say, yeah, we have been hitting you hard with this stuff, and it will increase the death rate. Definitely with the very young and the elderly, especially. That's what generally happens, with anything foreign to the body. And so they can't go back and tell the public that now, that they've gone too far. They've gone too far.

Jackie: I was talking to my friend Mel, today, from North Carolina. And they had a storm there. He said, it was straight-line winds, that's what they called them.

Alan: Yes. There's another term they used in Canada, when it started 3 years ago, and the announcer said the brand new phrase they were using. I can't remember what it was. But he said, it's a strange phenomena, that we have these straight winds cutting swathes right through forests in a straight line, and it was as though the loggers had been through. It literally is a straight line, going on for maybe half a mile and then just stops. And nothing in nature happens in a straight line, you see.

Jackie: Well, this of course isn't in nature, but now with saying that they had almost hurricane type winds, and it was one of those 20 minute, 30 minute ones. And he was telling me that the rain was actually coming sideways. Remember when we had those storms, I told you, and the wind was, okay, this was the day before yesterday, we had two of them. And they come right out of nowhere. Now, the Weather Channel is calling them pop-up storms. And your weather, your sun will be bright, and suddenly the cloud is, the sky is overcast, it's cloudy, and there it comes. And I was in the family room, had the hallway windows open. I was a good, at least 8, maybe 10 feet, away from the windows, and when that rain hit, it was landing on me. And by the time I got the windows closed in that direction, I had water everywhere. And then by the time I got the windows closed, it was done. The sky, the sun came out, and about two hours later, we had another one, just like it.

Alan: They're using advanced science on the public, and of course, they never write about these sciences in the Popular Science magazines, or anything. And so, Joe Average will think, if you mention this stuff, well, that's impossible, we don't have the technology. But yeah, they do have the technology. The real technology is never given to the public. And whenever they write that they're working on something, that's old news, they've had it. It's probably obsolete by now, really. That's how they keep us in one reality, while they have the toys in another, you know. So they're very, very advanced with the science. They're also coupling HAARP with arrays of satellites and boosting the signal. And they can actually bring it right down on anywhere on the planet.

Jackie: In other words, pinpoint it.

Alan: Yes. It can be done to an individual or to a whole state.

Jackie: I wanted to thank my new friend, Tim Thomas. He's a radio broadcaster, in Cornell, a morning show. And Tim has offered, he's got all the radio equipment, for me to give him a call, and Tim, if you're listening, I will be calling, and thank you so much for your offer. Because, what he wants to do is some testing on my radio equipment, to see if there's anything that can be done to tweak it or whatever; but meantime, he had mentioned in his email, that they had a tornado there. He's around Corning area, and I read the newspaper article, and they were talking about the strange phenomena. And I think, if I'm not mistaken, they mentioned the rain coming in sideways.

Alan: Yeah, I had that today, too.

Jackie: That's the way it's coming in. It's coming in sideways, Alan.

Alan: I had that today, it was a sudden storm. It started very quickly, and I had to run and close the windows, and when I was, oh, twelve feet from them, the rain was hitting me. A very strong wind. And it only lasted maybe ten minutes, and the heavy downpour.

Jackie: Just in time to get all the windows closed.

Alan: That's right. I think they're trying to frustrate us all. That's it. They are using all this technology. And they're going through their long agenda, their planned agenda for an age of chaos, and it has to take in everything, everything that they can possibly manage and bring the chaos about.

Jackie: You know, I remember, when I first started getting involved in waking up, getting politically involved at that time, back in 1992, late 1991, but it was probably about 1993 and I lived in Illinois at the time, and every time that I drove into Saint Louis, there was roadwork at this one particular place, and it went on forever. I mean, it just, month after month after month after month after month, and I mentioned it to Nicole, and she says, "Ma, I don't understand what takes them so long. Why?" I said, "Nicole, actually it's intentional, honey." I said, "They're doing it to frustrate people, in heavy traffic and drive time. Traffic is piled up for miles, even in non drive time, you're a mile back, because of the road work there." And she says, "Oh, get real." Well, a few years ago, she said, "Mom, I believe you now. I believe you now." Because, she said, that they're constantly, you know, doing road work and blocking traffic, and closing lanes off, and they hang out in the same place for a long time. And folks, if this sounds, if you happen, to be a new listener, and this sounds out of this world to you, it's because it is. And if you continue to listen, I believe that you will realize that what we're saying is not paranoia, or right wing wacko, radical wacko, but it is exactly what it is for, to cause frustration and stress, and...

Alan: It's also to create – I mean, Sudbury is the nearest town to me, and since I've been here for the last almost three years come winter, there's been one stretch of road that they've dug up and then re-surfaced, and dug up and re-surfaced, and they keep going every year with the same stretch, and what it is, Sudbury is very, very Masonic. The lodges, all kinds of lodges are everywhere, and what they do is dish out the tax money to the high guys who own all the construction companies. It's a job creation scheme for high Masons. And it goes on and on and on. Just dig it up and fill it in, dig it up and fill it in. And the public are just used to it, you know. That's how it goes. You know, that happens in every city too. And then they'll dig it up, and say, oh we have to put another pipe underneath there, that we missed the last time. And then they pull out these brand new pipes and stack them all, they're spanking new. They're only a year old, and then they put another bunch in. And this con game goes on forever.

Jackie: Probably fiber optics, though. I think they've been replacing. They started this a long time ago on the main highways.

Alan: And along the railroad lines. I saw them doing it. They're actually burying them alongside the railroad tracks. So, yeah, they are doing that. There's a lot that goes on that the public are totally unaware of. But I was going to mention that there was a caller last night that talked about October. October is a very popular month for the ones who rule the planet, the money boys, and their minions of very high Masons, down to the humble low ones. And Red October, of course, was the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia. And Red is the color of the active principle, as they call it, the regenerative power, the flame, the fire.

Jackie: Because it's the color of blood?

Alan: Blood and fire, you know. If you're staring at a fire, in the middle of the yellow flame, you'll find the Red, you know. So, Red is their color. It always has been. And Red October is extremely important to them, and this time of course, you have the Red Planet, in its closest conjunction for I think one and a half thousand years coming up, and they love these dates to cause some kind of mayhem. So, I wouldn't be surprised if they do something in October.

Jackie: Mars? Are we talking about Mars?

Alan: Yeah, that's the God of War.

Jackie: The God of War. I haven't been out to look, but I had read this, that you'll be able to see it very, very clearly, and it will look very large. Is that going on right now, Alan?

Alan: Not just yet, no, but apparently it will. It's not going to be huge, but it's going to be a lot brighter than it usually is.

Jackie: And it's closest to the Earth than it has been in thousands of years?

Alan: I think one and a half, they said. So, they couldn't miss an opportunity like that.

Jackie: Wow, that's why you have a hunch that something is going to pop in October.

Alan: Yeah, they have all these dates, April 19 is another popular one.

Jackie: Well, then there's hallowed evening in October.

Alan: Yes, and Ides of March, the Ides of September, which is September the eleventh.

Jackie: We have to take a break here...

(Commercial Break)

Jackie: Alright, folks, we're back on with you. I don't know if we're back on the shortwave or not, yet, and I don't even know if you got my address or heard anything I said. Alan is going to tell you, how you can get his books. And so, Alan, I'll be back, okay. You go right ahead.

Alan: Yes, I have three books, it's a series, really, called Cutting Through. And I just number them 1, 2, & 3. And I go through the ancient societies, right up to the present time, how they still run the world, of the profane, as they call the mass of the people, those in the darkness, in other words, and I go through a lot of Masonic coding, which isn't mentioned in regular Masonic books, in the language itself. The English language was updated and created by them, really, in the 1500s, and within the English language, they encoded a whole bunch of ciphers, which they themselves use all the time. And they use it in newspapers, and they speak it too, on the main news, and if you understand it, you get the other meanings that you're being told, but it's really meant for higher Masons, not for the guys below 33 degrees. And I also give you photographs of the rituals and things like that. I also tie it in to the money system, from the earliest of times, going back from the days of Sumer. And I know there were civilizations prior to Sumer that also used gold and silver; and they weighed it then, before coin came in, around 800 BC. So, I pack these things with information. And One and Two are written in a sort of Gestalt manner, because, as you read it, you'll have to start thinking, your mind will do it automatically, and things will suddenly come clear to you, that before you simply glossed over. And you'll wonder why on Earth you never saw all this before. Number Three is written more in a normal format, with the history of the banking tied in with the merchants of ancient times, and how they created wars and manipulated nations, and installed their own tyrants, who then began to tax the people. Taxation is very important to their rulership and it dominates the countries forever.

So, these books are [see ordering information on transcript]. And I'll get them out to you, as soon as I can.

And you certainly will not only enjoy them, but it really will show you things that you should have seen all your life, but you've been blinded by the indoctrination of the system. And the history, again, is taken from ancient philosophers, who occasionally mentioned money, the secret societies, which they all belonged to. They admitted that back in ancient Greece, that they'd all gone to Egypt to study and join the societies of priests. Every single philosopher did that. And Plato, being from the aristocracy, also trained in Egypt, and then, he went to India, for another higher degree, and then to the so-called Holy Land for another higher degree, and then went back to his home town. So, this is a regular route that these guys took, and they seldom mention the money, just once in a while. Which is rather odd, since the whole money system ran the ancient world, just as it does today. It wasn't food and carrots that ran the world, it was the money. And that is the artificial system in which we live. It would be very, very hard for them to build cities, where they can then create the artificial system of taxation, if you paid them in food; they wouldn't be able to do it. And neither could they get a standing army together to go and conquer other countries, unless you get the city first, and then use the money, train soldiers and pay them, and that's the beginnings of mayhem.

We take these things for granted, simply because we're born into a system where these things all exist. And Lenin himself, who was trained by the best bankers on the planet, wrote about it, and he said that the public must never realize that there is a thousand directions that humankind could go, and societies could go, but they must never know this. They must think that the one they're born in must be natural, because it seemed to have evolved that way. That's the trick. And of course, if your parents don't know it was all fake – and since all mammals learn from their parents – if your parents don't know and they can't tell you, then you'll fall into the same trap. You're then trained, in school, to go out and run after this thing called money. They pour out movies, rags to riches movies, which condition us to believe that you just work hard and you get there.

Jackie: Well, that's the American Dream, Alan.

Alan: It's the American Dream. And of course, they're all snoring, but that's what the dream is for. It's not reality. And you don't get up into the upper ranks unless they open and bring you up. Not allow you up, but actually bring you up.

Jackie: What I did, while I was gone. I wanted you to hear this. This is what Tim sent me about the tornado, and it's Canisteo. I think I'm pronouncing it correctly. It's around, somewhere around, Corning, NY, which is just above us. Reports of a tornado touched down, Friday afternoon, that would have been last Friday. It was about 2:30 according to Jim Brewster, Binghamton based meteorologist. Most of the damage was confined to wooded areas, and a cornfield, and then there was some damage, I'm not going to read this whole thing. They said the couple was sitting on their enclosed sun porch when the storm hit. They had a pole sheared, and it snapped a 60 foot tall pine tree, and embedded two pine trees into a camper. It was a tornado. But they were sitting on their enclosed sun porch when the storm hit, they saw the beginning of the wind damage, before deciding to move further inside their home. She said it started to rain. There was a little hail, and all of the sudden, there was a roaring wind. We saw the pine trees start to fold down, and headed inside for cover, because it was really severe. It was unbelievable, she said. The whole thing only took about 60 seconds before it was over. This is why I wanted you and our listeners to hear this. And then they talked about the damage to their property, and that the cows weren't hurt. Okay, let me go down here. There was power outage. Okay, listen to this now. "The tornado was confirmed by the national weather service, Saturday, as an F1, meaning, winds range between 73 to 112 miles per hour. Brewster said the winds for the Canisteo tornado were likely between 75 and 80." And I think Mel told me that the winds that they had there in North Carolina with their storm, were around, they were close to hurricane force winds. But listen to this, Alan, "Brewster said, I saw enough evidence to confirm an F1 tornado. It appears as if it was a tightly wound, brief tornado, that was about a hundred to a hundred and fifty yards in width, and ran about a mile." It basically ran right along state route 36, over Bush Hill, dropped down behind a residence. And see, Tim was right next door to the residence that got hit. It was pretty much confined in the area between Gravel Run Road and Rock Run Road. Stewart said, listen to this, "The damage to the corn field looked like crop circles. Which Brewster said looked very unusual. That was very unique, Brewster said. There was definitive damage in the storm track and then they had these other strange circular damages to the corn field." This is the newspaper article. Crop circles. But you know what I thought about, we've talked about this before, I don't know if we've talked about it on the air or not, but the fact that they can pinpoint. I think that's probably what they're doing, is practicing, their little mini tornadoes. So they could hit a particular property, and just take it out.

Alan: They can do it.

Jackie: I think so, because back about 19, I think it was '98, it was in the summer. In fact, I was doing, no, yes, well, I was doing 6pm at the time. And so, it would have been that summer. The children were visiting, Jodie was here. And I was in the studio here, around 5 o'clock and Ashley came running in and said mama, come and help us, it's raining and the rain is coming in every window. And I ran out of the room, and by then they had shut all the windows, but, now this is not a tornado. We're up 1800 feet, okay, Alan. We always keep all the windows in the house open in the summertime. And it's good that we did, because Jodie was in the kitchen, which is a wide entrance to the dining area, the dining room. And when I got out there, she said mom, you wouldn't believe this, she said, that wind came in here, and you could actually feel it swirling around. She said it was just like a tornado was inside the house. Well, it was over in a matter of minutes, same thing. However, we didn't know this. There's some very huge, it's a poplar tree, a hybrid poplar. They're probably about 90 foot tall out there, or 80. They're very tall, big. They're not the kind of poplars that are tall and skinny. They've got great big spreading branches. And so, anyway, the people that owned the place, before we bought here, stopped by, after dinner. And John came in, and he said, "I see you, I see you took down one of the big poplars." I said, "What?" He said, well, one of the big poplars is down out there. And Alan, the top of that tree came off. If it had come to the house. It was actually not in center of the house, but to the left of the house, a little. But it went over to the left, and took half of a little crab apple tree out. That would have totally come through the roof. Huge trees. I've had them topped by the way, since then, so that that can't happen. But it was, I know it was a mini tornado. And we were the only one that got hit. There was no damage anywhere else around. And it took a tree right out.

Alan: It's micro-management of the weather. They admitted that in the newspapers, that the US would shortly own the weather. And that was about four years ago.

Jackie: Well, there's a website. It's an air force website. Basically, it says the air force owns the weather.

Alan: And they do. And of course, NASA controls the satellites, which can also be used in conjunction with all the various HAARP technologies that they have, and beam it exactly back down on earth, wherever they want it. Four years ago, I was working under a truck, and in broad daylight, it was in the middle of summer. And I heard this voh-voh-voh sound, and I looked to my left and I saw what was like a stroboscopic light, like a flashgun going off, in a strobe fashion. I thought, my, I've been under here a long time, I better stand up and see if I'm okay. So, I stood up, and I felt fine. And yet, everything was still flashing. I went inside the house, turned on the radio, and I could hear the same zap, zap, zap in time with the strobe. I turned on the television, which had rabbit-ear antennas on it. And it was picking up the signal on the picture, in conjunction with the radio sound, going across there. And that night, I had three or four calls from different people in different parts of the States, and a couple in Canada, who said, this might sound really weird to you, but I thought I saw like flash guns going off, strobe lights, in the middle of the sunlight. And I said, yeah, I experienced it, and they're using some sort of new satellite technology. But that meant they were basking Ontario, and who knows where else up this way, right down into Carolina and different parts. That's a huge area.

So, they do have different technologies they have been testing on the public. And I have no doubt that they'll keep records of different kinds of sicknesses, through their doctors records, and hospital visits and so on, and police reports to see how psychological changes occur with violence or depression or whatever, and cede it all back to them; but it was definitely some big experiment. And it went on and off, over a three week period, maybe three times. So, they are using amazing technologies, which they'll never tell the public about. And of course, in the high noble Masonry, I've been told from three separate sources in these organizations, that there are three levels of science, and from professorship down is the lowest level. So everything that the public are informed about is the lowest level of science. CIA and so on, they get to use the middle level for their gimmicks that they use. But there's a higher level above them, that belong to the Guardians, who run the whole show for the planet. And that's how this system works. And that's why those at the bottom say, "well that's impossible, I read all the magazines, and scientific journals, and they would've told us." Well, that's the con game, "they would've told us." No, that keeps you in the dark.

Jackie: Right. You know, Alan, I don't know if you recall this or not, it was in the summertime, and I have no idea what the year was. Maybe '99? The children were here, it was summertime. And it was in the evening. We were out in the garden, in the big garden, the children and I. Chuck was up closer to the house. And suddenly, there was an explosion. And I stood there. And it was so intense. And my first thought was, oh, my God, they've done it. I was thinking of a nuclear explosion. And the children and I looked at each other, and we took off running for the house. And Chuck came out, and he said, don't go in the house, don't go in the house. It could have been a gas explosion. We have natural gas here. And so, we walked out to the road, you know, to look down, because it sounded so close. And it was real hazy out that night. And when I looked down the road to where the neighbor is, I thought, oh my God, I wonder if Sharon's house blew up, because it looked so hazy. Well, then, the next thing you know, a car is coming up the road, one of the emergency, you know, volunteers. And they said, do you know, do you know where that occurred? We said, no, it sounded like it was down there. Well, we got in the car and started driving around, and as far as we went, even up into the state line, people were talking about it, and everybody you talked to, they thought it was right near their home. Okay, well, there were newspaper reports, the next day. We were told that an airplane crashed, someplace, I forget what. But in the newspaper colored photographs of corn plants, that had these little perforations, perfect perforations across the leaves of what do you call them, the fronds, the stems. We never, ever found out what the heck happened. But the perforations in the corn plants, and it happened in many of the areas.

Alan: This was when? When was this?

Jackie: I've got the newspaper articles in there, in my file. Isn't it interesting how something like that happens. It's so intense. And then, it's like, gone. Like you said.

Alan: Well, I think it was last year the major news up here reported that something was exploding in the air, over from British Columbia, at least, it said British Columbia, all the way down into the U.S. states. And it had set off car alarms in the middle of the night, all the way down. And then of course, the speculation came out, they brought out, oh, it might be some kind of strange meteor, and so on and so on.

Jackie: Right. Well, see, we were also told that, that they thought a meteor hit some place, but nothing.

Alan: Well, the odd thing was, a week later, Australia had the same thing happen. And what they're doing is using, again, the Tesla technology. They're superheating parts of the atmosphere, and they're literally exploding. That's what it does.

Jackie: Wow. That's probably what happened here. We're out of our hour. And ladies and gentlemen, we will be back with you tomorrow night. Thank you for being here tonight. And I hope you were able to hear the broadcast, and not have to pick pieces out of our conversation.

Alan's Materials Available for Purchase and Ordering Information:

- | | | |
|---|---|--|
| BOOKS "Cutting Through" | & | "Waiting for the Miracle....." |
| Volumes 1, 2, 3 | | Also available in Spanish or Portuguese translation: "Esperando el Milagro....." (Español) & "Esperando um Milagre....." (Português) |
| Ancient Religions and | | |
| CDs History MP3 CDs: | & | Blurbs and 'Cutting Through the Matrix' Shows on MP3 CDs (Up to 50 |
| Part 1 (1998) and Part 2 | | Hours per Disc) |
| (1998-2000) | | |
| DVDs "Reality Check Part 1" | & | "Reality Check Part 2 - Wisdom, Esoterica and ...TIME" |

August 17th, 2005
Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru

cuttingthroughthematrix.com

alternate sites:

cuttingthroughthematrix.net , .us , .ca

alanwattcuttingthroughthematrix.ca

European site includes all audios & downloadable TRANSCRIPTS in European languages for print up:

alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

mirror site:

cuttingthrough.jenkness.com

Information for purchasing Alan's books, CDs, DVDs and DONATIONS:

Canada and America: PayPal, Cash, personal checks &
for the US, INTERNATIONAL postal money orders / for Canada, INTERNAL postal money orders
(America: Postal Money orders - Stress the INTERNATIONAL pink one, not the green internal one.)

Outside the Americas: PayPal, Cash, Western Union and Money Gram
(Money Gram is cheaper; even cheaper is a Money Gram check – in Canadian dollars:
mail via the postal services worldwide.)

PayPal Orders: USE THE DONATE BUTTON ON THE WEBSITE – AND –
Send a separate email along with the donation (list your order, name and address)

Click the link below for your location (ordering info):

USA

Canada

Europe/Scandinavian

All Other Countries

Jackie Patru: Good evening. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is the 17th of August. Is that right, Alan?

Alan: It is.

Jackie: It is August the 17th, folks, in the year 2005. And it is, of course, the end of our broadcast week. We're here Monday through Wednesday, and WFAR has a new satellite, and I was going to get it, and I am so sorry that I just now thought about it. For those of you, I guess people who are listening on satellite know it then, because I know that it's been announced. But I will get it, and I will share it with you, for those of you who prefer, if you have a CBAND satellite, who prefer to do that. Alan is back with us tonight. Actually, I had told Alan this afternoon that it was going to be you and me tonight, folks, because I had stuff I wanted to share with you, and I canned today. I haven't canned in three years, because, for the last two years, the garden has just been totally drowned out. And I got 17 pints of delicious pickle relish today, from my homegrown cucumbers. And it was a thrill, but I had forgotten how long a process it is and all the steps that we have to go through to get that done. And it was about 5 minutes till the hour of nine, before I filled that last jar. So, Alan graciously, when I called him, said, of course, he will be on with us, and here he is. And Alan, thank you.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: Our spiritual message, and I didn't want to forget this, and I did. This would be from Psalm 139, folks. "Search me father, and know my heart. Test me and know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offensive way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." That's from Psalm 139, verses 23 and 24. Know thyself. Jesus said there is nothing more to know. And maybe that's our whole mission here in a sense, Alan.

Alan: I think it is, because, I mean even though a lot of the Psalms were taken from the Egypt wisdom writings, there's a lot of truth in there. But when you were saying, search me father, I was seeing in my mind, search me government, because you see these black-clad guys searching people all over the place now.

Jackie: I know. You said that the last time I did this.

Alan: And of course, they're looking for anything they can find as well that's out of the ordinary, even your opinions. So, we're certainly going through the opposite side you might say of what was given thousands of years ago. They've reversed it, and now the government, or the state, or the world state is really in charge. And we're seeing the misery that it can produce. But we're just at the beginning, at least in the Western countries, of the beginning of misery.

Jackie: You know, Alan, the one thing I keep in mind, and you've said this before, that this plan is millennia old. It's been forever going on. And they've never been totally successful. And it doesn't mean just because of what it looks like to us right now, I just, it can't. I mean, I'm not saying that we should just sit back and say, oh, it ain't going to happen, but to be aware of what they have in store, what their intentions are. We see what's happening. I mean, it's like the price of gas right now. And it just keeps going up and up and up, and as you said, you know, when I mentioned, well, you know, everybody is complaining, but, we only complain to each other, because where do you go? And in this system.

Alan: There's no complaints department.

Jackie: There's no complaint department in this system. So, I am not trying to make light of what we see, and what we've learned, that their intention for us and for this world is. And yet, things happen. For example, I don't know if you've heard this. Maybe it's been talked about on other broadcasts. The lady, who went to Texas, who's in Crawford, Texas, camping out, protesting the death of her son, in Iraq, because she knows that her son died for nothing. He died because of lies. And now hundreds, and hundreds, and hundreds of people, parents of these soldiers that have been killed are coming to support this cause. And there evidently is a group in California, that had started what they called Arlington West, Arlington Cemetery West. And what they did, is they made wooden crosses, and they've made a graveyard of all the names that they know of the soldiers that have been killed. There's about 2,000 of them now, I guess, and Alan, I think probably that count is probably half of, and of course, it doesn't even bring in all of the ones that come back missing limbs, legs, and arms, and half of a face, and etc. But anyway, because of what this lady is doing, and she's just sitting there very peaceably, well, the people in California, moved their Arlington West cemetery to Texas. And they've got, there's a website I was reading it today, in fact, I'm going to send it to Darren to ask him to post it on Sweetliberty.org. But what they did, is they put all of these crosses down the road, in a ditch, and you know, one by one by one by one by one, and there are more and more people coming all the time. And those are the kinds of things, people that are not just sitting back. People, maybe this woman doesn't know diddly-squat about a long-range plan, but what she's doing from her heart is protesting the sin, the crime, of what is happening to the young men and women that are killing and dying for the New World Order. And that kind of stuff is uplifting.

Alan: Yeah, I think that's one of the reasons they're going to rush forward with their plans for Iran, and try and get it over and done with before anything else happens back home, you know.

Jackie: Well, and then there was that email I got that Governor Bill Richardson of New Mexico, and I went to the website of the state government of New Mexico, and it's there. When I first read it, I wondered if somebody just made it up. He issued an executive order, calling an emergency to protect their borders there, I think four counties there at the line, the Mexican border. And one of the statements he made in the press release was that the federal government is doing little or nothing, and that something has to be done. Now, they're still trying to work with the federal government, but they mentioned, you know, besides the illegal aliens that are swarming across our borders, stolen and killed cattle, and drug running, and this type of a thing. Now, I don't know if there's more to that. I'm sorry to say this. Maybe I'm becoming jaded, but I think there's more to it just than this guy, because I don't know any governors that aren't in the pockets of, you know, the controllers.

Alan: Well, it isn't as though they've just noticed. This has been going on for years. And I'm sure there will be some other government rule, or law, ready to get it put into place; it was probably all drawn up long before he came up with this. And it will effect probably everybody in the US, rather than just the ones who are coming across the border into the US. There's got to be something else behind it.

Jackie: There probably is, but for right now, it looks good. Let's put it that way. And we'll watch it. We'll watch to see.

Alan: Because George Bush has already signed the unification of the Americas, back in March, with the two prime ministers, one from Mexico and one from Canada. So, we know the federal scheme. And this guy has to be in on it, you know.

Jackie: Or he wouldn't be alive today, Alan.

Alan: He wouldn't be alive. And he had to have known when they signed the unification. Well, it happened, you know, down his way, when they went down and signed it anyway. He'd have to have known about it. They wouldn't leave him out of it. So, there's another reason behind it, for sure.

Jackie: I think there probably is. In fact, as I said earlier today, it could even be something as simple as a close friend of his owned a ranch that got raided or something. Well maybe not.

Alan: Either that, or the drug drops didn't work out properly, and they're peeved.

Jackie: You know, his name is Bill Richardson. Well, I just noticed this. And what I want to look into, it probably isn't the same person, but there was a Senator, Bill Richardson, from California, and he was the same one that wrote the book when he was a state Senator, titled, "So You Think We Read the Laws", "You Think We Read the Bills" it was supposed to be, it was supposed to be humorous. But it really basically told about, you know, how the state legislatures, they don't know what the heck they're doing, and they just rubber-stamp everything. He was also the one that started, the other Bill Richardson, and I don't know if this is the same guy, but seems like I saw a picture of that Bill Richardson, and this guy looked like him, to me, from my memory. He started gun owners of America. And of course, that's another shill organization, phony conservative, Larry Pratt, who heads it up, of course, is a long-time member of the Council for National Policy.

Alan: And also the big family that started up the CFR in the US for the Royal Institute of International Affairs, was the Pratt family.

Jackie: Oh, you're kidding.

Alan: I wonder if he's related.

Jackie: Oh, now wouldn't that be interesting to check out.

Alan: In fact, their main record house in New York is actually called the Pratt House.

Jackie: Pratt House, yes, it is.

Alan: You always find the same family names cropping up down through history, over and over and over. So, I wouldn't be surprised. The thing is, I mean, there's nothing hidden about the agenda, because it's all been well documented by many of the people involved, who were all for it. H.G. Wells back in the early 1900s called it The Open Conspiracy, because anybody could get the material and the future by simply reading the books that they put out themselves. And he went through the entire agenda, leading to the air police, he called them, where the air police would simply bomb all those countries or gas them, actually, or spray them from the skies, until they conformed to world government. And it's to be a world government run by scientists and experts. And everybody would be subject to them. So, this is well documented, there's nothing....

Jackie: Who was this, Alan?

Alan: H.G. Wells. And he worked for MI5. He was a spokesman for the British government. He was a propagandist actually. And, of course, most people know him for his science fiction writings, and even those were actually, it was a form of predictive programming, they called it, to program the public, through novels, of what was to come. That way, when it really does happen, you're sort of familiar with the ideas, and you accept them more readily as being inevitable. But he wrote an awful lot of books, which were non-fiction, and he was getting all the material for both of those types of books, from professors at Oxford University and Cambridge, and he just had to write a sort of story around them, to get them over to the public. But he was the main propagandist for World War I for Britain. And he coined the phrase, because they were running short of troops. They couldn't get enough cannon fodder, with the heavy machine guns, which, Maxim, Henry Maxim sold to the German side and it was Lord Vicars, went in partnership with the same guy, who sold them to the British and the French.

Jackie: Now who was he? Was he an American or what?

Alan: Vicars was English.

Jackie: He was British.

Alan: So, Vicars and Maxim formed a company based in Switzerland, a neutral country. And they knew the war was coming up, because their peer group had told them so. And so, they sold these heavy machine guns to all sides, and made a massive profit. You might say they made a killing, you know. And, of course, they weren't prosecuted for it. And Vicars was promoted from being a Sir to a Lord, for his part in it. But anyway, H.G. Wells coined the term, because they were running short of men, the War to End All Wars. That was to get the young idealists to join up.

Jackie: In other words, we'll go fight for this, and then we'll have World Peace from now on.

Alan: That's Utopia. So, he wrote a book called The Open Conspiracy, and goes through the whole agenda.

Jackie: I read a piece today, when I pulled up my email. Somebody wrote, I didn't read the whole thing, I do a lot of skimming, scanning, whatever, but, it was somebody who had mentioned. Oh, I know, it was a website. I tried to go there too, and wasn't able to get into it. But, whoever wrote it, mentioned that the wars, that mentioned the Christians, that all the versions that there are of the Bible, every single one of them is the word of God, and not to be questioned. And made that point, and that all of these wars are right out of the Old Testament. Because the Old Testament is full of nothing but wars, Alan.

Alan: Oh, of course it's all wars, because that's the system. See, this is a system that was developed thousands of years ago, based on money, not food or anything else. Money controls everything. And we're all trained to work for money, not to work for food or clothing, or whatever. We're self-maintained slaves. We buy all our own stuff, and the rest of it goes to our betters in taxes. So, it's a system, but the Bible has been tampered with, heavily. Old Testament is OT which is also the Order of Templars. We should remember that to begin with. And it's the Black Book. Black is law in the Talmud. And Black is also law in the Kabbala.

Jackie: Well, and Moses Mendelssohn was quoted as saying that Judaism is not a religion, it is a law religionized.

Alan: Well, all of them are. All of them end up in laws, based on it, and really whether they call it religion or whatever. If you go to the 46th psalm, see the number 10....

Jackie: And folks, when Alan says Sam, we pronounce it Salm. I just, that confused me when you were talking about that before.

Alan: Okay. Yeah, if you get six and four, or four and six, you get ten. So, all combinations that work out to ten are the binary code, which is very high in High Masonic Coding. You get the 46th one, and you count from the first word forward and you'll find the word, "shake". Then, forget "selah" at the bottom, which just means, make it so. That's put on to all of them. Forget that one, and count backwards, 46, and you'll find spear, Shakespeare, in there.

Jackie: Say, okay, would you repeat that one more time? I'm making notes, but I didn't get it all. 46 psalm.

Alan: Count forward, 46 words.

Jackie: 46 words forward.

Alan: You'll get Shake. Then you take, from the bottom, the end, forget selah, which is like amen, added on to it. And count 46 back, and you'll get spear.

Jackie: Okay, you go to the end of the 46 psalm. So you start from the front, go 46 forward, you get Shake. Go all the way to the back, count 46 back, and you get spear.

Alan: And that's a little Masonic joke, right in there you see.

Jackie: No, but you know what. There have been books written about Bible Code, and what they do is show that this could not have been done by man.

Alan: That's nonsense.

Jackie: No, I know that. Excuse me. I shouldn't have said show. They use it as proof.

Alan: I know.

Jackie: That this could not have been done by man, because there's too many of these types of codes in the Old Testament, because, I'll tell you, when I read this, it was very astounding to me. And now, it makes sense.

Alan: It was a joke. I mean, Bacon, Francis Bacon is claimed by the High Masons, was also Shakespeare, which makes a lot of sense, because the history of Shakespeare, who basically, with all of the 180,000 words he came out with in his plays, that were new words, he created the English language. That's how they put it over. And then the Bible, the King James Bible, reinforced that, because prior to those days, people were speaking, in England, they were speaking Old Saxon German. That was the language. So they created a new language and Bacon wrote about it in his own memoirs. He said, we are creating the international language of the future, to be called English.

Jackie: Francis Bacon, does his name have anything to do with Ham?

Alan: Actually, it's a play. Frank is Red, like Franklin, Benjamin Franklin. The term even in medicine for bright red blood is called frank. Frank blood, you see. And so, you have Ben, which is son, Jamin, which is I am in high Masonic coding.

Jackie: Benjamin?

Alan: I am the son of the red. That's what it means, the red way.

Jackie: But what about Francis Bacon, that word Bacon?

Alan: Well, he's the same red, and there's two ways there. You've got a beacon, which is like a lighthouse, you might say, Illuminati. And Illuminati did not begin with Weishaupt, because even the old Oxford dictionaries say it's a movement which first began to be noticed, or put its head above water around the 13th Century AD in England.

Jackie: Douglas Reed suggested that possibly, that Weishaupt received it from the Knights Templars.

Alan: Weishaupt got it from the Royalty of Europe. When he was, it's in the official history books, when he was chased out of Bavaria, he sought refuge and was granted refuge in the House of Saxe-Gotha. The present Queen of England, her full name is Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. So, they gave him a pension, in Saxe-Gotha, which was a part of Germany. And they gave him a life-long pension to live there, and he lived there till he died. So why would royalty grant Weishaupt, who was supposed to overthrow everybody, why would they grant him refuge there and a pension to live on, unless they had put him up there in the first place, to cause the revolution. That's the key to it. These particular royal families eventually came over to England, and they took over England as well. They all traced their roots back to Prussia. But that's the official history, you know. And Weishaupt is a pseudonym for Wise Leader, that's what it means.

Jackie: Wise Leader. ...The way that he explained it, he didn't say that Weishaupt got it from the Templars. He just suggested that possibly. But he explained how it's set up in cells, and that the people on one level, they just take orders from the person just above them. And they don't know anything else that's going on.

Alan: It's still part of Freemasonry's oaths today. It's said that you must obey immediately an order by a superior degree, and put your own moral judgment and opinions in reserve. You must carry out the order, regardless.

Jackie: And when you take a look at it, kind of from above, like a bird's eye view of it, first of all, it does make sense. You know, the fact that so many of their minions that are carrying out the plan, they're only given like an Nth degree. They have no idea. They may be given an ostensible reason why they're doing a particular job or something. And they could be working alongside of other agents, that are doing their own part of it, and neither of them know that they're agents.

Alan: Very often that's the case.

Jackie: Okay. And then, when you look at the whole thing, and you have the CIA and CSIS and the Mossad, and you know, all of the Secret Services in every country, then you see that it's all, I see it like a puppet master up there. That's what I see in my mind's eye, just pulling the strings on all of them. It is a global spy network.

Alan: Oh, it is, it is.

Jackie: It's a global spy network.

Alan: Every part is compartmentalized from the department above it. And that's why they're all kept in the dark, except for their own little role or mission, and as you say, you can work, you could actually be working and there's guys above you sabotaging your work, you know. And you'd never know. And those guys would have higher clearances than you, and all you would be told is the word would come down to leave it alone, don't go any further.

Jackie: And not only that, but they actually kill each other, thinking that they're killing an enemy. So, talk about minions, Alan. Pawns in a game.

Alan: Sure, and that's the whole thing with secrecy of any kind. Secrecy always is used for subterfuge and power. That's the reason for secrecy. And Secret Services are at the top of the whole list. And as I said before, Peter Wright, who was in MI5 and MI6, in his own book said that when he joined MI5 as a specialist, they took it for granted that he was a Freemason, and the woman who basically was stamping his cards for him, his IDs said, you must be a Freemason. He says, oh, no. She says, well, that's impossible, everybody that works here is a Freemason. So, he said it in his own book. And that's the same in Russia. Trotsky said in his own memoirs, My Life, he said, I was initiated into Freemasonry while in prison. And when he died, or was assassinated, he was writing what he called, he said it would be the greatest volume on Freemasonry ever written. So he was going to, probably through his own ego, start to expose some things which he shouldn't expose. And he said, when he was escorted from Russia, because he was ordered out, his guards crossed different borders by giving Masonic signs to the opposing guards in different countries. So, there's the brotherhood at work, even at all the different guard posts.

No questions were asked.

Jackie: Do you think it's true – I've heard this and read it – that if a person goes into court, that if they have some of the Masonic positions and etc, that if they can project that to the judge, that the judge will be lenient with them.

Alan: Yes. It's their law.

Jackie: Their law.

Alan: They cannot deny a fellow Freemason in distress.

Jackie: Well that would be, then it would behoove us to get some of their little, well, not a handshake, because you're not going to be shaking hands with the judge, but some of their little sayings and phrases and positions. Like Jack Benny. Remember how. We have to take a break right now. Folks, we're going to be back right after this, with Alan Watt. Stay with us.

(Commercial Break)

Jackie: Alright, we're back with Alan Watt. Alan, you and I were going to on the break monitor our shortwave radios, and I forgot to do that. Did you happen to flip yours on?

Alan: I didn't; I didn't plug it in, even.

Jackie: You didn't even plug it. Yeah, okay. Maybe we're losing our memories, Alan.

Alan: Could be, yeah.

Jackie: Anyway, folks, I wanted to remind you. I mentioned this last night. I don't know how we're coming in. The one big one that I get constantly is that I am overmodulated. My voice is overmodulated, which I don't understand, because I understood the engineer, Jason, at WWCR, to say that they were getting a beautiful clear, crisp signal, from the satellite. And if it's going in that way, it should be coming out that way.

...Alright. We were talking about the Masonic hand symbols or signals and stuff. And I mentioned Jack Benny. And remember how he used to stand with his arm crossed over his chest, and then his elbow on his hand, and then he'd hit the side of his face. I was told that that's the Masonic symbol of the square.

Alan: It is. You'll see a lot of people, famous people, including Stalin and Napoleon, with their hand across the chest and the right angle.

Jackie: No, but I mean, do you remember, did you ever see Jack Benny on TV?

Alan: Oh, yeah.

Jackie: Okay. It wasn't, it didn't have like the right hand up across, but it was like really a square, because his hand, his arm, the forearm went across the chest. And then his elbow was rested on that hand, and then his other hand was against his face. But I was told that that's a Masonic....

Alan: You see it every time world leaders meet on television. You'll see Mr. Bush greet Tony Blair, or whoever. They did it with Arafat too, so they're all Masons. And it's toe to toe, knee to knee. And of course, it's hand to hand, then your left hand goes to the elbow, then behind the back, hand to back, and they hug each other, and then they whisper in each other's ear. And that's the five physical points of Freemasonry. So, you see it all the time, with all the world leaders. They're all Masons.

Jackie: What if somebody was standing before a judge in a court room? What could they do or say?

Alan: As a real last resort, if you really are in the wrong, and you want mercy....

Jackie: I'm not saying, no, forget it. Very few people that go into court are in the wrong.

Alan: You're talking about Masons.

Jackie: I'm talking Freemasonry.

Alan: And I'm just telling you that that's what you do as a last resort as a Freemason, apart from having a word with the Sheriff's Clerk, he's more important than the judge.

Jackie: The Sheriff's Clerk?

Alan: That's right. And then you go before the Judge. And if the Judge still didn't quite clue in, as a last resort, you try your Joseph Smith thing, of the Mormons, because you throw your hands up in the air, as a Y, the letter Y, and you say is there no one here to help a widow's son. And that's the final plea for mercy, and he must grant you it.

Jackie: What about just a person that's in court, and shouldn't be there, but is? That would be a final plea. But is there anything that can be done or said, that would let the judge know?

Alan: It all goes through the Sheriff, beforehand. That's traditional, in every country. In every single country, you have a word with the Sheriff, and you tell him, and he'll say, I'll see what I can do. That's why you'll see some cases drag on, petty little cases. And other ones, the same type of thing is dismissed right away. That's been going on for hundreds of years. And it's no different today. And so many of the public who are....

Jackie: And the Judge has to give you leniency?

Alan: Yeah, once you're a brother, and you let them know you're a brother, and you're in bad straits, etc, and this will upset your reputation, or whatever, or your job. They must grant you mercy, and it will be dismissed. And men, of course... see, the only thing that you can do wrong as a Mason, is to break a Masonic rule against your fellow brother Masons. What you do to the public is almost irrelevant. And you're allowed to have intercourse with anybody's wife, as long as it's not a Freemason's. That's in their rules.

Jackie: Even the judge's wife?

Alan: No, not with a fellow mason's.

Jackie: Oh, that would be wrong. Oh, yeah.

Alan: Then you wouldn't be tried in a court for it, you'd be tried on the square, inside the Masonic lodge. So, they have their own little courts for their own rules and laws.

Jackie: How does one get a hold of the Clerk?

Alan: Oh, you just go in and see them. You just ask to see them. And they'll give you little clues.

Jackie: What about a woman? I mean, does a woman count too?

Alan: Well, if she's in the Eastern Star, although they're all side degrees, that counts as well. Especially if they're at the heads of different charitable organizations, which they're encouraged to do. So, sure. It counts for them, as well. And that's why the public are so confused when they see the same types of cases, same supposed charges, and five of them are dismissed as soon as the person's name is read out and the charge, and other ones with the same charge go through two or three hours, and then get a fine or imprisonment. It's because ones are Masons and others are not. That's traditional. The court is a Masonic Lodge. It's set out that way. And the bar is your bar between the peasantry and the man who sits as god. He presides over the court. He wears the Saturn, the black Saturn gown. He is a god, you know. So that's how it is. Now, getting back to Bacon though, I meant to mention too, that Bacon, when you break it down, is also B A Con. You know, Con is a priest, a Cohen. And so you have all that in the name.

Jackie: Well, I thought of ham, because you've mentioned the name Ham before. And when you mentioned, brought up Francis Bacon, the first thing I thought of was ham.

Alan: Oh, as ham and bacon. (Chuckles) But that's how they hide their names and so on. And William Shakespeare, the High Masons all claim, and Francis Bacon were one and the same person. And of course, Bacon did help to write the King James Version. King James was a High Mason himself.

Jackie: And a pervert. A big-time pervert.

Alan: Yeah. He chased the page boys all over the place. That was his hobby.

Jackie: Well, the stuff I've read about him, it was even worse than that.

Alan: Oh, it was worse, all right.

Jackie: He rolled in the blood of dead animals, and had sex with cadavers.

Alan: Well, I don't know if it was that bad, but he certainly chased the boys, and that's the official Scottish history records. They called him Shamey Jamie.

Jackie: Well, you know I think maybe I saw a movie one time, and I think it was one of those old movies that they show sometimes. It seems it was in black and white. And if I'm not mistaken, they showed him as a real mincing, feminine male.

Alan: He also had a bad limp too. And he was kind of deformed. But, yeah, he was definitely homosexual. There was nothing hidden about that. He was married, but that was for offspring only, and that is not unusual.

Jackie: And that is the accepted and treasured and idolized and worshiped version of the Bible by many people.

Alan: Well, that's the one that Jesus used.

Jackie: Oh, okay. It seems to me, and I don't think that people think about it. Or maybe they don't. Maybe they do, but I don't think they do. That they worship that book, a book, more than Creator.

Alan: That's why it's called The Holy Bible. It is a book, but they've made it a sacred object.

Jackie: Well, Bible means book, doesn't it?

Alan: Yeah, but holy, holy. I mean holy means it's sacred. Now it's been deified as the book being sacred. So you're not supposed to worship any image. And of course, how did they get the print onto those pages? It's called engraving. It's a graven image. So, I mean, it's such a joke, you see.

Jackie: Well, you know what. It might seem like a joke to you. I find it, Alan, I mean, it's a joke on us. And I don't think it's a joke to you. I think it's much more serious than that. Because, I find it so, I don't know, just so deep, sad, that it's so easy to mold people's minds.

Alan: It always has been, and if they leave us unchanged, unmodified, it always will be. Like Gorbachev, when he said, he said that the world has always been ruled by religion to keep the people obeying the governments. And he said We, and he's an atheist, in the same book he admitted that....

Jackie: Gorbachev?

Alan: Yeah, Mikhail Gorbachev. Towards a New Civilization was his book. And in it, he says, we are now creating the new world religion, which will be based on Earth Worship. So, here's a guy who tells you he's an atheist, who's in the business now of helping to create a world religion, to keep the public in check. So they understand this.

Jackie: He has offices in the Presidio in California.

Alan: Yes. And he had that, if you check into the official license to operate, Mikhail Gorbachev was granted the license in the US, before he left Russia, and while he was still President of the Soviet Union. So, there you go, everything is a farce, as it's presented to the public. So, here he is, who was the head of the KGB, and the President of the Soviet Union, who was granted by the US government a license to reside in the US and operate this global governance little depot. And they granted it to him while he was still the President of Russia.

Jackie: And he came over here, and people cheered him.

Alan: Well, actually, it was the greatest PR move ever done. Maggie Thatcher was the first one to bring him over to Britain, Gorbachev and his wife. And the press, years later, the press admitted that they had all agreed, your free press now, that's there to inform you, all agreed not to ask any pertinent questions concerning Communism or the true state of the Soviets, but only to ask about his wife's lipstick, her hairdo, what kind of hair salons they had in Russia, and where Mikhail Gorbachev had his nice light flashy looking suit, you know. So that was a PR stunt. And then, when they brought him over to the US, they did, after the same kind of publicity stunt, because the press in the US did exactly the same, they kept to their lines, they didn't ask any nasty questions. And they did a poll survey, and they found that over 75% of the people in Britain and the US wouldn't mind if Gorbachev was their president one day.

Jackie: Oh my God.

Alan: That's in the books.

Jackie: You know what, we're almost out of our hour. And we're, of course, out of our week, here. One of the things that we've discussed, and I would like you to take a few minutes to talk about it. On Sweet Liberty we don't talk about the, oh, what Senator did this, and what, all of the little, you know, everyday things, because, basically, I mean, you could literally be broadcasting eight hours a day.

Alan: Or more, if you could stay awake.

Jackie: If you could stay awake. And, will you comment on that, Alan.

Alan: Yeah, I mean, the nitty-gritty of who says what today and so on, I tend to ignore, because I've got an overview of the whole agenda, and that's all anyone really needs. I don't need to have the confirmation of the blow-by-blow daily stuff that the mainstream gives you, or certain shortwave broadcasters give you, because I tend to avoid the mainstream media, which is there simply to put you into a state of panic and subservience. And when the shortwave picks up on the same daily themes of what they're doing to you today, and going to do to you tomorrow, it becomes overwhelming, which is it's object. It's meant to render you incapacitated basically through fear.

Jackie: And it does.

Alan: And it does. Yeah, I mean, some people have phoned me up and they're immobilized. And I've told some of them to slow down. One I told to shut up. I had to, because he was almost screaming with neurosis. And I said, who do you listen to? He told me who he listened to, on the shortwave. And I said, you know, this is what psychological warfare is intended to do. It's meant to give you a nervous breakdown, so as you cannot function.

And I said, look, has anything nasty really happened to you yet? He said, no. I said, well, what's your problem? So, that is how panic and fear and terror, can incapacitate someone, if you get hooked on some of these superstars.

Jackie: Well, and this is why I wanted to bring it up, because we don't do that type of broadcasting. And I wanted our listeners to understand, hopefully, the value of the information that they're getting. It is more of an overview. It isn't all the nitty-gritty, but see, I can attest to what you're saying, because back in 1992, somebody gave me a copy of the Machelvani Intelligence Advisor. I think it was about 12 pages, Alan. I was in my office. I owned my business at the time, and I was working late. And so, I opened it up and read it, and I sat there paralyzed. And then I subscribed to it, got my first one, and went out and sat on the deck at home and read it, and I couldn't do anything for the rest of the day, because I thought, 'Oh my God. What the heck do we think we're doing? It's hopeless. It's gone too far.' And folks, that's what I wanted to bring up before the end of this broadcast, just so you know, why we don't, because it's all symptoms of the whole bigger picture. We'll be back with you, Monday. And I hope you have a lovely next four days. And I hope you will join us on Monday next.

Alan's Materials Available for Purchase and Ordering Information:

- BOOKS

"Cutting Through"
Volumes 1, 2, 3

& "Waiting for the Miracle....."

Also available in Spanish or Portuguese translation: "Esperando el Milagro....." (Español) & "Esperando um Milagre....." (Português)
- CDs

Ancient Religions and History MP3 CDs:
Part 1 (1998) and Part 2
(1998-2000)

& Blurbs and 'Cutting Through the Matrix' Shows on MP3 CDs (Up to 50 Hours per Disc)
- DVDs

"Reality Check Part 1" & "Reality Check Part 2 - Wisdom, Esoterica and ...TIME"

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
February 22, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. You didn't hear me when I first came on because I didn't have one of my on buttons pushed. Today is Tuesday the 22nd of February in the year 2005. I'm glad you've joined us this evening. I tried to get a hold of Alan Watt. Alan and I talked and I told him yesterday that if I wasn't able to finish what I wanted to do last night that I would finish today and I would get in touch with him. I was thinking all day that he was coming on with us and then I realized about 40 minutes ago that oh, my, I need to call him and his line has been busy and I cannot reach him. So I'm going to take the calls tonight if you would like to call in folks.

Let me share with you our spiritual message. This is the prayer of St. Francis of Assisi.

"Father, make me an instrument of your peace. Where there is hatred, let me sow love; Where there is injury, let me so pardon; Where there is doubt, faith; Where there is despair let me so hope; Where there is darkness, let me sow light; And where there is sadness, joy. Dear Father, Grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console; To be understood as to understand; To be loved as to love; For it is in giving that we receive; It is in pardoning that we are pardoned; And it is in dying that we are born into eternal life."

There is no death. There is no death. That wasn't part of the prayer, of course, that's my comment, folks.

Jackie: Hello, Alan. All right, folks, we're back on here and I hope that we didn't lose anybody. I think that was pretty fast work switching phone lines around et cetera. Alan Watt is with us. Alan, I apologize for not calling you earlier today. I was thinking all day long that we had already set it up. You were coming on tonight and I got company this afternoon and some more company tonight and it occurred to me at about 20 after 8 then your dog-gone line was busy, so thanks for calling in.

Alan: It's no problem. I got a barrage of calls.

Jackie: You got a barrage of callers. Well all right, thanks. What are we going to talk about? You were telling me about meetings that you had seen – was it a CFR meeting, Alan? You were telling me about it recently.

Alan: They called it the Trilateral Meeting. It was held in Montreal last week and it was sponsored by the CFR, the New York branch. They paid for that I guess and it was about the integration of the America, Canada and the states.

Jackie: Would you mind sharing that with our listeners? Now where did you see this, Alan?

Alan: It was on the regular news.

Jackie: In Canada? Now they're talking about Canada too when they're talking about the Americas.

Alan: Oh yes. It's been on the table for a long time and it's been denied of course for a long time as well. They give you both messages simultaneously down through the years. Yes, we're talking about joining. No, we're not talking about joining and then eventually of course they become more open with it and since the Free Trade negotiations in reality that's when it was first discussed that Canada, the U.S., Mexico and then others, especially Chile, would unite to form a form of the United States of Americas to compete with Europe. At this meeting last week they talked about the desired currency of this merger and a new currency to speed it along too and a single government.

Jackie: A single government. I wonder what they'll call the American dollar? The Amero dollar or the Amero?

Alan: In fact I think I read in the papers a while ago that they had tossed different names around for a common currency. I can't remember what it was.

Jackie: I have a book here from this place down in Quakertown, Pennsylvania, and it's an illuminati – Kleimer is the name of the founder of this place I think and this was called the 34th Convocation. This was a message from this Sweinberg-Kleimer and it was a long time ago back in the '20's or '30's and the saying that the capstone on the pyramid – and on their property, by the way, is a smaller version of the big pyramid without the capstone. He said that the reason that the capstone has not been put on yet is that it won't happen until America is once again joined with Mexico. That's how he put it and it's been in the plan. He said something about Egypt, but it's been in the plan for all these millennia and so that when they have it all – and he hoped that would happen without bloodshed.

Alan: I know that during the Free Trade negotiations the top Canadian bureaucrat or civil servant was called Shelley Ann Clark and she typed up all of the negotiation books for the main negotiations and afterwards she came out publicly and tried to tell the people of Canada that, look, it's a sellout, we're merging with them around the year 2005. That was the initial date they planned on, so who knows. They certainly still want it, now they're public about it. I think what they were doing too is testing the reaction of the people by announcing that they had a meeting to see what would happen.

Jackie: I doubt we'll see anything like that in the near future here in the states.

Alan: I think with this Middle Eastern fracas they'll have to keep the taxpayers in the states quite happy until that's completed and maybe then they'll pull the plug and then use that for an economic disaster as a reason for merging. However, I think they want it to join by 2005, 2006, but I cannot see it in the immediate future, unless they do collapse the economy very quickly.

Jackie: We know they can do that anytime they want.

Alan: Yes they can.

Jackie: I remember back in probably '93 when I was very new to this and you read these financial forecasts. Alan, I was convinced that by October of '93 it was all going to be all over.

Alan: Well, it doesn't take much and I know that Shelley Ann Clark when she tried to get the word out to the Canadian people, she said that that would be the reason that would be given at the time would be we're in trouble financially, so is the U.S., and it's too cumbersome to have so many governments with its separate bureaucracies trying to compete with a United Europe and the Pacific Rim conglomeration.

Jackie: It occurs to me that that's going to fall perfectly in their plan of Trilateral Commission. Like in George Orwell's "1984," they had their three large regions would you call them?

Alan: That's right. They had East Asia and West Asia and Oceania. Karl Marx wrote about this in the 1840's.

Jackie: And the wars, when we go back to George Orwell's "1984," how two of them would be against one and then suddenly they were the allies of their enemies and they acted like and the people accepted it like, oh, okay, so it's been this way and this exactly what's happening today. We had a caller just before you called in and we were talking about France and how America has been really biting France and of course now we're hearing that Russia had supplied Iran with nuclear warheads. They're pulling it off already and getting people to believe that oh well Germany is no longer our ally. France is no longer our ally.

Alan: Just on tonight's news they have tentatively announced that Canada is joining the U.S. with this new anti-missile defense system that they're going to set up in the north of Canada.

Jackie: Another merger?

Alan: Supposedly in case of Russia, I guess. Who's left? The Eskimos? Who's going to attack you? Once again, they're setting up Russia as possibly the bad guy, but really this goes back for thousands of years, the necessity of government that really is an elite with a bureaucracy running over the people under the pretense of protecting them from those guys over there – when those guys over there are often their own kin who are running those countries. That was the farce of the European wars for centuries, was that the British king would send these guys off to fight the French king and when they weren't fighting the French king, who was a cousin of his, he was off fighting the King of Holland who was also his cousin.

Jackie: Of course the kings never fought.

Alan: No, but they all borrowed heavily from the bankers to support these wars and then they tax the people to pay it all back, so they lived very comfortably on war.

Jackie: This is for our listeners who may not be aware of this or who have not heard it when I mentioned it. I have read this in three different books or publications or speeches, that when they were planning World War I more overtly, because I know that in 1906, Norman Dodd had mentioned reading about it in the archives of the – what was it? The Carnegie Foundation and they had a question that they asked: "Is there any way better than war or other than war or is there a way to make a change in a nation or culture that it can never change back again?" They formed the commission and they came up with the answer and they said "no, war is the way to make the change" and they started planning World War I and even the fact that it would take place or be started in the Balkans. Then they decided that they would wait until the U.S. Congress passed the Federal Reserve Act so that the American people could pay for it and in 1913 the Federal Reserve Act was passed and in 1914 World War I was begun. If anybody doubts what you're saying or how long this plan and how well planned it is, we only need to find these little bits and pieces for the conformation, Alan.

Alan: I know that after they fought Napoleon they had a big meeting with the elite of Europe and the Vatican and they basically divvied up tracts of land to each other and discussed the future wars, where they would be, who would benefit and who the winners would be, et cetera, and they planned the future even back then.

Jackie: When was this?

Alan: That was in the late 1800's, The Concert of Europe and another one before it, the Council of Vienna. They actually divvied up the land between the conquerors to pay off all the loans et cetera and the interest rates that would be paid by each nation and even the possibility of new wars and a United Europe. It's never ending. It's never ending and I think one of the best books to read on that is the "Autobiography of Bertrand Russell" because he worked for the British Intelligence Service. He was also a British Lord and his job was to set up a protest movement against nuclear war, and again with the Hegelian Dialectic--

Jackie: Set up a protest.

Alan: Yes. He formed what was the Committee of 100 and they got 100 leaders of large anti-nuclear weapon protest groups, but they were the active branch. They were the ones who'd go in and knock down the fences around American airports and storm over the airports et cetera. He said by using this technique of the dialectic (he's talking about the Hegelian method of opposites), he said we can create global governments. When the people are terrified enough they will ask for global governments.

Jackie: I've got a quote here by him. He was a UNESCO adviser and of course UNESCO is labeled, if you would, "The Global School Board." He said, "It may be hoped that in time anybody will be able to persuade anybody of anything if he can catch the patient young and is provided by the state with money and equipment. When the technique has been perfected every government that has been in control of education for a generation will be able to control its subjects securely without the need of armies or policemen."

Alan: That's right. That was in the "Impact of Science on Society." He went right through it and he quoted Euclid and some of the ancient Greek philosophers because they did experimentation on mind control back in ancient Greece.

Jackie: Okay, look, we have to take our 60-second break. We'll talk about that when we get back. Alan, are you there?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: I had to go out and find the shortwave radio for Steve so he could listen. You had said that in Greece they were practicing mind control and now give us a timeline here.

Alan: 2,400 years ago. One of the big philosophers there at the time, because they all had their little schools, their followings of students, and he tried with very young children.

Jackie: Now who are we talking about?

Alan: Euclid or one of Euclid's students. He did say that he taught them that the color of snow was black, and things along that line, and so that when they grew a few years from then they let them out to meet other children and they would say the snow was black. Of course when other children from outside heard that they'd laugh and mock them and these young students didn't know what was wrong with them because they'd been taught logically that that's what you call the color of snow. Bertrand Russell used that as an example in his book "The Impact of Science on Society."

Jackie: Is religion a science?

Alan: Oh yes, absolutely. Everything was tried through religion. Russell said that if you can get a child, preferably under the age of two, which would mean bringing in kindergarten specially sponsored by the state, which we have now in Canada, he said any input from the parents value system--

Jackie: In Canada is it a free babysitting thing for parents?

Alan: They just passed a law about a month ago to extend it across the whole of Canada, so I don't know how far it's going.

Jackie: In other words, working parents would find that a wonderful opportunity for their children and for them because if it is a public government funded project then they wouldn't have to paying babysitters or daycare centers, so that I would imagine that those people who are financially depressed or oppressed, whatever we would call it, would jump at the opportunity.

Alan: Actually the parents themselves, who are around 25 years of age or so, are one step beyond their parents towards accepting this as normal because many of them went to kindergarten and so on.

Jackie: And preschool?

Alan: Yes, that's right, preschool.

Jackie: I can remember when the U.S. Congress was having hearings on Goals 2000. One of the big things, I kept hearing it over and over and over again, that all children will enter school ready to learn.

Alan: Yes, that's right. In fact, when they go to kindergarten they start them off right there. Most kindergarten schools have symbols of the images of the world, "we are a global village," you'll see that slogan everywhere, "we are one family," and so they're being prepared already for that. This has been an ongoing intergenerational change towards this agenda or the progression of this agenda for a long time but speeding up in the last 100 years.

Jackie: What occurred to me when you were talking about this and I was thinking about the people who are financially strapped jumping at it, they time everything at the perfect time for them, don't they?

Alan: Yes. When you look at the school buses that go around even rural areas and they stop door to door for the children, you see, so no child is left behind as they say. They make sure that everyone gets the same indoctrination and just like in ancient Greece, if they're taught that snow is black they'll all say the same thing and they'll think well we must be normal because we all agree.

Jackie: Well, you know the thing is when you think about it, we're a global village, we are all one and all that, on a spiritual level we are one and I think that plays to people who don't realize the insidious outcome of what they plan for everybody. It pulls their heartstrings, Alan.

Alan: I know but I can understand that sometimes it's best not to tell everybody everything that's happening because it's so bad most people couldn't handle it and that's the truth. We're living in a fantasia that we call normal and it's really masterful mind control and our parents have been under it too and this has been going on for a long time, this whole technique of mind control. Very few people question the system that they live in as they go through it. They see things that aren't quite right so they think, "I'll vote somebody else in and things will change for the better," but in reality this is an agenda and the best of it is you don't have to go into conspiracy books to find it. It's in old history books prior to 1900, regular old history books.

Jackie: You mean people in history books that students were getting?

Alan: Yes, because prior to 1900, most people who could read and write were part of the wealthier class so they were writing for themselves to themselves and they wouldn't upset the apple cart themselves since they were being rewarded by it. They could quite more openly discuss things and there were more outlets for individual publishers who didn't at that time really need a license in some countries.

Jackie: Do you think that within these families every now and then there's a black sheep? The reason I'm asking I remember quite a few years ago reading about a Rothschild that was found hung in a hotel room or something.

Alan: Yes he was.

Jackie: It makes you wonder if maybe he was slipping out of the grips of the family. I don't even remember where I read this. I don't know if there's any truth in it at all, but that some son of a Rockefeller family somewhere was in Africa and wound up dead.

Alan: That was Israel.

Jackie: Was it Israel?

Alan: Yes. He'd been in a whorehouse and he died. He was high on cocaine and other drugs. He had a heart attack so the Mossad pulled him out into the street and put him in a car to avoid the scandal of where he died. Eventually it blew out into the press what had happened.

Jackie: Okay. The way I read it was that he was on some junket or something over in Africa.

Alan: He was on a junket all right, a different type.

Jackie: Do you think that ever though that somehow they slip out of the grasp of their indoctrination, their mind control?

Alan: I don't think so much they slip out as slip up with arrogance or maybe too many drugs and they get loose-lipped and boastful, or they could have a weakness. I think the one that was found hung in the bathroom, the Rothschild, was homosexual--

Jackie: Well I thought they all were.

Alan: He had a lover--

Jackie: Blatant in other words.

Alan: Yes, but not so much the fact that he had one. I think he was starting to disclose things he shouldn't tell him, so secrecy is very important and they're monitored as well in case they ever do slip up, or they can find out what has been said and they can try and remedy it before it hits the papers. They are monitored.

Jackie: The situation over there in England like with Princess Di and that, what do you think was behind all that?

Alan: Everyone knows the only reason that she was chosen to marry Charles was simply for the offspring.

Jackie: Because of the royal blood.

Alan: For the royal blood and the fact that just looking at Charles you can tell that they're too inbred. They had to branch out a little bit.

Jackie: Okay, because she was pretty.

Alan: Yes and Charles is an odd looking guy and his sister Ann, who liked horses, kind of looks like one too.

Jackie: And the Queen is not such a--

Alan: No. They're so inbred and it was in the papers at the time all of these reasons, it was more open at that time as to why they'd chosen someone slightly outside the usual coterie. However, once he performed his "duty," you might say, and she had the offspring, Charles was off with the boys, as usual, all the time, playing polo across the world and he was never – I even think they're lining him up now with this woman he's going to marry as just another publicity stunt.

Jackie: Who is this?

Alan: Camilla Parker Bowles.

Jackie: Okay. Is that the one that he was allegedly in a romance with during their marriage?

Alan: Yes, but I really think it's more of a mother figure, a confidant to him, because he was never interested in women, but it's good PR for the public who must believe he's straight and all the rest of it. At one time his Uncle Mountbatten, tricky Dickey they called him, he was a blatant homosexual. It was no secret. He was worried that Charles was also homosexual that he would never produce offspring and so Mountbatten hired or rented an apartment in London and put some really high class whores in there to try and interest Charles but it didn't work. They went to quite a lot of lengths to try to get him interested in women and then they did PR shots to convince the public that he was straight.

Jackie: So are the boys his?

Alan: Who knows? It may have been done artificially for all we know.

Jackie: There you go. Very possibly.

Alan: They did a PR campaign that cost millions of pounds at that time and they were taking Charles across the globe and they were hiring dozens of models in Australia and elsewhere who would run towards him on the beach as though he was a really attractive fellow. That's how far they were going to convince the public that he was a real ladies man, but that was so far from the truth. That's the world that we live in and that's always been their world though. They're matched up simply for their genetic lineages and once they have performed their "duty," as they call it, the husband can do what he wants and so can the wife. That's always been the way of the aristocracy.

Jackie: And so can the wife?

Alan: Oh yes.

Jackie: Well that's amazing.

Alan: As long as she doesn't give birth to a child outside of the marriage. They used to have their own personal royal abortionists hired full-time just going around the aristocratic families.

Jackie: Do you believe that it's true that Diana was pregnant by the-- Alan: I don't know. We'll never know.

Jackie: You don't know, because there has been reserved speculation of course that the fact that she was engaged to this Arab, I guess, that they just couldn't abide by that.

Alan: I can see that for sure but also she was becoming too popular. She'd gone on BBC and asked to go on BBC and started to explain some of the problems she had in the marriage and she'd done part one of that and she was going to do part two and I think she was going to go a lot further and tell the British people too much. That's why I think she was killed, because she was too popular and people were listening. If she had done the second part of that BBC documentary, who knows what she might have said?

Jackie: Why do you think they keep the royal family in England? I mean it is just a figurehead.

Alan: They're figureheads and it's also a symbol of the system and the system is based on eugenics. It's paradise for the elite there. It is eugenics. That's the only reason that they are royalty is because of their bloodline, which they believe are superior to the ordinary people, and the British Royal family remember is related to all the other royal families across Europe. They intermarry with each other and have done for centuries and centuries but they are a symbol of the system.

Jackie: Now they called hemophilia the "royal disease," didn't they?

Alan: Yes. That was one of the royal diseases.

Jackie: And it's carried by the mother, right?

Alan: Yes, passed on. They also had madness too. King George went nuts at one point, sort of manic depression. That was common in them too. They are a symbol of superior genes supposedly.

Jackie: In the protocols they talk about getting rid of the monarchies. Why was the plan for that?

Alan: It wasn't for all the monarchies. That was the thing too. Eventually what I think they wanted was to phase out their status in the public eye but those same families would still be up there holding the wealth. They do hold an incredible amount of wealth and they have incredible investments in some of the largest multinational corporations on the planet. It wouldn't matter if they eventually stepped down from the limelight. It would make no difference in this day and age because technically they're not ruling anything anymore, technically. Sometimes I wonder if they are though, because I know that the Bilderbergers meeting the Queen goes there with a few other ones from the royal family. They are in on a lot of what's going on, but I think one day they might just step down but still retaining this incredible wealth that they have and they'll still continue to inbreed amongst themselves anyway. There's a whole aristocracy that just simply inbreeds. In fact this Parker Bowles that Charles is going to marry, her ancestor was one of the mistresses of Henry VIII.

Jackie: My, my, who would that be? Do you know?

Alan: I can't remember which one, but that shows you how close all these people are right down to the present. She was the mistress of Charles and her ancestor was a mistress for Henry VIII. These people are so close. They're almost a separate race.

Jackie: Except for their little bastards running around, huh?

Alan: Yes, but they generally know who they are. See, they have legalized bastards who also have rights to titles and so on if they get authorized by the father and that's where the term in Ireland comes from, FITZ, like Fitzsimmons or Fitzgerald. FITZ means that you were born outside of the royal wedlock but you have a claim to title. They were very promiscuous. That's for the ones that were straight, that is. It's a complex history of aristocracy and of course the Catholic Church for 1,500 years maintained this particular system. They were right behind it.

Jackie: Yes they were, weren't they?

Alan: Yes, they call that "the natural order" and of course that's why religion itself, which comes from the lunar, stellar and the solar mystic religions, that's where it comes into play because technically the kings and queens were the gods on earth which were also represented in the sky in the zodiac. Of course the Vatican was symbolic of the deity that ruled the universe and that's what they called "the natural order" – as above, so below. This was a traditional system that had been in play even before they changed their hats in the Roman Church and stopped worshipping Jupiter and changed it to Jesus, but it's the same religion, same technique, the same system and the sciences of mind control were perfected long, long before Christianity ever got on the go.

Jackie: Any of the religions, regardless what the religion was, the people totally believed in it and in the gods, whether the god was in a tree or there where multiple gods. When I asked you that question when you were talking about how they could take a child and actually have them see that snow is black and believe it, and I thought about how deep and strong the religious beliefs run in people, that it is like it's in the cells and no amount of reasoning or anything. If there's a question that they can't answer, they just say I don't understand that yet. And discrepancies, they see the discrepancies, they say, yes, that is a contradiction but it can't be because God doesn't contradict himself. So they look at a contradiction and say that it isn't one.

Alan: You must always bridge the gap or jump over it. This technique of making people believe whatever is not too difficult if you have all media, all written works, all novels, all movies, all saying the same thing. That's how sanity is compared. You compare your sanity by your opinions and bouncing them off those around you and if you all agree on the same topics, same things, even though none of it's true, if you all believe the same thing then you say well I must be sane because they all say the same thing. Therefore if you're taught as a group that snow is black and you all say that, you say well of course I'm sane and snow is black and they all agree and that's the simplicity of mind control. It's mainly repetition on controlled groups and as long as all seemingly unrelated media or material comes your way and confirms that and you don't catch on that they're all part of that, then you'll think you're normal and so will everyone else around you.

Jackie: You know it's like the god Jehovah in the Old Testament. There are people who say, okay, well you're wrong because his name wasn't Jehovah, his name was Yahweh; and so that makes all the difference in the world, Alan?

Alan: I know, but you see that's magical thinking. Magical thinking was always based in ancient times that if you get the god's name or the deity's name or the genie's name then you had control and authority over the deity.

Jackie: Is that why it says in the Old Testament it says "if my people repent and call me by my name?"

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Because that's a big one for people who are steeped into the Jehovah / "Yahweh" doctrine.

Alan: That's the exoteric meaning of Jehovah. There's an esoteric meaning for Jehovah too.

Jackie: What is the esoteric meaning?

Alan: Actually it's four words: Yod-He-Vav-He. It's earth, air, fire and water.

Jackie: Yahaveh is what?

Alan: Earth, air, fire and water, which is behind all of the mystery groups right down to the present.

Jackie: Yahaveh means earth, air, fire and water. Do the Jews know this?

Alan: The rabbis do.

Jackie: What do the Jewish people think it is? It's Hebrew.

Alan: Well, they think what they're told to think and there're content with very little really, but most of them aren't terribly religious. They're quite content what they're given.

Jackie: So that is very materialistic when you think about it.

Alan: It is.

Jackie: The god of this world, of this world, the third dimensional material world.

Alan: It's a ball of mud. However, religion as I say has been perfected long, long before even the Greeks ruled the world; it was all known by the ancient Egyptians and they'd already run that ancient world for 5,000 years before the Greeks came along and I've no doubt actually the pyramids are a lot older than they claim. They base it all on Cheops or Chufu as the Egyptians called them and the Greeks called them Cheops. One dedication inside the pyramid and so they say that must have been built during Chufu's reign, but the Egyptian kings commonly rededicated their name to all monuments, so I've no doubt it's far, far older. Of course, the three pyramids are the three wise men. They are the belt of Orion.

Jackie: Alan, we're out of our hour. Is there more that you could do on this if we did this tomorrow?

Alan: Sure.

Jackie: I mean can we start right here?

Alan: Yes, as long as you remember where we are.

Jackie: I've got notes. Thank you. We're out of our hour. Folks, we'll be back with you tomorrow night. Alan will be back with us. Thank you very much for joining us tonight.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
February 23, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Wednesday. It is the last day of our week. For those of you who may be listeners from time to time we've been broadcasting three nights a week now since December and today is Wednesday the 23rd of February in the year 2005. Alan Watt is with us tonight and I'm glad you've joined us folks.

I want to begin here with our spiritual message. Alan came on with us last night at about 10 after, 12 after the hour and we got into a conversation just at the end of that hour that was very intriguing so I asked him to please come back this evening so that we could pick it up where we left off and we're going to do that.

Our spiritual message this evening is from John 12 and this begins with verse 44:

"Jesus cried and said, he that believes in me believe not in me but in Him that sent me and he that sees me sees Him that sent me. I come as light into the world that whosoever believe in me should not abide in darkness."

He also said, "If any man hear my words and believe not, I judge him not for I came not to judge the world but to save the world." He also said in John 18 that he came into this world to bear witness unto the truth.

Alan, thanks for being with us here tonight.

Alan: Yes, it's a pleasure.

Jackie: Oh you're so nice and clear there. What occurred to me as I was reading this is that many people take this literally and say well that proves that Jesus was God because he said that, "When a man sees me that he sees Him who sent me," and would you comment on that please.

Alan: He's talking about a different deity. He's talking about the Creator, as opposed to the man-made lawgiver.

Jackie: Yes and the fact that he said when you see me you see the Father or you see him who sent me, to me the interpretation well that proves that he was saying I am God I believe what he was saying here is that I am representative of that which is true and that which is light et cetera. He who sent me has given me these words.

Alan: He also said that the Father was in him and that those who understood him, who tuned into the same wavelength, then he was also in them; and so it was a raising of consciousness as well to truth as they say in an era where their whole lives up until then had been run by tyrannical laws and law givers, and he was giving the truth out you see.

Jackie: Right. The Pharisaical doctrine, is that what you mean?

Alan: There were so many laws that you couldn't help but break a few before you got out of your house in the morning.

Jackie: And then you got to be a sinner.

Alan: Yes and of course as long as you paid money for something to be sacrificed, then it was okay. It was a good cash going business.

Jackie: We are going to get back to what you were talking about last night, but you had made a statement, dog gone it. Sometimes my thoughts are so fleeting, Alan. Okay, I'm going to have to let that go because it was there and then it's gone. Last night, we were talking about the name of "God" of the Old Testament and in the Old Testament of course he said to his chosen people that when I made my covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob they knew me only as Lord God Almighty but I'm going to take you to be my people. I will be to you a god in my name or you will know me as Jehovah. What I mentioned last night is I get letters from people and emails and say his name was Yahweh and so in other words evidently the difference in the name takes away from everything that this god "Jehovah" of the Old Testament did and said.

What you mentioned is the fact that the belief was that if you had the name of the god – how did you express that, Alan?

Alan: It was traditional in the entire Middle East that if you had the name of a god, a demon or genii, the genie in the bottle, then you had power over that entity to command that entity and that was the little game supposedly Moses was playing with the deity when he appeared as a burning bush. It's all allegory you see but he wanted to know the deity's name so he could have control over the deity and so the deity answered, "I am that I am." That's all he would say at that particular point. The Jehovah of Yahweh thing came in much later. Of course it's nothing to do with an actual single entity as such, except in a very obscure form. See, the deity that they worshipped initially was the volcano god.

Jackie: Did he have a name?

Alan: The Greeks called it Vulcanos--

Jackie: Would that be Vulcan?

Alan: Mr. Spock, yes, pure logic, and of course if you came down a mountain you wouldn't be surprised to see bushes burning if it was a volcano and that's why they said they were led by a pillar of smoke by day and fire by night. It was a volcano you see and it was a much earlier story that the priests had adopted into this.

Jackie: But that doesn't really make sense that they were led by a volcano because the volcano is there static and supposedly--

Alan: No. What it means is they were led by a pillar of smoke. In other words, all they saw was the pillar of smoke. That was their landmark.

Jackie: Oh, a landmark. Oh, the fire by night and the smoke by day.

Alan: That's what it means.

Jackie: And that's like the three wise guys following the stars.

Alan: That's the same thing, yes. It's mystical language which paints a picture and if it's instilled early enough in a child's mind they will always remember that exoteric picture which seems real to them and they'll never figure out the esoteric story behind it. It's a clever technique which was deliberate. Language and the way it's used is very deliberate in these instances. Anyway, he started off as the Volcano God and he was also known in the Old Testament as the God of Thunder. Volcanoes also boom and bang and of course that's also associated with the thunder so he was the Sky God.

Jackie: Wasn't Thor the God of Thunder?

Alan: That's right. All these ancient religions were connected at one time and what they said was that eventually that God was in command of the earth, everything on the earth, all the species that walked the earth, the air itself and the rain itself and so that's where they came with earth, fire, wind and water. What that also means is opposites, because behind the religion is an esoteric religion behind the story form that you're told. This comes down through all Freemasonry and all religions, even Hinduism has it incorporated into it, that the world is run by opposing forces and so the simplest form is your seasons. You have your summer and your winter and your fall and your spring, and they also say that for every action there's an equal and opposite reaction. Then if you delve back into the religion of the Babylonians where all this stems from, and Egypt and the Greeks in fact, they believed that there had to be a balance, always, between the forces of this or that – not necessarily good or evil because those are subjective terms according to the appropriation of it. Therefore, if it was out of balance one way, things could never be placid in the world and therefore they always had to keep this balance you might say between authority and freedom. The very same thing we're hearing from the Bush Administration today.

Jackie: Like what?

Alan: How much freedom are you willing to give up for security? It's a balance you see and if you read the books that many of the elite have written and the planners have written themselves, like those of Bertrand Russell, they go through this whole process of saying—and they knew their histories since they were historians and philosophers—they said the problem the elites have always had was deciding how much freedom to give the general common people and maintain authority over them at the same time. Of course, as they came up towards the 20th century, they got more in detail with the fact you'd have to lose freedom for the masses and the masses would definitely have more control over them as they came into this technological society. Then, for the 21st century, it was to be a century of increasing encroachment of bureaucracies to cover every facet of life and living for the general common people.

Jackie: Yes, that's right out of the Talmud, isn't it?

Alan: It's Talmudic too because the Talmud is a just a book of the same stuff.

Jackie: That's what the thought that I lost there for a minute is that I recall you saying that the Talmudic laws, actually, if you really read it all or get into it, when they say that they intend to have total dominion over this physical world including the inhabitants here, that even the most personal functions let's say of the body et cetera, they have laws governing it. You did say that, yes?

Alan: Well, I don't know if I said it but I know it's true. They do have all these laws of hygiene, laws of virginity, laws of pre-marriage examinations for virginity and so on and so on. Everything is law, laws. It's legalized and of course you probably read in the Masonic books they talk about "as above so below." Thousands of years ago when they gave birth to the Great Plan or the Great Work they used the stars and drew their plan you might say into the stars and of course each constellation has a period of rulership, so these were time periods as each constellation took its lead to rule. They worked out what would be done during those 2,000-odd year periods and for the time of Jesus, the fish, Pisces, and that was the earliest symbol of Christianity was the fish. Wherever they went in Europe these monks always drew in stone the fish and that was their symbol that they'd been there, so they were the Age of Pisces and that's why Jesus says, "I'll make you a fisher of men," you see. It's all allegory of a plan you might say.

Jackie: What did he mean when he said that or do you think that was something they said he said?

Alan: No. It was a preexisting religion which everyone knew it was partly Gnostic, which preexisted that period and co-existed with it. The Greeks talked about it. Plato talked about the fishermen of men. These would be people who were specially trained in the mysteries who would be sent out to gain discipleship and who would then spread this technique, which was actually to end up ruling the world in a perfect system. They believed that these disciples would pick leaders as children, train them to be philosopher kings. In fact, Alexander the Great was trained by Aristotle who was a pupil of Plato; Plato was a pupil of Socrates who had to drink the Hemlock as a punishment for trying to corrupt the youth, so they were using the youth, training them to go out into the world and create revolution. Alexander the Great was trained by Aristotle for the role that he was to take, so these were called "the fisher kings," that's what the term means.

Jackie: Is that anything to do with the miter that the Pope wears?

Alan: It does. Oannes was the fish-god as they say.

Jackie: Who was that?

Alan: Oannes was the name of that deity. Anyway, the fisher king was a principle where they would literally bring up a youth for a leadership role, indoctrinate him in philosophy and logic and his role would be to lead the world into the perfect "Republic" as Plato called it, which was a world which would be run by a guardian class. The guardian class were to be the elite aristocracies of the world and below them they would have the helping class, which would be the army, the military eventually incorporating females into those militaries. They hoped to then breed the female soldiers with the male soldiers and they would become the offspring that would obviously take the same roles. Below them, there were the working classes who would be specially bred for the tasks that they had to perform through selective breeding. If you wanted an apple picker, as Plato said, you would pick a tall thin guy and breed him with a tall thin female. If you want a miner, you breed a small squat guy with a small squat woman; and this was talked about 2,400 years ago. Anyway, they sent out these fisher kings to create revolution and also each revolution was to create a larger and larger empire and ultimately they would end up with a world empire. That was the whole agenda and of course Plato himself had been taught in Egypt, as all the aristocracy of Greece was, they were taught the mystery religions in Egypt, but everything that came out of Egypt always led to revolution in those countries that those students went back to. That's the key to it and of course revolution is a circle, you see. To revolve is to draw a circle. That's why they use the word revolution. That's why the term "revelation" is just vowel away from "revolution," just the alteration of a vowel.

This was planned a long, long time ago. Jehovah, which basically is the balancing of opposites, and if you've got a bit of paper there I can show you how to draw it.

Jackie: I'm taking notes right now.

Alan: Okay. You draw the letter X and on the bottom right-hand side put down YOD or YH.

Jackie: How do I spell that?

Alan: You can spell it anyway you want, that's why they left the vowels out of those. There were no vowels in fact in the early Hebrew.

Jackie: That would be the "Y" for Yahweh, Yahvey?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: And the bottom right-hand corner YOD.

Alan: Put down YOD and then next to that you put down fire, and then you follow that line up to the top left and you put HAY and next to that you put AIR. Then you go to the next line, top right, and you put HAY, which is water.

Jackie: Well how can HAY be water and air?

Alan: VAY is AIR so put a "V" for air. Then for the water you put HH. You can say HEY if you want and then follow that down to the bottom left and you've got VAH, which is EARTH.

Jackie: Well Yahweh I thought was YHVH so we have right now YVVH.

Alan: You've got Y, then you've got H, then you've got the V--

Jackie: For air?

Alan: Yes and a W, which is a V again, isn't it? Because they pronounce it V. What it's showing you is the opposites. Fire is opposite air and water is opposite earth. Water is a feminine symbol. Earth again is a feminine symbol. It's all to do basically with the balance of nature you might say and the control of nature. Even the name wasn't allowed to be pronounced except once a year by the high priests on pain of death and all the rest of the time they could call the deity

Adonai, but they were not allowed to use that word--

Jackie: Did they know that this was all allegory?

Alan: No, the general public wouldn't know.

Jackie: When you said that they were only allowed to say the name once a year, that would have been the general public?

Alan: Yes. The high priests, even they didn't say it in public except on that one day of the year on some big service, but the general public wouldn't know what the inner meanings were – just like you accept the name of Jesus as Jesus and don't say: what does it mean?

Jackie: But the insiders are the priests?

Alan: Oh yes.

Jackie: They knew that it was allegory. In other words did they know that Jehovah or YHVH was an allegory and it was not a "God," it was not an entity?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Or a spiritual being but it was just an allegory. So in other words it kind of comes back to the fact that the religion had everything to do with this physical world and nothing to do with the spiritual or the dimensions let's say beyond the third dimension?

Alan: No. In fact in the early Old Testament you'll see that there's nothing spiritual in it.

Jackie: No, there isn't. You're right.

Alan: There's no afterlife. You're dead, you're dead. You go and lay with your father and that's the end of it. The whole goal was to obtain wealth and happiness in this life.

Jackie: That's right and I do recall because I really paid attention to it when Jehovah was handing down the mandate that if you do my statutes you will be blessed and then he gave all the blessings. Well, all the blessings were earthly. It was wealth and everything earthly and then of course if you didn't follow the statutes, well then the curses were just unbelievable. It went on for a page and a half including cannibalism. The parents would eat their own children. Those were the curses but I recall nothing that was ever said – for example, when Jesus said store up not your treasures here on earth because where your treasure is your heart is.

Alan: That's right. Really, any idea of any spiritual nature was a much later edition to it basically for Hebrewism and even then, at the time of Jesus, there were many debates about even that. In fact the main difference with the Sadducees, apart from the fact that they were the nobility, they were the aristocracy that came out of Babylon with the Pharisees, the Sadducees did not believe in an afterlife. That was how they differed from the Pharisees.

Jackie: Why in the Old Testament, because I don't have it memorized, but I just don't recall Jesus mentioning the Sadducees but it was the Pharisees that were getting his wrath.

Alan: Yes, because they were the religious rulers you might say and they were becoming more aggressive for power, more determined to get power for themselves, but because they also had an inner religion for themselves, they were a brotherhood you see.

Jackie: The Pharisees and the Sadducees too?

Alan: Yes. They still had their differences though, a power struggle. You find that the Pharisees were definitely looking to take over the reigns of complete power and they also believed that no one could really know the Creator deity. That's what they believed, that no one could know. They could say through debating and logic what the Creator was not, but they could not say what the Creator was.

Jackie: So they actually believed in a Creator?

Alan: They believed there was a Creator but it was remote.

Jackie: Not within us?

Alan: Not within us.

Jackie: Not in this physical world at all?

Alan: Basically. However, they did believe that they had a duty – because Judaism is an active religion, it's not passive, and any rabbi will tell you, it's in a lot of their books, it works towards a goal. The purpose of Judaism is to work a goal into the world and to complete a mission you might say and of course the mission ultimately is global government under God's rule and that's when the Creator will come back they claim.

Jackie: So they do speak of a creator but the "Creator" is not present?

Alan: That's basically it. What they were left with was a lot of rules and laws and regulations, but within their own religion is a mystery religion to do with the Great Work of working towards this particular goal so they bring everything they claim into balance and magically I guess their Creator just pops back and says well done.

Jackie: When they say the Creator is coming back are they talking about Lucifer?

Alan: Well, that's it. Albert Pike himself who was called "The Pope of Freemasonry," which is one of the esoteric sects using all the rites supposedly of Judaism, but they actually go through Judaism all the way to Babylon and Egypt, he said himself that, "make no mistake our God is Lucifer. He is the light bringer," and of course they equate intellect and intelligence with light.

Jackie: Right and Jesus was talking about light as spiritual, yes?

Alan: It's almost the same thing because it's truth and so that's how easy it is for two people to say the same thing but both mean different things. The truth that Jesus was saying was basically the individual could literally through austere practices you might say and truthfulness with themselves connect themselves to the Creator.

Jackie: Become aware of the connection, consciously aware of our oneness with our Creator?

Alan: Yes and also that you didn't need intermediary; any priests between you and the Creator, which of course would have destroyed the whole control system.

Jackie: What do you think how it would have turned out because it's very difficult for me to be able imagine this, but if the Old Testament had not been connected to the "New Testament," the gospels et cetera, the confusion wouldn't be quite as great.

Alan: It wouldn't have been quite as great. However, we must remember that Christianity from Constantine onwards was basically warped and twisted into the same religion for control purposes. Constantine did not make Christianity the main religion of his day. That's a fable. What he did was stopped all the persecution against Christians. Having an empire, he had many religions underneath him and he himself was a member of them all because he took out insurance policies on every sect that there was. After 325 AD, a few years later, he actually erected a temple to himself as a Son of Mithra, Mithraism, and also allowed himself to be worshipped as a god. He was a shrewd guy. He was a politician and the whole idea was to bring this new up-and-coming religion that grabbed the minds of many common people.

Jackie: Exactly and combining them. Like in Mystery Babylon religion it explains how the gods of old, the gods and goddesses under Christianity under the Catholic Church became the saints.

Alan: That's right. It was the same ones the pagans could understand because they had been worshipping the same deities forever and so Hermes became St. Christopher and so on.

Jackie: And so when people are praying to the saints they're praying to the gods of old?

Alan: It's the same thing. Psychologically it can give you a certain boost if you believe in it and it makes you feel a bit indestructible if you're getting a hand from somewhere, but this was traditional. These people, remember, the Romans inherited their empire from much older empires, the Greeks and the Egyptians, so they had thousands of years of watching new religions begin, taking them over and using them for their own purposes. They never let anything become independent of its own which would become a problem to the state.

Jackie: I recall in the book "Mystery Babylon Religion", this by the way, Alan, even though I knew that there were many discrepancies and et cetera in the Bible, I've come a long ways to understand of course, many of us have, but I was in shock as I was ready "Mystery Babylon Religion", it was written by Ralph Woodrow I believe his name was and most of the information was taken from what was his name that wrote "The Two Babylons"?

Alan: Hislop.

Jackie: Thank you, but I remember Isis the Queen of Heaven and the way they pictured Isis is exactly the way Mary is pictured as the Queen of Heaven.

Alan: Well, she always will be. Always was. That's the secret of the sphinx. That is the secret of the sphinx.

Jackie: What is?

Alan: The sphinx has the face of a woman and the body of a lion because the solar year or the Great Year in astronomy leads off with Virgo the Virgin and ends with Leo the Lion. That's the whole plan in a circle. That's what the sphinx stands for and the Egyptian year began with Virgo, ends with Leo the Lion, the progression of the equinoxes.

Jackie: What does that got to do with Mary and Isis?

Alan: Because it's the same thing. Mary is mother. Mary is also the sea in Latin, water, The Great Mother. In fact once you put it into German it's more like matter, Mutter, which means matter really, so she produces matter, the world of matter, mother. That's why you have Mother Earth. That's from Mary. It's the same thing.

Jackie: You know the thing is when you think about it, it's so close that it almost merges. I thought at one time I was trying to explain to Chuck the way I was seeing it and I said it was like the razor's edge, the truth and the lie is so close. Then somebody said that it was actually in a sense merging, melding into where there wasn't really an edge at all and when we think about it in real life that in this physical world there is a consciousness in all things. The book that really fascinated me was the "Secret Life of Plants" and I've had my own experiences with plants and realized that they certainly respond. They do respond not just to watering but to care, to love and it isn't like – people who accept and recognize the consciousness they call them tree huggers, I guess, or God is in the tree, but that creative substance within all that is here in the physical world, that the earth itself would have a form of consciousness of type. I'm talking about awareness – well, like a plant. The experiments that they have done with plants where if a plant has been in room where another plant has been torn up by somebody, when that person walks into the room the plant that was there actually registers on their diodes, their instruments register some type of emotion and so there is a consciousness there, but a very low form of consciousness maybe, but the point I'm making is that it doesn't mean that you worship it. You just accept and understand that that creative substance, that energy or spark or whatever we would call it is within all things.

Alan: That was the Gnostic concept that preexisted Jesus and was also parallel with the time of Jesus. In fact many of the Gnostics complained to Constantine that he was stealing their religion that had always been there and they claimed that the real Jesus of course in Gnosticism could not be killed because he was pure spirit and that he was not born of a woman because he was pure spirit in fact. There was a tremendous debate in 325 AD to decide as to whether Jesus was pure spirit or was he spirit inside matter that had been born here. I mean they literally debated all this and of course all the Gnostic guys who came up were basically assassinated at the time of the meeting.

Jackie: Would Arius been one of them in a sense?

Alan: He was one of many.

Jackie: According to Will Durant in his fourth volume of Jesus and Caesar, or whatever the title of that is is close. He said that by the 6th century BC if the church was not of the Arius teachings the church was literally empty, so whether that was true or not, that was the way it was presented. The fact that allegedly after the Council of Nicaea, that first council, that many of them who had voted said okay we'll agree that this will be the doctrine of the church. This will be the belief and anybody that doesn't believe it is anathemized and that many of them rescinded their agreeance to that later. Have you read anything that confirms that?

Alan: There's no doubt that this was to be not just a state religion. It was to be the empire's religion because they themselves knew that they had so many countries under the Roman Empire with so many religions and since they were a secret brotherhood working towards a bigger empire of the future, they knew that they couldn't allow so many religions to exist so they decided to basically create the one. They did a lot of alteration because they had to stamp out the possibility of the Gnostic religion taking over.

Jackie: The awareness that we are spiritual beings?

Alan: Yes, that's absolutely right because right from the word go the bishops of Rome were taking upon themselves God's representative on earth. That's it basically.

Jackie: Like the Pope does?

Alan: Yes and that came later when they took absolute power and became God's authority on earth. You see the Catholic Church itself was a continuation of rulership and from an empire that existed for a long time, which had taken over from a previous empire which had lasted much longer, so they knew what they were doing. They knew that religion had to be used always as a tool to control the minds of the public. If the public were free from all this mind control they wouldn't be working happily as slaves you might say to keep a small elite in power. They wouldn't be happy with that. In fact if they followed the teachings of Jesus they'd have no money in circulation and if you can't have money in circulation you can't tax it back from the public. That's why the Catholic Church, although they made a big to-do about they wouldn't allow usury, they made an exception for these Jewish bankers. Well, why would they do that unless they were in cahoots from the very beginning? What you'll find it was simply a continuation of what had already gone on before.

Jackie: I had a call from a listener after the broadcast a couple of nights ago and he was talking about a broadcast that is on the air once a week and I do not recall the name of the person, but what he was saying is that everybody who is "blaming the Jews for everything have got it all wrong because it's the Jesuits." My understanding is that all of it, the Catholic Church, the Jesuits, Illuminati, Freemasonry, it's all part of the same controlling factor.

Alan: They're all faces of the same thing. You see that's what they always couched in Babylon and Egypt. They said that Isis, because these brotherhoods refer to the mother more than the father amongst themselves, but they said Isis had a thousand faces and that's what they mean by that. Every church you can look at, whether it's Moslem, Catholic, Protestant, whatever, or even the temples of the Shinto, you will see the same hidden architecture, not so hidden actually, in them all and that's the big secret of course. They always put because they are the builders of society as well as the builders of the building and they put the structure of society in the architecture itself and they also give you all the symbology of the inner religion in all of the temples that they give the public. Things are always hidden out there in plain sight. In fact there was a man recently who came out in Manitoba who is at the University of Manitoba who's done a four year study on the government main parliament building there for the province. His specialty is studying old architecture and so on and after studying the parliament building for the province, which is the government building, he came to the conclusion and he's got it all worked out perfectly they used the Egyptian Cubit, the Sacred Cubit, to build this thing right down to the last fraction of an inch. They have all the symbols of the outer portico temple and the inner temple in there. I mean the whole structure is a Masonic temple and the big joke of course that they've always known is that all parliament buildings are Masonic temples. All churches are Masonic temples.

As Pike said himself, "everyone who has been trained in the system is simply a Mason who hasn't gone through the degrees." We've all been trained through the school system. We've all gone to their churches regardless of what country we're in. We're all pre-Masonic you might say because we've gone through rituals without even knowing it. When you walk through that oval door into the church you've walked through the female. That's what it means. The spire is the phallus. The box is the female and the opening is the female. It's the mystery religion, we live it, we go through it every day and most people don't even know it.

Jackie: Of course we wouldn't know it.

Alan: That's the big secret. Isis has a thousand faces.

Jackie: I would like to go back – I made a note here when you said revolution completes a circle and what it means is revolve. Would you expand on that because I'm not getting it?

Alan: That's why they used the term revelation.

Jackie: No, but revolution you said. Revolution is to revolve in a circle. What do you mean? That it always comes back to the same thing?

Alan: It means a new beginning. You go back to the beginning and then you start the next phase.

Jackie: And revelation is to reveal?

Alan: To reveal and that's why I'm sure they even created the term revelation.

Jackie: And revelation reveals their plans.

Alan: In mystical language.

Jackie: In mystical language and then Christians are taught to believe it is the prophecy of the time to come, it is God's plan.

Alan: That's right and it's been drummed into people and people forget that Revelations wasn't taught in Christianity for hundreds of years.

Jackie: No, I didn't know that.

Alan: It wasn't until they decided that it would become handy if they put it in there.

Jackie: You're saying the Book of Revelations was added later?

Alan: Yes. When they got together at Nicaea they also debated what books or writings that would be put in and what ones would be left out.

Jackie: Yes and every time they had a new council they made changes, but wasn't it under the Second Council of Constantinople under Justinian where they had taken so many of the writings out and all of the references to reincarnation?

Alan: Yes, that was done then because that's still the traditional belief of mainstream Judaism, reincarnation, and of course non-Jews are totally ignorant of that fact. That's always been the inner belief of the average you know--

Jackie: Well, the ancient eastern religions too.

Alan: All the way from Egypt and so in the Old Testament--

Jackie: Didn't you say that has now been admitted and it was fairly recently that the Vatican had apologized?

Alan: They did admit it in one of their own publications.

Jackie: And you said there's a Vatican website?

Alan: Yes and I know they also had their own radio.

Jackie: Yes, but I'd like to see if there is a publication. Where did you hear that?

Alan: It was on the Catholic radio. It's WEWN I think they call it. They're always revising things you see and of course the Catholic Church now is in the process really and have been for a while of altering so much within Catholicism to bring it up for the New Age. We forget that the term the New Age was used first by Freemasons in the 1800's and right up until about 1950 or 1960 that was the name of the Freemasonic magazine, "The New Age." That's where it comes from.

Jackie: My wondering is that is there an evolutionary process so to speak and I don't mean that like Darwin or something, but where there is like each revolution a revolution of the astrological wheel when you go from the Age of Pisces to the Age of Aquarius then that would be termed a New Age. I mean what is it, every 2,400 years or so?

Alan: 25-1/2.

Jackie: So the word new age really doesn't mean anything evil but yet it appears to me – there's a book that I've got here and I don't remember which one it was but it was about the Knights Templar and towards the end of the book they were talking about the New Age and it was so clear to me that what they have done is taken a natural occurrence if you would and just gained control of it and warp and twist anything, truth that could come out of it.

Alan: The New Age to them is utopia. You have to see it from their point of view as controllers and from the ones who follow it. The followers never know what's going on. They think they do. In fact they often are brainwashed into wanting it to come on, but for the controllers it's their age of peace and tranquility because they plan to alter man or humankind so much that no one will be able to cause trouble of any kind by having independent thought; and that's what they mean. They'll have a perfect peace when everyone is chipped and cloned and all the rest of it.

Jackie: Total absence of resistance to their plan.

Alan: Absolutely. When individual consciousness in the masses has been eliminated then they will have succeeded – even that meeting they had at Loyola University two years ago with the geneticists funded by the U.S. government and they talked about that, that once this chip is implanted, which they have, into the human brain it will be the end of individual consciousness. Each person will be unable to perceive themselves as a distinct individual.

Jackie: In that that chip actually has part of the human DNA in it?

Alan: Basically, it's a combination of silicon and human protoplasm.

Jackie: So it merges with the brain cells itself?

Alan: It literally will bind itself to the nervous tissue right into the path of the brain.

Jackie: And you said that they had said they will hear the whispering of the thoughts of so many other people.

Alan: Who are all linked to central computers; and I thought this is the Borg of Star Trek. They showed us the Borg, but they plan on doing this and they say their only problem now is convince the public to accept it. They said all media, entertainment, cartoons et cetera will promote this as a positive thing and sure enough now there's movies out and science fiction like the "Mosaic," a terrible movie, but two dumb guys who probably left school at 15 going nowhere get chipped and can speak 20 languages, know kung fu, karate, et cetera and become super-spies. They're already doing it. The U.S. Department of Commerce sponsored and paid for that world meeting.

Jackie: That's not surprising, is it, Alan?

Alan: No, because we are the commerce.

Jackie: We're out of our hour and the sad thing is that if you try to explain to a parent why cartoons are dangerous it's almost impossible to do. It just doesn't sink in because it keeps the children occupied. Alan, thank you so much for being here tonight.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
January 17, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. Today is Monday and it is the 17th of January in the year 2005 and our guest this evening, ladies and gentlemen, is Alan Watt. He was with us last week Monday and Tuesday and we were in the middle as always of a very interesting – last Wednesday we opened the phone lines for questions and actually he didn't get a chance to really address one of them and then I had a call from a listener today with a request, so maybe tonight that's what we'll be doing.

Our spiritual message, as we do this so often when I'm not prepared otherwise, it's hanging on the wall in front of me from Psalm 139 versus 23-24. "Search me Father and know my heart. Test me and know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offensive way in me and lead me in the way everlasting."

Alan, thanks for being here tonight.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: You've been waiting patiently while I got through those thoughts that were flashing through my mind. Do you have anything to comment or add to what I was saying?

Alan: No, but when you were reading that Psalm I had a picture of someone getting searched at the airport. Search me father and then the mind control part to see if you've got any nasty thoughts in there.

Jackie: So search me father and you pictured people getting searched at the airport? All right. Do you remember last Wednesday, Janet called in. She was our last caller, I believe, and she had a three-part question and the third part of her question was what is our destination and our mission here in this physical realm for what we should be doing? I think she mentioned something about what would we be sharing with or relating to our loved ones and friends, but I might be interpreting that. Maybe that isn't exactly how she said it.

Alan: The only thing you can relate to them is knowledge. It's what they do with their own mission is up to themselves with that knowledge. As far as the mission goes, it's to ultimately break through all of the barriers and all of the masses of indoctrination we've been brought up with to become a complete individual and take that spirit that you have as far as it can possibly go. The whole structure here in the world is meant to create the mass man, the mass mind and to stifle all individuality, ultimately to snuff out the individual spirit, so it's a battle here between two different ways, you might say, of the way of the mass which is planned for them and the way of the individual. In the New Testament of course the way it was phrased there was that my kingdom is not of this world. Those of the world, they belong to the world and they think earthly things and what he's referring to there is the mass man and that same statement was written – in fact all of the statements in the New Testament have been said long, long before Jesus Christ and Egypt as well.

Jackie: Would you just repeat that?

Alan: The statements in the New Testament – the main prime statements are eternal truths, which mean that they always were true, they are true and they always will be true.

Jackie: Some of the statements?

Alan: That's right. The ones that stand out are forever; they're eternal in other words. There's no beginning and no end to them.

Jackie: Because truth is?

Alan: Truth is, yes. Yet if you go into New Age psychology, which is the current trend with the new morality, the new maturity and all these phrases we're hearing coming out of the media, where they're going with it all is the opposite of that. They're trying to say the truth is variable at different times.

Jackie: The New Age movement says that?

Alan: No, the New Age psychology. All psychology today is a mixture of the New Age, which is the occult religion basically.

Jackie: Yes, and there's a lot of truth in there hidden in all the lies, isn't there Alan?

Alan: Sure there is, but that's the problem is they're so good at telling you the parts of the truth which were hidden and then putting their spin on it and bringing you into the way they want you to think.

Jackie: That's where the discernment comes in.

Alan: That's the hard part because it's very easy to trap people with truth when they've never been given it before and manipulate them with that truth and so those who've always kept the truth to themselves down through the ages dish it out at certain times and then they put the spin on it. Then they give you the mission, which is their mission, which is a world government, a world society, a political correct society where you could go to Beijing, to Britain, to Canada and you'll get the same opinions expressed on every topic. That's what they want.

Jackie: Yes and the same British accent or whatever it's going to be.

Alan: It will be English because that was decided in the 1500's that the international language of the future would be English. As far as the personal mission goes, the person has to – all they can do is express truth wherever they see it and when they do see whatever the topic happens to be, that the king has no clothes, they have to say so.

Jackie: You know I've had our listeners when I have spoken in the past about Jehovah and there have been listeners who have contacted me and said you know I wondered about a lot of these things and now it's beginning to make sense and what I see is that people really know. There is that knowing, Alan, and they squash it because it's like oh we're not supposed to question because this is the word of God. One of the important things I know for me is really paying attention to I guess you just sometimes call it intuition that something is there and if you don't listen to it, it's like it isn't there anymore. I mean now that we're here, I do wonder a lot why the heck we ever got here in the first place, but that makes sense now that we're here. Our mission is to find our way home.

Alan: It really is an individual way because you're either a leader or a follower and again it's so easy to set up a way for the followers to go and obviously since a person could truly know any kind of truth they must experience it for themselves. They never truly do experience it by following someone else's experience. You must find it yourself. You can go along certain ways towards it, but it's up to the person to truly find it for themselves.

Jackie: I was 15 years old when I started reading the Old Testament and at first it was frightening to me, very frightening in that God in there scared the hell out of me, to be honest with you, but I suddenly realized that it wasn't true. I knew it wasn't true, Alan. I knew that I didn't know what was the truth, but I knew that was not, because there in me from as long as I can remember I knew that God is love and we do know the difference.

Alan: There's no doubt about it, if you took a Jehovah character or figure you have a mafia godfather basically who demands sacrifice and kickbacks and praise and he makes a bunch of rules for you and at the same time he's allowed to break them. Of course, even in the New Testament, Jehovah is a newcomer in a bunch of different gods. It begins with Elohim, which is the plural for gods, and Jehovah doesn't appear until later on the scene. I guess he must have knocked off all the competition. However, if you look at even the religion itself of a priesthood keeping knowledge to themselves and being well paid, well funded from the fears of the people and you see even the way it's based, which is to break a law, you don't – like a Protestant religion for instance or Catholic religion, you don't sit and beat your breasts and tear your hair out for doing something wrong. You don't sit and analyze yourself and wonder why you did it and rebuke yourself. You simply pay money and something else is killed to repay what you've done. Vicarious sacrifice they call it, so basically there's no breast beating. You just pay the money, buy an animal and it gets slaughtered in your place. I mean this is a weird sort of religion here.

Jackie: That was the thing that got me when he said to Abraham, well you don't have to kill your son. Just go get that ram that's caught in the bush and my thought was why would God want innocent little animals killed and let alone test to see if you're going to obey me – you take your son up there and kill him.

Alan: But it's nothing to do with real people.

Jackie: I know that.

Alan: What you're seeing is a system and this system is a wise-guy system. It's a streetwise person system where the elite and the cunning and the true predators are allowed to feed off the innocent. All the sacrifices you notice must be innocent.

Jackie: I hadn't thought about that, but it's true, isn't it?

Alan: It's a streetwise thing because this system creates an innocent gullible public, or it did in the past at least, in order to feed off of them and that's what your peasant class did for thousands of years was to be fed on by this small elite. It's a man-made system. There's no doubt about it. You have a Jehovah who wasn't on Prozac then. He had no love in him. I mean if you got in his bad books or he had a bad day he would just kill you and this again is all allegory. It's telling you a godfather system or a mafia type system, what you can get away with and what you can get away with is what Jacob got away with or the symbolism of Jacob. You can lie and steal and even cheat your father for your brother's birthright and the godfather will bless you for doing it because you were very clever the way you did it, you see, and it's a mafia system. It truly is and it's a complete system. That's what it's all about and even the high priests who set up the Catholic Church were well aware of the same system, even though they pretended it was different. It was the same system and of course you see it in all of their archaeology of the church. The church itself has the box and that's the female womb and they always have a spire, which you walk through at the base, and that's the male phallic symbol. That's how most British parliaments across the world, the Commonwealth parliaments, are made the same way. The parliament in England has the congressmen you might say, the MPs inside the box but they enter through the penis because all life for the future begins with the male, the phallic symbol, so they walk through the base of the penis.

Jackie: Of course that's purely in the material plane.

Alan: That's right and then in Egypt the obelisk or phallic was called "the Ben-Ben". You have two B's. Ben-Ben and of course Shakespeare puts it in his play, "To be, or not to be." It's another pun on the same thing and then of course in Parliament in England you have Big Ben. Why would they call it Big Ben? This big spire that you have to walk through and has a clock on it which tells you the time because it's planning the destiny of the world. That's what it meant.

Jackie: Oh wow and I remember reading about the big obelisk in front of the Vatican and they moved that from was it Egypt, Alan?

Alan: Constantine's son moved it initially from Egypt and that was a mammoth task in those days.

Jackie: I know it and anybody that made a mistake was killed on the spot.

Alan: That was later the second time. The first time they got it and they put it up in the circus where they had the games and it was about 300 years ago the Pope had it moved from there in Rome to St. Peter's Square. Everywhere they've gone they've set up an obelisk and there's one in that park in New York there. That was brought from Egypt as well and there's the obelisk outside the four banks of London and one outside the French Parliament.

Jackie: And a great big one in Washington, D.C.

Alan: Well, that was Washington's greatest erection and that's a new one. In other words, that wasn't brought from Egypt and that symbolizes the birth of the New World Order. That was the only new one they built. The rest of them were imported from Egypt, which is highly symbolic. Washington really was meant to symbolize the New World Order, Novus Ordo Seclorum.

Jackie: Yes. You made a statement back there and I made a little note here and I'd like to go back to it just as a question that I have for clarification when you were talking about the fact that their plan is to eliminate the individual spirit or kill the individual spirit. My concept of spirit of Creator would be the eternal, that what the Creator creates is eternal, but would the word soul of the individual, would that--

Alan: That's closer.

Jackie: Because they say that the mind is the gateway to the soul?

Alan: Yes, the eye.

Jackie: The mind?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: The eyes are the window but the mind is the gateway to the soul and if that is true and it never occurred to me ever until we began our conversation that an individual could "lose his soul," but I can see that these insane creatures actually and they can trap people in this physical plane.

Alan: There's no doubt about it. They've been at this for a long, long time and in their religion of course they say that the complete person is someone who has body, spirit and soul. That goes all the way back to Babylon and Egypt and of course they say that the ordinary people, the commoners you might say, are born with soul, which is the animating force, but the destiny of the soul is to find its own spirit and merge with it. If they can keep the person from doing that then they have succeeded because the soul itself according to their religion and it goes all the way back through the ancient religions, all the way back to India even, the soul only lasts 10 lifetimes and then it goes back into this "soup," this "sea" they call it.

Jackie: You mean if we haven't made it in 10 lifetimes?

Alan: If they haven't merged with spirit, and that was the whole mystery behind the explanation that makes no sense to most people the way it's told and that's intentional of the journey of the KA as they call it in Egypt and the BA. What they claim was – and they do it in such beautiful roundabout ways so that the people would see it exoterically, but the initiates knew what they meant. What it meant was once they had died the KA, because they had already obtained spirithood, stayed with the body. The BA went into the underworld, being the journeys and had to go through all these perils and so on to find its own spirit and once it came back in the circle met the KA, then they could go up to this heaven.

Jackie: Or go up to heaven.

Alan: Up to or wherever because they always said you rode with RA in his boat, his ark.

Jackie: Maybe the reason they used the word up is that it's a higher frequency?

Alan: They also used it to symbolize an otherness, otherness from here, and since they used astronomy big time and astrology and stellar movements, they always said it in astronomical terms. When you achieved your destiny, exoterically, you rode the Ark across the sky. The Ark was a boat and that was the boat of RA and of course once you'd made it you rode in that ark. That was the Ark of the Covenant, as you rode across the sky, you see, and that was for the elite and for the elite only.

Jackie: Because they would keep the truth from the masses.

Alan: Always, yes.

Jackie: That would never be able to make that journey?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Okay. Here's a thought. You said that it is said that after 10 times if we haven't made it then it's dissipated back into the ethers, right?

Alan: That's what they claimed.

Jackie: Well, I wonder, let's say that a person is in their eighth lifetime and they begin on that journey, it just doesn't make sense to me that they might only have two lifetimes to get it all together, but maybe at least that they have begun and maybe the first of course part of it is coming out of the lies, being able to literally let go. I received a donation and there was a card in it and the note said that it's okay to say I don't understand the bible, but when I say we've been lied to it makes it very difficult to support this broadcast and I really don't know how to respond to that.

Alan: That's a choice.

Jackie: Yes, exactly. Well, I don't mean whether somebody's going to support the broadcast or not, but that requirement. It's okay to say I don't understand. Yes, I know how to respond. I don't understand the esoteric, I know that. But I do, I can read and I know what is not love. I may not have the full meaning or capacity of love at this point in my journey but I know what isn't love and I know what I'm leaving and I know that Jehovah of the Old Testament is not love and so I could not say I don't understand that. I do understand it, Alan. I understand it, at least well for where I'm at right now.

Alan: That's right. Jehovah again is a mafia figure. There's no doubt about it. It's a kickback system we're talking about here and of course Masonry came from it too in all of its forms, no matter what sect they call themselves, which is again a kick back system. As they say, the workman is worthy of his wages, but what that also means is that the workman who's helped up the ladder in promotions and so on must also kick money upstairs. This whole system is a kickback system. It's a degreed kickback system including even the Catholic Church that came out of it. It incorporated all the mystery religions, which really were all one, but they seemed different because they were given to different countries and they just changed the names of the deities and so on. Look at the Pope who's white, he's the sun, and you look at the Cardinals who are red and black, so they have spirit. Spirit and the force – the life force is always red. The black is law and so they are law under the guidance of spirit, so it's a degreed system; even the color-coding goes back all the way to Pythagoras. He was taught this stuff in Egypt.

Jackie: Okay, let's pick this up on the other side of this break. Alan Watt is our guest and as always, the conversation is very moving. I don't know what to say. I had a couple of examples I'd like to use because it is maybe confusing to people. We were talking about discernment and the gentleman who wrote and said it's okay to say I don't understand but when we say we've been lied to, but I'm talking just the Old Testament and here's one that catches me. This is in Matthew 18 in verse 6. Jesus is talking about the little children and he said, "who ever shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it would be better for him that a millstone was hanged around his neck." Well, to me, I don't think he said one of these little ones that believe on me, because all children were precious. All children are precious and basically what I see this doing is any little child who doesn't know about Jesus is doomed. That's the way that appears to me and for example in the Lord's Prayer when we're taught to say "lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil," I remember that catching in my throat when I used to go to the Lutheran Church because what we are doing is asking our loving Father, please don't lead me into temptation and I knew that it couldn't have been said that way.

Lead me out of temptation or away but not ask because a loving father – we wouldn't lead our children into temptation and why would we think that our Creator would ever do that. When you were mentioning the Catholic Church, well all of that BS got brought down into the so-called Protestant churches--

Alan: Sure it did.

Jackie: And in the Lutheran Church this came into my mind the other day. It's that song we used to sing. "Create in me a clean heart oh God and renew a right spirit within me." The next line, listen to this. "Cast me not away from your presence and take not your holy spirit from me." There we are begging again and folks, this is what I'm saying and these are a few things and maybe Alan because he understands a lot deeper than I do the exoteric message in these things, but for the untrained eye these are the things that pop out at you and it doesn't mean that there isn't truth but this is what they've done. They've made us just absolutely – we're supposed to love our God with all our heart, mind and soul and to love a creature that is so hateful; a father, so to speak, that we have to beg him? It doesn't make sense, does it, Alan?

Alan: No. As I say, it's the old unstable deity that's made in the image of man and it's the image of the typical Middle Eastern despot of ancient times because that's how he was. He might give a present to a servant one day and have his head cut off the next. That's the unstable temperament that kept everybody on their toes and they never knew what mood he would be in the following day. That's what Jehovah is. If man was made in the shape of a triangle they'd make God the same way. So that's what they gave you was a Middle Eastern despot who could do whatever he wanted to.

Jackie: Yes and that's what people will say if they can't explain it. He can do anything he wants.

Alan: It's always amazing that they give an Old Testament version to the general public but they don't give you the rest of it. They don't give you the accompanying Talmud or the Mishnah and all the other stuff that explains the Old Testament in a more esoteric fashion. The only reason I can come to that they did not give that to the general public is they wanted a dumb, stupid, subservient, obedient, slaving public and that's what they had for an awful long time. Religion was always used against people to keep them in servitude for a small ruling elite.

Jackie: And to do wars and to enslave others because that was all done under the auspices of Jehovah.

Alan: They play games all the time. There is no media. There's no news but it's just news. It's either indoctrination or mocking the victim as they say and the public are the victims. Now you heard about that nonsense with Prince Harry. It's been all over the news about, oh dear, my goodness, Prince Harry turned up at a ball and it was a fancy dress ball somewhere in England, private too, and it was supposed to be commonwealth and natives basically and he turned up as a member of the Hitler youth with a Nazi armband and all the rest of it and of course the media goes to town over this. This happens two weeks prior to the Queen going to the National Holocaust Museum in Europe to give a speech and opening up the International Holocaust Day. It's a bit coincidental but at the same time – so it brings to public awareness of the holocaust industry but at the same time they missed what Prince William was wearing, because Prince William as the papers said was dressed like a leopard, but that's only part of the story. If you saw him on the TV in the brief flashes that they gave you, he had the feet of a bear, the body of a leopard and the head of a lion – and that's the description of the beast in Revelations, so why was he wearing that to a fancy dress-do which would do with the dominion and natives? They mock us all the time with their little messages even in this type of thing. There's nothing on the media that doesn't have double meanings and a lot of jokes, inside jokes by the elite that rule this world and the public respond to the exoteric the way it's intended that they respond, through guilt, shame or whatever, and the elite laugh up their sleeves all the time. Nothing is done on the media without having a very esoteric purpose and it always ends up with indoctrination and swaying the public one way or another. It's all mind control, all of it.

Jackie: I'm back. Were you complete with that?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: I had a call from Gary this evening and he was a little confused. You had mentioned Revelations. We were talking about it last week the fact that if you're writing it you would be able to write about what they're plan is.

Alan: You reveal it, revelation.

Jackie: Reveal it. Oh, that's right. That's what you said. The Revelation is a revealing but I guess he's wondering – I've got books here on Revelations. I've got a three-volume set of books here that's supposed to interpret what Revelations means. I've read probably two dozen or more interpretations of Revelations and every single one of them is different. I don't understand it but I guess he's wondering does this lay out the play as it's playing out today?

Alan: Absolutely. It's all astronomy. Every creature mentioned in Revelations is a zodiacal sign which appears at a certain time and it's a time clock of the heavens basically and so they're following it right to the letter. The beast is in the heavens.

Jackie: Who's the beast?

Alan: The beast again – I should do a show on the whole thing.

Jackie: You know what? You just took the thought right out of my mind. You know what? You're coming back tomorrow, aren't you?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Would you like to start now or would you like to get it and get prepared a little bit?

Alan: I should try and think it out to put it over simply to people because there's a lot of astronomy involved in it.

Jackie: Okay and we can have our Bibles open and as you're going through it and explaining your understanding of it we could be reading along there.

Alan: Maybe I could do that next week. I'll have to put it in very simple terms. I'll have to go into the signs that we'll have. It's all astronomy and even though in ancient times they have changed one or two of the characters in the zodiac. I mean the Egyptians had a crocodile in there at one point and that was the beast of that time. They alter it every so often and Draco was the Northern Constellation of the Northern Star before the earth tilted, which is historical, and Draco was the flying serpent or dragon you might say.

Jackie: No, I don't know because I am not familiar with Revelations. I know I know some verses from it that are used a lot, but when you do this you'll start right from the beginning?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: That is cool.

Alan: Every character even in the New Testament including Caiaphas who was the head of the Nasi party, the Sanhedrin, the Sanhedrin that condemned Jesus, he was a Nasi as they called it in Hebrew. He was head of the Nasi party.

Jackie: They called the Sanhedrin the Nasi, didn't they?

Alan: The head is called the Nasi and actually it's the new moon. The splinter or the finger, the sliver of the new moon is also called the Nasi in Hebrew.

Jackie: And the Sanhedrin sat that way and also so does the U.N.

Alan: That's right and the head man was Caiaphas, which means head in a sense, and he's also an astrological sign, so he's also in the heavens. If you understand how the zodiac all comes around-- Jackie: Is this from the Kabbalah?

Alan: It's pre-Kabbalah.

Jackie: Astrology is an ancient, ancient science, isn't it?

Alan: It goes way back to even pre-Egypt.

Jackie: It's interesting you brought this up. I was browsing through an astrology book today and it's a book that I've had and I don't think I've ever read it but I was reading the introduction and explanation and this author which I think the book was written around in the '70's. He was saying that astrology today is being understood, surely not in the way that you do, but he said that even the U.S. government – he was saying that businesses et cetera have charts done and he said that the U.S. government and Israel use astrology but he said he didn't have any information as to whether any other governments did or not. I found that very intriguing.

Alan: As I say, they wrote their plan--

Jackie: The U.S. and Israel, the twins you know?

Alan: They wrote their plans and they have long, long range plans in the zodiac and it's all becoming fulfilled because they knew where they wanted to get to and where they're coming from. If you look at the constellations and you know what they're supposed to be, there's no way you'd figure that out unless you saw it drawn out. These high priests long, long ago sat and said we'll make this Pegasus and we'll make this so and so.

Jackie: Now is it true, I may have read this in Zecharia Sitchin's book and I am clear that he matriculated at the London School of Economics and when I found that out I knew there had to be hooks, but I don't remember where I read it but the fact that the Pleiades, I think. Is it called the "Seven Sisters" and that from where we are you can actually only see six of them because one is behind the other and that in Sumerian, back that long ago, and you said that was, what, about 12,000 years actually, that they knew that there were seven stars in that star system.

Alan: Actually they knew there were more. You can see seven with the naked eye.

Jackie: You can see seven?

Alan: If your eyes are good and there's actually more. However, there were nine at one point about 5,000 BC and one of them went supernova, I guess, because it disappeared and that was recorded by the Greeks.

Jackie: Why do they call it the Seven Sisters then?

Alan: Again, it's another part of their mythology as they hide a truth within a story. All of the main characters end up getting put up in the sky as a god basically, although they began as human kings and that's what it's all about. It's a pun on their system of becoming gods and as they say, as above, so below and they would bring the New Jerusalem to earth. They're talking about the whole plan which they wrote in the heavens would be applied all across the world on the earth.

Jackie: So when we hear the elite and I know Rockefeller at least on a couple of occasions and I've heard this and read it. "Our window of opportunity is now" and they're using the astrological timeframe, aren't they?

Alan: Yes they are. These guys literally go by this and they must stick to it and they do stick to it.

Jackie: And they believe in it?

Alan: Yes, because their ancestors wrote it a long time ago.

Jackie: Tell our listeners about 9/11. Would you explain it to us?

Alan: 9/11, I mean even the fact that they give you your emergency number as 911 and just the very fact you end up with it happening on that date and it's supposed to be all coincidence. Then again I think it was the Chicago Stock Exchange that day finished at 911000 and then I think it was the New York Lottery also came out 911. I mean who's kidding who here? This is constant mockery.

Jackie: But that date September 11th was very relevant. You told us about that and I think we have time.

Alan: It's to do again with a mythological character that came from Zeus who created more gods and the female goddess, which became Britannia on the old British coin, who's a queen of the heavens, she's also a warrior, burst forth from his head on the Ides of September.

Jackie: Was that Minerva?

Alan: That's right, the warrior queen like Zena and what it signifies is something which could not have happened by itself. It took supernatural coincidences to bring it all together. It was not a natural phenomenon. In other words, what was going to come out of 9/11 had been planned that way and what was coming out of it was not a normal thing. It was not a normal event. It was a super-planned event. That's what it's really telling you.

Jackie: Remember you told us about the rituals that they did.

Alan: They had high, high rituals to do with the ides and the bringing forth and all the rest of it of Minerva, but what really is significant is what Minerva signifies, which is a new way. It's a new way that could not have come into existence by itself, by nature.

Jackie: So he burst her out of his head.

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: I remember you telling us something about an ancient ritual that they used to do involved around that date and that it was a very important date and it had to do with horses and the colors of the robes or something?

Alan: They definitely portrayed Jupiter riding the horses around the city and whoever portrayed the part of Jupiter was painted red driving his white horses.

Jackie: That would be the blood.

Alan: That's right and they also have a similar thing in again the Talmud to do with Solomon, which is the sun. Sol-om-on is the sun in three different languages because that's what it really represents is the illumined man. The illuminati, the illumined man and he also rode his six white steeds around the city.

Jackie: It was this particular event at that particular date in September and I remember doing research on the Internet and I found it and you had mentioned I think it was between the 11th and 13th and that if they hadn't accomplished what they wanted to with 9/11, something else was going to happen to make sure that what they planned.

You know it's getting late here. We've got about three or four minutes left I guess but I was reading today about and I wanted to share it with our listeners. I couldn't find the bill but it's a draft bill and it includes all children 18 to 26. They're working on that and it's passed one of the chambers in the U.S. Congress and I'm going to hopefully have it tomorrow night. You know when you and I talk, Alan, it's like my mind starts exploding and I can't grab my thoughts or my questions fast enough to hang on to them.

Alan: As I say, that was the Sol-om-on.

Jackie: Oh, I know what it was. I'm sorry. Okay. You know how Kerry during the campaign? Well I don't know if you know but he said there will be no draft and then of course he added, "unless we're attacked" and it occurred to me today if they're having a big uproar and opposition they'll see to it that we get attacked so they can initiate. I'm sorry to say that but it's like a given. You get to see the pattern when we begin to understand past history. They just keep repeating it because it works.

Alan: It's works and the public think they could never do that because it's so horrific.

Jackie: Probably what was said in the email that I got, probably they'll go ahead and pass it right around the time of the inauguration while people's minds are on the inauguration.

Alan: Yes, plus on the news here in Canada I think it was Wolfowitz that came out now pressing for war on Iran and Syria and of course that's all part of the New American Century plan that they wrote back in the '90's, so they're going to that plan and how fortunate for them 9/11 came along.

Jackie: We're out of our hour with you and you'll be back tomorrow night.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
January 18, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Tuesday the 18th of January in the year 2005. Alan Watt is again with us tonight.

Our spiritual message this evening is from John 18. This is the conversation that Jesus was having with Pontius Pilate and Pontius Pilate asked him if he was a king. Wait, let me back up here. This is what I wanted to get first. Pontius Pilate asked him what he'd done because his chief priest. Those were the Pharisees, folks. Those are the rabbis of today by the way. Those are the priests of Jehovah that delivered thee unto me. Pontius Pilate said, "What have you done?" and Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world then would my servants fight that I should not be delivered to the Jews but now is my kingdom not from hence" and then Pontius Pilate said, "Well are you a king then?" Jesus said, "You say that I am a king. To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world that I should bear witness unto the truth. Everyone that is of the truth hears my voice."

I want to go back if we could to the verse before there where Jesus said, "my kingdom is not of this world and if my kingdom were of this world then would my servants fight that I should not be delivered to the Jews but now is my kingdom not from hence." I can't imagine Jesus referring to any of his followers or disciples as servants and that they should fight that I should not be delivered to the Jews. I don't think the word Jew existed back in those days, did it?

Alan: No.

Jackie: At that time?

Alan: No.

Jackie: Then he says "but now is my kingdom not from hence" and one of the things that people who are very much believing in oh there is going to be a second coming and that when Jesus gets here his throne will be in Jerusalem and there will be a thousand years of peace. The way they justify this one or understand, I should say, is he said "now is my kingdom not from hence." In other words, it will be later. Would you comment on that?

Alan: Again it's --

Jackie: Putting words in his mouth?

Alan: Sort of, but it's also tacking on the age. Every age is given a god figure and of course that was the beginning of the Age of Pisces and that's why in the New Testament when he's going to ride into glory on a donkey he tells them to go and find a young colt tied and his master will be carrying a picture of water, which is Aquarius. That's why that's written like that, so his time of glory would last from then until Aquarius.

Jackie: Until the Age of Aquarius?

Alan: Yes. The priesthoods have always used somebody or as a martyr figure but always used the story for every age in a disguised form. Of course in Egypt you had Osiris and Isis the mother and Horus the son and eventually they had the Greeks made into Adonis, which is the same thing as Horus, and then that became Adonai of the Jews. They call god generally Adonai.

Jackie: This deal about my servants, if my kingdom was of this world then my servants would fight. That sounds like a made-up thing.

Alan: Yes it is. I think you'd find that rulers again who created the Christian movement long after that period had to put in their own spin on things obviously, but there in that particular instance Jesus is symbolizing pure spirit and of course a battle in the physical realm again is the physical realm. It's the two worlds. The one of matter and the one of spirit and he is showing the way to fulfill the spiritual quest in other words. That's what the whole story is about. It's a spiritual quest and the world in other words would always be base because it always was base and it's still base under all the polish and so on, it's still a very base planet. Therefore the spiritual quest has succumbed you might say to the quest in the world of matter for the ownership of more matter and that's the way it's always been here.

Jackie: Cycle after cycle after cycle.

Alan: The first fall of man was into matter. That's what they said in ancient times.

Jackie: That makes sense to me and I truly wonder, truly wonder as spiritual beings why we ever came here in the first place unless it was to experiment. Now I don't know if this is so, but I have read and it makes sense, but there are spiritual being that never actually take physical flesh.

Alan: Again, the only you can prove something--

Jackie: I know, seeing it or be there.

Alan: Until you have the proof and the proof can never be because someone said so. That's how they create their religions that end up lording over us you might say.

Jackie: Let me ask you this. I know that there are a lot of charlatans. Do you believe that it is possible for people to channel disincarnated entities?

Alan: Oh yes, I believe that, but I don't say these entities are generally what they claim that they are.

Jackie: Or maybe have anymore. I don't know. For example the Seth material is very – have you ever read that Alan?

Alan: What's it called?

Jackie: The Seth material.

Alan: I don't think so.

Jackie: The information that – well, never mind. We won't go into it. I've read a lot of books and you've said this yourself. If you read enough books from different sources and there is a thread that there's probably truth to it and maybe the possibility is that there are disincarnated entities that mean no harm and that are bringing some information to help mankind. Why couldn't that be a possibility?

Alan: Generally you'll find it's the same messages though, and of course in the '60's there was a whole myriad of groups came out of the human potential movement. It was pushed by the Rockefellers and all the big boys.

Jackie: Were they doing some harmful work?

Alan: What it was to do was to actually get people into this whole thing of channeling basically.

Jackie: I would think that would be very, very dangerous.

Alan: Oh yes. I mean if you're bringing something into you and you're taking its word that it is what it says it is and you're opening up a doorway which it then can then come in any time it wishes to. I've no doubt on that because that's something I don't believe, It's something I've experienced in other people which I couldn't deny. There is no scientific explanation but I've seen people you might say "possessed."

Jackie: That you could actually see that it wasn't them when they were talking?

Alan: Yes. I couldn't contradict it, couldn't deny it and there's no scientific explanation for it. When you study Masonry and all of the groups including the higher Wiccanism, all the groups that are running the show today basically in religion, they're all into channeling entities and the higher Masons do this. They channel entities.

Jackie: We talked about this on the air, didn't we, about the high Masons who actually receive an entity to share their physical body.

Alan: In the very high degrees they do.

Jackie: I'll bet there are some that don't have to be in high degrees of Masonry.

Alan: You'll see it in some of the lower people too and you'll find that people who are not as well in Masonry, but Masonry in its higher levels actually encourages it.

Jackie: You had told us and I think you touched on it one night but it's been quite a while ago and maybe you could address this again that we're kind of on this track. The pyramid that they have set up where they're doing – do you know what I'm talking about?

Alan: The triangle.

Jackie: The triangle, thank you. Talk about that again, would you? Explain it again.

Alan: One of the biggest groups that led this movement, the Masonic group again promoted by the Rockefeller Foundation heavily, was theosophy and they set up triangles, large ones and smaller ones within where they will meet in certain lodges on different parts of the map and form these triangles and literally meditate their will upon all the inhabitants contained therein.

Jackie: I think it's important hopefully for our listeners, folks, think about this what Alan is telling us and realize that these people at the top have the secrets of the ages you might say and they're very well aware of the power that resides. It isn't just they who have this power. It is each and every one of us if we access it and so not seeming so far out of bounds because Jesus said it in many ways, Alan. He said it in many ways. Number One: "The kingdom of God is within you. Ye are the light of the world" and so therefore it brings back to mind the importance for us to the way we be. You said this several years ago that it's up to each and every individual because everything we do, everything we say, everything we think is impacting not just this physical realm but every dimension.

Alan: That's right. The higher Masons when they're talking about changes in society, major changes, they'll call it "The Spirit of the Age" and "The Spirit of the Age" is basically the form that this sort of mental psychic form they create, also through propaganda and TV and media and so on, to promote these things. In other words, they give you the 'in thing' to do, the trendy the way to be for this particular period, The Spirit of the Age, and they claim that they force their will to do so. I've actually got a tape where Rockefeller talks about this. All of the parts of the changes of society and the directions that we're going into are all calculated prior to the public ever hearing of them or seeing them implemented and they're willed into existence basically.

Jackie: Yes, of course they have a little help don't they, Alan, with all their technology – all their control of education, entertainment, the media, governments, the monetary economic system. They've got a little bit of – well, but it's all on the material level.

Alan: That's right and think tanks. Lots of think tanks.

Jackie: Their think tanks yes and the one thing I do know is that there is no power in this world greater than the power of Creator, so it doesn't mean that they're going to be successful. It appears right now that they're on the road to success.

Alan: They get to the brink of dominance, but there's a truth here within even the ancient mysteries that contained all of this information long, long ago that the world is in a balance. It's like the balance of nature. Things have to be in balance and when evil tips the scales so much then something has to give. It cannot simply be successful and stay that way. Eventually the good has to overtake it and destroy it and it's something of course that man or base man you might say never learns. The people you're taught to respect in high positions are corrupt people. These are the only people who climb and claw their way up to the high positions because they have a lust for power which ordinary people cannot fathom. They cannot understand it and so it's presented to the public that they are just there as good public servants et cetera, but there's not one case on TV in the line of politics that didn't crave that position and they'd do anything and say anything to get there. That's the problem. In every age you're top-heavy with dynasties you might say, ruling dynasties and oligarchies and families, very wealthy, who crave total power and it literally goes to their heads and they bring chaos upon the world in the process.

Jackie: A question here or a thought. You mentioned last night that the ancient mysteries or truths that we get 10 times around here and if we aren't in our spiritual consciousness by then, then the energy that is in our maybe personality, soul that it just dissipates back into the ethers.

Alan: That's a belief that the Hindus have and that's very, very old because so much of all religions come from – there's no doubt there's a connection with India.

Jackie: What about these creatures? They don't understand that the laws of creation are immutable. That as we sow, so shall we reap. They don't understand this?

Alan: They understand this very well. It's their arrogance. You see, they're so arrogant and sure of themselves and the more they get away with, the more sure of themselves they are and it's their nature. It's in their nature. It's like the old story of crossing the water on the back of scorpion and it promises not to sting you and you're halfway across and it stings you. When you ask why did it do it, it says, it's my nature; and that's the nature of these creatures. They really believe that through science and planning and cunningness they can actually avoid it this time around. It's in their nature, you see. It's no different from someone who's a real hardened drug addict. These people are addicted to power as you cannot imagine. They have a lust for it, a craving for it. They think about it night and day. It consumes their entire life.

Jackie: How do you know that?

Alan: Simply by studying them, when you really study them.

Jackie: You get a sense or a feel?

Alan: Down through the centuries you'll see them. It's the same pattern over and over and over and these people cannot let go of power. That's why they never retire. They don't say, well, I'm 65, I've got millions of dollars, I'll put my feet up and enjoy myself.

Jackie: Because they are enjoying themselves.

Alan: That's right. They have to be in the limelight. They have to mix with their own kind. They want to have the ordinary people kowtowing to them and they have this lust. See, it's an insatiable lust. You can't say I'll give you a shot of 100 milligrams of cocaine and that will do you, you see. It's an insatiable lust for power that cannot be satisfied and hence they go the whole way.

Jackie: The fame and fortune that come with it. Like you said being out in the limelight.

Alan: That's why they cannot retire. You'll see them all in their 80's even still going around the world giving speeches and so on, heavily involved. They don't retire because they're addicted to power and there's no amount of power that would ever satisfy them. That's the problem because they're addicts.

Jackie: Remember that quote a long time ago that you made that Toynbee said that basically it had something to do with the power behind those people that believe they're in power and to refresh you in case. We were talking about the fact that the ruling force, unseen hand, whatever we would call it, is very clear about the power within all of us, but these creatures that are doing the work here, the ones that you said that are really behind it, we've never even heard their names. They believe that they're God and they believe that they will reincarnate right back into the same families but we won't. Do you recall that statement from Toynbee?

Alan: When he was talking about the power within?

Jackie: Yes.

Alan: Arnold Toynbee was a professor at Oxford University and he taught the Rhodes Scholars. He taught the Bill Clinton types you see for world dominion. That's what the Rhodes Scholarship was set up to do.

Jackie: Where did you say he was a professor?

Alan: Oxford University. Oxford on Isis they call it. It's always been called that.

Jackie: Oxford on Isis.

Alan: Yes. Where the river runs through there they call it the Isis and that goes back to the 11th century. These guys have been at this for a long time. Anyway, he was giving a speech to world internationalists and communists and so on and I think the speech was in Denmark and 1932 and he said, "when an original thought is created it's immediately transmitted across the globe and certain people will receive it at the same time it's released." He said, "we know how to use this power," but he was also aware that the masses were ignorant of the fact that they could also do it and so basically what he was saying was that he and his kind, his ruling elite as he believed, and he belonged to aristocracy, very old aristocracy. He believed that they literally willed their plan into existence and those who would help them would pick up their thoughts and work it out, and that's basically what they do.

Jackie: But the same goes for us.

Alan: Yes, but the public are not supposed to know that, you see. We're supposed to believe that there's nothing except science and that's why they had to eradicate all the old religions, which, mind you, they also gave you as well. They're defunct now. They've done their job. Now you must believe in nothing but science and the state. The state becomes god and as long as you believe that, you're imprisoned forever. That's the idea. They don't want the public to know that this is your individual journey as a spiritual being and no one else can take that from you or show you where you must go. However, the second fall of man, according to these same people, the first fall is the fall into matter and they wish to fulfill their plan by the second fall, which is to encase man forever in the world of matter.

Jackie: You know we've talked about this. Actually, I remember when it was. Right around the time of 9/11 we were having a lot of conversations and in the conversation that we were having was one that occurred to me that when we leave this physical realm, when we come back we bring back with us what it is we left with and if they can shorten a life – in other words, if we've begun on the path on the journey, let's say to spiritual consciousness, there is a remembrance. I'm just clear on that because of certain things that I knew as a little child, I knew, there were just things I knew and so therefore if they can keep people totally in the lie and maintain what they have created as a perceived separation between us and Creator, well then when we come back it's the same old thing. It's almost like a computer. You put junk in and you get junk out.

Alan: That's what the pharaohs said. The pharaohs claimed they perfected the slave population so they'd always come back as perfect slaves.

Jackie: So it's really so critical that we get out of the lie.

Alan: It's not so easy because pretty well everything is nothing but lies – ancient history, recent history is still being changed by the year with every book that comes out. I just watched a documentary done by the CBC on the now official version of how the Free Trade Agreement came to conclusion, and I've never seen so much fantasy in my life. They never went into the fact that the Free Trade Agreement goes back to the 1500's, that wasn't mentioned at all, because when John Dee went to Queen Elizabeth I and talked about a British or "Brytish" Empire with free trade between countries that would join this commonwealth – and the free exchange of labor, because the elite knew they'd have to move the laboring classes into new countries to do manufacturing, clearing all the lands and all this kind of stuff. That was in the 1500's, so the free flow of labor and goods would have to be part of free trade.

Jackie: We're going to be taking a break now. I'm here, Alan.

Alan: Getting back to this CBC documentary on the Free Trade Agreement, it was presented as though it was the greatest thing that Canadians wanted and how we'd all so benefited from it financially. Of course, the way it came about, it just sort of happened to be the right time for it to come into play and forces sort of pushed it into play, natural forces, and it just sort of happened that way. However, in reality it's utter rubbish, there was so much scheming that went into the Free Trade Negotiations, it was planned with the creation of the British empire in the 1500's, including, as I say, the free movement of the laboring classes between continents as they had to do to clear the lands and so on. They're constantly changing history and presenting it to the public, who don't seem to notice, even though they lived through the changes, they don't seem to remember it as it really was, even if it was only a few years ago. The children that go to school haven't a clue, all they're told is the official version and they believe it, so history is always being altered.

Jackie: I've got this book and I've referenced it before, it's Harper Collins Atlas of World History, and on page 70 it's the Jewish Diaspora from AD 70 to 1497. "For over 2000 years the history of the Jews has been an external dispersion and internal cohesion. The political, military and religious reverses in Judea only affected to a small extent the status of Jews in the Roman Empire and the even larger number of Jews living in Babylonia. The resilience of Judaism after the setback in AD 70 may be explained in part by the evolution of the Jewish religion following the destruction of the first temple, when a system based on a temple and sacrifices was complimented by one based on the synagogue and prayer. The new religious forms gave influence to the interpreters of Biblical law. The philosophy underlying such interpretation varied. One group of interpreters, the Pharisees, became particularly influential some time after the middle of the second century BC and after AD 70 they evolved into rabbis, a second important factor was the codification of Jewish law, both civil and religious, carried out in Palestine around AD 200 by Rabbi Judah..." "...The Muslim conquest in Spain in 711 AD brought respite which culminated in golden age of Spanish Jewry..." "...from about the fifth century this changed and Jews became identified with international and regional trade. Internal and external factors including the widespread dispersal of Jews, both in Islamic lands and throughout Christian Europe, Jewish group solidarity, facility linguistics communication, and uniform system of commercial law based on the Talmud accounted for this change..." "...Carolingian rulers aware of the role of Jews' role in international trade granted them special charters assuring them of protection, commercial privileges, and the right to govern themselves according to their own laws..."

Alan: They still have their own places where they settle disputes.

Jackie: You said that was around 1500; this is AD 70 – 1497, bringing us right into that era.

Alan: John Dee was a Kabbalist, as was Francis Bacon. They both studied the Kabbalah. We're talking about a mystery religion that comes out of Babylon, and it preexisted Babylon, it comes down through the centuries like a phoenix bird, it changes its form every four to five-hundred years, hides behind different forms, but really it's a small elite behind most of the "feathers", you might say. "Phoenicians" is a play on the "phoenix"; one of their capitals in the Middle Ages was Venice—substitute 'F' (Ph) for a 'V' and you have Venice. If you take Venus the planet and chart its course through the heavens over a year, it makes the so-called Star of David. This Star of David was never David's star; you find it all the way back through Babylon and all the way to India.

Jackie: How do the Jesuits figure into all of this? Because when you mentioned Venice, I read quite a long thing about their control of trade and commerce in Venice.

Alan: The Jesuits, they have their P.R. thing they started up to fight this new thing created by one of their members, Martin Luther, Protestant sect.

Jackie: Was he a Jesuit?

Alan: He was definitely a Rosicrucian; in fact, that's on his coat of arms, his family crest, the rose and cross. Of course the Catholic Church at that time was burning everybody it didn't like and all it did with Martin Luther was call him in for a few questions and let him go. Why did they let him go? It was because it was the right time to create an opposition for the upcoming industrial age in creating the Protestant sect with the "Protestant work ethic," that was important.

Ignatius Loyola was a member of the Alumbrados, the Spanish Illuminati sect of his day, and he was captured by the Pope's army who he'd fought against. They had him in prison and then he was granted an audience with the Pope; after the audience he walked out as the first head of Jesuit order. He was a very powerful man, obviously, the Pope (being a secret society at the top) understood exactly where this man had come from and granted him this power. Why would a Pope grant a man who was a known member of the Alumbrado, Illuminati sect that came from the Knights Templars, why would he give him the headship of a brand new powerful order?

Jackie: Some people say it's the Illuminati behind all this; and yet, the Illuminati is part of it, yes?

Alan: It's part of it. You must create opposites, always, all the time, and you must always have conflict on the go to create the changes they want and to reap the financial rewards. Wars are terribly lucrative to those who lend the money and carry the shipments and so on. The Jesuits planned to take down many countries which had become Protestant, and you had thirty-year wars going on and fifty-year wars in Europe over this Protestant-Catholic thing. Very lucrative to certain people and it's all arranged that way. The mystery religion is contained in every religion, including Buddhism.

Jackie: Somebody had written up a paper and was quoting statements allegedly made by the Buddha (Prince Siddhartha was it?) and also Jesus, all of the masters, "teachers" if you would, that have come in to this world to "bear witness unto the truth," they had the same message. It occurred to me that whatever Buddhism is today, it wouldn't be about the teachings, the real teachings, the same way that Christianity – they leave a little bit in, but all of the religions, it doesn't matter which one it is, they've all been man-made.

Alan: Mystery Babylon was the mystery because it was so hard to exactly say what it was, because it contained all of the religions of its time, it updated all of the religions of its time, and it altered all of the religions of its time. It was also a commercial system incorporated within it, with an ordered bureaucratic system to run the whole show. Mystery Babylon was and is today; it's still the same thing today. However, when the Buddha died, the sects who got together, and by that time there were many different sects that had minor differences.

Jackie: Just like the followers of Jesus.

Alan: Just like Constantine's big setup about 300 years after he died, they got together and created the official version and codified it and put the laws down and the rules and all the rest of it.

Jackie: For our listeners, that would have been the first Council of Nicea in, what was it, 325 AD? I do have a small book on this a man wrote in 1916 and he quoted from the ancient historians back at that time. In fact, I read lots of the book to our listeners, it's a little book, I found it in a small little bookstore down in Philly. Basically, I know that many people, those who have believed, that the "Bible" or "Holy Bible" is the divinely inspired word of God; and if enough people could read that book, when you read the speech that was allegedly given by Constantine there, he was dialoging those bishops to consensus. That's exactly what he did and they voted, like you said, they came up with what the dogma and doctrine was going to be; and anybody that didn't go along with it was anathematized. In fact, it did mention Arius their bishop and basically what I could understand what he was teaching was what Jesus taught – he was the son of God, so he was created – this is what got him anathematized, and that we are all the sons of God, so they ejected him from the church and anathematized him. That means that he was worthy of being killed and he was of course no longer a bishop and his information was evidently so critically important that Constantine declared, decreed anybody caught with any of Arius' writings would be put to death. Arius was put to death when he was brought back.

Alan: He was put to death in "love," you see.

Jackie: Put to death in love, yeah, right. When they brought him back and they were going to reinstate him—

Alan: They poisoned him.

Jackie: Will Durant in his "History of Civilization" about Caesar and Jesus, he described his death in public – and the man not only evacuated his bowels, but his internal organs, his spleen, his liver, right in public. This is length that they go to keep truth from the people. I hope that our listeners who are listening to this, that the last thing in the world that I want to do, and I know that is so for you, is to discourage people – but that it could be encouraging to be released from the kind that has been promulgated, fear of God. It's literally fear of God and anybody would fear that god Jehovah. I remember once, a long time ago, one of our listeners called in and he said: if we don't have this to hold on to, what do we have? I said: the truth. The truth, that's what we have to hold on to. I know that it's hurtful sometimes, but if we really think it out and we should be grateful and giving thanks that we are beginning to discover the truth.

Alan: Yes, because with it comes a tremendous release when you understand and you accept the fact that everything has been covered with so many lies for political reasons and for control purposes. That's why organized religions are called organized religions; they're authorized.

Jackie: They are organized.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
July 6, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Wednesday. It is the 6th of July in the year 2005. It is end of our broadcast week, Monday through Wednesday now. It goes pretty fast. Last night I was reading to you from the third book that Alan Watt has written titled "Cutting Through" and Alan is with us tonight so maybe we can discuss some of what's in the book. I have some questions myself about this situation, the Hapiru or Habiru, and maybe Alan can clear it up and I thought it would be a good idea to do that on the air because sometimes Alan and I have conversations off air and that I am so regretful that I wasn't tape recording because you can never repeat it.

Jackie: Okay. Let me tell you where my confusion is. The Habiru or Hapiru are spelled differently but they seem to have been – well, they talked about 1500 BC where they were written in the ancient accounts and obviously before that. That word back then meant the "dusty ones" because they were the caravaneers or whatever you call them, the merchants, the bankers, the gold and silver and money lenders, et cetera, the controllers. Okay. Would that be the priesthood, Alan?

Alan: I think they were probably were not the actual priesthood, generally speaking. They would run a hierarchy though. There's no doubt there would be some sort of coordination of a hierarchy because they all had exactly the same system regardless of which countries they had run into and which countries they were trading with. They were all using the same weights and measures wherever they went, which goes back to a common source and it was primarily silver they were introducing into those countries in those days. They had sources of silver and they also owned the mines in fact.

Jackie: And those were what they referred to as the Habiru?

Alan: Yes. The spelling is irrelevant. The Greeks wrote it one way and another bunch would write another way. It's the phonetic pronunciation that's important, so whether there's an H there or not doesn't matter.

Jackie: Oh where you put the emphasis on which--

Alan: Yes, because it was a term to describe the same and they were all Aramaic speaking people and they traded all the way from the Middle East into India and back again. In fact, Aramaic was the common trade language from basically the Aramean area right through the Middle East and across to India. That was the language of trade you might say was Aramaic.

Jackie: Maybe you don't know, but it seemed to me that they would have to have learned to speak the languages of the people with whom they traded.

Alan: They did. Sometimes the banker ones, the higher orders of them, would settle in a city for a period of time.

Jackie: To take over that city?

Alan: They'd settle in the city and most of them settled outside the city. They were nomadic people. They were always nomadic by nature and hence they had no city of their own basically, most of the time anyway. They'd settle on the outskirts of the city and seemed to have a disdain for the city people and I have no doubt that the city people had a disdain for them too because their whole business was haggling – haggling over the price of things and the price of goods and so on, which isn't a pleasant thing you know. However, that was their nature was to haggle for a good deal, but wherever they went they tried to introduce the silver monetary system, first by weighing and then eventually when coinage came along they introduced the coins.

Jackie: Because those were weighed out perfectly already.

Alan: It's known too that these – they had different names for them. The Phoenicians basically were almost the seafaring branch of the same people, so the Phoenicians seem to be of the same people. It was almost a brotherhood really.

Jackie: See, it's really confusing to me.

Alan: It isn't so confusing because it's like any brotherhood that's in on a big scam. You have to have secrecy. You have to keep apart from the other people and you'd have to instill it into your followers to keep apart from other people so that they wouldn't loose their mouths off and let the game away that they were into so many different scams.

Jackie: In the Armana letters that you quote here, it says, "There was also a large and apparently increasing class of stateless and reputedly lawless people in Palestine and Syria to whom the appellation Apiru (or Habiru) was given. It has now become certain that they were a class of heterogenous (mixed races) ethnic origin..." Well, what were their races?

Alan: That was a later – the term again seemed to be used again for another bunch who came along who joined them and these were a mercenary class which had originated from people who'd been cast out of tribes and cast out of cities. They were kicked out and so they became another branch of the brotherhood and that's where centered themselves and they would lease themselves out for hire as mercenaries.

Jackie: All right. How does that connect up with the people today that we know as Jews? That they call themselves Jews so that's the only thing I know to call them.

Alan: The ones today of course, they primarily come from the Khazarian lineage which was centered around the Black sea area and converted en masse to Judaism around the 5th or 6th century AD.

Jackie: 740 AD I think I read. I would have been around there.

Alan: Most of them don't have any lineage too, what was traditionally – in fact in Judaism didn't appear until the fall of Babylon and that's when a group of people came out of there with the Pharisees leading them and that's when the first time in history that the term Jew or Judaic people was mentioned.

Jackie: And they call them Jews but actually it would be more appropriate to call them Talmudists. I mean it's a religion that binds them all.

Alan: It was a religion that was born in Babylon. There's no secret there because rabbis will tell you that there are two – one is a continuation of the other. In other words, the Judaic or the Exodus of leaving Babylon, the one that was written or compiled after that is really an extension of the part that was condensed inside Babylon; and when they come to points of doctrine, if there's a conflict, the Babylonian Talmud gets precedence over the other.

Jackie: Well okay. Where was the other – what do you mean the other?

Alan: The other one was a continuation because they were still writing the Talmud when they came out and they continued it for a long time.

Jackie: So it would basically be the Babylonian Talmud?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: And they would be Talmudists?

Alan: Well, they would be, but the Pharisees themselves were a separate sect. In fact, they were a secret brotherhood, very small in fact, initially, 2,000 years ago, and they were only one small sect among many but they did have an awful lot of money, so they had power because of money. Part of the tradition at that time 2,000 years ago was to treat their fellow Jews they supposedly looked after no better than anyone else, because in a sense the Pharisaic tradition coming out of Babylon was the ancient Illuminati of its day.

Jackie: And they weren't even of the same race as the people that they took over there?

Alan: Are you talking about the ones who went back recently?

Jackie: No. When they came out and they went and they read the new law to the people, there is an account of that in the Old Testament and said the people wept because the people had already begun to intermingle.

Alan: Also, one of them found a holy book and so they didn't even know what their own laws were supposed to have been. I mean it's such nonsense; it's a fairy tale. You do understand this is a fairy tale?

Jackie: Yes.

Alan: It's a foundation myth you see and in foundations myths they always make up a lot of things to try and justify something which never really happened and that's why you have so many contradictions. However, in reality, Judaism came on the scene for the first time with anything at all to do with what we now know as the New Testament. It came on the scene only about 400 BC.

Jackie: And a lot of what was involved in that, of course there were a lot of made up stories.

Alan: They were all borrowed stories.

Jackie: Exactly and they used some actual history to weave it in about and around their sect of people, the people that they lassoed into that "religion?"

Alan: You've got to understand that in all times, more so back then, you had a military peasant class with a priesthood – no different from the Catholic Church up until a couple of hundred years ago, and it was quite easy for a bunch of priests to say, "hey, you used to belong to this land and your ancestors used to live here and here's what your history is," and it could be all brand new to them you see, because all they did was release a bunch of slaves out of Babylon and those slaves themselves became a--

Jackie: Were those a mix of people also?

Alan: There's no doubt about it. How could you lose your language when you've been in captivity for less than 100 years?

Jackie: What do you mean by that?

Alan: Supposedly they went in speaking Hebraic and came out speaking Aramaic.

Jackie: So what is the Hebrew language?

Alan: The Hebrew language really is a much later compilation. In fact, it wasn't until Maimonides in about the 12th century or so, who was the high-rabbi as they called him of his day, it wasn't until he put the language together what they called properly. In other words, he filled in all the vowel points, which were not there. Without the vowels what they used to do was write the consonants and just a little pencil point where a vowel would be because there were so many dialects that different people would put down different vowels in the word. What Maimonides did was to officially put down into law basically what the vowels were so they'd all say the same words and pronounce them the same, but without those particular vowels it was just generally Aramaic. It wasn't different from anything else.

Jackie: Wasn't it Maimonides that said or at least he was quoted as saying that even the best of Christians are worthy of death?

Alan: He didn't write so much on Christians. He wrote more so on Moslems because most of them lived in the Moslem countries in those days and they had to move from one to another due to warfare. What he did do was to give "Guidelines to the Perplexed." That was the title of it. That's where he laid down the rules of how to survive in other people's countries.

Jackie: Is that the 600 and some Halakah or their laws?

Alan: He wrote an awful lot of laws down, but he himself was not a – see, there's different kinds of Judaism and that what people fail to realize. He himself did not believe in the supernatural stories of the Old Testament and other rabbis were against him because of that. He was a very much a rationalist in his way of approaching things. After he died there were actually fights in different Middle Eastern countries, fights to the death between rival groups of Jews – one supporting Maimonides and one supporting the traditional mystical type of rabbinical studies. Maimonides caused a lot of problems after he died because of the laws and so on he'd written.

Jackie: So these people who became "Jews" because of this religion that this priesthood made up for them, they were of a mixed race also. What about the "12 Tribes"? Was it 10 or 12 tribes?

Alan: There was never any 12 Tribes of Israel.

Jackie: Were there ever 10?

Alan: No.

Jackie: What were there?

Alan: There was none. It's a made-up history which never existed.

Jackie: So the Benjamites and the-- Alan: It's all nonsense.

Jackie: All of it?

Alan: It's all in that third book. It's all zodiacal constellations. It's not to do with real people.

Jackie: Okay. What I was thinking that they used those names in the book where it has all the different names of each of the leaders of each of those tribes, Daniel and all of them, so those were made up names too? They did not exist as people?

Alan: Not as people, no. In fact, most of them were titles to the sun. They were titles of the sun or titles of the godhead and Daniel is: "God judges." It's just like when the Christians give titles to Jehovah: Jehovahjireh and Jehovah-this and Jehovah-that. These are all titles.

Jackie: There are those who say it is not Jehovah. It is Yahweh.

Alan: Well, the mouth of madness is very big and you'll find that there are many people whiling around in the whirlpool inside and that's what religion is for. It's like Christianity, it's so ridiculous the way it's gone. You've got one group almost falling out with another group because one stands on one leg and waves their arms in the air and one stands on the other. It's ridiculous and that's the mouth of madness.

Jackie: All right. Let's go back to the Khazars. We were talking one time. This was quite some time ago and you said I think they were there all the time. Those today that evidentially from the land of the Khazars, Khazaria, and they were a Turkic-Mongolian mix?

Alan: That's a bit wrong there.

Jackie: Okay. What is it?

Alan: It was an empire. It was an empire like the British Empire and just like the British Empire you would have English in the middle and then you'd have other tribes that were taken over from other cultures and colors even around them, all part of that empire and then all eventually called Khazarian. In fact in the Khazarian outer tribes, they were all used for different functions, but some of the outer tribes were even Moslem. The inner group were called the Royal Khazars and they were a nobility just like the nobility of Europe who only intermarried amongst themselves and the Royal Khazars were red-headed or blonde, blue-eyed or green-eyed and as I say they only intermarried amongst themselves, although they ran an empire of many different types of people who all eventually were called Jews when they adopted Judaism. They converted the whole country. A country about the size of Spain converted overnight to Judaism. Now when they disappeared--

Jackie: Oh, excuse me. One of the things that you had said, these people that converted to Judaism, the tribe in Khazaria. You said I think they were there all the time and you said something about that they had migrated, that you believed or had read or whatever that they had migrated into that area.

Alan: I have no doubt they did because they had symbols very similar to Egypt. The only religious symbols that they had were the obelisks. That was the only ones – by people, in fact by rabbis that went into Khazaria during that conversion period. The only symbol of religion that you noticed was the phallic symbol everywhere.

Jackie: The obelisk?

Alan: Yes, the obelisk. One of them said that they were basically a pantheistic people, meaning they worshiped nature, the earth, the "sciences" you might say and they didn't have really a very mystical view of anything.

Jackie: Do you think that these people if they did migrate into that area, do you think they were led there by leaders that knew that this was going to happen eventually in the future. In other words, they're there waiting?

Alan: Yes, I'd say so because the Khazars themselves, it's an interesting lifestyle that they had. It resembled so closely the nobility of the Normans and all of the European aristocracy descended from the Normans who appeared in Europe at the same time as the nobility of the Khazars disappeared from Khazaria. The same traditions were held by the Normans where they would migrate throughout the year to different palaces of different cities, just like the Queen goes from Buckingham Palace up to this one or that one or whatever throughout the year. That was their tradition. However, they also controlled the trade routes, in fact, to get to China and so on, you'd have to go straight through their land and they lived on taxation. They taxed everyone who moved throughout their land, so that was one of the main incomes.

Jackie: Weren't they even taxing people who had to use the rivers?

Alan: Yes and so they were heavily into taxation and the taxation system. They had a mounted nobility cavalry, advanced in its day, that had their own coats of arms and went into battle in certain formations so they were pretty well invincible in their day. Interestingly enough, as they disappeared from the land of Khazaria, a group of people appear in Normandy in France and call themselves Normans (or at least the historians called them Normans) and they had the same techniques with calvary, coats of arms and everything else and it's thought that this was the nobility of the Khazars who came into Europe and took over the whole of Europe through force of arms. They had unlimited financing to hire mercenary groups and the wars of the Normans on even Britain took many, many years of full scale war, which tells you there was tremendous funding to keep armies in the fields for such a long time. Plus, they built wooden forts on the coastline of France, some of them a few acres in size, and they were prefabricated and they towed them up by parts over the channel to England and re-erected them. You were talking about something on the scale of the Second World War here. Unlimited financing to take over the whole of Europe and definitely with a strategy and a plan and I have no doubt at all that the Catholic Church was part of it, because along with the Normans came the Catholic Church and one basically stood up for the other.

Jackie: Then once they installed the kings and the queens they just continued to interbreed with one another?

Alan: Yes, right up to the present day.

Jackie: Some of our listeners who may be newer that did not hear you say this, but it's something that we have to keep in mind, is that these kings and queens were not even of the same nationality if you would of the people that they were ruling over.

Alan: Exactly.

Jackie: When you said that I thought of Catherine the Great of Russia. She was a German princess and she ruled over the Russians.

Alan: Yes and you probably saw the movie "Braveheart," did you?

Jackie: Yes. Alan, in about 50 seconds we're going to be taking our break so remember what you're going to say about "Braveheart" and let's pick it up on the other side. All right, ladies and gentlemen, we're going to be back. We'll be right back with Alan Watt so stay with us. We're talking about the contents of the book here and it certainly is worth having. If you've got I and II this wraps a lot of it up, although I think Alan already has another in mind. If you don't have I and II he suggests that you get them first so you'll have more of a background on ancient history and this won't seem so foreign to you. Before we talk about Mel Gibson, what was the movie?

Alan: "Braveheart."

Jackie: Braveheart." When I called you today to see if you would come on with us, of course we got into conversation and I wanted to remember the statement that you had made about people who want the truth. Will you repeat that as you mentioned it?

Alan: People generally don't want the truth. If they wanted the truth they'd have to be willing to forego everything they'd ever known, believed, been taught, instilled with, or whatever, and it's like freefalling out of a plane. You've got to jump out of the plane and hope for the best and be willing to allow what's going to happen to happen. Most people really are looking for something which will either augment that which they've already chosen to believe or they're looking for some form of comfort.

Jackie: Right and that's what you said.

Alan: That's the problem.

Jackie: The truth is not comfortable and it's because it is always such a shock. When we've believed something right from the very time we were born and it was pounded and pounded and pounded into our heads and even the history that we were given. The only thing that I see that may have been true at least partially in more recent history are dates and names.

Alan: That's it. You know that's how history is taught in school, is battles, places and names but you never get the why or who financed it. Who benefited from it? That's all omitted.

Jackie: It's all memorization stuff. You have to be able to remember the presidents starting from the beginning to whatever your present is at that stage. I think every school child has to do that as though it means something.

Alan: It's indoctrination.

Jackie: Well of course it is and not only that but it's irrelevant because we know nothing about the presidents and what we do know about them or have been told about them are lies.

Alan: They walked on water. They were superhuman and they walked on water and they never used the bathroom, just like the actors on TV.

Jackie: You know when you hear people calling the church today apostate it's as though all of that means it's different and it's not the "true church." Whatever it was, ever was, a true church, it was all a fabrication of the priesthood.

Alan: It was very cleverly contrived many thousands of years ago and they created a trinity. They always have trinities in the Mystery Religion and they created Judaism, Christianity and the Moslem all from the same source; and of course they used them all to fight each other, which enriched those behind it. They could also bring them all together at the end, one way or another; Christianity has joined voluntarily but the Moslems have been brought in by force.

Jackie: The third way.

Alan: Getting back to Braveheart, in the movie they portray Robert the Bruce as having the legal titlehood for taking over Scotland but he would never do it when Wallace was alive. Then it shows you at the very end of the movie the final battle with Bruce leading the people at the Battle of Bannockburn where they routed the English, but that was to unite the country under the guise of freeing the people.

Jackie: To unite. What do you mean, Scotland?

Alan: Scotland, and so what they did, again, this is the dialectic in action. The English are invading. Scotland has many, many clans all living free and independently and along comes this guy who will be king and after the battle he becomes king, he unifies the country, nationalizes it and introduces taxation for the first time in history. What he did is centralize power and it's so cleverly done and Robert the Bruce was actually Robert de Bruce. He was a Norman knight. He wasn't Scottish at all, so this nobility one way or another became the crowned heads of all of Europe.

Jackie: William Wallace, was he a for-real character?

Alan: Yes, he was.

Jackie: I got real intrigued about William Wallace after I saw that and I wanted to know more about him and Chuck and I were down in Philly and we were at Borders books or one of the big ones and this particular bookstore is like three levels and all kinds of books and I found two books on William Wallace and one basically was when they made up their like poetry to tell a story.

Alan: Sometimes they'll say a note. A note is someone who's died.

Jackie: A node. That's basically what it was. They said there was so very little in history able to tell about William Wallace. Now do you think that's true or they don't want people to know the truth or what?

Alan: In Scotland, because Scotland was a colony of England you've got to remember, Scotland after winning its independence right up until James and James was a descendent of de Bruce, the Stewards were actually another name for the same bunch of de Bruce.

Jackie: The Stewarts?

Alan: They intermarried and intermarried, called themselves the Stewards of Scotland, meaning the keepers, so they changed from de Bruce to Steward which became Stewart as time went on, but James was a direct descendent from them with Norman nobility blood in him too, which doesn't surprise me. Stewart

Jackie: Over all these millennia this group has lasted but they aren't always of the same – the leadership maintains their royal bloodlines but they were in the beginning part of that mixture of people?

Alan: Within the group there's two. There's the ones who only interbred very closely and they're the ones with the high noble stations in life et cetera.

Jackie: Do you think there's a strain? What I'm trying to get clear here, they refer to the Habiru as a mixture so they weren't a pure bloodline of anything?

Alan: No, they weren't.

Jackie: These people – we'll talk about the royal Khazars, the Normans, was that a pure strain?

Alan: As far as we can tell they go back for probably for about 1500 years or so that we can trace at keeping their own marriage lineages and interbreeding at the top.

Jackie: What would be their race or nationality or whatever?

Alan: It's one that they haven't given a name to, to the public. You see this entire world that we live in is a pyramid structure and it's a pyramid structure which is called civilization, which is only possible with the introduction of their money, and the whole world revolves around their money. All school children are trained to get a job to work for their money. It's all to do with the monied system which this small elite have controlled since the beginning of what we're given as time.

Jackie: Are you saying then, that if they did a DNA on let's say Queen Elizabeth they're going to find genes different than anybody else has?

Alan: It would be very interesting to get a hold of it but I don't think they'll ever let it happen.

Jackie: I mean wouldn't that be what you're inferring? If they're of a bloodline that has--

Alan: What you'll definitely get are the same types of genes, traces of other genes. For instance, we know that the Bush's are related to them. There are so many families. So many American presidents are related to them.

Jackie: You said the Bush's are just kind of little twigs on the tree though.

Alan: They're lower down. In fact, Kerry apparently was closer, he had more ties to the royalty than Bush did, but they only give you their own ones to vote for it seems to be.

Jackie: So the people today that are known as Jews because they were born into this religion. I'm not talking about Sammy Davis, Jr. and Marilyn Monroe and those people who "convert" to that religion. But they are not supposed to intermarry. I guess that's just to keep control of the tribe?

Alan: The thing is, though, most of them who are not nobility, remember, have always intermarried. In fact, most books out in the bookstores will tell you that there's an ongoing crisis within Judaism because so many of the men are marrying into gentile families. The same thing doesn't hold quite as – and they always have done you see, so the lesser ones have always bred into other peoples and many have lost their descendancy by doing so and the rabbis have been screaming at them for hundreds of years to stop doing it and they're still shouting at them to stop doing it.

Even Woody Allen was on a little program – he was with his wife and she's gentile and his mother was there. The mother is home and the father was there and the mother came out with the usual thing you know, in front of this girl too,

"It's a pity you married a gentile because if we all do that then we'll disappear," and that's the standard cry of the rabbis.

Jackie: So these people that do object to the intermarrying actually believe that they're of a special bloodline?

Alan: They believe that, there's no doubt about it. Many Jewish publications believe that they are. I mean they're very boastful in promoting all the scientists in history or actors or whoever. They're very boastful of their lineages and who's come out of Judaism and they do boast that they are superior to other people. And I always think how ironical that it was inevitable that the clash in Germany would occur because here you have Adolph – not really Adolph, it was Himmler and the ones behind him who were really into this new religion, very, very New Age at the time, Theosophy really, of creating a Superman, a special superior breed; and here the people holding the reigns of the money power in Germany who already believed that they were the superior breed. There had to be a clash. There had to be a clash and maybe that's the true saying that comes from their own Talmud, "For every action, there's an equal and opposite reaction," because you had two people claiming to be Supermen or special or superior living in the same country. Something had to happen and I think it's sad when people actually believe the mythologies written by rabbis which pump them up into truly believing that they are superior. Now generally that would be called racism if anyone else said we're superior to you because we've created so many musicians and so many scientists and so on and we're genetically superior. Now if anyone said that that would be called hate speech.

Jackie: They all go to the – no, I shouldn't say all, but so many of them go to the high colleges. They get preferential treatment.

Alan: There is another thing that the people have to understand and this is very true as well. The Western peoples were brought up to be employees. The education system was introduced all throughout Europe and Britain and America for the average people; it was to train employees to fill jobs. Whereas in Judaism, like Mohammedans, they're the same, they will – the first generation will slave and scrimp and do without to put their children through the best schools you can find because they are well aware through their history that you don't get anywhere by being an employee. You have to get to the top and they do sacrifice for their children, so do the Chinese. However, it's one thing that was never ever instilled in the Western culture. The Western culture were definitely bred and raised and pushed towards being employees.

Jackie: That makes all the sense in the world. What do you want to be when you grow up? Do you want to be a policeman? Do you want to be a nurse? But it is never what type of business are you going to start?

Alan: No, it's never, so people can decry the Arabs who are coming in, Chinese or Jews, but they do ensure their children go to the best schools and they do sacrifice a lot to make sure that they get through, so you can't fault them for that. The fault lies in the fact that in the education system and the political system that's emerged or was created in the West, the Western peoples were raised and bred to be workers to others.

Jackie: To bee workers.

Alan: That's right, to bee – that's the yellow and black school bus, the worker bee. There's no doubt about it.

Jackie: I wish I had a more clear understanding of this because it's still very muddy in my head.

Alan: You can't go on preconceived ideas. You have to realize that in ancient times there were powers at work – very, very astute powers with tremendous communications between countries, which kept even the ancient world all working in a system. It wasn't a haphazard system and they had knowledge of what they called previous ages. In other words, civilizations long before Sumer, long before 5,000 BC. There are powers at play in this world which have perfected the systems of deception prior to Sumer and I've no doubt they had much more advanced civilizations at one point according to their own histories of the Druids and the historian Tacitus who took some of the legends of the Druids and they survived previous ages by living inside mountains during floods and ice ages. The same story is told in Mt. Parnassus for the Greeks, and you'll find the same thing in the Himalayas north of India and that's where the high Brahmans say that they survived the last age. You're talking about tremendous sciences held in the hands of the few who always will ensure that they survive, just as today there are underground bases all over the world stocked and prepared for the elite should any plague or warfare breakout again.

Jackie: Okay, but then we'll go back about 3,600 years, about the conflagration that Immanuel Velikovsky wrote about and it appears that the majority of the population of this earth was wiped out.

Alan: It's very possible a good proportion were, but I still think there were some people who survived on the surface of the planet and then one day many, many centuries later a few of these high priests came out of the mountains and started the whole ball rolling again. That's what it seems to be. In fact the Armenians lived around Mt. Ararat and that's where the fable of Noah's Ark came from. It wasn't a boat or an ark. It was a place of safety because Mt. Ararat is riddled with ancient tunnels where an elite came through bad times before.

Jackie: Way up high in the mountain evidentially.

Alan: Yes and deep within it. In fact, it's so closely guarded even today by the armies around there.

Jackie: How long ago was that supposed to have happened?

Alan: The Egyptians, the Druids and the Brahmans all say that there was one which happened round about 4,000 - 5,000 BC, a big one. A big one and there have been minor ones and localized ones in between.

Jackie: You're talking the flood?

Alan: Flood, ice age, something like that. I mean there's no doubt that there have been many ice ages and even the scientists agree with that. They don't generally agree with very much.

Jackie: But they happened immediately?

Alan: Yes and that's the odd thing with ice ages as we're given it, but there's been many and of course what happens between ice ages is the ice melts, so you get to the point where as it's melting the world gets warmer and something happens and it goes back to an ice age again.

Jackie: What seemed to happen is that at least the account of the Velikovsky's at that particular conflagration, something happened to the earth's crust where what once was very, very warm suddenly was covered with ice and it had to have been something that fast to find those huge mastodons frozen solid in the ice but still had grass and plants, those tropical plants in their throat, in their teeth.

Alan: That was Siberia. That area was the Equator at one time.

Jackie: So something happened to the whole rotation and et cetera of planet earth?

Alan: All you need is one good comet going close by to upset the gravitational paths and so on to upset the kilter of it.

Jackie: And it wouldn't be gravitational. It would be electromagnetic attraction.

Alan: It's all tied in to gravity. That would be enough to do it, or the only other possibly and this is a possibility. I don't rule it out that there have been sciences here before, maybe millions of years ago, which were never entirely lost because the mammoths – the scientific team in 1905 went out to examine in Siberia. They found that one of these mastodons or hairy mammoths also had an erection, which meant it was instantly frozen, and it's hard to imagine even with a comet or something to cause that kind of instantaneous freezing. Science can do it on a small scale that we know of – and we are at the bottom level of science from professorship down.

Jackie: We're out of time. We're out of our hour. Okay, folks, we're going to be back Monday. Hope you have a nice four days off and we'll see you then.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
July 11, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Alan, are you there?

Alan: Yes, I'm here.

Jackie: Did you just hear a beep?

Alan: I think you're on though.

Jackie: All right. Well, ladies and gentlemen, good evening. Thanks for joining us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Monday and the date is the 11th, Alan?

Alan: It is, yes.

Jackie: It is the 11th of July, folks, in the year 2005. I can usually remember the year, Alan.

Alan: Yes. That's a good sign.

Jackie: Dates just absolutely totally escape me. We have Alan Watt with us tonight. I was out in the garden until 8:30 and certainly not prepared and Alan is always just so gracious and kindly agreed to come on with us and we didn't really have anything set. Well, we don't normally anyway, I guess, do we, Alan?

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: Except sometimes I say well I'd like to talk about that and what I'd like to talk about right now is you're in northern Canada and your temperature today was 111 degrees.

Alan: That's right. 111 and it stayed there for hours and only started to cool down about an hour ago. It's about 86 right now.

Jackie: Well that's a blessing.

Alan: Emergency stations opened up in some cities called "cooling centers" where they'd rush people to cool down.

Jackie: And you don't know if they're claiming that records have been set?

Alan: They haven't said anything so far, as far as I know.

Jackie: Do you know if temperatures like this in the area where you are – I mean were they at one time common or normal, Alan?

Alan: No. This is not normal at all and especially further north. I mean these temperatures should be close to the Equator but not this far north.

Jackie: Yes, really and I would think that you would probably have at the most days in the 80s and probably cool evenings. That's the way it used to be here. When we moved here 10 years ago we would have – it could be a very beautiful maybe 80-85 degrees go down to 55 at night and it's beautiful sleeping weather, but to have 111 degrees. That's like out in Dead Valley. Is that Death Valley?

Alan: With humidity on top of that.

Jackie: With humidity, yes. Is there a formula for figuring out, well I suppose there is. If the temperature is 110 and the humidity is like what 70 percent, figuring out the actual heat factor, Alan.

Alan: Up here you've got so many lakes as well so the more heat you get the more evaporation into the air and it gets terribly, terribly humid, but this is ridiculous the way it is right now. Even if you're sitting still, you're soaked. They can do wonders these days with science.

Jackie: Yes, they can, can't they?

Alan: They're dosing the skies with all these chemicals. Then they cause the smog as they call it and then they blame the public for driving and then causing the smog, which is coming down from the aircraft above you. The idea is to get everybody off the road and the public will because they never look up at the sky. They'll believe what they're told and they'll say by God it's getting warmer and it certainly is some kind of smog so maybe we should stop driving.

Jackie: And global warming and we have to be good little citizens and car-pool and give up our second car.

Alan: Then eventually they'll move us in towards the cities, the habitat areas, and that's the agenda. How else do you get the public to move? You cause the problems and then you force them to move. That's standard.

Jackie: Think about it. It's the same way they caused the environmental problem and I tell you it occurred to me, when we were going – I think I mentioned this before. When Chuck and I were going to the watershed meetings and they had the Army Corp of Engineers come out and this one woman brought a video to show us because we had so many questions and she wanted to answer our concerns. They showed actual photographs, movie film of the pollution that was coming out of the factories right directly into the rivers and she said our problem used to be point source pollution because we knew exactly where it was coming from, we got all of our wonderful laws passed that prohibits it, but now the problem is non-point source pollution. Well, you know what that is, Alan? It's runoff from the farmers' fields. And they're starting to – well, I won't say who this person is, but this person has two horses and about 40 acres for the horses to graze on and they've already been to visit this person to find out what they're going to do with that damn horse manure that's being dropped on the fields, Alan. That's sick.

Alan: Again, this is all the agenda and it's going to get more and more ridiculous as they go along.

Jackie: I'll tell you one more thing that just springs to mind. I have a report here for an environmental working group out of Washington, D.C. and they discovered all kinds of toxic metals that were being put into the fertilizer that was sold to the farmers for their fields. I mean we're talking cadmium, nickel, lead, all kinds of heavy metals et cetera, because there was no congressional oversight, okay. Well, the farmers, well guess what? Because there's no congressional oversight they don't have to put on the bags – there was arsenic in it and that kind of stuff. They don't have to put on the bags that these ingredients are in the fertilizer, so the farmers put this fertilizer on the fields and then they get the farmers for polluting the streams with these toxic metals, Alan.

Alan: Sure. Sure they do. Everything is a setup because everything is a plan and they must make the plan come to fruition by causing the problems and so they are responsible for it in the first place, just like they're responsible for spraying the skies on a daily basis and at night as well. This stuff is coming down. It's in the rainwater. It's in the snow even in the wintertime and of course they can also cause this intense refraction of sunlight. Once you have the air saturated with metallic particles, billions and billions and trillions of tiny metallic particles, they act like mirrors you see and they reflect the light back and forth all the time so it simply doesn't hit the earth or bounce back and go into outer space. It's bouncing through all these mirrors and this is causing the warming effect and this has been noticed in previous years when they've been spraying heavily. They cause the problem, sure, and then they blame the public for causing it and unfortunately it works pretty well because the public never look up at the sky.

Jackie: I know. My new neighbor going to be across the road, Donnie, was out brush-hogging tonight, stopped and we chatted a bit before I came and we happened to be standing out there and they happened to be chemtrailing us. I had talked to Donnie about this before but you could tell it just didn't gel and I said look up there. There's a chemtrail, Donnie, and he looked up and he said yep, ah-ha, and then there were two more over towards the west and so I just started talking to him about it. I got some emails about this and that was way back then, wasn't it, Alan?

Alan: It was.

Jackie: And I was reading it and I just quite – I didn't disbelieve it but I needed some proof and then I got calls from friends. A call from a friend in Ohio, her husband is a doctor. She said Jackie, I don't know what's going on in the skies but she said you ought to see they've been putting these lines down and they're puffing up and she said everybody is sick and I said oh my, my. Well, I'm going to fax you or email you some information that I have. Three days later I get a call from a friend in Denver. She told me the same thing. She said they've been laying these trails north and south for half the day and then they turn them east and west. She said there's a perfect checkerboard up there and she said everybody's windows have this greasy-like film on it, car windows et cetera. So, Alan, I started talking about it and I am telling you I got calls from all over the country. All over the country and I had never seen them, but I was telling Donnie all this and so he was listening to me because it was my awakening so to speak and I said I was telling our listeners I was doing the broadcast at 6 p.m. at the time and whenever this happened it was the sun was beginning to set over there in the west and I could see it out the door from my studio and that night I was saying well I've never seen a chemtrail. See, we live in the country and I happened to look up and there was a perfect X in the sky, Alan, and I watched the plane putting the underline under the X. That was my first experience actually seeing one of these things. Although I have lots of photographs that listeners have sent.

Alan: Yes, but Joe Average can see them for himself if he wants to look up once in a while because they're doing it everywhere.

Jackie: They don't see it when they look up, Alan. No, they don't. I told you this I believe that when – the children know what chemtrails are, my grandchildren, and Jody was telling me that she and Ashy and Ashy's boyfriend were outside one day and Jody looked up and there they were, laying the chemtrails, and she said look up there Ash and Ash said oh my God. Mama would be having fits right now and her boyfriend said what. She said well look up there and he looked up and he said what and then she had to explain to him what the hell he was (excuse my language) what he was seeing, Alan. He looked up and said what.

Alan: I've seen it even at a local fill-up station and right above the sky there was a mess of trails and they were still laying them and I just mentioned it to the guy who was filling the tank in my vehicle and he just casually glanced up and yeah, yeah. It didn't penetrate.

Jackie: No. Well see that's what I saw happen with Donnie and I proceeded to go through this little story to him and then he went huh. I said just watch it Donnie. Watch it pop up. I stopped in a little plant store when I did grocery shopping last week and told the lady there about them, Alan.

Alan: See, that's what Zbigniew Brzezinski talked about in his books with "The Technetronic Era," which is to do with mind control for the masses and he said that "shortly the public will be unable to think for themselves. Instead, they will be downloaded with their thoughts from the previous day's news and that's all they'll be able to talk about." In other words, if the news does not mention something they themselves will dismiss it if they see it.

Jackie: It doesn't register, does it?

Alan: No, because technically they've got to a stage where they don't think for themselves. They expect the media is there to do their thinking for them and will tell them what they should think about or worry about or be concerned about, therefore if the media doesn't mention the fact they're being sprayed, and you do, then they will ignore what you say.

Jackie: Yes, exactly.

Alan: It has to come from the media.

Jackie: It's the same thing with people when you show them the poison warning on toothpaste. If you swallow more than enough to brush your teeth, seek medical help or call a poison center immediately. Keep away from children under six. We start teaching our children to brush their teeth when they get teeth, Alan, and nobody reads that, but you show it to them and they just go, oh, I didn't know that. It's poisoned.

Alan: I know.

Jackie: And you know what I was just wondering? We've talked about this on the air. I wonder if we have any listener listening to this broadcast that brushes their teeth with fluoride toothpaste and if they do, unless you're a new listener and this is all new to you, then what would somebody do when they realize that they know this but they're still doing it if they realize it?

Alan: Well, it's doublethink. I mean it's doublethink if they know something is poisonous but because the ads are still on TV, the smiling faces and happy people, it confuses them. They can't go all the way with the fact that it's poisonous because they, the big THEY, those that look after us in a socialistic system, they obviously wouldn't do that to us to harm us.

Jackie: Do you think that any of our listeners think that big brother government is benevolent?

Alan: Unfortunately, you do have some.

Jackie: Really?

Alan: They can't quite get it because – see, the ordinary people cannot imagine evil on such a grand scale being committed upon the people by agendas which your own government participates in. I don't think there's been one politician in any Western country come out and publicly talked about the chemtrails overhead – not one.

Jackie: Well of course they wouldn't. Of course they wouldn't.

Alan: Therefore some people, unfortunately, because they don't talk about it at all, the person who still thinks government is real becomes confused and thinks "if they don't talk about it, maybe it's nothing at all."

Jackie: What about the person that sees the poison on the toothpaste tube? It's the same thing.

Alan: They are pretty well in doublethink as they say. They're able to hold two opposing opinions in their head at the same time about the same subject, which means at least on this subject they're psychotic.

Jackie: So in other words they could say I know that's true but I really don't believe it?

Alan: Yes, and yet that same person if you said to them drink a pint of gasoline, they'd think you're crazy and you say why don't you drink the gasoline? Because it's poison. We know that's poison. What does it say here about the fluoride? Well, it says it's poison. Are you going to keep using it? Oh yeah. That's doublethink right there. They cannot believe those smiling faces or the authorities would allow ads on TV that would harm them. They truly believe that all business is there to be benevolent. They believe that and that's a tragedy. Brzezinski said it. The people would give over their own ability to think and make decisions for themselves. He says they will give it over to experts and the authority and unfortunately people have been raised now to actually believe that that's what the media is there for, it's to do their thinking and to be their watchdog for them, and of course it never was and it certainly is not now.

Jackie: Because you know it occurs to me people that believe that we have to go to Iraq because they have weapons of mass destruction. I know because I saw it on the news. Well now, people are beginning to realize that this was a hoax because guess what? They've announced it. The media itself has said there were no weapons of mass destruction.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: And now they believe it, but I wonder how they feel about the war, even "Saddam Hussein was a tyrant. We had to go over there and take him out."

Alan: It was on the news here when even they had the inquires into it after it was all over and there was a panel there with George Bush on it and Colin Powell and a few others and George Bush said at the time, when he was asked the question, he said, "oh I never said that Saddam Hussein had anything to do with 9/11," and that is true.

Jackie: Did he really?

Alan: They left it to the media to eventually infer that Saddam Hussein was connected with it and so he justified it by saying "well the world's better off with Saddam Hussein there anyway." That was his justification for it.

Jackie: What about Osama Bin Laden?

Alan: Oh, he's all forgotten about now.

Jackie: Yes, well you know what? I got an email and of course, just because there's photographs that looks like Osama Bin Laden doesn't mean it's true, but that it's possible he's not even alive today.

Alan: It's possible he never existed.

Jackie: Well, that's a possibility too, isn't it? Although the Bin Laden family was very closely connected to the Bush's.

Alan: They've done documentaries for the CBC to show you that the Bush family and the Bin Laden family were actually business partners.

Jackie: Yes, they were.

Alan: In fact the family who got the rebuilding job of the Twin Towers after the first bombing was the Bin Laden Construction Group.

Jackie: You're kidding.

Alan: No. And that was Daddy Bush that awarded them the contract.

Jackie: Oh my God.

Alan: So they're all in bed together.

Jackie: But you're saying maybe – well, I think Osama Bin Laden probably did exist. He was a CIA asset, I think. I don't know.

Alan: He took the place of Goldstein in "1984." You always have to have a bad guy hiding that you never catch who does all these terrible things and with all their high-tech technology and millions of cameras in London even--

Jackie: Wait, wait. Okay, it took me a little bit to compute what you said, Goldstein in "1984." I was wondering who the heck Goldstein was and I didn't realize you were talking about the book, Orwell's book, and Goldstein was the terrorist, wasn't he?

Alan: All you ever saw was him on video. You never actually saw the person, just a figure on the video that they told you was Goldstein that was behind all the world's terror and it's the same with this Bin Laden. They can't find the guy – with all their equipment and millions of spies all over the world and the fact that they've infiltrated every group you could possibly imagine, in fact they sponsor most of them; and with all the cameras everywhere in London they couldn't even stop these bombings. Now who's kidding who?

Jackie: There was a French newspaper that printed a story that Bin Laden had been in a hospital undergoing kidney dialysis--

Alan: That's right, he was.

Jackie: And that the CIA had actually been to visit him, and so maybe he didn't exist but I think there probably was somebody; but their whole point was they just threw his name out there like they did with what's his name at Murrah Federal Building.

Alan: The fact is the Bin Laden family are actually Arabic nobility, so for one to split off from the rest of his family and supposedly go in the opposite direction is almost impossible. However, they needed a Bin Laden for that time because they already had all those countries slated for attack back in the 1990's in the New American Century Plan that was set up by Cheney and Bush and Wolfowitz and a whole bunch of them. They had that in their order that they wanted to attack Afghanistan first, then Iraq, then Iran, then Syria and that was all first done in 1992 then it was rewritten for the New American Century group, which is the group that Cheney and Wolfowitz belong to. They republished it in 1998 and sure enough, in 2001, they started the invasion right in that same sequence, so this was planned years ago to take over the Middle East.

Jackie: Yes and that brings to mind Norman Dodd when he got into the records of the Carnegie Foundation, their minutes of their meetings. They planned – and it was probably planned well before, but maybe this was the finalization, their details of World War I. This was in 1906 and they said well we should probably start it in the Balkans because that's always been a place of unrest. And I'll be a son of a gun, but they didn't start it until after 1914, wasn't it?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: And I don't know where I've read this, Alan. They didn't want to do it, have that war until the Federal Reserve Act passed in the U.S. so the American people could pay for the war.

Alan: That's right. It was all done to bring in world government and that's why they wanted the League of Nations set up to be the precursor of the UN but to bring in world government. H.G. Wells who worked for the British government as a propagandist, in fact the term he put out there, the propaganda term was "this is the war to end all wars," and so that was the slogan that all the troops in the world went by and died by, thinking they were going to bring in a more better world, you see.

Jackie: Oh, because they thought they would get their League of Nations in at that time. Woodrow Wilson was pushing that, wasn't he?

Alan: Yes. In fact, America funded most of the meetings.

Jackie: And prior to the League of Nations they called it The League to Enforce Peace.

Alan: That's right. Before that, it was the Concert of Europe. They've tried this for a long time and after World War I, H.G. Wells wrote in "The Open Conspiracy" (this was a non-fictional work), he said not enough countries are willing to give up their sovereignty so we shall have to have another world war, which they did. Everything that happens, every major occurrence which happens is planned that way long in advance. Everything, just like the New American Century in the '90's planned to establish what they called the democratic system in all the Moslem countries. Nothing happens spontaneously. Nothing happens by itself. It's all planned way ahead of time, including the finances which would be involved and even how much taxation they would need from the public to pay for it. All of this is planned in strategy.

Jackie: It's very clearly laid out in the Protocols back in the last three or four Protocols, Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion. You talk about a controlled economy, Alan.

Alan: This is a controlled economy.

Jackie: They laid it out beautifully. We have to take a break. Ladies and gentlemen, we'll be back with you in about a minute or a minute and a half with Alan Watt. Stay with us. Okay, we're back. Alan has written his third book and it is available now. If you haven't read I and II, you really should do that first because they really follow one another.

Folks, for those of you who are maybe fairly new listeners to try to imagine that everything that we have thought that we knew, everything we've been taught in history really happened, to find out that it's all a lie is really quite unbelievable. Alan started actually coming on air with us around in December of '98 and we did five weeks together. Alan pretty much blew our minds away with the ancient history and I kept telling our listeners I don't know that what Alan is telling us is true because I have not done this research and I have not read the books and know the things that he's telling us, so I kept in a sense warning our listeners not to take it in like it's gospel truth but to consider it. Then I started getting mail from listeners – things, their copies of old books et cetera, et cetera and say, look, this is exactly what Alan has been telling us and finally Alan really didn't have a choice. Well, he did and he made the right one of course, but to sit down and put this in writing, but it isn't just Alan's commentary. There are photocopies of ancient books, folks, that it gets to a point where you cannot deny it, as much as you would like to, and I can tell you for myself that there was a period of time where I felt that – in fact I said this to Alan one day. I said I feel like I'm in another world some place and nothing I see looks real to me and Alan says that's a very good place to start and I know that that is to open our minds.

You know you can't just wash out all that garbage that's been in it but you can replace it. You can replace it with truth or as close as we can get to truth because let's face it. If we aren't there – if we haven't been there ourselves we don't actually know, but, Alan, will you forgive me for going on like this?

Alan: Carry on.

Jackie: Folks, I remember one time I challenged him, kind of. I do that every now and then, and I asked him how many books he had read and he said oh I don't know, about 1,000 or maybe he said thousands, I don't know. I said well how do you know that the books that you've read are truth and the one thing that he told me that I have noticed, folks, and I know that this is so, although I cannot prove it of course, but when you read enough and you read from varied authors and various histories and there's a thread that runs through. As Alan said, you're never going to get all the truth in one book, but when you put enough of it together there is a thread that runs through that you know that there is truth there. Getting back to his books, this is what he has done with books I, II, and III and book three is called "Cutting Through." Alan, I don't remember which titles are the first two.

Alan: It's okay to call it I and II and III.

Jackie: Yes, I, II and III because it is cutting through the BS, isn't it? As I said earlier if you don't have I and II you would want to start there. If you have I and II you definitely will want to have number III. [See www.cuttingthroughthematrix.com for ordering information.]

Anyway, back to what we were talking about. I had a thought just before we took our break. All the stuff we talk about sounds like such a downer sometimes, Alan, and remember I told you I'm reading novels, a series of books that I had read sometime past about ancient people. The one I'm on right now is about the Cahokia Illinois mound builders and they weave the story. There's a huge bibliography at the end of it so there is probably some history interwoven into the novel but it made me think about this last night. Cahokia evidentially at that time was the huge distribution center for all of the other tribes that lived near by and they got this ruler in – this is of course a novel. The people paid tribute to Cahokia to keep trade going, the traders that came in, but anyway there were people who defied this just totally powerful thousands of man's army and such and such and they would go to the villages or to where their clans stayed and they would say well where's your tribute. Well, we can't give it to you because our people will starve. They'll die. Okay fine, we'll kill you and then there were those that defied it and made me think about this, Alan.

Even though they plan it so beautifully and so perfectly, it doesn't mean that we should sit back and do nothing and say oh well they're so almighty powerful that there's no sense in making a phone call or whatever somebody is led to do. There's no sense in it. I have a feeling that every tiny little thing that each and every one of us do makes a difference and at least sort of derails it every now and then. So I guess that's what I wanted to say, that we shouldn't get to a point where we just creep and give up.

Alan: Oh no. We do have to realize too that the motto that this system goes by, the ones who cause the problems, is that the end justifies the means, which means that they are totally ruthless and they will do whatever it takes – whatever it takes at all to achieve their objectives, so we have to realize what we're dealing with.

Jackie: Oh absolutely.

Alan: It's like Tony Blair in England. He was ready to go out. The people didn't want him. Nobody wanted him. Even the Party didn't want him.

Jackie: Does this have anything to do with that memo that came forth?

Alan: It's way more than that. It's all the lies he told about the weapons of mass destruction, the fuzzy photographs they used to say that they were rocket launchers, which turned out to be trailers for weather balloons that Britain had sold them. Lie after lie after lie, and the fact that none of his party wanted this. It was only him to go to war.

Jackie: It's become public now.

Alan: And so they were ready to kick him out and the public this week were ready to have a mass demonstration and maybe even riots in the streets over the new ID card that they've been told they're going to get; and lo and behold, right on cue, the so-called mysterious bombers bombed London, which put Tony Blair back up there on the grandstand: "Oh, I'm here to protect you. We're doing all that we can. It's these nasty Moslems that did this, a brand new cell that we didn't even know existed," which is the biggest joke of all you know and it happened right on cue. You couldn't get better terrorists as friends for Tony Blair than they've got right now.

Jackie: You couldn't what?

Alan: You couldn't get better friends as terrorists. If they were real terrorists they would just leave it the way it's going and Tony Blair would get kicked out--

Jackie: Oh right. Okay.

Alan: You see and his party as well and also the public would have their riots in the streets about the ID card; but, lo and behold, right on cue, when they needed him most, the mysterious Bin Laden's group blows up a few buses and things and this is all out the window now, we're back to war again.

Jackie: Are they blaming this on Bin Laden?

Alan: It was a brand new faction that they didn't know existed. The famous MI6 that had infiltrators in every group on the whole planet didn't know that this group existed and they have millions of cameras all over London but not one picked them up doing this.

Jackie: Oh my.

Alan: It's so mysterious. We're all amazed. So it's a joke.

Jackie: So now Tony Blair gets off the hook.

Alan: And the public cannot bring themselves to imagine that there are evil people running their country that would go to these lengths, kill their own people to justify a warfare. That's why this technique works. That's why it works. They say the end justifies the means. To them, if they had to kill half a million people or a million people, they would do that if they thought it was worthwhile in their cause.

Jackie: Yes they would. You know that brings us back to the spiritual nature of man and the fact that we don't know from one day to the next what is going to happen, so therefore the most important thing that we can do and I think you said this in your own little – when I say little it wasn't what you say is little, but you said it all comes down to the individual.

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: And I'm just of course expanding on it as I have a tendency to do, but that getting conscious of our spiritual nature. Learning to listen to the voice within us and I don't mean like we hear voices but when we know that something we're doing is wrong to stop it and it doesn't matter even if it means your job, that you say no. I'm not going to do this. I'm not going in and stealing people's children just so the Human Health and Human Services can get $37,000.

Alan: It's up to the individual because it's coming down to the wire and you will find most people will go – in fact they've done polls already after this bombing in London. That shows you how ready they are for all of this. They've already done polls to see how many people will take the ID card now. Suddenly they claim anyway it's now about 85 percent, which is about right actually because study after study for the last 100 years has found about 87 percent of public will always do what they're told and so this bombing has been good for the ID card, which is "must be" in Masonic terminology. It was ready years ago but they must get it through now. There's only about 3 percent at any time who are actually awake to everything and I mean by that fully awake. There are other people who are caught at different levels. They're part in the system, part out of the system. They're part believers still in the system, but only 3 percent are truly conscious at any one time and it will come down to what are you going to do when they say you've got to take this card; and the card is only the precursor to the chip.

Jackie: We have a call here. Hello, you're on the air.

Storm: Yes, Alan. Are you there?

Jackie: Yes. You can't hear him but he can hear you.

Storm: Okay, I've got you okay. He can hear me but I can't hear him?

Jackie: Yes, right.

Storm: I've got you. Alan, it's Storm. I'm a frequent caller of Jackie's. He is talking there it sounds really heavy and interesting. I'm glad I caught you at the right time. First of all, Alan, I believe that Blair knew about that bomb. I believe that possibly I can't prove it--

Jackie: Storm, that's exactly what he said.

Storm: No. But I believe he did it. I believe he had something to do with it. In other words, I think him and Queen Elizabeth had something to do with that bombing.

Jackie: They don't dirty their hands, Storm.

Storm: That doesn't mean they don't have something to do with it. They can give the orders and let somebody else do it. MI5--

Jackie: You don't understand, honey. There are people behind the scenes giving them orders.

Storm: Yes, but that would be the Queen though if you're talking about-- Jackie: Okay, Storm.

Storm: Oh, you don't think the Queen has given Blair orders?

Jackie: Alan, would you like to comment on this?

Alan: The Queen doesn't give any orders.

Jackie: Okay. Well, Storm, hang up and Alan will comment on this.

Storm: Okay.

Jackie: Thanks.

Alan: The Queen doesn't even have to have anything to do with this. She knows the agenda and that's all that she actually cares about.

Jackie: She doesn't have to know the dirty little details.

Alan: Oh no.

Jackie: They don't dirty their hands.

Alan: Blair is the same too. There is a worldwide agenda here. It's not a handful of people. There are many people involved in it.

Jackie: Blair is a puppet.

Alan: Oh, absolutely. Mind you, I mean he must accomplish his mission too and therefore his head would probably roll if he doesn't because he's been the main cheerleader for this war from the beginning and he knows that too and there's no one else really who's so pro-war to take his place so he's got to keep there. These bombings have helped him tremendously as I say to get back up there on center stage again. "I'm big daddy here to protect you."

Jackie: It doesn't mean that Blair didn't have an idea this was going to happen.

Alan: I'm sure he would have forewarning.

Jackie: Exactly.

Alan: In fact, Netanyahu was over there for the G8 meeting over there; and of course in Masonic terminology, eight is as above so below, the number eight, the two circles joined together above and below, and that's what it means. It also means money and power in Masonic terminology and G before 8 means "gate" so this is a gateway. There's a whole language here which the public has no idea about but all Masons understand. They were meeting over in Britain at the time of this bombing. They were in Scotland but Benjamin Netanyahu was over there as well in London and he was told not to move from his room. They knew that these bombs were going to go off, so yes they knew. It was a must-be. They had to get the ball rolling once more. It had been stalled by public opinion and now of course they can rush ahead with their ID cards and of course they pinpointed Iran right away, which is next on the list that they drew up in the 1990's. Afghanistan, then Iraq and so Iran's next and they said they believe this new terrorist cell – this is about five minutes after the bombing – they believe this new terrorist cell has been kept and trained and are based in Iran.

Jackie: Oh. They didn't know who it was. Very mysterious. Never knew about them before.

Alan: This is how all of this is done, you see.

Jackie: Yes, it's how it's all done.

Alan: It's like the passport that fluttered down from the Twin Towers when this explosion of jet fuel went off and this immaculate passport fluttered down off one of the supposed terrorists, not a scratch mark anywhere and so that pinpointed who did it, you see.

Jackie: Whoever you are, caller, turn your radio down.

Storm: Yes, okay. I was going to say that Queen Elizabeth ordered the deaths of some people in Ireland a while ago when they were trying to get them out of Ireland we know this was like many years ago. But that's not true. The Queen can give orders to murder and bump people off and it has happened before. There was also some evidence somewhere that she might have caused the person, the boyfriend that was going with Diana so I'm not talking about there but no the Queen--

Jackie: Okay, okay. Storm, we're almost out of time here.

Storm: But she's one of the top people of the illuminati of the world. TLC British petroleum. She meets at the Bilderberger meetings. She's in with the top people with the Rockefellers. She's one of the top people of the world. There's no doubt about that.

Jackie: Okay. Thanks Storm. Any comment, Alan?

Alan: The Queen doesn't have to deal with any of it at all. She knows the agenda. She knows the money side of it. She knows – she's been told that this elite must always be in control of the people. The methods are irrelevant to her. It's all done for her and as far as Lady Di goes, the reason she was suddenly called from Princess Diana to Lady Di by the press was because that's a Masonic terminology that the lady was going to die.

Jackie: Oh my God.

Alan: That's in your face.

Jackie: Lady Di. Oh my God.

Alan: See, people don't even know what they read.

Jackie: Well of course not, Alan. Well, I didn't.

Alan: You see, so it's always in your face, so much so that the public never see it for themselves.

Jackie: I think that Storm – well, he listens to a lot of other broadcasts and has a tendency to take in what he's hearing as truth and I don't think he just quite understands that she's almost the same kind of puppet that George Bush is. She's a figurehead.

Alan: That's a fact.

Jackie: She's a figurehead and the people that have controlled the kings and queens and pharaohs et cetera down through the ages have the same kind of control, so she knows the agenda. She lets it happen but I think that it would be good if people could just understand that the heads of nations are at there at the behest of the controllers.

Alan: Absolutely. You know 200 BC there was a pharaoh in Egypt who found out that he was not the boss and he was surrounded by priests who decided who he would see and who he would not see and often he wouldn't even know that people had come to talk to him.

Jackie: Oh that was [Tuten] – what's his name?

Alan: Long before him, and he actually tried to jump out the window to meet people that he saw had been turned away by the priests to find out what they were there to see him for. The priests were always in control and it's no different today. It doesn't mean that these elite people are not part of certain bloodlines and they're very pompous and they truly believe they are superior. They do believe they are superior, but they are not the ones that sit and plan all this. This is planned by strategical think thinks.

Jackie: And they don't give the orders.

Alan: They don't have to.

Jackie: No, they don't have to. We're out of our hour and thank you for taking the time to be with us tonight, Alan.

Alan: It's a pleasure on a very hot night.

Jackie: Well, keep cool. Have you got your fans going?

Alan: Yes, I do.

Jackie: Oh good. Well say hello to your guests for me.

Alan: I will do.

Jackie: Ladies and gentlemen, we'll be back with you tomorrow night. Thanks for being here and thanks again, Alan. Good night.

Alan: It's a pleasure.

Jackie: Good night, folks.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
July 12, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Jackie: Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Thank you for being here with us tonight on Sweet Liberty. It is Tuesday. It is the 12th of July in the year 2005 and I know that's so because I looked at my calendar just before we came on the air. Alan is with us again tonight. Alan Watt, our wonderful friend. We're going to – well, we'll see what comes up. We never really plan what our conversation is going to be. However, we are going to talk about chemtrails tonight for one thing. Alan, thanks for being here again tonight.

Alan: Yes, it's a pleasure.

Jackie: I've been spending so much time outside and there are things on my mind that I've wanted to talk about and I found a video that somebody sent me that Clifford Carnicom had done and I thought when I found it – this was just a couple of days ago. I really ought to get a hold of him and see if we can bring him on the air. I think he's a credible person. Anyway, I pulled my email in tonight, which I haven't done for about three days.

Anyway, I found this email, Alan, and this says "Chemtrails: A Meeting" and a Robert McNamara quote. This isn't long and I think you would like to hear it. First, the quote is at the end of this but I want to do this first, a quote from Robert McNamara, October 2nd, 1979. He said:

"There are only two possible ways that a world of 10 billion people..."

Now are there 10 billion people in this world?

Alan: They can make the figure whatever they want.

Jackie: Yes they can. Six billion for some reason was in my mind.

"There are only two possible ways a world of 10 billion people can be averted. Either the current birthrate must come down more quickly or current death rates must go up. There is no other way. There are, of course, many ways in which the death rates can go up. In a thermonuclear age, wars can accomplish it very quickly and decisively. Famine and disease are nature's ancient checks on population growth, and neither one has disappeared from the scene.... "To put it simply: Excessive population growth is the greatest single obstacle to the economic and social advancement of most of the societies in the developing world."

Now I just want to remind our listeners who heard us do this, the math has been done taking the square miles of Texas if we figure six billion people, it seems, if I'm not mistaken, that a family of four – there's so many square feet. In other words, the State of Texas can hold all of the people on this Earth if there are six billion people and it's enough square footage that I think a family of four would have almost an acre. I might be wrong. Now that's not piling people on top of each other in cities, Alan.

Alan: That's right.

Jackie: For God's sake. Anyway, here's the meeting. The meeting has already taken place and it took place on Friday, July 8th at 11:30 – excuse me. This is when this was sent, Friday July 8th, 2005. It says:

"A Meeting by Clifford E. Carnicom

A meeting has taken place recently between an investigative researcher and a well placed military source. The identity of both parties is to be protected. The source has intimate knowledge of at least one aspect of the aerosol operations, and asserts the following:

- 1. The operation is a joint project between the Pentagon and the pharmaceutical industry.*
- 2. The Pentagon wishes to test biological diseases for war purposes on unsuspecting populations. It was stated that SARS is a failure as the expected rate of mortality was intended to be 80%."*

Jackie: Alan, I don't know if there ever was such a thing as SARS.

Alan: I know that it killed less people than the common flu did.

Jackie: Yes, there you go. It's like the West Nile virus. We don't know really if anybody ever – okay, let me go on here. These are the assertions of these people.

- 3. The pharmaceutical industry is making trillions on medications designed to treat both fatal and non-fatal diseases given to populations.*
- 4. The bacteria and viruses are freeze-dried and then placed on fine filaments for release.*

Jackie: That would be from the chemtrails, right? Number 5. There's 10 of these.

- 5. The metals released along with the diseases heat up from the sun, creating..."*

Jackie: You were telling us about this last night, Alan.

"...creating a perfect environment for the bacteria and viruses to thrive in the air supply.

- 6. Most countries being sprayed are unaware of the activities and they have not consented to the activities. He states that commercial aircraft flying are one of the delivery systems."*

Jackie: Now do you believe that, Alan?

Alan: Commercial, no.

Jackie: I don't either.

- 7. Most of the "players" are old friends and business partners of the senior Bush."*

Jackie: I don't know about this.

- 8. The ultimate goal is the control of all populations through directed and accurate spraying of drugs, diseases, etc.*
- 9. People who have tried to reveal the truth have been imprisoned and killed."*

Jackie: I don't know anything about that, do you?

Alan: No.

"10. This is the most dangerous and dark time that I have experienced in all of my years of serving this country."

Jackie: Now this was evidentially one of these – he said at the meeting it was an investigative researcher, which was probably Clifford Carnicom, and a well placed military source. Well you know what? I think Clifford Carnicom got conned.

Alan: I'd say so. It's probably Bo Gritz or somebody, yes.

Jackie: He says: "This information is relayed without qualification, as I am as I am knowledgeable in the level of integrity of the researcher that has made this information available to the public. There is both risk and restraint that has been exercised in the preparation of this statement." I don't know.

Alan: No. It's disinformation.

Jackie: Yes, sounds like it to me, Alan.

Alan: The whole thing began with the Open Skies Treaty and every country in the West signed on to this. It was never explained to the public what it really was, although they did legally put a few paragraphs here and there in the newspapers in Canada and it was so vague that you didn't get much out of it except that foreign pilots were allowed to fly over Canadian and U.S. bases in various areas for observation purposes. However, when you look into it deeper and get copies of this Open Skies Treaty there are observers observing the observers. In other words, the observers are observing the ones that are spraying the public to make sure they're doing it. A second blurb occurred about a year ago in the Canadian newspapers, just one more paragraph, saying that now foreign pilots could use domestic Air Force planes to do the same duties over Canadian skies under the Open Skies Treaty, so it's under the Open Skies Treaty. The only countries that never signed it were China and a couple of the Far Eastern countries and Switzerland and they're the only countries who are not being sprayed.

Jackie: Would the jet planes then be carrying in their fuel?

Alan: It could be in the fuel and it could be in extra tanks. They can do it either way.

Jackie: But then the pilots that are flying these planes, they have to know that there's an extra tank on it?

Alan: They know what they're doing because if they were commercial aircraft they wouldn't be doing zigzag patterns across the skies.

Jackie: Hell no they wouldn't.

Alan: Either that or it's a very drunken pilot.

Jackie: No, but I was thinking of the military planes.

Alan: They know what they're doing and I think it's foreign pilots that will spray over Canada and the U.S. and the deal is that our pilots will be over there spraying their countries – kind of like a Dr. Strangelove policy, you see, and that makes perfect sense. No, it's not commercial aircraft because you can actually see the commercial aircraft with the usual contrails disappearing about a foot after--

Jackie: And they're flying very, very high.

Alan: Yes and in a straight line, whereas these guys do as you said checkerboard patterns. I've seen them do u-turns as well and the stuff that they lay down forms these odd-looking polymer clouds. Now we know that the polymer and that's what gives the rainbow bursts around the sun towards sunset especially.

Jackie: What is polymer?

Alan: Polymer is basically forms of plastic particles from polyethylene. They found in the 1950's that they could use this particular compound to bring viruses and bacteria down to a vast area and cover a large area and the polymer was the carrying agent. That was officially disclosed in the 1950's and they were actually testing some areas in Britain with it then to see if it would carry viruses or bacterium down to the ground and even under a National Health System of course they could have all the data of how many people had asthma or bronchial attacks et cetera. All the testing has been done and they're doing it for real now. I'm sure it will also weaken the immune system. We know for sure there's aluminum oxide in it and barium and--

Jackie: Now how do we know that for sure, Alan?

Alan: It has been tested and I know some people who've recently done tests on them.

Jackie: You know the people personally?

Alan: Yes and the last test had 2 percent per liter contained for aluminum oxide alone.

Jackie: And what is the aluminum oxide?

Alan: Aluminum oxide does a few things. It can be used in conjunction with HAARP and this has been disclosed a long time ago that HAARP, which travels with electromagnetic pulsations through the atmosphere, can act more effectively when it has metallic surfaces. In other words, it makes it more conductive that the air becomes conductive like a circuit and again if your target happens to be the population--

Jackie: When you say conductive are you taking about let's say if there's an electrical storm?

Alan: No. They send out pulses. In fact they said with HAARP they can literally pulse out messages which the public would receive in their head, and this is old technology, and so the more conductive the subject is by either inhaling or consuming or whatever, we're doing both, with aluminum oxide especially or any metallic substance. There's also copper, by the way, traces found in this spray.

Jackie: But more than the body can tolerate.

Alan: Copper should not be in rainwater or snow.

Jackie: Right. Because copper is one of the trace minerals that is found in the body, isn't it?

Alan: It is; but as I say, this is coming from rainwater. You've got copper in the sky.

Jackie: In other words, more copper than the body needs or can handle?

Alan: Yes, so they're making each individual a receptor, which makes perfect sense, and they have admitted that they've tried HAARP out on large population areas. Maine was one of the first main places that they tried it out on and they found out that easiest thing they can do, the simplest thing they can do is to create alterations and mood either from elation or to anger and depression and they found a tremendous high suicide rate at that time. They found domesticated animals were going crazy and biting their owners and so alternations of moods are easily affected with HAARP and depending on the frequency they use they can also make you elated, as though you were drugged basically and happy.

Jackie: Mood swings, in other words. Then these people who have the mood swings they get diagnosed as being bipolar and they get given drugs.

Alan: This all falls in together but it also after time especially the aluminum oxide will help destroy your immune system and since they do – this is the regular television CBC news and BBC news, they keep having international conferences every month or so talking about the inevitable flu that's going to come around the world and kill most of the people and they keep saying it's just round the corner. It's just round the corner and so they are lowering our resistance to fight off something which should not kill us, but if we're weakened in our resistance it very well might, so this is deliberate planning to control and at the same time to start the culling process. There's no doubt about it. That's the function of it. Now again Zbigniew Brzezinski--

Jackie: And it isn't race specific?

Alan: It doesn't seem that this flu one is as far as we know. The BBC said that their scientific surveys on this new Avian flu and they're only calling it the Avian flu because birds carry it apparently, geese and ducks et cetera, migrating birds, and they said they found two genes in this particular flu which do not occur in nature, which is another way of saying it's man-made, you see, so it's been altered to be deadly, obviously.

Jackie: And besides that, there's been Avian flus before that didn't transfer over to humans.

Alan: Absolutely, all dogs, cats and even mice have their own types of colds and flus which don't transfer to humans and they always have. However, today it's so simple to alter viruses and bacterium. It's so simple to do and they are doing it and they have been doing it for a while. They're going ahead with it obviously and they want to bring down the immune systems of the target areas, which of course is primarily the West. I know some people who were over in the Far East recently and as I say some of the countries like Brunei and China, they did not sign the Open Skies Treaty so they're not being sprayed and when they were over there they didn't see any of these chemtrails anywhere in the skies.

Jackie: This was in China?

Alan: Yes and in Brunei, quite near, Far East.

Jackie: Think about this. The reports that I've received emails and like that it's being done in the English speaking countries England, Canada the U.S.--

Alan: Australia.

Jackie: Australia, but France, Germany, actually European white nations that were once basically Europeans.

Alan: There's no doubt about it and it's happening on a daily basis and also on a nightly basis.

Jackie: You know I thought about this with all the immigration with all the different races that are being brought into our countries. They're doing this specifically in these countries to the ones that I just mentioned. Well, you still have the Japanese, but Japan basically has only Japanese and China basically has only Chinese and India and all of those that are swarming over here, they're dispensable so they will be victims of this stuff the same way that all of we will, or all of us I guess would be more grammatically correct, and yet, Alan, it appears to be the white basically European people that are being done in.

Alan: I'd say so. I think the bee, the busy bee, the white person, has almost fulfilled his task and they don't need him anymore. We still have a few qualities which can be utilized against the system--

Jackie: Yes, dangerous to them.

Alan: We're very good at retaliating if we understand why we're retaliating and of course they don't want that particular type around.

Jackie: I think about this very often sometimes especially when I question whether continuing the broadcast makes a difference and I remember a long time ago that you said when we were talking about the Federal Reserve System, the monetary system. You said if enough people wake up to it, it's going to collapse of itself; and that stays in my mind that statement you made and then I think to myself, if nothing else, the information that people get from the Sweet Liberty broadcast is at least imparting truth. At least as close to the truth as we know it and maybe that is the prime reason because I'm going to tell you, Alan, when you listen to some of the other broadcasts that are on the air there's so much fluff and there's so much BS and so much non-essential misinformation and disinformation along with it that it's really basically keeps me doing the broadcast because I think well if Sweet Liberty goes off the air then where are people going to get the truth that are listening to what they believe to be alternative radio. And it isn't that there isn't truth that they're getting, government stuff that's going on, but it's details and details and details that we don't need to keep getting. Well, there's certain things that need to be brought out, I think. I'm not saying that all of the broadcasts are non-essential but it seems that there's so much disinformation included--

Alan: It's deliberate. There's no doubt about it.

Jackie: Yes, it's deliberate. We've got a call here. We'll take it. Hello.

Storm: Hello.

Jackie: Yes, Storm.

Storm: Greetings Alan and greetings to Jackie. I'm listening to what you were saying. I was listening and I'll just make this statement and hang up, that the Arabic guy that was being charged with the murder of the Dutch filmmaker said in the trials that he could be a CIA operative or connected to the CIA but he said that he did it for Allah.

Jackie: He did a what?

Storm: He would do it again when the mother or one of them was crying and sometimes at these murder trials you get a lot of emotional stuff like that, but he said to the mother that he'd do it again for Allah and so the point that I want to say is that in a way I think it's not good for the mother. It's not good for the victim but in a way it's good for some of the Dutch people and people at large that aren't connected with this New World Order of Holland or France. You know the ones I heard the stupid political correctness they were talking on the shortwave and in the Dutch newspapers about two years but that last [inaudible] and talking foolishness and kind of good for them because now they realize that if you let these barbarians in your country and letting those third world and all these ideals evolve and all the crap they're screwing themselves over and that's what they let in so I know--

Jackie: It's all by design, Storm.

Storm: What now?

Jackie: Yes, thank you.

Storm: It's going to backfire because I think it will backfire in the end because most of the people in Holland may not realize that and so as a result they're still going to be against massive multicultural influx.

Jackie: A lot of people in the U.S. are against it and it just keeps happening. Storm, thanks for your comments.

Storm: Also I wanted to ask Alan – oh, that's right, he can't hear me.

Jackie: He can hear you.

Storm: I'm going to say this and hang up. Can he maybe just describe to me what exactly the power position is Queen Elizabeth? In other words, is Rothschild above her or is she and Rothschild about on the same level? I'll hang up. Thank you.

Jackie: Okay, bye. There's two things here Alan. This Allah thing, well that would be Moslem, right? I'm not familiar with what-- Alan: The old god was EL. Here's the Masonic explanation.

Jackie: I'm not familiar with the situation he was talking about but what caught me was that the guy said I would do it again for Allah and what its doing is their – I get so much of this stuff on the internet about Muslims et cetera.

Alan: It's war propaganda.

Jackie: Propaganda, yes.

Alan: I mean let's be honest here. Who invaded who and when did the trouble start?

Jackie: Okay. Let's talk about that after this break. Who invaded who and when did the trouble start and maybe you'll address his question about Queen Elizabeth. Folks, we're going to take a break here. Alan, you know that statement that Storm made about whatever this murder guy did and said I would do it again for Allah? Well, that evidently is the big thing and that opens a tremendous can of worms because that's exactly what their intention here is to create hatred.

Alan: Again, if this person and other people can't get it through their heads by checking themselves The New American Century (and apparently the New American Century website), which is the official organization of Rumsfeld, Cheney, Wolfowitz and all the rest of them, which tell you that they intended to take over those countries back in the '90's and why they were going to take over them in that order, starting with Afghanistan, then Iraq, then Iran and so on, then there's no point in reiterating the same thing to them. They can check that themselves if they really care. This whole war was planned in the 1990's by very powerful people and very powerful corporations. Halliburton put bids in for a share of the action in 1998, so this is where you are with all of this. This is nothing more than a plan – a business plan to take over the Middle East, bring the same system of democracy, which is centralized government, a central bank owned by the World Bank and a system of debt which taxpayers then have to pay off forever. This is the one system that they're spreading worldwide and all this Allah stuff that they're using is just the propaganda, no different from the "slant-eyed Japanese" propaganda of World War II. It's the same stuff.

Jackie: I was in the car today and I was listening to a talk show host that sounds quite a bit like Rush Limbaugh and I think that's his aim is to be the Rush Limbaugh of today, but they were advertising a book called "The Ezekiel Plan" and you should have heard the commercial. This guy, whoever wrote this thing, wrote about the Iraq war two years before they did it. He wrote a book about that. He wrote another book about something sort of like prophetic stuff, like this guy didn't have inside information and now the new book is called "The Ezekiel Plan" and it is the prophetic, it's prophesied in the Bible. In other words, they're selling it based on the damn--

Alan: Of course, yes.

Jackie: Then it says, "get the book, get the book to find out how much time do we have left." It's like Steve Quayle when he was talking one day on his broadcast about some terrible thing that was going to happen. I mean it was going to happen and the whole thing is going to collapse and all of this, and at the end of his broadcast then he said hurry up and get your gold before it's too late.

Alan: He was selling generators, foodstuffs at way over market value and rations for the Y2K thing and he made a fortune off of it. He also said, like James Lloyd, that he wouldn't come back on the air if this did not happen. Months after nothing happened they're both back on again.

Jackie: They have no shame, do they, Alan?

Alan: No. That's a psychopathic trait, but people are also paid by the CIA to do this. The CIA started up American shortwave.

As far as Queen Elizabeth goes, if people want to believe that somehow she's at the top, that's their choice; and no matter what you want to tell them, or any truth or any facts to go and check, they won't do it anyway.

Jackie: No, because they believe what they hear.

Alan: They want to believe what they hear, that's the difference, and so they don't check. However, there's no doubt that special families are bred for certain purposes, but no the Queen doesn't deal with the details of this. She's just told; she is a symbol looking over a vast herd of unwashed masses and that they'll have to be gradually culled off and she'll have been told that in a very sophisticated scientific lecture probably and it will sound quite natural for her to go along with it, but she won't do any of this planning and neither would the Rothschild's. No one in public view could possibly be running this show in case they were assassinated and in that case they would lose their main people. You never put the real controllers in public view. You would never even let the public know their names. Anyone in public view is technically expendable.

Jackie: It came to my mind when it really clicked with me when we heard about – well, if this happened, but when the chosen people were taken into Babylon and there they were with their own priests, with their own religion, allowed to live separately from all the other people and they were supposed to be in captivity, Alan?

Alan: And run their own businesses.

Jackie: Yes, and run their own businesses.

Alan: No, it's complete fiction, utter fiction.

Jackie: That's when it occurred to me, so, okay, who was controlling the king?

Alan: Yes and who really came out of Babylon? Was it the Babylon high priesthood? You see, Babylon is wherever they put themselves. That was part of the mystery of Babylon. It could be anywhere they set themselves up and so all we know from the records is that a bunch of people came out with a brand new system of priesthood that didn't exist before and preached a different type of religion and that religion was based on basically human understanding of law and various laws. It was all to do with legalisms and of course to Christians, they were given one version of it, but it's almost like keeping two-thirds of the rest from them because the Christians were not given access to the Talmud or the Kabbalah; and only by having the study of all three do you get the big picture. This is a long, long-range plan. There's no doubt about it.

Jackie: When you mentioned their legalisms, it brings to mind Moses Mendelssohn's quote or statement that he allegedly made that Judaism is not a religion, it is a law religionized.

[Call] Hello.

Storm: I was going to say I'm familiar with that because that happened to William Cooper too, that these people like Rothschild and Rockefeller you never see their faces or their names because they're not actual government officials so somebody could bump them off.

Jackie: Is that what you wanted to say, that you knew that?

Storm: No. I was wondering if he knew if there was anybody in the past that actually attempted that because I don't remember or recall that ever happening because that could happen.

Jackie: Okay, thank you. Hello, Alan.

Alan: I didn't quite catch what he said there.

Jackie: What he said is that he knew that what you said about the front guys not being out front and he wondered if you knew if there had been any attempts on any of their lives in the past. The Rockefellers, the Rothschild's et cetera?

Alan: No, they're given preferential treatment and so on. The very fact that a Rothschild could come into Britain supposedly and pull a stunt, a con, if you like, by pretending that Napoleon was winning against Wellington and dumping his bonds so everybody else would dump theirs, then he bought them all up for pennies, and get away with it and walk freely around the narrow streets of London and this ancient nobility of Britain who had assassination teams simply left him alone, that's rubbish. You see, Rothschild was asked to come in and manage the whole system by the nobility. That's what it was. That's what it was. The real powers themselves are never allowed to be shown in public. In fact, in theosophy and a few other Masonic groups they say that the Hidden Masters that run the show at the right time will come forward and show who they really are, but by that time they will have sewn up world government and obviously they'll have total control of the world and have no fear of anything happening to them, which means that they can only appear in a completely totalitarian system.

Jackie: In the Protocols they mentioned that their king despot of the blood of Sion, their pope of the world, he will be so benevolent and so with the people that they will even put him out with the people as though he trusts all the people, but they said that of course he would be totally surrounded by his protectors at all times; but whoever it is, Alan, that if they're going to present somebody, he is going to be slicker than we've ever seen before.

Alan: He'll have all the answers to the problems of the world because he and his cronies created the problems of the world.

Jackie: Yes. He's going to get rid of property taxes too, by the way, because they talk about that in there how the property taxes right now ever escalating. They serve their purpose because they cause unrest, but when they come into their power they'll get rid of those kinds of things.

Alan: They will because we won't have any property by then and we'll all be living in habitat areas and the UN websites they tell you that there will be no private property. It will be rental only and there will be no private automobiles either; so anybody who wants to check up where we'll go and how we're to live, simply has to look into the United Nations website.

Jackie: We have a quote at our website at sweetliberty.org and I think it's either in Regionalism or the States Right. Rexford Tugwell after – actually, I think it was around 1934 it was a small newspaper article in Colorado where he said the government will own all land. That was 1934, Alan, or someplace around there.

Alan: They still Tugwell society, which is funded by the Rockefeller Foundation, but maybe we should also mention that I have the books out now that explain a lot of this.

Jackie: Well you go right ahead my dear.

Alan: I go through the Masonic meanings of things, which is very important to understand the language we're using or what you're reading in the newspapers, because there's double meanings in everything and I give you the lost word and tell you what it really is and all the rest of it. None of the nonsense they put out there on the books for you to buy off the shelves and I give you the extracts, where it comes from and so on, very old books, and I also go into the history of money from ancient times. How it was introduced. How they brought down countries – country after country until they were all on the money system.

Jackie: Built them up and brought them down.

Alan: That's right, by using usury and getting them all in debt. It's a silly thing for relief of Africa. I don't know how many times they've written off third-world debt and these boys, the front men of the so called Rock Star Association that come out and demand we forgive these loans to the third-world countries are working for the banks because we forgive the loans every three or four years. Then we give them another one as soon as they're forgiven, but what the general public who are all cheering this don't realize is the money is borrowed from the World Bank by the U.S. and Canada and the guarantors to pay the loans off are the Canadian and American citizens, so when we write the loans off to the third-world country the citizens of the U.S. and Canada end up paying it. This is the con game that goes on and on and on and none of the money gets to Africa anyway. It never does.

Jackie: Maybe they're going to call it CanadaUS?

Alan: That's a good name, but if you want the three books [see www.cuttingthroughthematrix.com for ordering information] and you can't buy this information off the shelf.

Jackie: As Alan has suggested, that if you don't have I and II yet, it would be better to start there and if you have those books, No. III, "Cutting Through" is now available. Alan, did you find a way to get those copied by the way?

Alan: I did get a dozen copied today.

Jackie: Did you really?

Alan: By some strange miracle. Some of the pages are a bit too close to the edges but it's legible but I didn't have the same chaos as the last time.

Jackie: You went to another place?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Did you want to tell our listeners what happened to you?

Alan: Well, it's difficult to imagine but however I did take three master copies in for I, II and III into a Staples place where they recopy. The girl told me it would take half an hour, no problems. It was a quiet day and I came back in half an hour and they had my pages all over the counters scattered. They had a full counter about 30 feet long at the back covered with different pages from my stuff. There were pages on top of the photocopiers. Neither photocopier would work properly with my material and it kept chewing the copies up. However, in between all of this, in a four hour space, mind you, they did other peoples' stuff, rushed it through and both machines worked perfectly with everyone else's material. As soon as you put mine back on, sure enough, the paper jams and they have to get the paper from inside and at the end I knew they couldn't put Humpty Dumpty together again because I didn't know where all this stuff was.

Jackie: You didn't know where the masters were.

Alan: Oddly enough, the three girls there were in sort of a daze and they were not standing talking to each other. They were reading through my material, which was all over the place.

Jackie: And one had told you they weren't supposed to read it?

Alan: That's right. I asked her what's happening and she said well nothing at the moment. I said, well I've been here for four hours while nothing's happening except that you seem to be destroying everything I've written, and their answers were completely out of context with the situation: like is there something the matter, sir? It was incredible.

Jackie: And they didn't seem to be flustered at the problems they were having?

Alan: No.

Jackie: Hello.

Pat: Hi Jackie. I was wondering if you could ask Alan what his position or opinion is of the Protocols. I don't think I've ever heard him give his opinion one way or another whether he believes.

Jackie: Yes. Who's calling?

Pat: This is Pat.

Jackie: Pat, speak up just a little bit, your question again.

Pat: I was just wondering if you could ask Alan what his personal opinion or belief on the Protocols, whether they're real or fiction or forgery and also if you can ask him to speak on his background. I don't think I've ever heard him speak about his knowledge or where he's from.

Jackie: Like a bio on Alan?

Pat: Sure.

Jackie: Okay.

Pat: Thank you.

Jackie: Thanks, Pat. Alan, did you want to finish what you were saying about – well, folks, when Alan and I talked that evening when he had experienced this, what I got listening is that the people that were going through all these problems – I've been to Staples before because we put packets together and we have them copied and collated and et cetera and the thing is that while all of this was going on for four and a half hours at least, because he waited a half hour to come back to get them, these people didn't seem to be flustered at the problems they were having and the way Alan was talking about it sounded like these people were in just some kind of a daze. Didn't it Alan?

Alan: Yes. You see what we're talking about was the Queen and the Rothschild's and so on is tiddly-winks because there are sciences at work here and forces way above all of this. The sciences alone are so far advanced it puts all science fiction in the kindergarten categories. Sciences are so advanced.

Jackie: Would you like to come back with us tomorrow night?

Alan: Sure.

Jackie: Let's go into that and would you like to comment on Pat's question about what your thoughts are on the Protocols?

Alan: The Protocols, whoever wrote them – to me, I don't care who wrote them because the fact is everything in them and there's no doubt they were written at the time they were said to be written and what they wrote about things that would be made to occur within society, not by any supernatural means either, have occurred and it's too precise. It has too precise a grip on societal structures, mass psychology, individual psychology and group psychology. It's too perfect. I'm sure it wasn't put together by one person and regardless of who it's attributed to, the fact is what was planned in it cannot be denied.

Jackie: And the way it's written of course they speak about themselves as being the chosen and their dispersal has been actually a blessing to them and so either in fact or by them wanting people to believe it was those who called themselves Jews who were laying this out.

Alan: At the same time it was done primarily as far as we know by those in Russia who were Kazarian extract who had no Hebrew blood in them at all, so that's another little mystery as to who these people really were in the first place.

Jackie: Will you consider tomorrow night about giving our listeners a brief background on who Alan Watt is?

Alan: Yes, not too much though.

Jackie: Okay. All right, well that's great. I've had a lot of people ask me and it might be helpful for our listeners or it may be just interesting to know about who Alan Watt is and so ladies and gentlemen, we will pick this up again tomorrow night. Alan will be back with us and we'll play it as it lays and thank you for being with us tonight, and Alan, thank you. Thank you for taking time out from your guests to be on the air with us.

Alan: Good night.

Jackie: Good night.

(Transcribed by Linda)

Alan Watt on
"Sweet Liberty" with Jackie Patru
July 13, 2005

WWW.CUTTINGTHROUGHTHEMATRIX.COM

www.alanwattsentientsentinel.eu

Alan: This the Jackie Patru show with Alan Watt here and Jackie's just popped out to get some things that she needs and she'll be back in a minute or so. Today is the 13th of July 2005 and I think we're carrying on today in our talk at where we left off yesterday, if we can find the exact place where we did break off. We we're talking about the system that we live in and where it's come from and where it's going, which is quite something in itself. I should also say at the beginning that I have three books to sell with information on freemasonry that is not published in books which you can buy from the shelf. I go into the religions as well, the creations of religions, who created them, what they really mean and how it's been used against the public to control their minds, very effectively in fact, up to the present time and so there's three of them. [See www.cuttingthroughthematrix.com for ordering information] and I'll get them out as fast as I can. What I tried to do is to go through how the system works. I even go through the language for the public so you'll see that your language itself contains meanings within meanings, which the Masons use all the time. Albert Pike himself said "we never talked so freely as we do amongst the public because they don't understand what we're really saying" and I show you their codings which are within the language we use every day and you'll see it in newspaper headlines and blurbs on the news and all that kind of thing.

Jackie: Yes and you got your copies made, didn't you, Alan?

Alan: Yes.

Jackie: Thank you for opening for us. Folks, Alan probably already said this is Wednesday the 13th of July and it is the last night of our broadcast week of course. I want to share our spiritual message tonight. This is a statement attributed to Jesus in Matthew 25 beginning with verse 35.

"For I was hungry and you gave me meat. I was thirsty and you gave me drink. I was a stranger and you took me in naked and you clothed me. I was sick and you visited me. I was in prison and you came unto me; inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

Basically what he is saying is that we are all one. Yes, Alan?

